ONE IS YOUR MASTER EVEN CHRIST AND ALL YE ARE BRETHREN.

VOLUME XXXVI GREENSBORO, N. C., JANUARY 2, 1930 NUMBER 8

Pres Elderdice 5dec0

What sort of year will this year be?
The wise men say—Just wait and see!
But you can't wait quite patiently,
And I'll respond, if you ask me.

This year the streams will flow down hill,
The winds will blow unless they're still,
The thirsty creatures will drink their fill,
Unless perchance the rains are nil.

The nations may growl like dogs over bones
And rend the air with thunder tones,
And sweep the earth with fierce cyclones—
Don't you make war on Smith or Jones.

The thing you're most concerned about,
The thing to bring you gravest doubt,
Is not the flood or water-spout,
Is not the way the wars turn out.

The first concern of all to you
Is this: the thing you're going to do,
The way of life you will pursue,
And what at last you'll have in view.

You're entering on the best of years—
It may not be devoid of tears—
If mind grows bright and conscience clears,
And heart and soul win God's good cheers.

Justifying the Church With Christ Left Out

The world abounds in churches, some of which are not Christian churches. Adherents of churches not Christian are prone to think of their own churches as fully meeting the needs of humanity. They make their own religions all-sufficient and therefore make Christianity superfluous.

No founder of any religion aside from Christianity made such a personal sacrifice as Jesus did to establish the Christian religion. Some of the world's religions are older than the Christian religion. Jesus as the Son of God knew of these older religions and knew their doctrines and practices. Had any of them been sufficient, would He have undergone the agonies of his experience to found another religion? It does not seem probable. He pronounced all that came before Him thieves and robbers. When He commissioned His trained disciples He did not tell them to go forth preaching His gospel until they struck the borders of Buddhism and there turn back. All nations, all humanity, were in the parish He chose for His preaching disciples. Many of the heathen of the time worshiped in magnificent temples while the Christians were worshiping in caves or other unattractive places. The outward tokens and forms of worship, no matter how splendid and attractive, could not fill the place of the gospel story of Christ. The personality, the teaching, the suffering of Jesus cannot be ignored. "No man cometh unto the Father but by Me," He said. His personality and His offices are essential to salvation. Other religions may offer culture, may offer hope, and a blessed future, but they cannot deliver the goods. It is not enough to know that another religion offers as much as Christianity offers. It must furnish proof that it can accomplish what it proposes. There is no religion that ignores Christ and His work that can make any offer worth considering. Christ is the only Savior and He is an all-sufficient Savior. There is no church to be placed in the same category with the Christian Church.

—The minister of Grace Church, Rev. R. J. Tamblyn, is in receipt of a very gracious letter from Dr. Nathan Krass, Rabbi of Temple Emanu-El, New York City, in which Dr. Krass comments upon the religious value of such a service as the Community Thanksgiving Service held in the Carolina Theatre last Thanksgiving Day.

He writes: "It has been my contention for a long time that just as we live in our homes and are on friendly terms with our neighbors, without harboring constant fear that because of their friendship we must surrender our domiciles, so we may cling to our own denominations and live on terms of felicitous friendship with other denominations, without diurnal dread of being obliged to surrender our faith or have it crushed from without.

"Each church and synagogue is like a musical instrument in a large orchestra, sounding an individual note, but in such a way as to produce harmony. That, I believe is the fundamental business of religion today. Its various groups are like organ pipes. Religion must strike the diapason of brotherhood and peace."

FIVE MINUTES WITH HIM

A young woman whose work was hard and whose hours were long was in the habit of running in every day for a five-minute chat with an elderly woman who lived on a side street near the factory where the young woman worked. "I always felt better after I have seen her," she explained to an inquiring friend. "Even a five-minute talk with a person like that does you a world of good. You know she used to work in the factory here years ago and she knows just what it means."

Christians should not forget that they have a God who knows and understands. "He knoweth our frame," declares the psalmist. Why not confide in him often? Even five minutes a day spent in talking to him and unburdening the heart of its problems and worries would be helpful. That is just what prayer is—talking to God, telling him all about our trials and experiences, and asking him for sympathy and help. Most of us find time to consult our human counselors and advisers. Why not consult God, also?—Forward.

—The New Year's holiday prevented many articles from reaching us in time this week. Perhaps Uncle Sam takes too many holidays.

ANNOUNCING THE SECOND DENOMINATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY FOR JANUARY 26, 1930, IN CONNECTION WITH CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WEEK, JAN. 26 TO FEB. 2, 1930

This is a day when great emphasis is being placed upon the value and place of youth actively engaged in the work of the church. At no other time in the history of the Kingdom of our Savior has greater emphasis been given. This is evidenced by the fact that many Protestant denominations and international organizations are spending large sums of money and using their best talent and challenging the lives of youth of the world. That youth is responding to these appeals is evidenced by thousands who today are backing up the program of the Kingdom through various denominations and other agencies. Statistics just compiled reveal that the Methodist Protestant youth was found among this great number. Through our Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor Societies thousands of young people during the past years have received valuable training and have been challenging in many cases by a very definite program. During three months last summer nearly 2000 spent a week studying the problems of the Kingdom and how they might better make their life of more usefulness for its advancement. During the same period almost 7000 of our young people and church leaders were brought into contact with our Leadership Training program alone. During this time 738 dedicated their lives to all-time and part-time religious work.

The Initial Denominational Young People's Day program which was conducted throughout our church last February was considered from many angles to be a very fine beginning. It was observed generally throughout the denomination and we appreciated the many comments that came to our office regarding its adoption. The program was not in any sense what we desired it to be due to the fact that the country was passing through an influenza epidemic and we were financially limited in means wherewith to make the program more attractive. We were happy to know, however, that with the expenditure of $132, this including $90 for postage, there were returned for New Century Service from eighteen different conferences, $1,207.32. The financial returns were appreciated very much by Dr. Straughn, I am sure, but we feel that the greater benefit to the Kingdom was information that was given to the various congregations pertaining to Religious Education and other phases of our church. We wish to thank everyone heartily for their co-operation in making our initial day a success.

The second denominational Young People's Day gives to the various local churches a great opportunity to give added recognition to the value and place of youth in our own denominational program. It is the desire of the personnel of our department to make our second denominational Young People's Day even a far greater success than the initial one was. This year a dual emphasis will be made correlating our denominational program with the Christian Endeavor Week which is annually observed and promoted by the International Societies of Christian Endeavor co-operating with the different denominations. The emphasis which we wish to give our program this year will be as follows:

1. Upon Christian Education throughout the church. Everyone recognizes the fact that there is, indeed, a great place for a trained leadership in carrying on the work of the Kingdom. In correlating our wishes with the theme for Christian Endeavor Week, "Double Your Life by Sharing," we would not only like to see the Methodist Protestant constituency double its life by sharing, but that its leadership might be doubled in efficiency through sharing our time, our talent, and our resources.

2. To double our New Century Service contributions through sharing. Certainly there is no slogan that is challenging the minds of youth, as well as adults, of our church than that of New Century Service. We would give emphasis to this phase of our work for two reasons. First, that it affords a great opportunity for the various churches to raise their appropriations for New Century Service. Secondly, and one of primary importance to our church, is that the solution to many of the problems confronting our denomination, as well as the Kingdom, will be the leading of our young people to share the resources that will come to their hands in promoting Christ's Kingdom.

Materials are now being prepared to assist various churches in properly observing this second denominational Young People's Day. If you are planning to observe this day, please write us immediately so that your name will be placed upon our mailing list in order that materials may reach you in plenty of time. Also please watch for further announcements through the papers regarding the observance of this day.

Churches planning to observe Christian Endeavor Week will find a very attractive program for an entire week for its young people, culminating on Christian Endeavor Day, February 3. Additional materials can be had upon request from the International Society of Christian Endeavor, 41 Mt. Vernon Street, Boston, Mass.

Communications regarding our denominational Young People's Day materials should be addressed to the Department of Religious Education, Box 993, Durham, N. C.

"THE COLONEL'S WORD WILL STAND"

During my military service in India, in those stirring times of mutiny and murder, I had in my regiment a little bugler who was too weak and delicate for the life he had to lead; but he was born in the regiment, his father had been killed in action, and then his mother drooped and died. After his mother died his life was miserable by the scoffing sneers and ribald jokes of the men, whose butt he was.

When little Willie Holt was fourteen years old, the regiment was bivouacking some miles from camp for rifle practice. I had intended leaving the lad behind, but my sergeant-major begged hard to "take him along." "There is mischief in the air, Colonel," he said; "and, rough as they treat the lad, his pluck and his patience tells on 'em; for the boy is a saint, sir; he is, indeed."

I had a rough lot of recruits just then. Before we had been out a fortnight several acts of insubordination had been brought to my notice, and I had pledged to make an example of the very next offense by having the culprit flogged.

One night targets were thrown down and otherwise mutilated. On investigation, the act was traced to occupants of the very tent where Willie Holt was camped.

In vain I appealed to them to produce the man, and at last I said: "If any one of you who slept in number four tent last night will come forward and take his punishment like a man, the rest will get off free; but if not, there remains no alternative but to punish you all, each in turn to receive ten strokes of the cat."

For the space of a couple of minutes, dead silence followed; then, from the midst of the prisoners, where his slight form had been completely hidden, Willie Holt came forward.

"Colonel," said he, "you have passed your word that if any one of those who slept in number four tent last night comes forward to take his punishment, the rest shall get off free. I am ready, sir; please, may I take it now?"

For a moment I was speechless, so utterly was I taken by surprise; then, in a fury of anger and disgust, I turned upon the prisoners: "Is there no man among you worthy of the name? Are you all cowards enough to let this lad suffer for your sins? For that he is guiltless you know as well as I." But sullen and silent they stood, with never a word.

Then I turned to the boy, whose pleading eyes were fixed on me, and never in all my life have I found myself so painfully situated. I knew my word must stand, and the lad knew it, too, as he repeated, "I am ready, sir."

Sick at heart, I gave the order, and he was led away for punishment. Bravely he stood with bared back, as one, two, three strokes descended. At the fourth a faint moan escaped his white lips; but ere the fifth fell a hoarse cry burst from the crowd of prisoners who had been forced to witness the scene, and with one bound Jim Sykes—the black sheep of the regiment — seized the cat, as with choking utterance he shouted: "Stop it, Colonel, stop it, and tie me up instead! He never did it, but I did;" and with convulsed and anguished face he flung his arms around the boy.

Fainting and almost speechless, Willie lifted his eyes to the man's face and smiled—such a smile! "No, Jim," he whispered, "you are safe now, the Colonel's word will stand." Then his head fell forward—he had fainted.

The next day I visited the hospital tent where the boy lay dying. The shock had been too much for his feeble strength. He lay propped up on the pillows; and at his side, half kneeling, half crouching, was Jim Sykes. I saw the drops of sweat standing on his brow as he muttered brokenly: "Why did ye do it, lad? Why did ye do it?"

"Because I wanted to take it for you, Jim," Willie's weak voice answered tenderly. "I thought it might help you to understand why Christ died for you."

"Christ died for me?" the man repeated.

"Yes, He died for you because He loved you. I love you, Jim, but Christ loves you much more. I only suffered for one sin, but Christ took the punishment for all the sins you have ever committed. The penalty was death, Jim, and Christ died for you."

"Christ has naught to do with such as me, lad; I'm one of the bad 'uns; you ought to know."

"But He died to save bad ones," answered Willie. "After you have sinned against Him He loves you so much that He came all the way from Heaven, and suffered and died in your place, and now He is calling you. He wants to cleanse you from every stain of sin and make you fit for His presence. He wants you to live with Him in glory. He was wounded for your transgressions. He was bruised for your iniquities, the chastisement of your peace was upon Him. How can you resist such love as that?

"He says: 'He that heareth My Word and believeth on Him that sent Me hath everlasting life, and shall not come into judgment, but is passed from death unto life.' Won't you receive Him now?"

The lad's voice failed him, but he laid his hand gently on the man's bowed head.

After a little while we saw a strange light in his dying eyes, and with a happy cry he flung out his hands as if in welcome. Then gradually the weak arms dropped; the light faded from the shining eyes; and his spirit passed over from earth to heaven.

GODLY CHARACTER

Rain and sunshine both play their part in developing godly character . . . . Abraham toiled on his sorrowful way to Mount Moriah under a dark cloud of apprehension, but the "clear shining" came when God approved his faith and spared the beloved son Isaac to the father's heart. The successive strokes of trial that burst on the head of Joseph only made his exaltation the more signal when he became prime minister of Egypt. There are forty-one chapters of the Book of Job through which beats the tempest that smote the four corners of his house, but in the forty-second chapter comes the "clear shining" after the rain, and the blaze of restored prosperity. The biographies of Elijah and Daniel prove that "light is sown for the righteous"; and the eleventh chapter of the Hebrews is a meteorological record to show how faith paints rainbows on thunderclouds.—Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler.

"Life's final power is brotherhood,
The crest and crowning of all good,
For it will bring again to earth
Her long lost pose and mirth;
Will send new light on every faith,
A kingly power upon the race:
And 'til it comes, we men are slaves,
And travel downward to the dust of graves.

"Come, clear the way, then; clear the way!
Blinds creeds and kings have had their day.
Break the dead branches from their path,
Our hope is in the aftermath!
Our hope is in the heroic men—
Star-led to build the world again.
To this event the ages ran—
Make way for the brotherhood of man."

A HALF-MINUTE SERMON

"And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God." (Mark 11:22).

In the American war the flag was in danger of being captured. The captain shouted: "Bring the colors back to the company!" But just at that moment a brave soldier dashed forward shouting: "Bring the company up to the colors!" And soon that flag was surrounded by a hundred fearless hearts. So we may lower God's standard and bring it down to the level of our unbelief; or we may bring our faith up to the great and glorious standard of His mighty promises, His own mighty proffered faith.—A. B. Simpson.

THE WAY TO WIN

"A Church which does not go out, in the spirit of the Master, to save the lost cannot become a spiritual power. It may win the applause of a few easy-going, conventional souls, but it will never gain even the respect of the masses, who will wander farther and farther away from the things of God."—Selected.

CHRISTMAS—NEW YEAR

One is forever sealed with the past.

"The moving finger writes,
And having writ, moves on."

The other is just ahead. One more day, then a new year. We trust that the Christmas season has been a joyous one for all of our people, and that the Christ of Christmas has had his rightful place in all that we have thought and done at this season that commemorates his birth. More and more the Christmas season should become a time of worship. That was true of the first Christmas. It should be true of Christmas today.

"Still through the cloven skies they come,
With peaceful wings unfurled,
And still their heavenly music floats
O'er all the weary world."

We extend loving New Year greetings to all of our people, and most earnestly wish for them the maximum of peace and happiness during 1930. The Father of us all has a wise purpose in lengthening out the years of our earthly pilgrmiage. We trust that we have not disappointed Him in the year that is closing, and that we shall enter upon the new year with an intensified sense of His goodness to us, and of our obligations to Him.

"Since from His bounty I receive
Such proofs of love divine,
Had I a thousand hearts to give,
Lord, they should all be thine."

With this sentiment of the pact, and this purpose kept strong in our hearts, the new year will have much that will make for our peace and our prosperity. May the spirit of renewed consecration come upon every pastor and every church with the coming of the new year. The Lord make it for us not only a new calendar year, but a new year of devotion to Him, and to all that concerns His glory. It should be for us a new year of brotherliness, of Bible study, of prayer, of church attendance, of liberality; a new year in everything that will magnify Jesus and help to establish among men the reign of His blessed kingdom. And if in the good providence of Him who orders the cycles of time, this year brings some of us to the end of the way, may it be that we shall find ourselves before the portals of the eternal city, and the gates swinging wide for our reception.

Thomasville—First Church

December 18, Thursday.—We were with this church at night, in the first quarterly conference of the new conference year. The reports of the pastor and other officials showed that the work of the church is in a promising condition. The Sunday School has an average attendance of 170, is out of debt, and contributes monthly to the Children's Home; the Woman's Auxiliary has eighteen active members; and the C. E. Society is doing good work. A favorable attitude was shown toward the "Dollar a Member," and since the conference the full amount has been provided. Brother E. O. Peeler, who is serving as associate pastor until June, and his wife, have won their way to the hearts of the people. A spirit of optimism, prevailing with both pastor and people, give promise of a good year for this church.

Special Session

The special session of the annual conference was held, December 17, as announced, with a considerable number of the members present. Plans proposed by the Finance Committee for liquidating the indebtedness of High Point College were fully discussed and unanimously endorsed by the conference. The committee is hopeful of financing the college through the sale of bonds. Plans for this are going forward as rapidly as possible, and we shall await the results with deep interest and earnest prayers.

English Street

December 19, Thursday.—The quarterly conference of this church was held on this date, at night, and it was our privilege to attend. The conference was preceded by a worship service, conducted by the pastor, and a brief program rendered by the Junior C. E. Society. A very small number of the officials were present, due in part, we are sure, to extra demands made on their time by the rush Christmas business. The conference ratified plans that had been worked out for the sale of the parsonage property, and voted to recommend to the congregation favorable action when the matter is presented to the church for approval. The sale of this property will relieve the church of a debt that is hampering the work. Our opinion is that it is both a wise move and a necessary one. Brother Reynolds is working with his usual faithfulness to securely establish the church, and to put it on a growing basis. There is a good field here for us, and we believe the wise leadership of the pastor, together with the continued co-operation of his people, will gradually bring the church to a place of gratifying service in this growing community.

Guilford Charge

December 22, Sunday.—This day—Christmas Sunday—was allotted to Guilford Charge, with appointments at three of the churches. For the morning service we were at Mitchell's Grove, arriving just in time for the closing of a well-attended Sunday School. It was highly pleasing to see them all remain for the preaching service, too. For a cold, snowy morning, the congregation was all that could be expected. They were helpful in their attention, and we enjoyed preaching and worshiping with them. "Dollar a Member" was presented at the close of the service, with some success. Mr. Graydon Ring, a graduate of High Point College, will head a committee to continue this effort until the entire membership amount is secured, if possible.

The afternoon appointment was at Hickory Grove. We found a very few people in Sunday School here, and these made up our congregation for the preaching service. We could not complain, for the afternoon was real wintery, and our appointment was not well known, perhaps. We enjoyed being there, and meeting the few who were present, and worshiping with them the Christ Child. The well-kept condition of this little church is always conducive to worship. "Dollar a Member" was presented here. A few dollars were pledged, and a committee appointed to continue the effort.

At night we were to have been at Fairfield, but owing to the cold, snowy, freezing weather, and the torn-up condition of the roads in that section, we did not try to make that appointment. Brother Claude Jones assured us that he would notify the people down there not to expect us. Our practice is never to miss an appointment; but we felt fully justified this time. We shall put this church on our schedule for a later visit.

We arrived home in time to attend the musical program at Grace Church. It was both pleasing and worshipful.

West End, Thomasville

December 29, Sunday.—At the 11 o'clock hour we preached to a goodly number in this church. The unusual number of young people in the service was noticeable. The interest manifested by our hearers was pleasing and helpful to us in our effort to preach. The attention of both the young people and the adults, to the story told at the conclusion of the sermon, and the verse of scripture given with it, was very marked. It has long been a conviction with us that there should be more in our preaching services for our children and young people. We may not be able to have a Junior church service, but we can have a short story, a verse of scripture, a poem, a hyumn, or something else worthwhile designed especially for the children and the young people who are present.

In the afternoon the first quarterly conference of the charge was held. The reports showed a very gratifying Sunday School enrollment, with an average attendance of about 120. There is also an active Aid Society in the church, with 15 members. The A. C. B. of last year was paid by the Society. They report $50 in their treasury at present. It should be said, also, that the Sunday School contributes monthly to the Children's Home. The building debt is somewhat hampering to this small congregation, though they are doing something toward reducing it. Last year they raised for this purpose, $250. We trust that they may do that well, or better, this year. Brother H. W. Bell is living in Thomasville, and for the present he will fill the appointments here. The people know him, and they are very anxious to have him preach for them.

The town of Thomasville, and our constituency there, seem hardly large enough to justify three Methodist Protestant churches. It is a case where consolidation would appear to be promotive of all good ends. Perhaps time, and wise thinking and planning, will determine whether or not this should be attempted.

Lebanon, 7:30 P. M.

December 30, Monday.—We were with Brother Suits and his church in their first quarterly conference on this date. The report of the pastor showed that he had been giving diligent attention to the duties of his pastorate during these two months of the conference year. Upon the recommendation of the pastor the conference gave approval of his desire that the church observe all the special days, as set apart by the general and annual conference; that the church co-operate in the Easter-Pentecost evangelistic program; and that a committee be appointed to complete the "Dollar a Member" effort. Of the total amount expected of this church, $72 has been provided already. The Sunday School is working well, and makes monthly contributions to the Children's Home. The average attendance for last year was about 200. The C. E. Society, of 30 members, is active along various lines. Last year a number of new hymnals (our Hymnal) was bought for the church by the Society. The President reported the Aid Society, of 27 members, in good working condition. The church has, also, an Auxiliary of about 40 members. The Auxiliary has promised $50 on "Dollar a Member." Good!

The women have in mind the merging of the Aid Society and the Auxiliary, and this they plan to do when the Aid Society year is up, which will be shortly. The church raised last year about $3,600. By doing that this year, they can pay all their budgets, the pastor's salary, and the indebtedness on their church improvements, amounting to $1,000. Pastor Suits will do his utmost to promote the progress of the church along all lines.

God's blessings upon all of these charges.

"Dollar a Member"

A part of the Christmas offering—the $5,000, you know—has been sent in, and has been forwarded to Dr. Andrews, as Christmas cheer for the college family. However, we must think that there is considerable more yet to go in. Just a very few charges have reported so far. Please: If you have any money in hand on the Christmas Offering of $5,000, send it to Dr. Brown at once. You will do this, won't you? I am urging it, because it is so badly needed at the college.

The Conference Committee has sent requests to all district managers, asking them to furnish the committee with report of the status of "Dollar a Member" in their respective districts. We know that pastors will give to the managers every possible co-operation in securing this information. It will be of much value to the district managers themselves, as well as to the conference committee.

Once again: According to our schedule, this effort ends with January. Won't every one please do his utmost to enable us to run out on schedule time? The committee will be very grateful for this co-operation. There are other things to which we need to turn our attention, but we can't well do anything else, or even think of any thing else, until "Dollar a Member" is done. Everybody together, now, to complete this undertaking in one more month!

"DOLLAR A MEMBER" CHURCHES

1. Kernersville, Kernersville Charge.
2. Union Grove, Orange Charge.
3. Pleasant Hill, Cleveland Charge.
4. Efland, Orange Charge.
5. Thomasville, First Church.
6. "YOU."

Efland and Thomasville were close competitors for fourth place.

"YOU" has sixth place. We are all watching for the report next week to know who "YOU" is. No foolin' now, "YOU"; come on with your name. Rev. B. M. Williams has the distinction of being the first to return a chart. He sends in two—one for Union Grove, and one for Efland. Hats off, everybody, to Brother Williams.

The Committee.

THE IMP OF DISCOURAGEMENT

This splendid little story, which is quoted from an old clipping of unknown origin, points its moral so plainly that there is nothing we need to say to simplify the lesson it teaches.

In the Street of Life, walking in the darkness of the shadows, hungry old Satan was out hunting with his dogs, the little imps of human weakness. A man came walking down the street. Satan said to the little imp, scowling with a bitter face: "Go, get him for me!"

Quickly the little imp crossed the street, silently and lightly hopped to the man's shoulder. In his ear he whispered, "You are discouraged."

"No," said the man, "I am not discouraged."

"You are discouraged!"

This time the man replied, "I do not think I am."

Louder and more decidedly the little imp repeated, "I tell you, you are discouraged."

The man dropped his head and murmured: "Well, I suppose I am."

The imp, darting back to Satan, said proudly: "I've got him; he is discouraged."

Another man passed. Again old Satan said: "Get him for me!"

The proud little demon of discouragement repeated the tactics. The first time he said: "You are discouraged," the man replied emphatically, "No!" The second time the man replied, "I tell you I am not discouraged!" The third time he said, "You lie! I am not discouraged." And he walked down the street, his head erect, going toward the light.

The imp of discouragement returned to his master, crestfallen. "I couldn't get him," he retorted. "Three times I told him he was discouraged. The third time he called me a liar, and that discouraged me."—Exchange.

"THE QUESTION"

Were the whole world good as you—not an atom better—
Were it just as pure and true,
Just as pure and true as you;
Just as strong in faith and works;
Just as free from crafty quirks;
All extortion, all deceit;
Schemes its neighbor to defeat;
Schemes its neighbors to defraud;
Schemes some culprit to applaud—
Would this world be better?

If the whole world followed you—followed to the letter—
Would it be a nobler world,
All deceit and falsehood hurled
From it altogether;
Malice, selfishness, and lust
Banished from beneath the crust
Covering human hearts from view—
Tell me, if it followed you,
Would the world be better?

—The British Weekly.

HOPE

We need hope for living far more than for dying. Dying is easy work compared with living. Dying is a moment's transition; living, a transaction of years. It is the length of the rope that puts the sage in it. Hope tightens the cords and tunes up the heart-strinrgs. Work well, then; suffer patiently, rejoicing in hope. God knows all, and yet is the God of Hope. And when we have hoped to the end here, He will give us something to look forward to, for all eternity. For "Hope abideth."—Maltbie Babcock.

PRAYER

In the secret of His presence,
It is there I see the Lord;
In the secret of His presence,
It is there I hear His Word.

In the secret of His presence,
Oh the bliss of being there!
When the time is near to worship,
When I talk to Him in prayer.

In the secret of His presence,
It is here I see myself;
As I look upon my risen Lord,
And bow at His behest.

In the secret of His presence,
May the time go by on wings;
Till I see my Lord in Glory,
And learn of heavenly things.

BEGIN THE YEAR WITH GOD

Begin the year with God!
Begin with praise
To him whose love will keep
Thee through the days.
Whate'er those days may be—
Or dark or bright—
Walking with him thy path
Leads to the light.

Begin the year with God!
His love can bless
Even the dark days in
The wilderness;
He goeth still before
A cloud by day;
Pillar of fire by night,
Guiding thy way.

Begin the year with God!
No friend like him
And should the unknown year
The valley dim
Open before thy gaze,
With him in sight,
Surely the unknown way.

OUR STORY PAGE

IN THE SAME COUNTRY

By Mildred Welch

Late evening in the year of our Lord, forty and five. A woman and a child sat on the flat roof of a house on the outskirts of Jerusalem and sitting on the parapet, looked out upon the road to Bethlehem. Behind them rose the tumult of the city, before them stretched the quiet fields, silvered already in the light of the rising moon, clear sky still flushed with tints of rose and pearl.

"Say it yet again, little son, the psalm our father David wrote, for soon we go forth to a far country, and while yet our eyes behold these fields of Bethlehem, say over again with me the song of our house." And his head against his mother's shoulder, the child repeated with her in the Hebrew tongue, the psalm, "Jehovah is my Shepherd."

When they had finished, the boy turned. "And now, mother, tell me once more the story of the shepherds in the fields, for already the time draws near—tonight, tonight, I heard my father say it."

"Ah, yes," the woman cried, "it is indeed tonight, and it must have been even such a night as this in the ending of the year. For I have heard that though it was winter, the air that night was mild and gentle, and that over all the land there came a stillness and a hush as if both the heavens and the earth listened and waited. O Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall He come forth unto me that is to be Ruler in Israel, Whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting. How can I leave thee? Another year when the time draws nigh, mayhap far away in Antioch, we will sit down by the waters of the river Orontes, even as our fathers sat down by the rivers of Babylon and wept when they remembered Zion." She seemed to have forgotten him and was far away in thoughs of her own. The boy pulled at her sleeve. "Then must we go, mother?"

"Yea, Nathan," her beautiful dark eyes looked down into the young eyes so like them, "we must go. Even now thy father is gone to make arrangements. Since the stoning of Stephen, many of our brethren and kinsfolk are scattered abroad and we follow too to Antioch. We seek a new home there and we carry the gospel of the good news with us. Tidings come up from Antioch that many of the Gentiles believe and have turned unto the Lord. May He grant to us to find rest in the house of our pilgrimage."

"But tell me, mother, tell me of the shepherds, for I weary to hear it."

She drew him close. "Always, since first thou couldst understand, thou hast wearied to hear it, my son. And yet—are thou not also of the house of Ruth, who gleaned yonder in the fields of Boaz and looking afar off to the hills of Moab, longed for home? Art thou not of the house of David, who when he was athirst, cried out, 'O that one would give me to drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem that is beside the gate!' Yea, I tell thee it again, even as thy father who saw it hath oft told it unto me.

Those were the days of Caesar Augustus, when Herod was king in Judea and the land was desolate and afflicted. So close did the Romans grind down the faces of the people, so heavy were the taxes, that the land was shadowed in darkness, the women going to the well for water laughed no more, and even the children fell silent in the streets. Thy father's father, who was in the town of Bethlehem and of the house of David, had been rich in houses and lands and in flocks and herds. But most of them had been taken from him, and since the days were so evil, he himself ofttimes went to the fields with the shepherds to keep watch over the sheep that remained. Always he talked of the promises of Jehovah to David our Father, and of the sayings of the prophets that Messiah should come. Three times a day, as his custom was, he went up to the housetop, at break of day, at noon, and at even, and ofttimes thy father heard him cry, "Watchman, what of the night? The morning cometh, also the night. How long, O Lord, how long?'

That night he was a long time on the roof, praying, and when he came down, he said to his wife. "The land is full of strangers coming to the city to be taxed and Herod's soldiers are abroad. I take the lad with me and abide in the fields with the sheep this night.' But very early, while it was yet dark, the lad come knocking at the door. 'Open to me! Open!' he cried, and when his mother, affrighted, had opened to him, he said, 'Fear not,' and she saw his face as though a great light shone on it. 'O haste thee, my mother, haste thee!' he cried again, 'my father bids thee send him honey and bread and cheese from thy store and I take my little ewe lamb.' But as she still gazed at him, he said, 'Haste thee, and what time thou gatherest the gifts, I will tell thee, for I must run to overtake my father.'

So while she brought from her store barley cakes, fresh baked, clusters of raisins, honey, and cheese of goats' milk, the lad told her of what had befallen them, and the light upon his face made as it were a shining in the house.

'We went, as thou knowest, to the fields beyond Bethlehem to keep watch over our sheep. And there were in the same country other shepherds abiding in the fields, keeping watch over their flocks by night. And lo, the Angel of the Lord came upon us and the glory of the Lord shone round about us and we were sore afraid. And the Angel said unto us, 'Fear not, for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Saviour which is Christ the Lord. And this shall be a sign unto you: ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger.' And suddenly, there was with the Angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God in the highest and on earth, peace, good will toward men. And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from us into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, 'Let us now go even unto Bethlehem and see this thing which is come to pass which the Lord hath made known unto us.' And my father bade me run with haste that we may not come empty handed to the Child that is born.'

'Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for He hath visited and redeemed His people,' said his mother, but she asked, 'And thou takest thy little ewe lamb that thou lovest?' 'Yea,' he said, 'naught else have I of worth,' and he laid his cheek against the little lamb's white fleece. Then with the bundle of food hung over his shoulder, and the little lamb folded in his tunic, he ran."

"O mother, I know," cried the boy, springing to his feet, "I know, for was he not fleet of foot, more fleet than any lad of Bethlehem? And he overtook his father and the shepherds. And they came with haste and found Mary and Joseph,'' his voice softened, ''and the Babe lying in a manger. And when they had seen it, they made known the saying which was told them by the shepherds. But mother,'' he came to her side again, ''what happened afterwards? I cannot understand.''

''Ah, little one, you are yet too young to understand the things strange terrible and wonderful that have come to pass since the Babe was born in Bethlehem. But know this, that the Child was indeed the Promised One, only He came unto His own and His own received Him not. But now at last, thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift, He hath opened our eyes that we should know His Son from heaven.''

The boy stood by her, his dreaming eyes looking out over the fields his young head downbent, as though he listened for something: Then he turned to the woman and his voice was wistful. ''But my father and my grandfather, they saw the glory of the Lord, they heard the voices of the heavenly host praising God; my father and my grandfather, they went with gifts to worship the Child in the manger. And ye, too, my father and my mother, saw Him when He was risen from the dead. But mine eyes have not seen, mine ears have not heard, I have brought Him no gift. And now, as thou sayest, we go to a far country. No more shall we dwell here in the same country. How then shall mine eyes see?''

''Little son, mine only son,'' the woman's eyes were shining, ''haply, He, the Promised One, hath something He would say to thee.''

''To me, mother?''

''Yea, to thee, Nathan. Did He not say, ''Blessed are they that have not seen yet have believed?' And He lives, never forget, He lives. Thou rememberest that in the same country there were shepherds abiding in the fields. But there were other, too, in that same country. All Bethlehem was full, so that there was not room in the inn for Mary and Joseph and the Babe—yet those others saw not the vision. The proud Romans feasted in Jerusalem that night, and Herod the King held revel in his palace, but to them came no vision of angels. The soldiers of Herod were out on the roads that night, but they heard not the song of the heavenly host. Understandest thou ,little one? The shepherds, abiding in the fields, keeping watch over their flocks by night, waited for the Hope of Israel and to them the vision came.

TIMMY'S TERRIBLE TRAGEDY

It was so like Timmy to catch a cold just before Christmas. He knew he was going to have one, really, though he tried and tried to forget it. Really and truly, how he knew was that there was a little pain, a tiny tightness away down in his chest.

This year Timmy specially did want to keep well as the whole family was driving across in daddy's car to spend Christmas Day with Uncle Boris and Aunt Marigold.

She was a new aunt. Uncle Boris had only just married, and they wanted to have a grand party at the Old Manor House which they had taken, exactly twenty miles away from the red cottage where Timmy and Maisie and Peter and Mummy and Daddy lived.

There was to be a big Christmas tree at the uncle's house, and lots of other children were invited. It was to be a long joyful day, beginning with church all together in the morning, and the children were to be allowed to stay up to dinner in the evening. Fancy that! And to drive home quite late after eating turkey and plum pudding. Just as if they were really grown up, say, twenty or thirty years old.

''Sorry, darling, you must give up all hopes of going,'' said Mother by Timmy's bedside, after the doctor had been to sound his chest. ''The doctor says it's your usual cold. It would be very dangerous, he said, to wrap you up in a fur rug as Daddy hoped to do and to take you along. You must just make the best of it. Nanny is going away, but Cook and Emily will be here, and they will look after you, and there'll be some surprises, darling; I'll have some ready.''

''Right, Mother.''

Timmy was ten and did not want to fuss. But two scalding tears escaped from his eyes as he lay thinking about Christmas Day. The others leaving the house; the car purring round, all the presents for the Aunt and Uncle being put in. The silent house. Not the sound of a carol, or the shout of Peter or Maisie at their Christmas games, Cook and stupid Emily shut up in the kitchen. A poor lunch, not much plum pudding, as he was in bed. Nobody to pull a cracker with. Daddy had explained that they did not want to disappoint their new aunt, so they must go .... Nobody, perhaps, really loved him after all. Poor old Tim!

He went to sleep after they had started on Christmas morning. Mother had not even come to say good-bye, so unlike her .... His cold was very bad, and he felt as flat as a pancake. Mother had gone off to have fun without him. Was life really so hard as this? In his own little room, with sailor pictures all round it (for he was going to be a Jellicoe some day), Timmy lay, and dozed then roused about 12 o'clock. Long, wretched morning. The others would be singing cheerfully in church.

He saw a parcel on his coverlet labelled ''Surprises,'' but he was too miserable to look. Then ''May I come in?'' said a queer voice at his door, and in walked a lady in a thick veil. Timmy thought it was horrible to have a visitor. He didn't care two buttons about strange grown-ups.

''How are you, my little dear?''

''Quite well, thank you,'' said Timmy, gruffly.

The visitor's voice was odd. ''You want your Mother,'' it said; ''Mother to make fun, and to read to you.''

Timmy stared at her. What did she know about it?

Then she pulled off the veil and laughed, and it was Mother herself in clothes he did not know (that was, perhaps, because they were new), and, as for the veil, that was put on for fun.

''Darling, I wasn't quite sure if I should be able to get back to you. I had to go over and wish them Merry Christmas, and I meant to try to get the use of a car straight back to you. It's hard to hire one on Christmas Day. But I managed it. You didn't think I would leave you if I could help it, did you? Gracious, your bedclothes are all slipping off,'' and Mother's deft, clever hands straightened the untidy bed. Timmy was grinning with joy.

''We'll have a lovely Christmas all alone together,'' said Mother, stroking his hair. ''There'll be time for reading the Mohican book, and you must look at your box of Surprises, old chap.''

Timmy was all right again, the world was gay and bright and already his cough was getting better, he knew it was.

Mother was there!—British Weekly.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

Tuesday—Paul asks prayer. Eph. 6:18-20.
Wednesday—What to pray for. Eph. 1:15-23.
Thursday—Prayer for Sodom. Gen. 18:23-33.
Friday—Jesus' prayer for others. John 17: 9, 10, 20, 21.
Saturday—The great promise. John 16:7.

For the Individual

Monday—I will pray for the one unsaved nearest me.

Tuesday—I will find something helpful for that one to read.

Wednesday—I will ask someone else to pray with me for that one.

Thursday—I will ask that one to pray with me.

Friday—I will ask the minister to pray for that one.

Saturday—I will expect results.

To the Leader

You should try to make this meeting one in which all members may participate in some manner. You might give each member slips of paper asking that they write some reason why we pray for others or some Bible verse directly relating to the subject. Instead of having these slips taken up, let each member use this as the basis for a very brief talk.

Jot down somewhere the reasons which would likely not be thought of by the majority so that when discussion wanes you will be able to carry it on.

Any hymns having the spirit of prayer will be suitable. Make your own talk brief so as not cover the whole subject beforehand.

Why Pray for Others?

The more common reasons:

1. The Bible gives examples.
2. The prayer of a righteous man availeth much.
3. In praying for others we will come to want to work for them.
4. "Prayer changes things."
5. Prayer deepens one's soul life.
6. Prayer aids character-building.

The less obvious reasons:

1. For my own sake -I need prayer.
2. Every one needs prayer.
3. Jesus prayed for others.
4. Prayer aids in completing the individual.
5. Prayer is food to the Christian.
6. Prayer means communion with the Divine.

Prose and Poetry

A prayer in its simplest difinition is merely a wish turned heavenward.—Phillips Brooks.

Prayer is the Christian's vital breath.—Anon.

I am never tired of praying, said one man, because I have always a definite errand when I pray.—Spurgeon.

Prayer changes things;
Prayer changes things.
No matter how heavy the burden
you bear,
If you cast it on Jesus
He'll carry your care;
And nothing can hinder the soul
that will dare,
For prayer changes things.
—May Agnew Stephens.

Hope, he called the belief in God work, worship,
Therefore let us pray.
—Browning in "Aurora Leigh."

Be not afraid to pray—to pray is right.
Pray if thou canst with hope; but ever
Though hope be weak or sick with long delay,
Pray in the darkness, if there be no light.
—Coleridge.

No man ever prayed heartily without learning something—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

OTHERS

Lord, help me to live from day to day
In such a self-forgetful way
That even when I kneel to pray
My prayer shall be for—others.

Help me in all the work I do
To ever be sincere and true
And know that all I'd do for you
Must needs be done for others.

Let self be crucified and slain
And buried deep; and all in vain
May efforts be to rise again
Unless to live for—others.

Others, Lord, yes, others,
Let this my motto be:
Help me to live for others
That I may ive like Thee.
—Anonymous.

THE ESKIMO GIRL

I am a little Eskimo
A lass both short and plump;
I live right in the land of snow
Where cold just makes me jump.
Of course you think I'm mighty queer
With trim and dainty feet;
And laugh with glee whene'er you hear
Of how I eat raw meat.

But you who live in houses warm,
Who think it cold at times,
Should know my home is one big storm
While you have warmer climes.
I live in tent or house of stone,
Or burrow 'neath the snow;
And dress in skins and furs alone
No matter where I go.

My face is brown because you see
It never get a wash;
'Tis natural I want to be—
Your soap and paints are bosh.
With bow and arrow, spear and lance
My dogs and I go free;
I hunt and fish and sing and dance—
O come and laugh with me.
—Roy Irwin Farmer.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

GRACE AUXILIARY

The Woman's Missionary Society of Grace Church held the inspirational meeting in the church on Monday afternoon. A Christmas program was given. The devotional service was led by Mrs. Charles Van Noppen; the lesson theme was deeply spiritual and helpful.

"Even Unto Bethlehem," by Henry Van Dyke, was read by Mrs. Richard Wills in her usual charming way.

Miss Ruth Huffman, of Greensboro College, sang "There's a Song in the Air." She was accompanied by Mrs. J. Norman Wills at the piano.

"The Lullaby," taken from Maunder's Christmas cantata, was sung by Miss Dorothy Franklin, also of the college. Miss Franklin, with Miss Margaret Little, another Greensboro College student, sang beautifully in duet, "Holy Night." The members always appreciate having these girls appear on our programs.

At the close of the program a survey was made and reported. Mrs. F. R. Brittain's Circle, No. 1, had won the attendance prize.

MY PAGEANT OF CHRISTMAS CARDS

A prettier sight you'll rarely see
Than that this Christmas brought to me.
It came from far, it came from near,
It came from friends I hold most dear.

Their gifts compose a fine display
Whose worth will last for many a day.
They tell of love, they breathe a prayer,
Inspiring me to do and dare.

They point me back to Great Advent,
They point me on to life's intent,
They make me feel that life's worth living,
Suggest to me more ample giving.

To each dear friend my thanks are tendered
For kindly service to me you rendered.
Your act will have its fitting meed
If it move me to noble deed.

Two of a Kind -On a very rought night Rev. N. G. Bethea was returning home in his buggy at a late hour. He met another buggy and could not refrain from asking, "What fool is this out driving such a night as this?" A voice came from the other buggy, saying, "There seem to be two of us."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Clark's Chapel, Weaverville.—We are very glad indeed to report a growing interest in Sunday School.

Forty-one present last Sunday and everybody seems to enjoy the school and take great interest in the lessons, and also in the growth and progress of the church in general.

A special Christmas program was prepared by Miss Mary Blankenship, Mrs. Austin Mackey and Miss Stella Cheek. The children seemed interested and did very nicely with their parts.

Our hearts have been recently saddened by the loss of two of our most faithful and loyal members, Mr. A. N. Eler and Mr. W D. Parker.

Mr. Eller had an extended illness, and Mr. Parker had been away, but they were generous in their support of the church. We extend to the bereaved ones our deepest sympathy.

Shiloh C. E. Society.—This is the season of the year when everyone is thinking about Christmas gifts. Very often we become so absorbed in the getting and giving of gifts at Christmas time that we lose the spirit of the occasion. The real joy of giving gifts is not in their material value, but in spirit of love and friendschip that they suggest. It was deepest spirit of love for the world that caused God to give His only Son that we might be saved. God's gift was the greatest gift of all time.

The coming of Christ into the world meant more to the world than any other thing that can ever take place. Let us give our gifts as gifts of love and friendship.

Wishing all the readers of the Herald a happy New Year, with great peace along the untried pths of life.

"Ring out false pride in place and blood,
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right,
Ring in the common love of good.

"Ring out old shapes of foul diseases;
Ring out the narrowing lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old,
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

"Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand;
Ring out the darkness of the land,
Ring in the Christ that is to be."

Union, Halifax Charge.—We, the members of the Union Ladies' Aid, were overjoyed with our successful Fiddlers' Convention, given at Handnamee school Wednesday night, December 11. Our success was better than we even hoped for considering the scarcity of money in this community. The money we received will be spent for repairs on our church, also a portion will go to the parsonage.

Our Aid is young but growing steadily and working with all power to be a stronger union later. The fourteen faithful workers we have will, I'm sure, bring more members into our organization and we will have an Aid in the future of which everyone will be proud. We extend a warm welcome to any members of other Aids and will appreciate their presence and advice very much indeed. The next appointment of our meeting will be held on Friday afternoon, January 24, at 2 o'clock in the home of Misses Ruth and Louise Lewis. Members from all Aids, we will be glad to have you with us.

Our new pastor, Mr. Fogleman, preached his first sermon at our church the first Sunday afternoon in December. On account of the severe weather, very few were present but those there enjoyed his talk immensely. We regret the loss of Mr. Spencer but feel sure Mr. Fogleman will be a splendid pastor. We know the work of the charge will progress steadily under his guidance as it did when Mr. Spencer was here.

Bethel, Mocksville Charge.—Work here is moving along nicely. We welcome our new pastor to this charge. He seems to be full of energy. He is making his second round. He has appointed one at each church to work for the Church Herald. He is also talking the "Dollar a Member."

At this church, there is no better plan than that to raise our college money.

We held our first quarterly meeting December 6 with very good attendance from Bethel and Union Chapel. Dulins and Union Grove not represented. We missed Elbaville so much, we regret the losing, but hope all changes were made for the good of the M. P. Church at large.

Our Sunday School is holding up nicely. Our collections are increasing some. We have our literature and it paid for and a nice little bank account. Ladies' Aid is selling fruit cakes in connection with their other work, raising money for Sunday School rooms.

We regret very much to give up our pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, but we feel that our loss will be his gain. He was always loyal to the church and ready to cooperate in any enterprise which the church launched. I am sure we have that same spirit in our new pastor, Brother Ferree, and all working together, we can do things.

Mebane.—We have entered into the labors of our second year at this place. It can truthfully be said that it is a pleasant experience to serve this people. They flatter, brag on, and pet the preacher but little; however, they support him and co-operate in a very splendid manner. They are sympathetic and always willing to help the preacher bear his burdens. By material gifts and other acts of kindness they have led us to believe that they highly appreciate their pastor and family. This in return, of course, is greatly appreciated by them.

The church, in all of its departments, is well organized and function almost to clockwork precision. Former pastors are (with the people themselves) are to be praised. The writer deserves no credit, as this condition existed before and upon his arrival.

The work, at present, is moving along in a satisfactory manner. We hope to have a great in-gathering of souls during the year. If business conditions are normal through the year we are sure that all claims will be paid in full. The financial part of our work moves along well; not because of financial ability, but largely as a result of the efforts of the most efficient board of stewards with which it has been our privilege to labor.

There is as much system and earnestness in its work as that of the average business establishment. What is said of the board can, in a large measure, be said of all other boards and organizations.

Our "Dollar a Member" for High Point College campaign, is moving along moderately well. It would move much better if our people could only realize what the college means to the Methodist Protestant Church, and through it, to society in general, and the seriousness of the present situation. We have raised about half of our apportionment in cash and pledges. Dr. Andrews and the finance committee can depend on Mebane for every dollar of its share.

It is believed that we will also be able to do all that is expected of us for the Herald. We are conscious of the value of this publication to us as a church and individuals. We believe that quite a few of our people have a keen sense of appreciation for Dr. McCulloch and the great work he has done and is doing for the Methodist Protestant Church. It is wondered whether or not we as a denomination have seen him in his true relations to this, our great church. If he will allow us to say it,—we will say that in a great many respects he is a martyr to the development and strength of his church. Examine the facts in the case and you will find this statement to be wholly true. We should do all within our power to make his lot more pleasant and facilitate the production of this valuable paper.

A cantata entitled, "From Eden to Bethlehem," will be given here next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. It will be given under the direction of Mrs. T. O. Pender.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson—The Fourth Sunday, Rev. Powell delivered a fine sermon. We are always glad when the fourth Sunday comes because this is preaching day. We also had communion on this Sunday.

The fourth Sunday ended the contest between the classes Nos. 3 and 4, with the boys' average higher than the girls' average. Cheer the boys! Congratulations for them even if we, the girls' class must lose. We are proud that they could have a high average even if we couldn't. The outcome will be a "turkey supper" at Mr. L. H. Hiltons, teacher of the boys class. We were afraid that the girls would have to eat beans, but no we don't. Aren't we proud?

Our Christmas tree at the church was held Tuesday afternoon. The tree was loaded down with presents given by one to another. We hope the readers of the Herald had a real nice Christmas, and we wish each and every one has a happy New Year.

Flat Rock, F. R. Circuit.—Some time ago one of our members said he stopped taking our church paper because there was never any news from our church in it. Somebody ought to be ashamed of neglected duty and I for one am. This is just a case of neglecting to appoint some one to report. We have members that are capable, but having never been authorized, each one is waiting for the other one to tell what he knows. This is not the case with secular news. Everyone hastens to be the first to tell everyone else.

We have not been entirely idle as the public might infer. We women are still hammering a little on the job of raising money for new seats for our church. Served a Brunswich stew, and a Rotary supper during the summer and realized a nice little sum from each. Lack of a hut for serving suppers, etc., handicaps us in the cooler months.

One member of the Sunday School suggested that we form a Penny a Day Club. The proceeds to be used towards paying for seats. A membership of ten was obtained from the Adult Bible Class and I'm sure others will join.

The First Quarterly Conference was held Saturday before the fourth Sunday in December. License was granted to G. A. Middleton to serve as a local preacher. At a meeting of the stewards of Flat Rock it was decided to adopt the budget plan to raise the finances of the church. This is to be paid quarterly. A committee consisting of A. W. Ogburn, Mrs. M. W. Thomas, and Mrs. J. B. Ogburn has been appointed to look after the improving of the cemetery and church grounds. Friends at a distance who have relatives buried there and who wish to contribute help for the upkeep of these grounds, please send contributions to Mrs. J. B. Ogburn, chairman of this committee.

Mrs. M. W. Thomas and little son, and Mr. W. L. Johnson, spent the holidays with their brother, Mr. I. N. Johnson of Mt. Rainor, Md. Mr. I. N. Johnson and family are expecting to return to our community in the near future to make their home. We will gladly welcome them.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Ogburn spent the holidays in Marion, Md., with Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Holland, parents of Mrs. Ogburn.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Shore have moved to Mayodan. We miss them in our Sunday School. The Christmas holidays passed of quietly around here. A Christmas tree was given the little folks which they fully enjoyed. The "grown ups" enjoyed seeing the little ones happy. The Sunday School has been good most of the year.

A happy New Year to our editor and publisher.

MRS. J. B. OGBURN.

Orange Charge.—The work is still moving along. We are trying to keep in line with our conference program as nearly as possible. Bad roads, severe weather, and sickness have interferred with our work.

The church paper subscriptions are coming in rather slowly. Hope to make a better showing when we can get out and see the people.

Two of the churches, Union Grove and Efland have pledged their full quota, "Dollar a Member" for the college. Hope to be able to report for the other churches soon.

Many expressions of kindness have been shown the parsonage family this new conference year. Space would not permit the mentioning of all these so will mention only a few, as follows: Suit of bedroom furniture and heatrola for the parsonage; fresh meat continuously since conference for the parsonage family.

During the holidays we were remembered by numerous Christmas cards and gifts. Some of the leading ones as follows: one turkey presented by Brother A. W. Holmes, $11.00 in cash from different individuals.

The greatest gift of all was a Crosley Radio for Archie Gray (our youngest boy who has been confined to his room for some time). We all appreciate the thoughtfulness of the good people in providing this for his comfort. We do not know at this writing who all had a part in the radio proposition. All we know is that some of the Efland people started the proposition, the other churches were invited to help if they desired. Hebron church was working to provide their part of the amount the fourth Sunday in December. Since the proposition was started perhaps someone can give names of all who contributed later. If we never know God knows and we are praying his blessings upon all who had any part in above named expression of kindness.

May we be able to properly minister to a people who are so thoughtful for our comforts is the New Year's prayer of the parsonage family.

R. W. Gibson and Lula Holmes were married at the parsonage December 24 by the writer. Mr. Gibson is a member of Hawfield's Presbyterian church, Mrs. Gibson is one of our Chestnut Ridge members.

We have had one funeral service since conference. This was for Richard Melvin Hayes, the small son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hayes. Services conducted from Chestnut Ridge church, December 4. May God comfort the bereaved relatives and friends.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Pleasant Grove.—Brother Williams brought us two very helpful sermons Sunday. At the evening service he used as subject, "The Book."

On Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, 'Choosing a King," was given by members of the Sunday School. The children of the primary department gave a short program at the beginning of the service.

The children of our pastor and wife, spent the holidays at the parsonage. We were glad to have Mr. Ralph Williams worship with us Sunday.

We are glad to note the addition of three members to the church since our last report: Mrs. Robert L. Kennedy, and Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Kennedy.

The brotherhood has placed shrubbery at the parsonage which adds much to the appearance.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Clark, their daughter, Elda and Misses Maud and Mary Kennedy are back with us after spending the holidays in Florida.

The "Dollar a Member" campaign for the High Point College is making progress under the direction of members of the C. E. societies.

We are glad to note Mrs. O. W. Cecil, who underwent an operation in the Clinic Hospital, High Point, is getting along nicely. We hope she will be able to attend church again soon.

Pinnacle.—The Sunday School members gave an interesting program on Christmas Eve, under the management of Rev. and Mrs. A. L. Hunter, Mrs. G. V. Wall, Mrs. E. F. Stone, and Miss Juanita Hunt. The main subject was, "The Royal Child." In addition to several vocal selections, which were rendered by the choir, and the children, a number of recitations, an exercise, and a drill were given by the children. Miss Nina Hunter gave an interesting and appropriate introductory reading. Mrs. Westmoreland and Miss Nina Hunter sang a duet. Toward the close of the entertainment about 150 sacks of "Christmas goodies" were presented to the members of the school. After the treat had been distributed, the presents which had been placed under the beautifully decorated tree, were delivered. REPORTER.

New Hope, Pageland Charge—For some reason our pastor have never got here yet from last conference, but we have had preaching service almost as regularly anyway. Brother T. E. Martin of Picking, S. C., came to us December 15, and conducted a series of meetings, and had a very good success, although the weather was very bad, raining and very cold, and on the last of the week began to snow.

We hated very much to see Brother Martin leave us, but he promised that he would come back after the following new year. Everyone seems to like Brother Martin very much, and we hope that he can come back and be with us again soon.

Our Sunday School and C. E. Society is in good condition, but we are hoping for warmer weather so the small children miles from the church can be with us again.

Yours in the Master's work for a better year.

State Street.—The third anniversary service of the entering the new church will be held on Sunday, January 12, with three services, 11:00 A. M., 2:00 P. M., and 7 P. M. Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the conference, will preach at the afternoon service. The morning service will be a sort of home-coming service followed by a fellowship hour during which dinner will be served in the basement of the church. The afternoon service will be an anniversary service with sermon by Dr. Taylor. The evening service will be a service of song.

All former members of this church together with all other Methodist Protestants who are in reach are cordialy invited to attend the services. Special music will feature in all of the services.

Friendship.—Our Sunday School and church services are largely attended for bad weather.

Rev. and Mrs. Hill are again with us; we are very glad indeed to have them for we love them better each year that they are with us.

Our church is very proud of its record for the new year as we have already received two new members, Mrs. Ray Harkey, and Mr. D. M. Harkey.

Our Christmas exercise was largely attended on last Tuesday night, and the program beautifully rendered.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers.

Bethel, Flat Rock Charge.—We are glad indeed to have Mr. and Mrs. Pegg back with us. We like Mr. Pegg's sermons very much and think he gets better all the time. We have had a good attendance at Sunday School all the year and Sunday School will continue through the winter months. The Ladies' Auxiliary planned to meet at the church and plant a lot of shrubbery, but the weather has been so bad that it has been postponed. We hope we can get this done yet. On Christmas Eve night we had a Christmas tree and program: had a large crowd despite the bad weather and the children did their parts well, owing to the training of Mrs. R. C. Gordon, Mrs. A. A. Jones and others. Our light plant has now been fixed and we hope to soon start having prayer meeting again. We hope this will be the best year Bethel has ever had. With best wishes to every Herald reader for a happy, prosperous New Year.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville, Fountain Place.—Silence from this pastor does not mean idleness for ever since conference every day has been put into full time work. Immediately after the rise of conference we began getting ready for moving. There are always some things that you do that do not seem like getting ready for this, but without which you would not get lined up on another field.

This writer never tries to carry two charges at the same time and while we had to leave many tried and true friends at State Street, we began at once to love, and get into the work here, with these who at both churches have received us kindly.

Gibsonville has made such changes and taken on such life since being there as pastor several years ago, when it was on another charge, it seems like a new place. Indeed it is new. Very few of the folks who were there during a former pastorate, but children of some of the faithful ones then are still going on with the work. Here there are an unusual number of bright, happy, interested young people. These have already shown their interest in us as we were invited up to a "An Acquaintance Meeting" just before Christmas, and when we went into the Hut we soon discovered that it was a young people's meeting so we retired to the auditorium and talked with some older people who had gathered there. Soon we were called in and a worship service was led by Miss Clapp, after which some games were enjoyed by all.

A Christmas tree was well loaded and presented a very attractive appearance and while we thought that perhaps the preacher's family might get something, as all of us were invited, we would have been perfectly satisfied with one present; but it soon developed that while everyone there received something, most of it came to the preacher. Surprised we were to be sure to have them all remember us. Then after taking leave and going into the auditorium to get overcoat and hot, these had been moved and put upon a pile of groceries with a notice sticking in the band of my hat with this inscription: "If you have any room left take all of this too." To be sure we made room though all had to ride on the front seat to make it. There were forty-seven packages! My, but we enjoyed that unloading when we got home.

The reporter for this place has recently told of the improvements that are being made.

The Fountain Place people got busy and built us a new garage since we came here, so our car is well-housed now. These people also had an interesting Christmas program on the fourth Sunday night and a treat for the smaller children. Signs of life at both places give us encouragement for the success of the work for this year.

It has been quite a joy to the writer to have so many old friends and acquaintances of boyhood days call up and say, 'We are glad you are back home." So many nice and useful gifts have come in since our coming here, many of them from people who are not members of our congregations. Gifts from so many that we know that the spirit shown gives us the assurance that we are among friends and while there has been no organized attack here at Fountain Place so many of our old friends and of other churches have remembered us that we would like to give names and articles but space forbids. We thank you all, friends, and pray God to richly repay.

The readjusting of appointments for both churches and rearranging everything makes it difficult to start the work here with flying colors, but we are hoping as the days wear on that we may be able to speed up things in such a way as to make real progress.

We are laying some plans in our minds with prayer that God may direct, with the faith to believe that during this year we may be enabled to see the Kingdom moved forward here to the glory of God and the good of the people within our reach.

N. G. BETHEA.

Palestine, Flat Rock Circuit.—The longer our pastor stays the more we Palestine people love him, and his wife and baby. There's no better to be found. We are delighted to have them for another year. At the close of 1930, we can be thankful for working together, and have a happy pastor.

On the Fourth Sunday the Sunday School gave a treat to each member of the Sunday School. It was a delight to all the children.

The Christian Endeavor Society gave a Christmas tree Monday night. The ground was covered with snow, but several young boys and girls and older people met at the church at 12 o'clock and built a good fire, put up the tree, decorated it real nice, and that night when the candles were all lit up and nice gifts put on it, it was beautiful to look at. The society gave a treat to all present, about 50 in all. The treat contained 60 bags. The society will not meet again until spring.

A happy New Year to all.

GRACE R. TUCKER, Reporter.

First Church, Burlington.—Christmas of 1929 is now a thing of the past except for that it has left many peasant memories and many things for which to be thankful.

On Sunday preceding Christmas the thought and importance of Christmas was emphasized in all the services of the day. The pastor preached at the 11 o'clock hour on the subject "The Name High Over All." Then at the evening hour a splendid program was given by the children and the choir. Mrs. Glenn A. Huffman had the responsibility of preparing this program, and she did it well. Mrs. Huffman joined our church on profession of faith before conference, and she is making a valuable member. Mrs. M. A. Coble, Mrs. John Barnwell (another new and valuable member), Mrs. Byrd Shepherd, and Miss Lula Riddle gave valuable assistance in preparing the program. All have our thanks for this most worth while service.

The "Dollar a Member" proposition was presented to our church Sunday morning by Brother J. G. Rogers. A hearty response on the part of our people resulted in $189 being pledged, $135 of which has already been paid. This matter will receive more attention later.

Christmas has been a quiet, but enjoyable occasion for the pastor and his family. It was our delight to be with Brother and Sister U. S. McAdams for dinner Christmas day. They are two of our faithful young married people, and it was a genuine pleasure to be in their home.

The occupants of the parsonage have been the recipients of a number of Christmas remembrances. In fact it began some days before Christmas when Brother O. N. McPherson and family sent us a fine lot of fresh pork, and Brother J. G. Rogers and family a supply of rabbit meat. Then at Christmas time Brother J. E. Moore and family left a fine ham on the front porch, Brother Dave DeMoss and family sent a large basket that was filled with fruits, nuts, and other good things to eat beside a half dozen pairs of socks for the preacher. Mrs. J. M. Crawford sent a Christmas "puddin'". Mrs. Gerringer was remembered with a casserole by the Philathea class, a box of handkerchiefs by a girls' class, and a beautiful bed spread by Mrs. Geo. R. Crawford. And then, many, many of our church people here and many of those we served in former years remembered us with so many beautiful Christmas cards.

I believe we appreciate all these remembrances, and even the good wishes of those who sent no visible token of their esteem, but who nevertheless thought of us at the Christmas time. May heaven's choicest blessings be upon you all. And as the Christmas time passes and the new year draws night may we all find our place upon God's altar and in his service and be able to live in a way that will make for the advancement of his kingdom and for the glory of Him whose birthday we have just celebrated.

Our Christmas was made especially joyous because our boy who has been ill with pneumonia was able to be up and enjoy his Christmas dinner. For all his mercies past we thank Him, and because of the promise of His presence and help in the days ahead we take courage and venture out into the unknown.

L. W. GERRINGER.

Henderson.—On Sunday Morning, December 8, Holy Communion services were observed in our church for the first of the new conference year. It was pleasing to note that a large majority of the congregation entered into that part of the worship, many of them new members, and young people who recently had joined the church. A very impressive message was also delivered by our pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter.

The board of stewards met on the following Monday night, December 9, at which time the church budget was given out and plans made for the "every member canvass." This canvass was made by the stewards on the Sunday of December 15. The first quarterly conference was held at the church, Wednesday night, December 11, after prayer meeting. The interests of the church were discussed and a year of greater things is hoped for.

The Woman's Auxiliary was delightfully entertained Monday night, December 6, by four members of Circle No. 4. The president, Mrs. S. R. Watson, presided and Miss Alice Faulkner conducted the devotional exercises and gave a most delightful review of the subject, "Does Prayer Influence God."

The business session was opened by the secretary's report. The roll call was taken by Circles: No. 1 reported a fruit cake sent to the Bethel Home, also Christmas cards to be sent to each patient. A needy family will also be provided for by this circle. Circle No. 4 reported their plan to provide for a needy family also to send a gift to each member at the Bethel Home.

The report from the general treasurer was read and approved. The local treasurer reported all bills paid for recent work done at the parsonage. Mr. Hunter expressed his thanks for these improvements. A motion was made and carried to pay the remaining indebtedness on the organ motor. A motion to improve the front appearance of the church was made and a committee was appointed to take this in charge.

The program was taken up, Mrs. Hugh A. Jordan in charge and the following delightful numbers were given and enjoyed:

Violin solo, "London Derry Air," was played by Miss Frances Woodlief. For an encore she played "Souvenir."

A reading, "The Night After Christmas," by Miss Josephine Martin.

Vocal solo: "Oh, Holy Night," Miss Mabel Rudisell.

The new study book for the year for the Auxiliary "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," was most delightfully introduced, and the first chapter given by Miss Maxine Taylor. A duet, "December Stars," was sung by Miss Elizabeth Fox and Mrs. H. B. Harward. This number concluded the program. Just before the social hour, Rev. Mr. Hunter arose and in a witty and surprising way announced the 50th wedding anniversary of our beloved members, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel R. Harris, Sr., and after his speech the Auxiliary voiced their congratulations to this happy couple, while Mrs. J. B. Martin played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. A delicious ice course was served.

The Sunday School voted to observe Christmas, with a short program at the regular Sunday School hour on December 22. Following the program the clases, led by their respective teachers, marched by the Christmas tree and contributed their gifts for "The King Jesus." These gifts together with the collection were to be sent to our children's home.

The 11 o'clock services were largely attended and very impressive of the true Christmas spirit. The choir under the direction of Mrs. F. R. Harris rendered most beautifully the Christmas music. Special parts were taken by Miss Elizabeth Fox, Mrs. H. A. Jordan, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Howard. Always in keeping with the occasion, a soul-inspiring sermon was given by our pastor.

We are glad to welcome back among us many of our friends and members who are home for the Christmas holidays.

Kannapolis.—Our new pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, and family moved into the parsonage two weeks ago. He has been doing some good preaching and we can see the results of his work also as our Sunday School has increased. We had six new scholars last Sunday. We were very sorry to see Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk leave us, but as they have gone to their new work, we wish them a successful year.

Our Ladies' Aid Society held its regular meeting on December 9, with Mrs. N. F. Harris with very good attendance. We will elect new officers for the coming year at our next meeting, which will be the first Monday night in the year. Our society last year raised something over $200, and we are hoping to do better this year.

Our workers prepared a beautiful Christmas tree and placed thereon two or more presents for each child over and above what their own people mailed to them, and the present presented to each child by the Rotary Club.

We also reserved much of the candy and nuts and fruits for continued use. So the children will be enjoying these things many days yet.

We had a happy Christmas day, thanks to our many friends from Michigan to Texas and from North Carolina to Illinois and even far away Kansas.

We very keenly appreciate the desire and the effort on the part of our many friends to make one big family happy on Christmas day. We wish you might have looked in on us that day to see how happy we really were.

Every member of our family was well enough to attend the Christmas tree exercises and to enjoy the good dinner your generosity made possible.

May our Father bless you and give you a very happy and prosperous New Year.

Yours in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON.

PASTOR'S CONFERENCE

The Pastor's Conference of the Western District of the North Carolina Conference will meet with the church at Lincolnton on Monday, January 13, at 11:00 A. M. The same general plan of program followed at our meeting at Shelby will be the order of this meeting as well.

There are about 25 pastors belonging to this district. Let us have a full attendance. There will be an afternoon session. A suitable place will be selected where the ministers can all have dinner together. Each minister will pay for his dinner. Beginning with Pastors Troxler, Isley, Bingham, Reed, Ferree and all pastors to the south and west belong, as I understand, to this conference. As a suggestion, let several pastors group together in each machine and thus reduce the cost of travel to the conference.

Any pastor having a problem or question that he would like to submit for discussion let him forward same to Rev. N. M. Harrison, Central Avenue, Charlotte, N. C.

Acting Chairman.

CHRISTMAS TIME

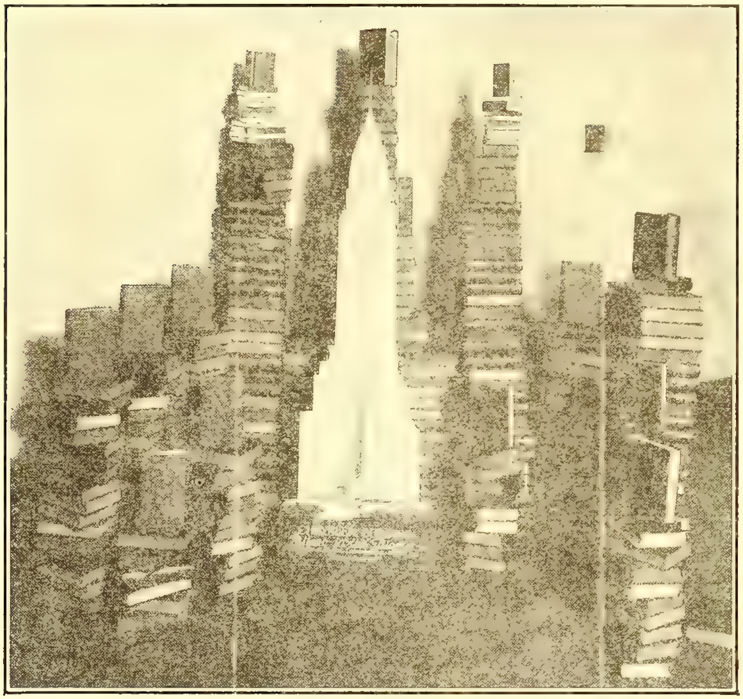
With this writer Christmas started December 18 in a golden wedding at Squire J. R. Stone's. A large crowd of relatives and friends joined in the delightful occasion. We all enjoyed the most delicious and ample turkey dinner. I saw several baskets full of the fragments going away. A more delightful occasion could not be anywhere. Those who know Squire Stone and his congenial companion, who have trod life's pathway in congeniality and love for 50 years, can imagine how delightful it was to be with them.

Now come our Christmas tree and entertainments. Monday night, December 23rd, was the time for Spring Hill. Snow had covered the ground, but a large crowd gathered to see Santa open his pack and delight the hearts of the children. A beautiful Christmas tree electrically lighted; a fine program rendered by the young people and children. Old Santa stepped in and it seemed he had not forgotten any—even the pastor came in for a share. He brought a 48-pound bag of flour.

Tuesday, the 24th, we met at Mount Pleasant at 1:30 o'clock. A large crowd greeted each other. The pastor met old friends he had not seen in more than 35 years. An impressive pageant rendered by the young people and children was enjoyed. Everyone seemed to be happy in the thought of the Child of Bethlehem. Santa Came down the aisle, bowing a happy Christmas to all. He had filled boxes; a beautiful tree loaded with presents for all. He stepped over to the pastor, bringing fruits, candy, handkerchiefs, socks, etc.

On the night of the 24th at 7 o'clock we drove through snow and slush to Bethesda. These folks have always been noted for doing things. The first was a beautiful program rendered by the young people and children; a beautiful tree beautifully decorated; no presents on the tree, but just over to one side was banked a little mountain of good things to cheer and make glad every one. Every now and then the pastor's nome was called; finally, the congenial superintendent, C. L. Wagoner, came over and said to the pastor: "Will you come over to the front seat and sit for a few minutes?" Of course I didn't refuse, and just about the time I was seated they commenced to fall in on me and pound me with nuts, fruits, fruit jars, jellies, potatoes, beans, sugar, cakes, etc., till I was loaded down. I haven't mentioned half, and the names I can not give. The Lord knows them and will reward.

NEW YORK BIBLE SOCIETY DISPLAY



A pile of 6,464 Bibles is required to reach to the top of the Chrysler Building. If all copies of the Scriptures circulated by the New York Bible Society in a single year were of the same size as the Bible illustrated, the pile would reach 140 times the height of the Chrysler Building. The picture was taken in the New York Bible House, 5 East 48th Street, the home of the New York Bible Society, which has recently celebrated its 120th anniversary.

We have now had our dinner at home and feel strong to commence the new year. We are invited to Bro. Wagoner's to eat hog and opossum next Sunday.

We regret that we could not be with the good people of Canaan. I know they had something nice. They did not forget their pastor. Last Sunday evening while it was snowing a large crowd came out to Sunday School and preaching. While I was in the church someone, or ones, fell in on my auto and threw the biggest pumpkin into my car, and potatoes. The mails have been bringing us good wishes and Christmas cheer for the last eight or ten days. Thanks to all who have so kindly contributed to make this a happy Christmas. We wish for every one a Happy and Prosperous New Year.

In His name,
H. L. POWELL.

HUMANITY

Keen men, mean men, merely money mad,
Cave men, slave men, slovenly and sad,
Strong men, wrong men, going to the bad,
All marching to the Day of Judgment.

Rough men, tough men, eager but to fight,
Queer men, fear men, creatures of the night,
All marching to the Day of Judgment.

Grim men, slim men, laggards in the race,
Tall men, small men, stern and fierce of face,
Proud men, loud men, seeking power and place,
All marching to the Day of Judgment.

Mild men, wild men, aimless and astray,
Crude men, rude men, jostling on their way,
Play men, clay men, living for the day,
All marching to the Day of Judgment.

Great men, straight men, stout of heart and soul,
Brave men, grave men, in a noble role,
Wise men, prize men, pressing towards the goal,
All marching to the Day of Judgment.

GRENVILLE KLEISER.

WEDDING AT CALVARY CHURCH

"Mr. and Mrs. John Claudius Coe announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Armfield, to Mr. Arthur Ernest Fidler on Tuesday, December 31, 1929, Greensboro, N. C."

The wedding was solemnized December 31 at 5 o'clock. The officiating ministers were Rev. H. F. Surratt, of Winston-Salem, uncle of the bride, and Rev. Thomas Sykes, of High Point.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Norman Fidler attended his brother as best man. Wedding music was furnished by J. C. Coe, Jr., vioinist, and Miss Florence Blair, of High Point, pianist.

After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Fidler left for a northern trip, after which they will be at home in High Point where the bridegroom is connected with the Commercial National Bank. Mr. Fidler, a native of Manchester, England, has lived in High Point about three years.

The bride is the daughter Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Coe, and is a graduate of North Carolina College.

—Brother S. R. Harris and wife of Henderson, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding December 17, 1929. The Henderson Dispatch of December 18, contains an extended account of this interesting occasion from which we take the following: The attendants at this wedding were G. B. Harris and Miss Lillie Hicks, H. B. Hicks and Miss Sallie Burwell, L. R. Gooch and Miss Adeline Hester, and William Harris and Miss Bertie Reavis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. T. J. Ogburn. Of course, every one wished the young couple a long and happy life, but probably the most enthusiastic well wisher of them all would not have believed his own eyes had he been permitted to look into the future and see just how fortunate and successful this union would be. Both college bred, both lovers of good music and books, and devout Christians, they had the same ideals, and the same interests which entered into their home and their church. They have both been enthusiastic workers in the organizations of the Methodist Protestant Church. Mrs. Harris has always taken special interest in missions, having served for many years on the executive board of the North Carolina branch of home and foreign missions. Besides her children and religious work, her greatest hobby has been her flower garden, which has probably been conducive to her remarkable health and vitality. All of the nine children are living. Among these are Miss Mabel Harris, associate profesor of music at Western Maryland College; Mrs. Ethel H. Kirby, who was for many years director of public school music in the training school at North Carolina College for Women, and is now secretary to the dean of Teachers College, Temple University, in Philadelphia; and Julian Earl Harris, professor of French and lecturer on the Literatures of the Romance Languages at the University of Wisconsin. He was twice awarded a fellowship to the Sorborne University in Paris. Others are Mrs. D. M. Yerkes, of Philadelphia; Mrs. R. M. Andrews, of High Point; Mrs. J. H. Pyle, of Baltimore; Willard Harris, of Greenville, S. C.; and Mrs. S. R. Watson and S. R. Harris, Jr., of this city. Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Harris, Jr., entertained at an anniversary dinner last evening honoring their parents on this happy occasion.

—Dr. A. C. Whitaker, of Julian, with his brother, G. L. Whitaker, was passing through Winston last Sunday morning on their way to Pilot Mountain to visit some sick relatives. At a street crossing their car was run into by a service truck. Dr. Whitaker was hurt fatally, dying in a hospital a few hours later. His brother was hurt considerably, though it is believed not seriously. Thus Julian loses a valuable citizen and popular physician. The negro who drove into the Whitaker car had a leg broken in the collision. Had he regarded the traffic signals it is said the accident would not have occurred.

—Christmas day was made tragic in Stokes County by a horrible murder. Charles B. Lawson, aged 43, killed his wife, six children, and himself. One son, aged 19, was away from home and escaped death. Insanity is the supposed cause.

—Rev. H. L. Powel should be addressed at Thomasville, N. C., Box 210, Route 3. He has bought him a home at this point which is a few minutes' drive from the center of Thomasville southward. He says he hopes to remain in this home until removed by the undertaker. He is perhaps in no hurry to see the undertaker coming, but he would be glad to see his friends at any time.

—On Christmas day Rev. J. E. Pritchard was called to conduct the funeral of L. D. Pritchard, aged 39, who was estimator for the Home Building Material Company of Asheboro.

—On Christmas day, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, pastor of Halifax Charge, was married to Miss Nora Ellen Lippard, of Concord.

"What Wilt Thou Have Me Do?"

Thou callst a halt upon my course,
Thou hast for me a better way.
And now I see an evil force
Has ruled my life from day by day.

But how am I to find the road,
That better road Thou hast for me?
And how can I escape the load
That fills my life with misery?

Go you at once to man of God,
And He will tell you what to do.
He will not give you Moses' rod,
But clear directions fitting you.

God has for every man a part,
And therefore has a part for you.
Be sure you learn before you start,
The will of God for you to do.

Whitewashing Judas

Judas and Arnold are the arch-traitors. We do not recall any attempt to relieve the ugly story of Arnold by imputing to him good motives, such as a desire to save bloodshed by shortening the war. But numbers of writers have sought to show that Judas's motives were good and only his judgment bad. It is said for him that he was expecting Jesus to take charge of the government of state and church, wresting it from the hands of those that hold it. Judas knew that Jesus had power to do it whenever he chose and was impatient because of Jesus' delay. Therefore he sought to precipitate the event by bringing about a situation in which JeJsus would have to assert himself. He did not expect that Jesus would permit himself to be imposed upon, and when he found that Jesus had been condemned to death, Judas was filled with remorse and went and flung the money he had received down at the feet of those who gave it to him.

This last act of Judas may display a commendable emotion or impulse, but it cannot redeem his character from all reproach and condemnation. A man of honor would not have accepted the pieces of silver expecting that he would not be able to accomplish the purpose of those who hired him. Judas may not have been as bad a man as some others, but he was called a thief and traitor by his associates and he cannot be relieved of the ugly stigma.

Worth of Sand

In one of our church meetings about an enterprise that seemed to go with difficulty and threatened to stop going altogether, Rev. D. R. Williams, in a moment of inspiration, said: "The thing we need is sand! We have coal enough and steam enough, but the wheels are sliding on the rails. And there is sand enough all about on the ground. Some man must take his shovel and spread the sand on the rails. Then the train will move."

When things run too smoothly, they don't run at all. An intervening substance is required to make an engagement between the other two. The man with the shovel putting on the sand may not receive much honor or draw much pay, but he does a very important work.

Guess Who This Is

He's very fond of chicken. He prefers chicken to any other kind of meat. He can scent the odor of boiled chicken afar. It makes him smile to see chicken on the breakfast table. It makes him grin to find chicken on the dinner or supper table. He will travel a long way to find a house where there are chickens. He is often permitted to carry chickens home to his family without paying a cent for them. Have you guessed who he is? Preacher, did you say? Well, I will tell you who he is. He is the man who stole six chickens from an aged minister last Monday night near Greensboro.

WE SHALL KNOW THEM

How good a thing it is to be able quietly to wait! The thoughts of God come up from eternity and to eternity they stretch. It may be that not until I enter the world of light shall I know all that God is doing to me and for me now. Then He will tell me why the way was so long and hard; why I had to part with much I loved, with all my love; why other men were rich and I was poor; why some seed never came to blade or ear or full corn in the ear. His thoughts are very deep, but His love is most tender in thought. I cannot follow Him, but His love shines and sings and comforts on every hand.—Joseph Parker.

WHY PREJUDICE?

A visitor of Coleridge argued strongly against the religious instruction of the young and declared his own determination not to "prejudice" his children in favor of any form of religion, but to allow them at maturity to choose for themselves. The answer of Coleridge was pertinent and sound. "Why prejudice a garden in favor of flowers and fruit? Why not let the clods choose for themselves between cockle-burs and strawberries?"—Presbyterian Record.

—President Broomfield in his travels finds some interesting things to tell about. In Illinois he found an amusement park with dancing pavilions and swimming pools that had been converted into a Methodist Protestant Camp Ground for the entire district. Religious exercises take the place of dancing. The springing of warm water in great quantities out of the earth provides for baths which yield a revenue sometimes nearly $600 a month.

—"On to holiness" might be a better slogan than "Back to holiness."

THE "DOLLAR A MEMBER"

This plea may have some weight, coming, as it does, from one who has always opposed the effort to establish a Methodist Protestant College in North Carolina on the ground that it could not be adequately supported. But now we have the college, and, from what I can learn, a good one. A man who is a competent judge tells me that the faculty is excellent, equal to the faculty in any college in the class of the High Point institution. Certainly the college has been well-patronized by young men and young women from many religious denominations.

But the institution has been woefully handicapped from the beginning by a lack of funds. This is doubtless due to financial inability on the part of the church rather than unwillingness to support the college. Nevertheless, in this crisis in the financial affairs of the institution, no doubt there are many in North Carolina who can help tide over the immediate situation, thus giving time to work out the problem in a substantial way. It would be a calamity to allow High Point College to fail for lack of support, and North Carolina cannot afford to lose a good educational institution.

This plea is to all our people in North Carolina to support the "dollar a member" plan adopted by the last conference. Of course, many must give more than a dollar to make up the total, for there will be those who do not give anything. But if every church will see that an amount equal to a dollar for each member is given, the total amount can easily be raised each year.

E. S. Wills.

CHEAPER TO PREVENT THAN TO CURE CRIME

Just what is the best and most effective way of informing the public about Juvenile Courts? This is by no means an easy question to answer, and no more so than the problem of the Juvenile court as it exists today is an easy one to solve. Just what kind of information do the "chosen few," who are vitally interested in the true function of the Juvenile court wish to pass on to the public?

Every state in the Union save Maine and Wyoming, so I am informed, has Juvenile court laws, and I am also informed that nine-tenths of these courts are failures. Judge Hoffman of the court of Cincinnati says it has been estimated that ninety-three per cent are not performing their proper function. In short our Juvenile court system, generally speaking ,in North Carolina is far from satisfactory.

Is this the news we wish to breadcast to the public? I think so, unless I am mistaken in the information I have gathered.

A state like an individual should profit by its mistakes, and its aims and ideals will rise only as the public conscience demands. In this day of rewarding political support, by office and board appointments, it is very seldom that a Moses rises up to lead us. Individuals are great respecters of public opinion and are swayed accordingly, therefore, it is very important that the public should know the exact status quo, and forms its opinion accordingly.

There are three cardinal points upon which the "chosen few" agree as largely responsible for our Juvenile court failure. First, lack of qualified probation officers; second, the type of man selected as judge; last and perhaps greatest of all, lack of funds on which to operate the court, for this condition is no doubt largely responsible for the other two.

When the public thoroughly understands that our system in general is a failure, the next difficult task the "chosen few" must present is a realization of what should be the true function of a Juvenile court. The public still clings to the old idea of the pre-psychology age, that delinquency is crime and can be cured by force. This alone is sufficient to assure failure. This idea should be displaced by a realization of the fact that a Juvenile court exists for the purpose of prevention, correction and cure of delinquency; that wrong doing and behavior disorders are not crime as is found in those of mature years, but disease and sickness; they should be diagnosed and treated by a staff who knows its business.

Every Juvenile court should be a social clinic. Through its doors should pass those boys and girls the type of such as in their maturer years fill our jails, chain gangs, penitentiaries, alms houses, insane asylums and institutions for feeble minded. There are many in our training schools that should never have been committed, had they come under the watchful care of a Juvenile court presided over by an understanding judge, assisted by efficient and well-trained probation officers, with access to physical and mental examinations, they could have been kept at home with far less expense and in many cases more effective training.

The training school should exist for the exceptional type in need solely of institutional care. The state assumes a heavy burden and does society an injury when it relieves parents of the entire responsibility of their children.

The next thing to be presented to the public is the age old adage "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." But many will ask, "Can crime really be prevented?" "Surely"! by correcting delinquency crime is largely prevented, and in the plastic stage of youth the responsive chord is not so hard to sound. I need only to call your attention to that small per cent of Juvenile courts that are conducted scientifically and results are successful, Cincinnati, New York, Boston, Denver, Norfolk, and others. In our own state Judge York's court of Greensboro has attained a great degree of success.

Lastly, it seems to me the most important thing for the public to realize is, that it is cheaper in dollars and cents to prevent, correct, and cure delinquency than to erect and maintain training schools, jails, and penitentiaries. If we save the youth, old age will most likely be able to take care of itself.

So you see there is a vast job ahead of the "chosen few," who are vitally interested. Superintendents of public welfare can do much toward spreading this inforamtion. Women's Clubs and Women's organizations are ready and eager to join in any worth while movement.

Since the Juvenile courts are the logical and legal agency for conducting these so much needed social clinics, let's give them a chance.

After all the responsibility of informing the public rests with those who are really interested in the preservation of the youth of our country.—By Mrs. R. D. Bullock, Chairman of the Nash County Board of Public Welfare.

"DOUBLE YOUR LIFE BY SHARING"

Suggestions for Christian Endeavor Week, January 27-February 1; and the International Christian Endeavor Day, Sunday, February 2

It is the hope of the personnel of our department that our Christian Endeavorers and churches will observe, as far as possible, Christian Endeavor Week, January 27 to February 2, following the observance of our Denominational Young People's Day of January 26.

"Double Your Life by Sharing" is the theme announced by the International Society of Christian Endeavor. The following are suggested goals for individual societies and members:

1. Every member to win one for Christ and the church.
2. Double the society membership.
3. Double the attendance of young people in church services.
4. Double your gifts to missions.
5. Double the number of Quiet Hour Comrades.
6. Double the number of tithers.
7. Double your Sunday School attendance.
8. Double your subscribers to the C. E. World.
9. Double your Crusade With Christ enrolments, for Youth Evangelism, Christian Citizenship, and World Peace.

The following are suggestions for the week's activity for Young People:

Sunday, January 26: "Denominational Young People's Day." (See preceding article for full explanation.)

Monday, January 27: "Membership Day." Have a special call meeting of all officers and members of the society. Discuss in detail the "Double Your Life Goals." Prayerfully select committees for these various goals and have them present a report to the society on the following Sunday for adoption.

Tuesday, January 28: "Home-Fellowship Day." During this day and in the evening all young people will endeavor to make parents and other elders in the home enjoy the day.

The evening meal can be arranged by young hands, thereby relieving the mother of this responsibility. Plan the devotions for the meal in an interesting way. Plan delightful surprises for the parents. Also, plan the evening to be together for a real family circle conversation. Make everyone happy in this Home-Fellowship Day. Have someone conduct family devotions before retiring.

Wednesday, January 29: This is, in most instances, "Prayer Meeting" evening. Have the young people share with the adults in the prayer service. This day is designated as "Stewardship and Devotional Day." Topics on these or kindred subjects could be assigned the young people for discussion.

Thursday, January 30. "Home Day" or "Radio Night." A special feature of this evening is the broadcasting of a Christian Endeavor program throughout the United States. Endeavorers may meet in groups in various homes where there are radios and tune in on this program. Other features may be added.

Friday, January 31: "Fun and Fellowship Day" for others. This day can be spent in planning fun and fellowship for "shut-ins," etc. Arrange the society's activity to include a party or some recreational evening in some Children's Home, City Mission, etc.

Saturday, February 1: "Junior Day." Write C. E. Headquarters, 41 Mt. Vernon St., Boston, Mass., for suggestions for this day.

Sunday, February 2: "Christian Endeavor's Birthday." Many churches will want to observe this anniversary in some way. The pastor may preach a special sermon emphasizing the value of this great movement for the Kingdom and at the same time give emphasis to other youth movements. In this way further emphasis can be given to the "place and value of youth sharing in the life and work of the church." The entire evening program of the church could be given over to the young people with an adequate program provided.

Further information regarding activities of this week may be had from the International Society of Christian Endeavor or the Department of Religious Education, Box 993, Durham, N. C.

"YOUTH SHARING"

Announcing Materials and Suggestions for the Methodist Protestant Denominational Young People's Day for Sunday, January 26, 1930

We are glad to announce to our denomination that program materials much improved in scope and quality over that of last year are ready for distribution throughout the Church. The materials being used were prepared by the collaboration of the "Young People's Departments" of a number of the leading denominations of the country and, we believe, will be used effectively by large and small churches alike. The theme of the service is "Sharing" and utilizes the slogan of Christian Endeavor Week, "Double Your Life by Sharing." (See following article—Suggestions for C. E. Week, etc.) Emphasis is placed upon the opportunities and responsibilities of sharing with the larger program of the denomination the spiritual and material resources of the local churches and individuals. Surely the Methodist Protestant Church needs and will welcome such a timely message as this?

Materials available: Before you read this, over 3,000 letters containing samples of the program will be sent to every pastor, superintendent and Christian Endeavor president that we have on our mailing list. A "Business Reply Card" is enclosed for your convenience in ordering your necessary supply. No postage, no cost, everything free. Just fill in the card correctly and drop it in the mail. Our Department and Uncle Sam's trusted servants will do the rest!

Two leaflets have been carefully prepared. A six-page Leader's Leaflet containing detailed suggestions and materials for those preparing the program, and a four-page Program Folder for distribution in the audience. We will appreciate your notifying us if you fail to receive samples of these materials.

Plans to observe this Service Sunday, January 26, or at some other convenient date. Where a pastor has more than one church, plan to observe if in each one until the round is made. This program can be used entirely or in part in all Methodist Protestant Churches. In case the program is not used the pastor may preach a sermon on the theme suggested in the program and take an offering for New Century Service.

New Century Service: In addition to the emphasis given to "Youth Sharing" it is hoped that adults will catch the spirit of the service and hear the words of Christ ringing out anew. "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The offering shared on this day will go to New Century Service—General Conference Budget—and will "count on the Budget of your local Church!"

May God richly bless and lead us as we prepare to observe this day. May we work and pray to the extent that Youth and Adults alike will be led to answer the challenge of sharing their spiritual and material resources in the Kingdom of our Savior.

Additional information and materials may be had upon request from the Department of Religious Education, Box 993, Durham, N. C. F. L. Gibbs, Assistant Secretary.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

BESSEMER CITY—BESS CHAPEL

January 4-5, Saturday and Sunday.—On Saturday night, we were with the Bessemer City church, in the first quarterly conference. The conference was well attended and the usual business transacted. The church has a well-attended Sunday School, and an Aid Society, with a small membership. The Sunday School has not been contributing regularly to the Children's Home. The superintendent thought that this could be done. For some time the efforts of the Aid Society have gone toward paying for a church piano. Only a small balance remains now, and that, we trust, will be taken care of soon. Brother Henderson, the pastor, has been active in the work since conference, though laboring under some handicaps. On Sunday afternoon we met with a committee of the church to discuss the work there, and to find, if possible, a solution for some of their problems. An earnest and harmonious study was made of all problems involved, and the unanimous conclusion of the committee was readily accepted by the congregation at the night service. We shall watch hopefully and prayerfully the results. It was a pleasure to us to preach in the night service here. The sympathetic hearing given to us by the congregation was helpful and greatly appreciated.

Our appointment at 11 A. M., Sunday was at Bess Chapel. We have written before of the splendid church building erected by this congregation last year. Since we were with them last, they have installed new pews and laid some carpet, with more on hand yet to be put down. The pews are very comfortable, and harmonize in color with the wood finish of the auditorium. The church does credit to the community and to the conference. In due time the grounds will be cleaned off and shrubbery planted. The church has a good all-the-year Sunday School. It was our privilege to attend on this occasion and to lead one of the adult classes in the discussion of the lesson. There is also an active Aid Society here, and for several months during the year a C. E. Society is run, the pastor informed me. Distance and winter roads makes it difficult to keep the C. E. going all the year. "Dollar a Member" will receive encouraging support here, we think. Pastor Henderson is zealous for the success of the work, and is receiving the full co-operation of his people. We are glad to have had these visits with these churches, and for the kindness and courtesy shown us while on these charges, we are grateful. May the Lord give His blessings to the labors of His people in these fields.

How One Church Does It

We are in the time now when most of our charges make up their budgets for the year. How one church does it may be of interest and help to others. Allotment cards are used. The inscription is simple and to the point. Something like this: Your church allotment for this year is (here the amount is indicated) we trust that you can accept this; but if not, please state on the card the amount that you will accept, and return the card to (here the name of the church treasurer is given). This was tried last year for the first time. I am told by the pastor and the church officials that every member but one, accepted the allotment given by the stewards, or indicated another amount that they would accept. Results? More money raised for the budgets last year than ever raised before, notwithstanding a new church was built during the year, and a large part of the cost paid.

No church can be successfully run without a financial system, and the most reasonable and complete system, it seems to us, is the one that provides an allotment for every member.

This explanation should be made for the system used by this church: allotments were given to heads of families, and not individual members, except in cases where there were grown-up members. It would be well for each child in the family to have an individual allotment, and to make the payments. The effect of this practice would be good in after years.

How Another Church Does It

"At the monthly meeting of the Board of Stewards it was decided to have an honor roll. At the end of the first quarter, which will be January 31, all members who have paid in full for the quarter will have their names on the honor roll." This is good. If this church could add to its honor roll, an allotment to every member, and the other church add the honor roll, each would certainly have gone far toward the ideal in church finance.

We most heartily commend both of these churches for this forward step.

Young People's Day

This is one of the special days appointed by the General Conference. The date for the observance of the day is, January 26,—the 4th and last Sunday of the month. The Young People's Department of the Board of Christian Education has provided a program that is ample in every particular for this day, and it goes to the churches for the asking. Send your request today to Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Durham, N. C., P. O. Box 993. We urge our churches to observe this day. If it can't be done on the day appointed, then do it as near that date as possible. Mark the offering, "Young People's Day Offering," and take credit for it on New Cenutry Service. Everybody busy now, for a good Young People's Day. This is the second observance of this day; let's make it better in every way than last year.

The Country Church

We are waiting for the two remaining articles. The judges will be ready to report when they are in. We will allow two weeks longer and if no more papers come in by that time, we will regard the matter closed, and ask the judges to ward the prizes. But we want these two remaining papers. The rural church is a vital topic, and papers on this subject make good reading for the HERALD.

"Dollar a Member"

We are in the last month, now, of the time allotted for this effort, and we urge all pastors, directors of districts, and our 30,000 members to press this matter to a successful conclusion during this month. One difficulty in an undertaking like this is that it must of necessity conflict with other matters in church programs that are important, and even necessary, in the prosecution of the work. "Dollar a Member" has been delayed on some charges because of this. However, we trust that the way is clear now, and we earnestly hope that there may be one united, determined, enthusiastic purpose to do this thing NOW, DURING THIS MONTH. If the money can not be paid now, let it be paid later. But by all means, let us get the amount at each church subscribed. There is no other matter before us so vital to us as a conference and as a denomination, as financing High Point College. Surely 30,000 Methodist Protestants will not stagger at a dollar a member for a purpose so worthy and so necessary.

Let's lay hold upon this effort, brethren, during this last month, with renewed zeal and with increasing reliance upon God, and do it, as becomes those who will not falter before a worthy task.

"And let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."

Fraternally,

S. W. TAYLOR.

January 8, 1928.

P. S.—Since writing the above the mail has brought us new "Dollar a Member" encouragement. One pastor plans a house-to-house visitation to complete the undertaking at one church. Another writes, "We are going to try to raise the 'Dollar a Member' this month." A director of one district writes encouragingly. One church lacks only $8 of the goal, and he says that will be raised. He is confident that two other churches in his district will pay in full.

All of this is encouraging, and we feel confident that there is much more just as encouraging as this that might be said by other pastors and directors. We shall greatly appreciate it if pastors and directors will report to us their encouragements from time to time. "Dollar a Member" is going and growing. Churches that are out will be run again next week.

THE FRIEND OF ALL

O grace of God, so full and free,
O wondrous love that transforms me!
Since I have felt thy changeless power
I crave thy presence every hour.

Thy wooing love is drawing me
Away from sin and death to thee;
Thine outstretched arms point to the cross
Where Jesus died but not for loss.

Thou Christ of God, despised of men,
Whose heart doth bleed for sin as then!
Help me to tell of saving love
That draws me back to God above.

The joyous gifts, the smiles of God,
Bless all who for thee toil and plod;
To thee, Redeemer, Saviour, King,
May we thy praises ever sing.

Yes, God is love and O how free
Is full salvation now for me;
Dear unsaved friend, receive His power
And know His presence ev'ry hour.

Roy Irwin Farmer.

TWO KINDS OF TOBACCO SEGREGATION

WILL H. BROWN

Many persons do not like to be confronted by tobacco smoke, when shopping. It is practically impossible, however, to avoid such conditions as long as tobacco is carried for sale in places other than exclusive tobacco stores.

What is known as the "Tobacco Segregation Bill" has been introduced in a number of state legislatures. The rights of smokers would not be curtailed by its adoption, for there are plenty of exclusive tobacco stores where purchases can be made.

The bill provides that tobacco and its appurtances—pipes, holders, etc., shall be sold only in places conducted solely as tobacco stores, and not in stores where food provisions or confectionary goods are sold.

At present many children come in contact with all that is included in a tobacco store when sent to make necessary purchases, because the sale of tobacco is permitted in the place of business visited. This should not be so.

The other kind of segregation is desired by tobacco dealers themselves. The Tobacco Record complains that men who want to start a gambling den or bootleggery, often start an innocent-looking cigar store, opening on the street, with a rear door leading to the abode of the forbidden scheme, and wants this practice stopped.

Query: Why is it that gamblers, bootleggers and other outlaws do not use a grocery store, a candy shop, or a haberdashery as a blind for their business? Why is it that tobacco seems to fit in so naturally with scehmes for violating the law? Ponder well these questions. When you find the answer you may see some things in a new light.

DEAL FAITHFULLY WITH SIN

Many men who are particular about the quality of the goods or machinery they buy are very indifferent about getting and keeping a thorough Christian experience. The depraved heart is inclined to hide its sin and it remains one of the most solemn duties of the church to deal faithfully with all kinds of evil. One sinful indulgence by Mother Eve mortgaged her posterity to sin, we are told, and we cannot afford to compromise and deal triflingly with evil. An unknown writer has the following thoughts to offer on this subject:

"Satan never confesses. He has a thousand ways of evading the main issue. He is ingenious in shifting the responsibility, in providing excuses and in charging back failure upon God; thus he makes the Church today unwilling to admit her departure from primitive piety and pentecostal power, and furnishes every excuse for continuing in a state of impotency. We are commanded to rebuke, reprove and exhort, but how few are willing to receive the correction. A lady once said to a minister, 'I have got so in the habit of exaggerating that my friends accuse me of it, and say they do not understand me. Can you help me?' 'Yes,' said the minister, 'the next time you catch yourself lying, go right to the party and say that you are sorry, say it is a lie, stamp it out—root and branch.'

"'Oh,' said she, 'I would not call it lying.' When a Christian is willing to call things by their right name and to confess his sin and to put it away, then he will not lack clear spiritual vision."—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

LIZZIE AND ALICE

"Alice! shut that window," called out Susan, the baby's nurse, in a sharp tone to Alice who was looking out of the nursery window, one spring morning. Her manner was not very pleasant then, nor, in fact, at other times. She had been educated with very strict ideas of subordination and propriety, and could not understand the liberty which is frequently given to children now-a-days in an indulgent home. Still it was very thoughtless in Alice to raise the window; for it exposed her dear little sister to the danger of taking cold, which she would not purposely have done, for, of all things in the world, she thought little sister Carrie was the sweetest and loveliest.

"Don't shut it, Alice, she speaks so cross," said Lizzie, who was a little older, and, though easily ruled by love and kindness, was very sensitive to any appearance of harshness; and particularly ready to resent anything which affected Alice, whom she loved very much. At this the nurse was vexed, and gave vent to her irritation by complaining to the mother of Lizzie's conduct.

"Why, my darling," said the mother putting her arm around Lizzie's waist, as Susan left the room, "how is this?" "I don't care," said Lizzie, bursting into tears; "I don't like Susan one bit, and shall be glad when she goes away; she is so cross. I won't do any thing to please her." "My dear," said her mother, "if she is cross, is that any reason why my little girl should be naughty? Let us look for the chapter you were reading to John the other day. I think my daughter must take the lesson to herself.

So they took Lizzie's Testament, a New Year's gift from her mother, and looked for the place. "Here it is," said her mother, "the fifth chapter of Matthew. Read the 44th verse: 'Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you.' " They finished the chapter. "See, my dear daughter," said her mother, "what our dear Saviour says: 'If ye love them which love you, what reward have ye?' Even wicked people do that." "But I just can't love her, mother," said Lizzie, with a fresh burst of tears; "she is always scolding at me." "But, my darling," said her mother, "how was it with our Saviour? He came down from heaven, where he had every enjoyment, and wicked men spit upon him, and scourged him, and put thorns upon his head, and finally crucified him."

"What is crucified, mother?" interrupted little Alice. "Do you know the shape of a cross?" inquired their mother. "Yes," replied Alice, and she drew the figure of one on her hand. "That is right," said the mother; "and they nail the person's hands to the ends of this cross piece, and his feet below, and let him hang there till he dies. It causes very great suffering; and yet, while our Redeemer was in the midst of it, and after all their bad treatment, he prayed, 'Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do!' Look, here it is in Luke xxiii 34. And read this verse too, in the twelfth chapter of Romans: 'Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good.' "

"But, mother, I can't help feeling this way," said Lizzie, evidently touched, yet unwilling to give up the feeling of anger. "No, my darling, we cannot help it of ourselves," replied her mother; "but see where I have just opened in Hebrews, at the last verse of the second chapter: 'For in that He himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor (that is to help) them that are tempted.' Our dear Saviour took upon himself our nature. He became first an infant, and then a little child. He knows just how we feel, just what we have to struggle against. We must come to him for help, my dear, and He will be sure to give it."

It was now time for the lessons, and as the children were going through them very attentively, Susan came down with the baby, who was tired of staying by herself in the nursery, and had permission to come and look on, provided her sisters did not forget their lessons in playing with her, which had soemtimes been the case. The little pet was quite satisfied with being a spectator, and played and crowed for a while in the best possible humor. There was apparently a little conflict going on in Lizzie's mind; but, as the nurse was standing by her, she said, very pleasantly, "Do sit down, Susan, the baby looks so heavy." Susan thanked her, apparently much gratified by the attention.

After their lessons were finished, the mother proposed to them to go down through the woods to the brook to look for wild flowers, and see John and Peter, who were cutting down a tree. The children were delighted with the proposal; and Lizzie asked her mother if she could not take care of the baby, and let Susan go out with them. "I think she would like to see the brook, and would enjoy the fresh air." "Certainly," said her mother; "she may go if she likes."

Susan was much pleased with the idea, and Lizzie waited till she was ready, though Alice had run on before, and the tree was just ready to fall. She took her to all the places of interest she could think of, explained how the seats were to be placed around the beech-tree, and showed her the beautiful little stream which ran at the foot of the hill.

Susan thanked her repeatedly, for having obtained permission for her to have such a nice walk. Whether she felt that Lizzie had been returning good for evil, I do not know; but I do know that when Lizzie came in, her eyes were bright, and her face glowing, I truly believe, with the peace that passeth the understanding; that the kiss which her mother pressed upon her cheek was one of the sweetest she ever received; and that her father's eyes glistened with a tear of thankfulness and pleasure, as he heard how his dear little daughter had been helped by her heavenly Father to "overcome evil with good."

BRIGHT HOURS

There is inscribed on a sundial in Edinburgh, "I mark but the hours of sunshine." It was a dark, sad, unmarked hour when Thomas said that he would not believe. The Lord, however, thought of and spoke to him, when he was "poor and needy," and his darkness was changed to a bright hour—not only to Thomas, but to all the company. The believing and loving direct response of Thomas pleased the Lord, and the bright hour must have been marked in Heaven, as well as in John 20:28. Thomas saw, but the Lord added, "blessed (or happy) are they who have not seen, and yet have believed." Believing still brings bright and sunny hours.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

JAN. 12: "HOW CAN NATIONS PRACTICE THE GOLDEN RULE?"

Matt. 7:12; 20:20-28.

Daily Bible Readings

Monday.—An individual case. Gen. 13:5-10.

Tuesday.—Two friendly kings, 1 Kings 5:1-7.

Wednesday. Golden Rule principles. Exod. 23:1-7.

Thursday.—Practice justice. Isa. 11:1-9.

Friday.—Remember your past need. Deut. 24:17-18.

Saturday.—Strive for peace. Rom. 14:19.

To the Leaders

Why not have a duet meeting? If it is not too late arrange to have two leaders. You can divide the participation in any way you wish. Possibly there could be two leader's talks both brief. Have tw opersons to read the scripture, one to read the scripture proper and the other to make some explanation of each verse. You can easily arrange some special music in the form of a duet—too you might use two hymns together. It will not be difficult to find relating topics or questions which may be given the general speakers. Urge that everyone partake in the sentence prayers since that is such a vital part of each meeting.

If possible get some speaker outside your own circle to talk on "The World Court," giving an explanation.

Any of these hymns may be used: "Come, Thou Almighty King," "The Whole Wide World for Jesus," "Stand Up, Stand Up For Jesus," "Onward Christian Soldiers," "Star-Spangled Banner," "God Save the King," or any other national anthems.

Leaders' Talk

Those who remember the signing of the Armistice at the close of the World War easily recall the happiness throughout the land. Today we are striving for a world armistice for all war. Just what will bring this to pass we do not absolutely know because the temperaments and ideas of the various nations differ vastly. But we do know a great many things which will aid in bringing this about—things that even Christian Endeavorers may do. We can at least back the International Society of Christian Endeavor which has already accomplished so very much. We can discourage things which directly or indirectly make other nations ill at ease.

There are a great many problems along this line which confront our government today. Will we be informed as to these facts and express ourselves or will we stand idly by?

Questions

1. Give several reasons why you think nations are violating the Golden Rule? (Divide this into two parts).

2. How may we avoid wounding the national pride of others?

3. Are our immigration restrictions in harmony with the Golden Rule?

4. How is Christian Endeavor educating the youth of many nations for peace?

5. Should foreign missionaries be protected by armed force?

6. Is armed intervention in political affairs of smaller nations "practicing the Golden Rule?"

Quotations

Give the children a true idea of war in their history books, and the next generation will no more want a war than they will want an earthquake.—Zangwill.

We are not born into the world to hate. We are born to love each other. Let us love. Steinitz.

The idea that we are all members of one another needs to be applied to peoples.—Lord Bryce.

There never was a good war or a bad peace. —Franklin.

Peace hath her victories no less than those of war.—Milton.

Ring out old shapes of foul diseases;
Ring out the narrownig lust of gold;
Ring out the thousand wars of old;
Ring in the thousand years of peace.

—Tennyson, "In Memoriam."

NOT IN VAIN

If I can stop one heart from breaking
I shall not live in vain.
If I can ease one life the aching.
Or cool one pain,
Or help one fainting robin
Unto his nest again,
I shall not live in vain.

—Emily Dickinson.

Brethren, please do not hold back the balance of the $20,000 we agreed to raise for the College. It isn't fair to the College. I understand from a man who is close enough to the College to know what he is talking about that a few thousand dollars would be appreciated by the management about this time in the year. Old Santa Claus ruined my bank account and it is impossible for me to advance the balance due the college on our pledges. I am glad Santa Claus comes but once a year, even though he does find his way to my stocking on Christmas eve. If all the Methodist Protestants in North Carolina had given the College what they spent Christmas on themselves and theirs, I verily believe there would have been real rejoicing at the College among the professors and all over the State among its friends. It is too late to do this now, and possibly it is mean in me to mention such a thing—push a fly in the ointment of our enjoyment. What a wretch, I am!

Woman's Missionary Department

REPORT OF SECRETARY OF MISSIONARY EDUCATION

(Read at Executive Meeting, December 12, 1929, and Published by Request)

It was quite a while after ou rmerger before I really had anything to work on in this department. Some time in September I received blanks from Mrs. Thompson's office, but having neither address of the various secretaries of Missionary Education in the local churches nor money with which to send out these blanks, I was instructed to have them sent from the office of the secretary of literature. Miss McCulloch was kind enough to do this, and I have received reports from the auxiliaries. This is not a large number, but it gives us something to work upon. While I believe all of them have not reported all the work they are doing, the results are at least encouraging. For instance, some have not reported any material used, and yet we are fairly certain that if there is a missionary organization in the church some take the Missionary Record and church papers, especially the Herald.

A few people think that unless we use stories about missionaries or pertaining to the work on the foreign mission field in dealing with and teaching children, that they are not getting missionary instruction. But I consider that I have given the children in the Beginner's Department of our church quite a lot of missionary instruction through stories of sharing, kindness, helpfulness, etc., leading the children into feeling their responsibility in sharing the Kingdom program and teaching them to live with one another, for after all the missionary spirit is simply the spirit of brotherhood, reaching out to save wherever the lost are found and reaching furthest to where the need is greatest.

In looking up the records of this year's Leadership Training School I find that fifty young people under the age of 18 took the courses and a large number selected the class, "The Kingdom Enterprise," taught by Rev. J. Clyde Auman. About 30 of this 50 also selected the course in "Life Investment" and the teacher reported that a large number stated that their preference for a life work was the ministry or missionary work. Those 50 young people came from some where in North Carolina. I really think we are doing more along this line than we think we are.

The following suggestions are made:

1. That we continue to urge the use of the Question Box in our Auxiliary or Circle meetings, and that we read carefully our Missionary Record—our only source of direct missionary information in regard to our own work.

2. That we take advantage of the Missionary page in the Herald and keep it filled each week with Missionary news. That we also read carefully the minutes of the Board Executive meetings and other information appearing in the Methodist Protestant Recorder from time to time.

3. That we urge the use of biographies of great missionaries, such as David Livingstone, Alexander Duff, Robert Moffatt, William Carey, James Chalmers, Robert Laws, Alexander Mackay and Dr. Grenfell, for the Intermediate and Young People's Departments of Sunday School and Christian Endeavor, for what can equal the lives of missionaries in teaching the lessons of Christian faith, unselfishness, heroism and interracial brotherhood? (A good many of these books may be purchased from our own book rooms.)

4. That for programs in regard to our own work we use those written in the Missionary Record by Mrs. Maier. These are for every age from Beginners to Young People. It is also suggested that we bear in mind the needs of our own stations when vacation school time comes, and for the White Gift services at Christmas time. There are many ways the energetic Juniors may help with their own hands.

5. Pageants and plays are always available for Juniors, as well as for Intermediates and Young People. Lists of them appear from time to time in the Missionary Record.

6. That the work of such authors as Bailey, Danielson and Tralle be used in the Primary and Beginners' Departments of Sunday School. Their stories for use in Sunday School and vacation school are exceptionally good. (These may also be purchased from our own book rooms.)

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. E. L. BALLARD,
Secretary Missionary Education.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS FIELD SERVICE

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

—Mrs. M. J. Hunter of Wilmington writes: "I am 82 years old but have good eyesight and enjoy the paper, and keep up with the different circuits, etc." Mrs. Hunter was formerly of Brinkleyville where she took a lively interest in church affairs.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Roberta.—Holidays are over and it is time to settle down to work in real earnest again. But before I do this bear with us another report of a few things the Herald family might be interested in from our community.

The parsonage and its inmates seem to have been right much in the minds of the people around here during Christmas time, judging from the manner in which the pastor and family have been remembered with good things from the folks. We feel that it has truly been good for us to be here. A very quiet, but lovely atmosphere has prevailed. Drinking and carousing has had no place here.

At the church we enjoyed a handsome Christmas tree, and besides, a very fine program with pageants, songs, pantomimes, etc., which set the place ringing with Christmas cheer.

Wedding bells have been ringing too. The Regent Angel-love, has won in causing five couples to yield their hearts to each other. Four of these couples were united by the writer, while one couple had to skip to South Carolina. The contracting parties are as follows: Mr. John Furr and Miss Iva Duin; Mr. Robert Linker and Miss Lacy Whitley; Mr. Wilbert Holland and Miss Lula Cline; Mr. Theodore Blackwelder and Miss Burta Kinnedy, all of the Roberta community. There was one couple from the vicinity of Wilksboro, Mr. Roy Felts and Miss Fletcher. These are all charming young folks, and the flower of our community, and we bespeak for them a happy life, and hope for them a life-long honeymoon.

We cannot close without mentioning a fine pounding received sometime ago, besides we have had to buy but little meat since hog-killing time, due to basket after basket of fresh meat daily. The Ladies' Aid has keenly obligated us to themselves, in the fine favors shown throughtout the several weeks illness of Mrs. Short. They even placed a good housekeeper in our home and paid for the service. They have our deep thanks and hearty appreciations.

With best wishes to the Herald family and to all A Happy New Year.

ROBERT SHORT. Pastor.

Asheville.—No doubt our people think something happened to this reporter. Well it did, too much work for two hands, but here I am to report all the happenings of the holidays.

The Auxiliary met with Mrs. Adams on Brucemont Circle, December 18, for the Decemeber meeting. Mrs. Paschal conducted the devotional period. The president, Mrs. J. A. McIntire, presided over the meeting. Reports from all the circle chairmen were given, also report of the bazaar held, which was very successful. After adjournment a delicious salad course was served by Mrs. Adams. Milton Lord, accompanied by Miss Novella McIntire, deighted those present with several violin solos.

On Sunday evening, December 22, a large number of friends and members were given a treat by Miss Verda McIntire, director, assisted by the Glee Club of Biltmore High and Junior College, gave the Cantata, "The Child Jesus." Miss Novella McIntire presided at the piano.

Monday afternoon, December 23, the children of the Sunday School were entertained by Miss Verda McIntire, superintendent of the primary department, with a tree and gifts for each child. This department is a live wire.

Rev. and Mrs. F. W. Paschall spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Cutchins at Whitakers.

The Girls' Auxiliary met with Miss Nancy Clouse Monday evening.

We have enjoyed a White Christmas.

REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—Our Christmas entertainment was given December 27. The program consisted of special music by the choir and a few recitations by the small children. A solo, "'Tis Christmas," was sung very sweetly by little Miss Fannie Melton, Misses Mary Glenn Lee and Evelyn Knight sang a duet, "Cradle Hymn" very impressively. A quartet, "Silent Night," was sung by Misses Mary Davis Alston, Kathleen Shearin and Mr. Sam Ham. We were very sorry our pastor could not be with us at this time as he was away on his bridal tour. We extend to him and his bride many congratulations and good wishes in their new life.

Death has visited us and taken one of our oldest members, Mrs. Sarah Hardy. She was laid to rest on December 20, 1929, in the famiy lburying ground near her old home. Her pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, conducted the burial services. The bereaved family have our sympathy.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet with Mrs. J. L. Alston on January 14, 1930, at 2 o'clock. We hope to have our pastor and wife present at this meeting. We need them in our Auxiliary.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers for a prosperous New Year.

KATHLEEN SHEARIN, Reporter.

Harmony.—We were glad to have with us the past week-end, our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Broome. They were also with us the fourth Sunday of December, and the first of the following week. He preached a splendid sermon for us the fourth and fifth Sundays also.

The smaller children of our Sunday School deivered a Christmas program on Monday night during the Christmas season. Our church also had a Christmas tree. The entire community took part in making this Christmas tree as attractive as possible. A splendid time was enjoyed by everyone who attended.

The Woman's Missionary Society held its regular monthly meeting at the church Saturday afternoon.

We are sorry to report that one of our Sunday School teachers, Miss Sudie Medlock, has been ill at her home for some time. We all wish for her a speedy recovery. Mrs. Charlie Hughes has also been ill for some time. Little Elma Woody, a young member of the Sunday School, was present Sunday for the first time in several Sundays. She has been absent on account of a broken leg. We were all glad to see Elma back.

We were glad to have several visitors with us Sunday.

Our church had a very good record for the past year, but we are all planning to have a still better one for the new year.

Best wishes for the Herald and its readers. A happy and prosperous New Year.

GRACE KILLINGSWORTH, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro.—The congregation of our church was made very happy last Sunday when it was officially announced that Dr. P. E. Lindley, of High Point College, High Point, N. C., had accepted the pastorate of West End Church. Dr. Lindley is no stranger with us, but is generally known and loved by our people and it is with a great deal of encouragement and enthusiasm that we are beginning the work of a new year under his leadership. Really, we feel that the coming year promises to be one of the very best in the histiry of our church.

The "Dollar a Member" for High Point College Campaign is being stressed among the membership of our church and to date we have collected $110.00 on this. We hope to keep working on this until our full quota is reached.

Our Church School, under the leadership of Mr. L. M. Foust, is making splendid progress. At present we have a school consisting of five well organized departments, with an average attendance of around 200.

The Woman's Auxiilary of the church is also doing some fine work. The December Auxiliary meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Reed of Bessemer Avenue, at this time an impressive Christmas pageant was presented. The attendance and interest at these meetings is always very encouraging.

REPORTER.

Thomasville.—We were glad to have President Taylor with us at our first quarterly conference. We invite him to visit us at any time.

Our Sunday School is holding its own fine. The attendance is very good in spite of the bad weather. Mr. Connell, our superintendent, wants to have a Sunday School meeting Wednesday night, January 1. He urges all officers and teachers especially to come, for he wants to get next year's work outlined. We want to make this a great year for the Lord.

Mr. Peeler, our pastor, has delivered some fine sermons. On the third Sunday night, December 15, Mrs. Peeler made a splendid talk to the children.

Sunday night, December 29, the church gave a pageant, "Miriam's Vision." Mrs. E. O. Peeler, Mrs. S. R. Westmoreland, and the reporter had charge of this pageant. We want to thank all those who in any way helped to make the play a success.

JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Enfield.—Our pastor has filled his pulpit with the usual good sermons even if he is the proud possessor of a new son; namely, Edwin Lewis Auman, who came to live at the parsonage December 14. Mrs. Auman and little Edwin are doing fine and we hope Mrs. Auman will soon be able to worship with us again, for we have missed her.

We had planned and practiced for a pageant, under the direction of Mrs. Emmet Marshall, to be given at our church, December 22; but several of the characters became sick so we had to dispense with the program. However, the Junior Endeavors who were on the program gave their candlelight song service the following Monday night at the Hut. A Christmas party was given for the Junior department of the Sunday School that night. Old Santa came around and greeted each little girl and boy with a hearty handshake and a merry holiday wish.

On Wednesday night before Christmas, Mr. and Mrs. Eli Bellamy, who have charge of the Intermediate Christian Endeavors, gave a Christmas tree for their members in the Hut. The Senior Society did not plan anything special for Christmas although the holiday programs were greatly enjoyed and well attended.

Happy New Year to everybody!

REPORTER.

Enfield Charge.—There have been so many good things to happen to us since we came back to Enfield that we hardly know where to begin and where to leave off. Three weeks ago at the conclusion of the Christian Endeavor meeting I was blindfolded, Mrs. Auman not being present, and ordered to keep my seat. What was in store for me with all the whispering going on about me I hardly knew what to conclude. Naturally, having in mind some of the things which have happened to blindfolded people in the past I had some fears as to what might happen. The thought was that this might be the modern way of getting rid of a preacher. But it was not half as bad as it might have been, for they let me go with a great big "pounding." And it was one of these poundings like taking a bath in cold water, when it is all over you feel mighty good. To all those who had a part in it let me say thank you and God bless the cause which led your hearts to do it. Here my phraseology may lead some to believe that here ended the pounding, but the wonderful thing about it was that here was the beginning of it, for it has continued right up through Christmas. Of the many lovely gifts which have come to the residers at the M. P. parsonage, the most lovely and beautiful of them all was the gift of a little boy a few days before Christmas. In order to make him feel at home in our midst we are going to call him Edwin Lewis.

The "Dollar a Member" campaign is getting good support from our people here and we are hoping to raise our allotment.

We are glad that little Linwood Jordan is back in Enfield again after many weeks in the St. Luke's hospital in Richmond.

J. CLYDE AUMAN.

Denton Charge.—On Monday night before Christmas the Denton Church gave their Christmas exercises. Much credit is due Mrs. Norman Johnson and her co-laborers for this exercise. A Christmas tree and treat for the children was also a worthwhile part of the occasion. Some of the other churches gave a treat to the Sunday School scholars.

Well, the poundings keep coming. Regardless of snow and sleet we had more than fifty present at Canaan last Sunday, and at the close of Sunday School the superintendent announced that the pastor was in for a pounding. And Canaan folks believe in doing things well. In the afternoon the weather was still rougher, but a number of the Piney Grove members were at church with another big pounding for their pastor. I understand a number of others would have taken part had the weather been favorable. I don't think I have ever received a bigger pounding from the number taking part. Again on Christmas day the Ladies' Aid Society of Denton church sent us a quilt made by the society. We appreciate this valuable gift very much—especially as it has so many of the members' names embroidered on it. We thank everyone for their gifts and pray God's richest blessings upon them. And it is our desire to do more for the Kingdom of God on this charge than ever before.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Lexington, State Street. –Things have been going forward quite rapidly with us.

A very good Christmas program was given by the children of the Sunshine Circle under the direction of their leader, Mrs. C. L. Koonts, on the night of December 22nd. The beautiful "White Gifts to the King" idea was observed at this service and many useful gifts were brought and given to the Christmas Cheer Committee, who were remembered in this way by all the churches in town.

Regular choir practice each week is niw in order and our choir chairs are filled at all the Sunday services. Our folks are singing better than they thought possible before the regular practice was begun.

Our pastor brought us a forceful and timely address Sunday morning on the things we should forget and the things we should think of and strive for during the new year. We are hoping and expecting to make this the best year of our history. Attendance at Sunday school continues to increase, and everybody present last Sunday pledged to bring at least one next Sunday if possible.

Next Sunday we will have an all-day anniversary service. There will be special music and other attractive features at the morning hour and luncheon served in the church dining room at noon. Our president, Bro. Taylor, will speak for us in the afternoon and there will be the regular preaching service at 7 P. M. We urge as many of our friends as can to be with us at this anniversary service and assure them a warm welcome and a good dinner.

Officers and teachers for Sunday school were elected yesterday; almost all were re-elected. The Women's Bible class, which has been taught for the past three years by Mrs. J. F. Burkhart, elected Mrs. Frank McCreary as teacher and Mrs. Burkhart, assistant teacher. Mrs. McCrary teaches in one of the city schools and we appreciate her willingness to take the responsibility of the Sunday school class also.

We all extend to Mrs. McCreary our deepest sympathy in her sadness because of the loss of her mother recently, Mrs. Lanier, of Cid, N. C. Mrs. Lanier was a highly esteemed Christian woman and her death brought sadness to many.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemons, of Asheboro, have come to our town to live. Mrs. Lemons is a daughter of Rev. Mr. Trogden. We are glad to have these fine people work and worship with us and hope to have them join our church soon.

Bro. Hendry is slightly disabled with lumbago. He says it is nothing serious, and it in no way conflicted with his splendid preaching Sunday or with his genial and pleasant manner, but we all know it is very annoying to say the least, and wish for him a speedy recovery.

REPORTER.

South Lexington.—We haven't had a report lately as our reporter has left town, and we have just elected a new reporter.

We haven't been idle during this part of the Conference year. Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, filled his appointment today. His subject, "The Gate of Golden Opportunity." The service was well attended and all present seemed to enjoy the sermon very much.

Our Sunday school is making good progress. We began the new year with 180 present, which was a gain over last year. Our goal is 200, which we hope to reach next Sunday.

We are working hard for our Dollar a Member drive and we hope to respond to our president's request by the last of the month. We are sure we could have been one among the first to have raised it but we had another obligation to meet which was due by Christmas that was more than our part on the College claim would have been. Our pastor has presented all of the claims to the church and we hope to raise all of them this year.

We had our regular Christmas program on Tuesday, December 24th, which was rendered very ably by the children of our Sunday school. The program was gotten up by the superintendent of our Sunday school, Mr. H. C. Koonts. There was a large crowd present and the offering was taken for the G. C. B.

Our Ladies' Aid Society gave a free supper to all of the members of the society for the splendid work they did during the past year. The society raised around $600, and we hope to do even better than that this year. Our pastor and his mother have taken much interest in the work of the society, and we have a very active president, Mrs. B. F. Everidge.

We hope to have a good year this year; we had the best year in 1929 in the history of our church with Brother Isley as our pastor.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

Dulin's, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school is increasing in number.

We regret very much that for lack of time we failed to give a Christmas program. But we gave each member of our Sunday school a treat.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, filled his appointment yesterday afternoon with a forceful message, which pleased his hearers.

Our congregation was larger than usual yesterday due tto the fact that the weather was good.

Brother Ferree is going forward with his tasks. We have the 90-day college campaign on; also the Herald subscription plan.

We think by co-operation as a church we will put things over this year.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

Union Ridge. The Christmas time is over, with all the joys or sorrows. For to some comes joy, but to some comes sorrow. God has been good to me amid all the sorrows of life. I have had lots of joy. The joy of my life has been and is now to see people saved. In our church I only know of one person who has been saved in the last year. Our preaching has been good and is good now, but the people have grown cold somehow and have lost the Power. A preacher (a friend of mine) sends me a paper, "The Reform Church Standard," and I saw in that church paper a few weeks ago that their goal or leading thought for the year is "back to holiness." I see in the same paper of November 15 at the close of a meeting of the N. C. Classes that the chairman of their committee, leading in a season of prayer, prayed for "the power of the Holy Ghost in this Penecostal year."

Now as to Bro. W. F. Kennett's sermon on "The New Birth." It is fine. I have read it and re-read it. I wish all of our preachers would preach it and continue to preach it till all the people in the churches would see the truth of it. And without it there is no joy in salvation. I praise God that I have been a new man for 52 years. When I was taken in the M. P. church at Union Ridge by Rev. Lowe, who was our preacher at that time, (November, 1877), the place of worship was an old blacksmith shop. Then and there I promised to deny myself of all ungodliness and worldly lusts and live soberly, righteously and godly in the present world, page 160, old Discipline. On page 5 we read that the Wesleys saw that we could not be saved without holiness. In 1737 they saw holiness comes by faith. They saw likewise that men are justified before they are sanctified, but still holiness was the point; holy, set apart to the service of God, etc. Back to holiness, brethren, back to holiness. If our M. P. Church and all other churches will do great things for God in this year 1930, let our preachers preach as Bro. Kennett, "Ye must be born again," and let our laymen and laywomen pray, holding up clean hands with pure hearts without wrath or doubting, and our finances will all come up, and our churches will have the greatest records we have had for year, and men and women will be saved. The churches are now full of folks that don't know one thing about what Jesus said to Nicodemus, John 3:3; know nothing at all about the new birth—just got in church by signing a card or holding up their hand, or shaking the hand of some preacher, and know nothing about the fruit of the Spirit; never say a word to anybody about salvation; don't go to prayer meeting or preaching; all go to the same moving picture shows, the same circuses, and run after the things of the world just like the world. The Bible says we are not of the world. What they need in salvation. No wonder one and a half million people in North Carolina are not saved. Back, brethren, to the old-time revival, and the old old-time mourners' bench—and then the people will know what Bro. Kennett was talking about in John 3:3.

Best wishes to all. P. W. MOCK.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—The pastor filled his appointment last Sunday. A good-sized crowd was out to hear him. He emphasized the fact that we should be faithful in all things, and that we should always worship the one and only true God.

It was decided to continue the Sunday school through the winter months. The Sunday school collection on last Sunday amounted to $3.40, and the offering at the preaching service amounted to $1.60.

The communion service was held at church last Sunday.

A large crowd attended the Christmas tree and the exercises which were given on Christmas eve, and everybody seemed to enjoy the program. ELSIE CARTER, Reporter.

Bethesda, Halifax Charge.—Mr. Fogleman gave us another good sermon last night, his third appointment here. Some one recently remarked on there being so much thought in his talks, and another added: "He makes you think."

There has been some much-needed work done at the parsonage and some new furniture and furnishings put in, only a part of which were supplied by the church—the other by Mr. Fogleman himself. He also took quite a hand in the work of getting things fixed up for the advent of Mrs. Fogleman, though he did not state his purpose at the time.

Shortly before Christmas, in reporting on the parsonage and its needs, he emphasized his bachelor state and the depredations of the rats, never hinting at the similarity to the man in the famous rhyme. But when he went off to Concord and came back with a wife we were irresistibly reminded of that gentleman who "had to go to London to—" To be sure, the nice, new automobile is vastly superior as a conveyance to the renowned "wheelbarrow," but even so, no doubt, is this lady to the other.

Some of our college students were home for Christmas, and we were glad to have them at the church services.

Miss Maxine Taylor, who teaches in Henderson, was with us yesterday and made an interesting talk at Sunday school.

Mrs. E. R. Nelson, of Henderson, is spending some time here with her mother, Mrs. N. M. Harrison.

We were glad to see Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and son, Vance, recently and to have them at Sunday school.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—We welcome the new pastor and his fine family to this charge. He seems to be full of energy and enthusiasm. He preached Sunday morning a soul-stirring sermon. As we left the church we felt that it was good to have been there. We are always glad for the first Sunday to roll around, for we know that Pastor Joyner has a wonderful sermon in store for us. He has appointed one at each church to work for the Herald. He has also appointed several to work for the "Dollar a Member" campaign.

We had a fine Sunday school Sunday. Mr. P. L. Garmon was re-elected superintendent. The first quarterly conference will be at Antioch, January 11th. We want all the churches to be represented.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Miss Ruth Garmon December 5. The meeting was opened with a song, "Joy to the World." Bible reading, St. Luke, 2nd chapter, by Mrs. M. L. Stallings. Responsive reading by Mrs. Carl Stallings and Miss Ruth Garmon. Mrs. P. L. Garmon led in prayer. Mrs. Paul Curlee read a very interesting poem, "A Christmas Carol." Mrs. J. E. Hartis read "Long Years Ago O'er Bethlehem's Hills." Mrs. P. L. Garmon read a good piece. Next was a song, "Silent Night."

The Ladies' Aid Society had a chicken supper at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Garmon Saturday night, December 14, 1929.

The Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. M. L. Stallings January 2, 1930. We had several good poems read appropriate to the new year. Mr. Joyner made a very interesting helpful talk on "Unlived Days." We received two new members and had two visitors.

We planned to have a weinie roast and fish-fry Saturday night, January 11th, at the parsonage. The hostess, assisted by her daughter, served refreshments. We adjourned with a closing prayer by Mrs. Joyner. We will meet with Rev. and Mrs. Joyner the first Thursday in February.

Yours in the Master's work for a better year, MRS. PAUL CURLEE, Reporter.

Shelby.—The members of the Shelby church wish to thank Dr. Taylor and the stationing committee for sending to them such consecrated people as Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk.

Our church is entering the new year with renewed hope and enthusiasm. The Sunday school began the new year with a decided increase over the pervious Sunday. Mr. J. W. Maloney, our new superintendent, is wide-awake and full of interest and zeal. I feel sure that if we cooperate with him that our school will go forward during the year of 1930.

As Sunday, January 5, was the day set aside for our every-member canvass, our pastor's message was, "Systematic Giving." His message was so plain that every member realized that they had a part in helping support the church. Judging from the amount of the pledges which were made during the afternoon, we feel sure that the church will go over the top this year.

In the afternoon at 5 o'clock, Mrs. Lowdermilk and the writer met at the church for the purpose of organizing a Junior Christian Endeavor Society. Fourteen children joined and seemed delighted to become members of such an organization.

Bro. Lowdermilk's subject for Sunday evening was "A Man's Wrong Idea of Life." The congregation, which was the largest we have had in several years, was very attentive to the preaching of the word. Pray that this good work may continue.

Mrs. J. T. Ramsey has returned to her home on Gardner street from a short stay in the Presbyterian Hospital at Charlotte. Mrs. Ramsey, who has been sick for over four years, is missed at church and we hope that the treatment which she is now taking will restore her to health. There are quite a few others sick in the community and we hope that they will soon be well again and back in their usual places at church.

We request the prayers of all Christians that our church may go forward this year in the work of the Master.

As this is my first attempt as a reporter, I will halt and let the critic say whether I may come again. REPORTER.

Bess Chapel.—Our work is still moving along. We are trying to keep in line with our conference program as near as possible.

We were very glad to have with us Sunday morning, January 5, Dr. Taylor, who preached a splendid sermon which was enjoyed by all present. We hope to have him again soon.

Our Sunday school is small during the winter months, but we hope to grow in attendance as well as grace as the weeks go by and spring comes with better weather and roads.

The people met and gave our pastor a pounding on Thursday of last week. We appreciate the work of this good man in our community and the best we can give him and his family is not too good for him.

Our Christmas program was given on the eve of Christmas day. We were glad to have a number of visitors present.

The new pews have been recently installed, for which we are thankful. They add to the appearance of the church as well as the comfort of the people.

We wish for all a most profitable and happy year.

First Church, High Point. On Sunday evening, December 29th, an unique and impressive candle-lighting service was observed. A Bible was carried to the altar by Master Joseph Farmer, and a large lighted candle was placed on it by Master Bobby Rankin. Twelve young ladies representing the months of the year and clad in vestments, Misses Nellie Martin, Lalah Shepard, Sarah and Sue Everhart, Rosalie Andrews, Lois Snipes, Gladys Kivett, Margaret Neese, Claire Douglas, Mary Elizabeth Adams, Kathleen Shelton, and Mrs. Theodore Ballard, lighted their candles from the one on the Bible representing Christ. Then the congregation came individually, and lighted their candles, forming a beautiful circle of light in the semi-darkness of the auditorium. This service was both novel and impressive, being symbolic of the New Year just dawning. May the members of this congregation let their lights of love and hope and Christian faith shine out throughout the entire year of 1930.

"How far that little candle throws its beams!
So shines a good deed in this naughty world."

After a Christmas vacation of two weeks, classes at High Point College were resumed last Friday morning. Practically all the students were in their places for the first period class. Appropriate to the occasion, Dean P. E. Lindley spoke to the student body at the first chapel service on "Beginning the New Year," and admonished them to regard its significance and consider its opportunities for growth. He said "Each year should find the human soul building for itself more stately mansions."

At the Sunday morning service Prof. Ernest B. Stimson sang "Tomorrow Comes the Song" in a beautiful manner. Mrs. R. I. Farmer was accompanist for his solo. In fitting celebration of the season, Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a forceful and eloquent sermon on "The Zero Hour," from the text, "Behold, the hour is at hand!" He said that Jesus had come to His Gethsemane, the cross and hour of anxiety. As far as human eye could see, he was to be conquered. He was traveling over the road of despair, anguish and woe to Calvary. As a teacher and Messiah He had been rejected, but through it all He was the Saviour of the world. Circumstances of themselves do not make or mar character. He understood that though the flock was scattered, He was still the Shepherd of the sheep. In Gethsemane He said to the disciples, "Sleep on now and take your rest." The past is irredeemable. The old year, 1929, is gone with all its failures, disappointments, and sorrows, but 1930 stands before us with all its possibilities of joyful service. We have reached and turned the bend in the road after the World War. There was more loss than gain in that war—loss of ideals, of faith and courage. There were more fatalities in the church than most people realize. The evils of suspicion and hate were engendered in the minds of humanity which it will take a generation to eradicate. Dollars will never pay for lack of consecration. We have reached the zero hour, we must get back to the leadership of the Saviour, and to the confession of sin before God. Sleep on now as far as the past is concerned, but are you ready for the future? There is an hour of unrest, suffering, and transition, but I am happy to believe this morning that every hour of man's extremity is God's opportunity. Today God must be with us. We need Jesus, my friends, so let Him come in and have dominion over our lives. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

At the evening service the subject of Rev. Mr. Farmer's discourse was "Are We Moderns Still Superstitious?"

Beginning January 15th, our new plan of making Wednesday evening Church Fellowship Evening will be tried out. A supper will precede the devotional hour and business session. This effort is being made in order to encourage a more intimate friendship and fellowship among the members of the church.

The minister distributed with the Bulletins last Sunday lists of the subjects of his morning and evening sermons for the first year of his ministry among us, and asked everybody to check those sermon which they would like to hear again and the most helpful, and return the list to him. The five sermons receiving the highest number of votes will be repeated at an early date.

Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. H. U. Oakes and family in the death of a greatly loved nephew, Joe Harris Barker, from meningitis on Sunday morning. The boy was 16 years of age, and a Senior in High Point High School. He was taken ill Friday while at school, but remained at his post until the close of the afternoon session, went home, and told his mother that he must go to bed, from which he never rose. Much anxiety is felt among parents lest the disease become epidemic in the schools, but thus far no other case has been reported. Joe was a manly boy, loved by his teachers, and popular with his school fellows. The only child of a widowed mother, this blow is unusually hard to her and the fond grandparents, who have taken his father's place ever since his death 14 years ago.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett, Miss Mary Eller, and Mrs. John S. Pickett left a week or more ago for Tampa, Fla., where they will be guests of Mrs. H. S. Meredith, nee Miss Jessie Pickett. Mrs. John Pickett will return home in a few days, but the other members of the party will remain until next March.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. Arthur Fidler and Miss Mary Armfield Coe upon their recent marriage. The First church congregation is especially interested in this very worthy and estimable young couple because Mr. Fidler, who has a beautiful baritone voice, has been a member of our choir for several months, while his pretty and attractive bride is a niece of Dr. S. S. Coe and made her home with him and Mrs. Coe while she was a member of the faculty at Johnson Street School for a year and a half.

Mrs. R. T. Pickens and daughters, Misses Lucille and Annette, have returned from a trip to Valdosta, Georgia, where they drove to spend Christmas with Mr. Pickens, and they were joined there by Wyatt, their older son, who is assistant professor of Romance Languages in Louisiana State University at Baton Rouge, La. They enjoyed a most interesting trip, going via Charlotte, Spartanburg Anderson, S. C., where Mrs. Pickens had the pleasure of meeting an old Salem classmate, Athens, Ga., and Macon, Ga. The road from Macon to Valdosta, a distance of 156 miles, is hard-surfaced and as straight as a die, one being able to see for three miles ahead. This distance was covered in three and one-half hours without difficulty. The party drove to Jennings, Fla., on Christmas Day, but ice was seen on the many ponds along the highway, and also drove to Quitman, the county-seat of Brooks County, one of the best counties in Georgia. This section is beautiful and prosperous, and very much like sections of Florida. The return trip was made via Waycross and Baxley through the turpentine section of the state to Augusta, Ga., thence through Aiken, S. C., an old-time winter resort, historic Columbia, Winnsboro, S. C., where Mrs. Pickens had the great pleasure of stopping in the home of another Salem classmate and meeting her charming family, thence through Rock Hill, and on to Charlotte and High Point. In these days of easy travel by automobile and the numerous good and luxurious hotels, a trip like this is a delightful experience, one which will linger long in retrospect.

Winston-Salem.—Alas! A New Year lies before us. When 1931 comes to us we might stand in awe and wonder why we let 1930 pass by without doing more for Christ and His work. The young people of our church gave a very effective pageant Sunday night, along the line of a wasted 1929 and resolving to make a glorious and prosperous 1930 for Christ. The characters as they appeared were: Jacque Gwyn, Robert Smith, Hubert Smothers, Pearl Sapp, and Pauline Branson, Rev. Surratt answered the characters as "The Voice," although he did not appear on the scene, his part was deeply effective. The choir rendered a selection between the presentation of each character. Individuals of the choir sang solos. The selections were especially fitted to the characters as they appeared in the pageant.

The Philathea class held its monthly meeting Monday night. A regular session of business and social prevailed. The reporter of the class, Mrs. J. E. Kirk, resigned and Miss Leota Loggin was elected to take this place.

The Workers' Council will held its first meeting this year, Thursday evening at 6:30 at the church. Supper will be served by the Woman's Auxiliary. Mr. C. H. Smith, our Sunday school superintendent, insisted that all members of this council be present and any others who would help make plans for the future benefit of the church were extended a cordial welcome to attend also.

Sunday regular communion services were held. This spirit of rededication and reconsecration should help us to start the new year right and keep it going in the same manner as we journey through the year of 1930. We hope to do more than ever before in the way that's good.

Will you join us this New Year in a resolution to live more for Christ?

Pilot Church.—Our pastor at 11 o'clock yesterday gave us a most helpful sermon. There will be no service the third Sunday evening at 3 o'clock. They have Sunday school when the weather is favorable, and roads are so the people can get to church. We are proud of the attitude that our folks take toward Sunday worship during the winter months.

There is quite a lot of sickness among our members this winter.

Mrs. Lizzie Marion, widow of R. G. Marion, has been in feeble health all winter.

Kistler's, Cleveland Charge.—January 5th, our good pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, brought a very helpful sermon. This was a New Year's sermon to remind us that precious time is fast passing by, never to return, and that we should use it in faithful service to Him, the giver of all good.

After preaching the Holy Communion service was observed.

We were glad to have Bro. O. V. Warlick, a Pleasant Hill member, with us Sunday morning. All visitors are welcome to our church.

Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the management of Bro. Seth Ivester as superintendent.

With best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. REPORTER.

Rehoboth Church, Granville Circuit.—On January 5 Rev. Spencer delivered an encouraging sermon, "Go a Little Farther." We were reminded to let our light shine in the community—to live neighborly, also to love God with all our hearts. If we do this then we are fulfilling God's commands.

In this year of 1930 let's resolve to live nearer God and the way to do this is by living nearer people and finding out their needs and offering our services.

Mr. Jasper Hicks presented to us "A Dollar Per Member" towards the college. This sum seems small, so let's come up with our dollar and help pay the debt.

Not long before Christmas one of our members died, Miss Nannie Cheatham. She had lived a Christian life, been rather active in Sunday school and church work until her health began to fail. She leaves one brother, her father and mother having departed some years ago. Interment took place in the Rehoboth cemetery. Funeral services were conducted by the pastor.

Mr. Grey Kittrell and Miss Melissa Harris were married Christmas. We wish them a happy married life. REPORTER.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—President Taylor's sermon was appreciated. We will be glad to have him again. Sunday was the first Sunday in the year, and I think our Sunday school is going to have a wide awake go. Our superintendent, Mr. Baldy Greene, came out with a new plan.

Our Christian Endeavor held a social meeting at Mr. Will Pepper's. We will have a meeting Sunday P. M.

The second Sunday Rev. C. I. Smith will preach at 11 o'clock. We invite far and near to come; you will surely enjoy this sermon.

On Sunday, December 29, 1929, an angel bore little Linda Marie Hale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hale, to that heavenly home. She was only three months and 15 days old. Rev. C. I. Smith conducted the service. Her little body was laid to rest near Hawkins Chapel. REPORTER.

Lincolnton Station. We are getting along fine. The Sunday school reports an average in 1929 as follows: Average attendance, 124; average collection, $18.34; average Bible chapters read, 301; average Bibles, 19.

We thank the Lord for His blessings upon us and ask His blessings upon all in the year of 1930.

We had a wonderful time January 5 in church. Our pastor, Rev. Fred R. Love, presented to the congregation many interesting points in the morning service. His subject was "Saving Religion -A Religion of Self-Denial," which was very interesting. The evening service subject, "Prepare to Meet Thy God." The sermon was very interesting and convincing. We had a wonderful time. There were three converts, for which we thank the Lord.

May the Lord's blessings abide with all.

Friendship-Porter.—We are glad that we are back with these people. Indeed glad to welcome Mr. D. M. Harkey and Mrs. Ray Harkey as new members in Friendship church. Now as the new road has opened up and a few beautiful days have dawned upon us, I trust we will form greater resolutions, set our aims higher, and do many things for a good cause during this year. We are thankful that our lot has been cast amongst people that are ever mindful of us. From time to time they have remembered us in different ways. We know, with their prayers, also with many good things to eat. On the eve of December 10th, as I thought the stewards had planned a meeting, also choir practice, I went out to the church to be with them. As Mrs. Hill had company, she remained at the parsonage. It was not long until a lady told me that Mrs. Hill wanted to see me at the house. I went at once. I had not recovered from the surprise of being sent for when the greatest shock came. The front door opened, they began marching in and passed on into the kitchen, unloading their edibles until our cookroom looked like a grocery store. Then we all gathered together and sang that beautiful song, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Then we lifted our hearts to the heavenly Father, thanking Him that we had been placed where we had such good friends. We can not name the givers of all the useful gifts, but we ask God to bless each one. May each one go through life ever seeming as happy as they were on that night. We greatly appreciate these tokens of kindness, and trust that we may prove ourselves worthy of such.

High Point, Welch Memorial. Welch Memorial has gone through the holiday season with a great deal of happiness and joy and some very deep sorrows.

The programs were of the highest order and were greatly enjoyed. At the Sunday school hour, December 22, the beautiful Christmas service was rendered by the choir and the younger members of the Sunday school to the delight of all. At the 11 o'clock hour the pastor preached, using the subject, "The Modern Wise Men." At the evening hour the well known and very popular pageant, "The Nativity," was rendered. Every one present was greatly pleased and edified. The Christmas tree which has for a number of years been an annual and much enjoyed event in this church, put on its most beautiful appearance on Tuesday night, December 24. No gifts were hung on the tree, but it was most beautifully decorated and electrically lighted. The program on this occasion was the beautiful pageant, "Great Joy." After the program gifts by different members and departments of the school as well as the Sunday school treat were presented. With happy hearts we all went home to await the arrival of the dear old Santa Claus.

Mr. Luther Medlin and his co-workers deserve the highest praise for the success of all these programs. When a program is to be rendered at Welch every thought turns to "Luther." Bro. Medlin is indeed an efficient worker in this line and one of the beauties is to be found in the fact that in this kind of work he finds his joy. On the night of December 31 our young people conducted a New Year watch meeting. This meeting was both very pleasant and profitable.

During the holiday season the parsonage was remembered by many who in various ways expressed a good wish. Many nice things in the way of gifts found their way into the home. We appreciate the gifts but the expression of kindness and love was appreciated most of all. No attempt is being made to make any personal mention or to enumerate articles but every article was useful and much to be appreciated. God bless the givers. It is hoped that during the year that is just before us those who occupy the parsonage may be so used that they may be of continual service to those about us. Great numbers of beautiful cards were received from many of those about us at this time as well as from many with whom we have mingled in other days. It is indeed fine to be remembered at this joyous time by those with whom we are laboring for a good cause, and it re-kindles joy in our souls when we are reminded that by our old friends we are not forgotten. Yes, old friends as well as the new ones, I love you, and may heaven's richest blessings attend you!

The New Year is starting off nicely at Welch. Attendance has been good. Finances are not perfect by any means, but much better than last year at this time. It is hoped that this is the beginning of the best year yet.

We were greatly surprised and highly pleased on Sunday night, January 5, when on entering the church Rev. C. L. Spencer was seen in the audience. This was the time for this pastor to hear a good sermon. It took lots of hard persuasion to convince this visiting brother that it was his turn to preach, but he did yield and the home pastor was not disappointed in his hopes to hear a good sermon, for certainly Bro. Spencer gave us a fine message. Bro. Spencer was in our midst because of his accompanying his son to High Point College after the holidays.

On December 24, in the midst of all the joys of the season, our hearts were made sad when the news came that our good brother, G. W. Gallimore quietly slipped away from us to spend his Christmas with the Christ and the many loved ones who had gone on before. The going of Bro. Gallimore was not wholly unexpected. He had been in feeble health for some time and he had grown weaker and weaker until very quietly he was taken home. He had lived a very good but quiet life, and in this same manner he left us. He was more than 75 years old and had lived a good life. As a young man he accepted Christ and joined Mount Ebal church on Davidson charge. On moving to Lexington he became a member of West Lexington church, and on moving to High Point some years ago he became a member of Welch Memorial. In this church he remained a consistent member until his death. In the afternoon of December 26 the funeral was conducted in Welch Memorial church. The pastor was assisted by Rev. T. E. Pierce, a former pastor, and Adjutant O'Beirn of the Salvation Army. The body was laid to rest in Oakwood cemetery under the many floral contributions that expressed love and appreciation of many friends and loved ones. The going of Bro. Gallimore brings sadness to our hearts but we all feel certain that we know where to find him.

All former members and friends are asked to return to the church on this date and enjoy the fellowship that comes by renewal of acquaintances. Dinner will be served in the basement of the building at noon. All who can will bring lunch.

Burton—Why do they drive so slowly going to funerals?

Mary Wood—O, that is to give those weeping time to get through before the burial.

A PASTOR AND FAMILY ARE APPRECIATIVE

The people of West Forsyth charge remembered their pastor and family with useful gifts during the Christmas season and since that time. The Sunday Schools at Baltimore, Harmony Grove and Stony Knoll included the pastor and family in the distribution of packages of Christmas Cheer in the form of fruits and candy. The pastor and wife also received very appropriate gifts from Stony Knoll Sunday School, and a number of Christmas greeting cards were received from members of West Forsyth Charge and from members of former pastorates at Lexington and Shelby and from friends elsewhere. We are very appreciative of all these remembrances.

The pastor and family are thankful to Mrs. J. F. Hunter, of Pleasant Hill church, for a box containing needful things for our dining table, to Mrs. E. G. Long, of Pleasant Hill church, for fresh meat and milk, and to Mrs. Clinton Sprinkle, also of Pleasant Hill church, for a supply of fresh sausage.

We highly appreciated a box of Christmas gifts received the day before Christmas from Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hartley, of Lexington, friends of a former pastorate.

TO OUR FRIENDS

Our many friends throughout this State and other states will please accept our very great appreciation for the many beautiful Christmas greeting cards they so kindly sent to us.

In caring for so large a family of children, the duties at Christmas are so many that our time is too completely taken to even allow us to send Christmas cards.

It is a real joy that we are deprived of, but we are truly glad that our friends have not stricken us from their list.

May the dear Father bless you everyone, and give you a happy and prosperous New Year both in material and in spiritual things.

Yours in His blessed service,

MR. AND MRS. A. G. DIXON.

Dec. 31, 1929.

Heedless though you've been before,
Opportunity's at your door,
Waiting patiently to come in.
Open wide the door to him;
Treat him royally, my friend,
Lest his visit quickly end.

T. A. WILLIAMS.

Graves

Mrs. Geo. Graves' earthly life came to a quiet and peaceful close Friday morning, November 8, at her home where she had been in declining health for some time. Her death was not a surprise to those of us who had known of her serious illness.

Mrs. Graves had lived a useful life for more than 46 years. For 28 years she had been a loyal and faithful member of Bethel Methodist Protestant Church, Mocksville Circuit. She was married to Mr. Geo. Graves December 6, 1906. Two children, Sarah Duette and Ancel Clement, preceded her to the beyond. She leaves a husband, mother, Mrs. J. P. Foster, three sisters, Mrs. L. P. Cartner, Mrs. S. J. Foster, of Mocksville, Mrs. W. A. Wyatt of Winston-Salem; Three brothers, Mr. W. H. Foster, Mr. C. A. Foster, of Mocksville, Route 3; Mr. F. K. Foster, of Hanes. These have the sincere sympathy of a host of relatives and friends in this time of grief. In her last affliction and suffering. She fully realized the comforting grace and mercy of God in His forgiving spirit, and assured her loved ones she was ready to go if it was God's will. We feel that our loss in her gain, and may we ever look to the Christ who was such a comfort to her in her affliction. The funeral services were held at Fork Baptist Church. Rev. Wm. Turner, the pastor of that church, conducted the services, her pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton being at Conference at this time.

Special music was furnished by a quartet and other selections by the choir. The large congregation and the many beautiful floral offerings testified to the high esteem in which Mrs. Graves was held.

Mrs. Mary Ellen Long

Mrs. Mary Ellen Long, wife of Jasper H. Long, was born October 26, 1878, and departed this life November 13, 1929. She was united in marriage to J. H. Vogler; one sister, Mrs. Myrtie Johnson; one half brother, Will Vogler, and two grand children also survive.

Mrs. Long united with Pleasant Hill Methodist Protestant Church in young womanhood more than thirty years ago, and remained a faithful member until her removal from the church militant to the church triumphant. She said that she would like to live longer to help her loved ones and neighbors along the journey of life but was ready to go if it was the Lord's will. Thus she manifested the true Christian spirit of submission to the Lord's will. "She was a good woman, a kind neighbor, a devoted wife, a loving mother and faithful and loyal to her church and to her Lord and Master." The foregoing simple tribute is very fittingly spoken of the life and character of Mrs. Long. During her life she toiled unceasingly for the general welfare of her husband, her children, her other relatives, sacrificing for their good.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

S. S. Cox

Randolph County lost one of its most highly esteemed and most substantial citizens Monday about 10 o'clock in the death at his home on Asheboro, Star Route, of S. S. Cox, aged 68 years, who passed away almost suddenly but quietly. He had been in ill health for several months, but recently had taken a turn for the better and was able to be out to greet his friends and attend to business matters. His complete recovery, however, had not been hoped for since the beginning of his ill health.

Mr. Cox was president of the Rndolph County branch Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company for 17 consecutive years and served the association in other capacities. His wise leadership and counsel is held largely responsible for the steady and healthful growth of this co-operative business enterprise, affecting every part of the county and numbering hundreds of farmers in its membership. He was justice of the peace in his community for 35 years and his decisions were ever tempered with mercy, though he held true to the course of justice as he interpreted it. Mr. Cox was a high toned Christian gentleman, a man with the problems and welfare of his community, county and country at heart.

Crutchfield of Greensboro, Mrs. Nettie Wagner, of Norfolk, Va., Mrs. Frank McCrary, of Lexington, and Mrs. Hal Harris, of Thomasville. The funeral service was conducted at Canaan Methodist Protestant Church by her pastor, assisted by the following ministers, J. R. Short, J. B. Trogdon, C. H. Hill, and a local preacher, C. O. Leonard. The floral designs were many and beautiful.

Mrs. Lanier was a charter member of Cid Methodist Protestant Church. She was loyal to her church and pastors at all times. She would work anywhere in the church. At the time of her death she was secretary of the Sunday School, and reporter for the church. She was also reporter for the Lexington Dispatch. Mrs. Lanier will be greatly missed by her church and community.

Supporting Individual Children

A goodly number of our children are clothed and fed, and an occasional one is fed and clothed by an individual, a C. E. Society, a Sunday School Class, or by a Sunday School. And we hope more will do this.

A good brother was in our office a few days ago and asked just what it cost per year to keep a child, and I told him just about $18.00 per month, or $216 per year. And he immediately said, "Yes, we will support a child for the year."

About 100 other people, or organizations doing that would insure a happy year for us in the Home. May the dear Lord increase his tribe. Who will join him?

Regular Monthly Offerings

We made an effort during last year to get all our Sunday Schools to set a goal and to make regular monthly offerings to the Home. Quite a number of schools joined the regular list, and now we are making a plea that all Sunday Schools, which do not already send regular monthly offerings, join the list of regulars and send us your offering each month.

We thank you, and ask that you pray for us, that Grace be given for every task.

Yours in His blessed service,
A. G. DIXON.

Daily Providence

Our Lord once taught us thus to pray,
"Give us this day our daily bread,"
And daily does our Lord provide.
That you have place to lay your head.

Both time and space would fail to tell
Of all the things God does for us.
He knows our needs before they come—
Prepares for us and makes no fuss.

Our God is Father and Mother too—
Provides for all and fits each one;
A tireless worker on His job,
He ceases not till work is done.

If daily God thus works for us,
What can and should we do for Him?
Should not our time and will be spent
In ways that please and honor Him?

Look for the Serious as Well as the Comic

We read this week of a man and his son who lost their lives by allowing a comic paper to blind them to the coming of a freight train as they rode along in an auto. That was a sad happening. But it illustrates the case of thousands who spend their time looking for the comic and trying to blind their eyes to the serious interests of life. God gave us a sense of humor, and I am glad that He did. There is a time to laugh, but there is also a time to weep. Life has serious interests which demand our consideration. To give ourselves wholly to the pursuit of amusement is to miss the chief point of life. Amusement has its place in our recreation, but should not be given the center in our field of interest. We are here as actors, not merely as spectators. To act well our part we must study well the situation in which we find ourself. We must not be deceived into thinking that all things are as they ought to be, and we must devote ourselves most seriously to the task of righting some of the world's wrongs. In times of weariness we may turn aside for recreation, we may be amused, we may look upon the world's comic side, but ordinarily we must give our thought and effort to life's serious business.

—THE HERALD's kind friend, Mr. Grenville Kleiser, joins in the effort to extend the paper's circulation to 3,000 homes. He is now in Nice, France, but he read President Taylor's appeal and responded by a check for ten dollars with names of people in Canada and the United States. His extraordinary kindness is highly appreciated. He was formerly a teacher in Yale University, later the author of some valuable books on self-culture, and now is a man of letters giving his time to making the world better. You may see his books advertised in The Literary Digest, and frequently we are permitted to print choice productions of his ready pen.

Satan's Personality

What is Satan? Is he a mere personification of the spirit of evil existing in human nature, or is he less than that—a fabulous creature begotten by imagination, or is he much more than that—a powerful spirit of evil with malign influence over human souls?

The Bible view is the last. He is our adversary bent on our destruction. He is the opponent of Jesus Christ in His effort to reform and save the world. He misguided Eve and sought to misguide Jesus. He is represented as going about like a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour. We are warned to beware of his wiles. Those who say Satan is an imaginary being can offer no proof other than the assertion that the imagination of men has created other monstrous beings. The safest view to take is the Bible view. Prepare to resist a real devil and an imaginary devil cannot harm you.

The Christian "Way"

Why did they call the Christian life a "way?" Because it changes the entire spirit and manner of living. Christianity is to the possessor of it first a life and then it is to those who know him a way. He departs from old ways and walks in new ways. Not only is he changed in conduct, but the very expression of his countenance is changed. He has a different look out of his eyes. Christians bear marks which enable other Christians to recognize them. It is a great change to become a Christian and it is a high privilege to walk in the Christian "way" and live a Christian life.

—Rev. C. W. Bates preached an interesting sermon last Sunday on Christ's Way Out of Desperate Situations. Beginning with the case of the hungry and foodless multitude, he referred to quite a number of cases in sacred and profane history, indicating in each case Christ's way out. The same Christ has sympathy for us and knows what He will do in the solution of our problems. No problem is too difficult for His solution.

—The crimes and follies we read in the newspapers tend to give us a very low estimate of humanity, but we must remember that the papers do not tell us much of the better things of life. While criminals and foolish ones are engaged in their ugly conduct, many good people are in a quiet way going about doing good.

—As I write this winter day, January 14, I see full bloom blossoms through my window, brought out by the continued warm days. They are the Breath of Spring.

IS THERE A DEAD-LINE IN THE MINISTRY?

After I graduated from the seminary and entered upon my first pastorate, I was much concerned about what I heard of a ministerial dead-line. It was said that a church would not call a man after he was fifty, and that the age limit was being steadily reduced. Had I made a mistake in the selection of a life work? Should I be thrown out of employment at an age when I could not establish myself in another profession and when my family needed me most?

Doubtless many young ministers today are in the same mental situation I was in more than two score years ago. They wonder if they are to be stranded in middle life, to peddle books or to eke out a precarious living on a poultry farm. It seemed to me that it might be interesting and reassuring if I gave the history of one class that graduated from a well-known New England theological seminary more than two score years ago, and showed how the members are faring today.

There were twelve in the class when we graduated, and there are nine alive now. Three have been called by the Master to their reward. The average age of the survivors is seventy-one years. All are in good health. All are optimists, and all are profoundly interested in the questions of the day. All have made some success in life. No breath of scandal has ever blown about any member of the class.

The members keep in touch with one another by means of a round robin, which circulates on an average twice a year. In these letters we tell what we are doing, the books we are reading, and give our views on the great questions of the day. Personally, I get more stimulus from these letters than I do from any other source, and I earnestly advise the members of every graduating class from a theological seminary to keep in touch with one another by a round robin.

Classmate one is seventy-six years old, but a snap-shot shows him to be erect and vigorous, with a great mass of snowy hair crowning his head. Since leaving the seminary he has specialized in Hebrew and has made quite a reputation as a Semitic scholar. He is now in London, spending most of his time in the British Museum poring over Semitic stuff. During the Great War he entered the United States service as librarian at an army post, and is now retired on a pension. While he was serving as librarian he supplied a small Unitarian church. Upon his return from Europe he is to organize library work at a Texas flying field.

Classmate two has made an international reputation as preacher, author, lecturer, and poet, and if I were to mention his name it would be familiar to most of my readers. He is seventy-two years old, and is to tour the South this winter speaking in the interest of peace. In his last letter he says: "As long as a person is enthusiastic about some great human cause that needs him, there is no such thing as old age or failure."

Classmate three calls himself a "sticket minister," although I believe he would have made a great success in the pastorate. I never shall forget the hot September day I made my first appearance at the seminary and he helped me carry a heavy trunk up three flights of stairs to my rooms. He has been helping people carry burdens all his life. Educational work called him out of the active ministry, and now at seventy-one he is superintendent of schools in New York State.

Classmate four is a Greek, but is one of the finest Americans and most consecrated Christians it was ever my fortune to meet. He married a Yankee girl, and has a fine family. He went to Chicago to work among his countrymen, but found that he could come closer to them as a physician than as a clergyman, and so he left the ministry for medciine. Now at seventy-two he has a large and lucrative practice, and has a class in nursing at one of the hospitals.

Classmate five, sixty-nine years old, was for many years principal of a high school in California, but has lately laid down the executive burdens and now teaches Latin.

Classmate six, seventy, has had but two pastorates. He says that when he was a young man he was called to the pastorate of an old church and that when he was an old man he was called to the pastorate of a young church. In both charges he made a great success. He is a fine preacher and a wonderful pastor, and it nearly broke his parishioners' hearts when he left. Although "retired," he supplies pulpits, teaches a men's class in Sunday School, and gives lectures on theism at a girls' school. How I should like to put on a skirt and listen to some of those lectures!

Classmate seven, the youngest member of the class, is now sixty-seven years old. We call him the class baby. He laid down a successful work in a pleasant town to purchase a home in an attractive community and enjoy a well-earned leisure, but a small church near by perceived its opportunity and called him to supply its pulpit. He preaches every Sunday, but finds time to read all the worthwhile books and his active, inquiring mind is profoundly interested in all public questions.

Classmate eight, sixty-nine years old, is a dignitary in the Episcopal Church, and is a millionaire by matrimony. The most of us drive Fords, but his liveried chauffeur sits at the wheel of a Rolls-Royce. He serves without pay at the cathedral in the city where he resides.

Classmate nine is the narrator, and I will not tell how old he is. His age varies. Sometimes he feels as old as Methuselah, and sometimes about twenty-five. He is retired, but finds pleasant occupation in writing for periodicals, supplying pulpits, and working around his place. If he had to do it over again, he would still be a minister.

While one swallow does not make a summer, and the history of one seminary class affords an inadequate basis for generalization, yet I do not believe that I am rash when I say that a cultivated, consecrated minister need not fear that he will be out of employment when he grows older. Churches are learning that not all the advantages are on the side of youth, that experience counts in the ministry as well as in other occupations. Avenues of employment open to the minister along lines congenial with his profession. The great missionary societies constantly need executives and find them in the successful leaders of churches. Colleges and schools often select ministers for their heads. Editorial positions open, as do opportunities to teach. A pension system now relieves the minister of anxiety about his old age. But the great rewards of the ministry are not in money or in the honors the minister receives, but in the opportunities that come to him for reading, for reflection, for study, for communion with God, for helpful service to his fellow men. No man has warmer friends. No man can do more good. No man can more advance the kingdom of God. The young man who chooses the ministry for his life's work is to be congratulated, not pitied.—Edgar Warren in Zion's Herald.

All Things Through Christ

HOW ANOTHER CHARGE DOES IT

The pastor says: "Every item of the conference budget has been apportioned with pastor's salary, and every church member has been given a definite amount." This, the pastor says, has been done at three of his churches. Get him further: "I have good hopes of seeing this charge go on the honor roll this year.." He has a right to expect this; such a financial program as his churches have been willing to adopt leads to the honor roll. A definite allotment for every member is reasonable and consistent. From the standpoint of the member, this is true; and from the standpoint of the church, it is true. Members of the church will be more sensitive to their financial obligations to God, if their duty in this particular is indicated by a definite allotment; they will have, also, a greater appreciation of the church by the very fact that the church expects something of them. And of course it is reasonable to think that the financial receipts of the church will be larger. Our honor roll will grow when our financial obligations to God are distributed to our entire membership.

Sick

Miss Inez Reynolds, the daughter of Rev. G. L. Reynolds, is a patient at the Clinic Hospital, Greensboro. She probably will undergo an operation. Mrs. Ballard, wife of Rev. E. Lester Ballard, has undergone an operation at the High Point Hospital. Rev. C. W. Bates has just returned from New York, where he was called because of the serious illness of his father and stepmother. These patients and their loved ones have our tender sympathy and our earnest prayers.

"Dollar a Member"

The report by Treasurer Brown last week was heartening. Just half of our 90 charges are listed, with amounts ranging from $1 to $500. And of ocurse this is only a partial report from practically all of these charges. The amounts sent in will, in most cases, be supplemented, and other churches on many of these charges reporting are still to be heard from. And it is to be noted, also, that no report has been made to date by 41 charges. All of this gives us a wide working margin, and encourages us with hopes for the balance yet to be raised. Mr. F. R. Stout, director for the Greensboro churches, had a meeting of the pastors and representatives of these churches last Friday night. Good progress had been made already by some of the churches, and the decision of the meeting was that Greensboro should be 100 per cent on "Dollar a Member." Mr. W. T. Hanner, director of another group of churches, is pressing the matter in his district. The church at Julian lacks only a small amount of being up to 100 per cent. That has probably been raised by this time. We were given assurance in Lexington Sunday that State Street and South Lexington could be depended upon for the full amount. We know that the matter is being pushed on the various charges, and we expect most encouraging returns by the end of this month. And while we are working, of course we shall not fail to be much in prayer. "Prayer Changes Things."

State Street

January 12, Sunday.—The third anniversary of the State Street congregation was held on this date with the pastor in charge at the 11 o'clock hour. We were not to participate in the program until the afternoon, but desired to give the day to the charge, and to worship with them in the morning service. The programs of the day were thoughtfully prepared and helpfully executed. An encouraging attendance was present both morning and afternoon. We had to miss the dinner at the church, and the fellowship that we would have enjoyed with the people; but a brief visit, between services, with our aged mother and other members of her family, at Yadkin College, was our compensation. Our membership is not large at State Street, but no more faithful band can be found any where. Unfortunately, they have a burdening church debt, but if the liberality that they displayed Sunday can be maintained, the day will come when they will "owe no man." The major part of a $1,500 obligation that they are trying to retire, was provided at this service. Brother Hendry, the pastor, has entered enthusiastically and hopefully upon the work, and is winning his way to the hearts of the people. We believe that State Street will have a good year. We enjoyed our visit with them.

January Twenty-Six

YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY—This is the second observance of this special day, appointed by the last session of the General Conference. We urge that our churches make much of it. Good will follow in every way. Observe the day a little later, if it can't be done on the 26,—the last Sunday in the month. Write to Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Durham, N. C., P. O. Box 993, for the program. A card will do. The offering counts on the budget of the local church. Designate it, "Young People's Day Offering," when you send it to Dr. Brown. Every church busy now, on "Young People's Day" program!

Herald Subscriptions

It is gratifying to see that the list is growing. Asheboro leads, with 18 1-4. Burlington First is next, with 13 7-8, and Mocksville and Orange follow as close thirds with 13 3-4 and 12 1-2, in order named. Other charges are showing gains. The HERALD, as a weekly visitor, is a sure stimulus for a charge. A pastor is doing a good work when he succeeds in getting his people to take the church papers. All success to the committee, the pastors and the churches in this effort!

Assigned

On January 1, Rev. E. O. Peeler was assigned to the pastorate of Guilford charge to take the place of Rev. C. J. Edwards, resigned. Brother Peeler will enter upon his work on this charge June 1.

The Epic of the Preacher

This is the last work of the late and lamented Dr. Lewis, and like everything else written by him, it is well worth reading. The book can be had from our Board of Publication, Baltimore or Pittsburgh.

Those who knew Dr. Lewis will readily identify him in this striking quotation taken from the book:

"Now there is a vast difference between a contending minister and a contentious minister. God forbid that I should be understood to sanction the latter! St. Paul himself is careful to admonish us that 'the servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men'; 'not about words to no profit, but to the subverting of the hearers'; 'not about foolish and unlearned questions, knowing that they do gender strife'; not about his salary, or his rights, or his own way. But 'in the good contest' he must bear his part, he must not flinch, nor cry peace when there is no peace, nor run away from the firing line; he must contend in the good contest: for a good theology, repudiating every description of the Father that does not harmonize with the standard, 'God is love'; repudiating every gospel inconsistent with the standard, 'the blood of Jesus Christ, his Son cleanseth from all sin'; repudiating every theology that leaves out or depreciates the Holy Spirit proceeding from the Father and the Son, and producing spiritual life in us. He must contend for a Holy Book, the Word of God, the measure of faith, the ethics of conduct, the lamp shining in a dark place, comfort for our souls, 'Wonderful Words of life.' He must contend for a holy life, fed from a pure business, a pure politics, in all our walk and conversa- pure business, a pure politics, in all our wal andk conversation testifying that we have been with Jesus. He must contend against every scheme of education or legislation or propaganda that contravenes the authority of God, the mercy of Jesus, the purity of the Holy Spirit, or that degrades or oppresses, or deterioriates the moral nature of any man, woman, or child."

"O man of God, you will never get these by compromise, by confining your preaching to the enunciation of weak platitudes about what everybody believes, by keeping silence; you must fight for them, you must take your part in the good contest."

A CHURCH CIRCUS

Question: The church of which I am a member has an article in our little weekly paper advertising an elaborate circus, with its full quota of sideshows, popcorn booths, ballyho man, clowns, circus lemonade, ten dancers, hair-raising acrobatic stunts, and the usual wild animals. I am horrified. How can a minister of the gospel approve of such goings on in the church? Cannot the Moody Bible Institute do something to bear upon this case?

Answer: The situation certainly is deplorable, especially so since it is to be given by the "Win-Some" class of the Sunday School, and this for the second time. Having been a "success" the first year it is to be repeated. The class (supposedly of young ladies) may be winsome in a worldly sense, but we do not see anything in such schemes for money raising that will win the approval of our Lord. We are unable to discern even the shadow of the "old rugged cross" in them. Only a church that is spiritually dead will endorse them. The only thing that the Moody Bible Institute can do is to continue setting before its students more scripturally correct teaching for conducting the work of a church and training them to do it. The Lord will bless any Christian worker or any church that will honor His Word.—Moody Monthly.

A JEWISH FOLK TALE

One day a certain old, rich man, of a miserly disposition, visited a rabbi, who took the rich man by the hand, and led him to a window.

"Look out there," he said.

The rich man looked into the street.

"What do you see?" asked the rabbi.

"I see men, and women, and little children," answered the rich man.

Again the rabbi took him by the hand, and this time led him to a mirror. "What do you see now?"

"Now I see myself," the rich man replied.

Then the rabbi said: "Behold, in the window there is glass, and in the mirror there is glass! But the glass of the mirror is covered with a little silver, and no sooner is the silver added than you cease to see others, but you see only yourself."—Moody Monthly.

"HE THAT IS NEAR ME IS NEAR THE FIRE"

"It is just the business of the Christian ministry and of the Christian Church to light fires for the cold and weary sons of men. The world is full of thirsty people longing for a bit of sympathy and cheer; our business is to find out these people and give them what they need. A great city, with all its crowds, is simply packed full of those who are absolutely lonely and friendless. I've walked many a mile over mountain and moor without meeting a soul all day long, and yet not felt so lonely as I did in the streets of London when I was twenty. There are those all round about our churches who are just lonely and needing someone to be friendly to them and to bring them to the Friends of friends.

"One of the real tests we might do well to apply to our Christian life is just this: Are we fires or refrigerators? Do we attract or repel? Are you one whom people instinctively turn for confidence and help? The greater the trouble people are in the more need is there for sympathy and tenderness. We might go far for a better definition of 'a friend' than that given by the schoolboy: 'A friend is someone who knows all about us and yet loves us just the same.' That was the way of Jesus; that must be our way, too. The world will not be won by marvelous preaching; the world is only going to be won by Christian living—when those who bear the name of Christ are filled with His spirit of love and friendship."—Albert Peel, D. D., in Christian World (London).

"It is a painful thing, this pruning work, this cutting off of the over-luxuriant shoots, in order to call back the wandering juices into the healthier and more living parts. In religion it is described thus: 'Every branch that beareth fruit, He purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit.' The keen edge of God's pruning-knife cuts sheer through. No weak tenderness stops Him whose love seeks goodness, not comfort for His servants."—Selected.

PRAYER CHANGES THINGS

There is nothing but that can be moved through prayer, if we have faith in God. Prayer moves God. Prayer changes things. "With God all things are possible," and "all things are possible to him that believeth."

It was said of the apostle James, that after his death it was found his knees were calloused like a camel's knees, from praying so much. Here was the secret of the success of those ministers of God in early days. They had calloused knees.

A missionary to the Indians years ago, used to lie on the frozen ground at night, wrapped in a bearskin, and cry mightily to God to save the Indians. God heard and saved the poor ignorant Indians by the scores and hundreds.

One of the world's greatest evangelists in early days used to pray until whole communities were brought under conviction by the Spirit of God, and men could not resist the mighty influence. Whole days he agonized and prayed and prevailed in prayer that God would glorify His name in the salvation of souls, and revivals broke out and spread over the world. God has not changed today. He waits to answer the prayer of praying men and women.

One prayed, "God, give me Scotland or I die." And God gave him Scotland. He was mighty in the Word of God and prayer. The queen on the throne at that time said she feared that man's prayers more than all the armies of England. He used to be in such agony for the deliverance of his country that he could not sleep. He had a place in his garden where he used to go and pray. One night as he and several friends were praying together, he said, "Deliverance has come." The next day the news came that the queen was dead. Deliverance had come, and Protestantism was declared by parliament to be the religion of the land.

The widow came to the unjust judge, and got her request by importunity, Christ told us. (Luke 18:1-8.) The judge said, "Though I fear not God, nor regard man; yet because this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, lest by her continual coming she weary me." She continued to come to an unjust judge and had no one to help her.

We should never get weary in seeking God. We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous, who ever lives, and is seated at the right hand of God. He says, "Ask, and ye shall receive." If we measure up to the Word, God will fulfill His promises.—Selected.

A CALL TO PRAYER

The outstanding need of the present hour is a heaven-sent revival! The state of vital religion is low. The apostasy is on. Many churches have a name to live, but they are dead. Many of the churches that are not dead have lost their first love. Worldliness is rampant among professing Christians. Modernism has captured most of the schools and many of the pulpits. Even the foreign field has not escaped the rvaages of this anti-Christian religion. Family religion is uncommon. The family altar is broken down in most homes. The average church is half-filled or nearly empty on Sunday nights. Two-thirds of the population of our cities are not reached by the Gospel. A billion souls in the regions beyond have not heard the good news. Men are not thinking of God and eternity as they used to in the by-gone days. There is little reverence for God and little respect for authority.

History teaches us that in times of spiritual declension in the past it has pleased God to answer the prayers of His children for a revival. For the present crisis, the Lord's challenge is found in Jeremiah 33:3, "Call unto me and I will answer thee, and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not." Importunate, believing prayer changes conditions. The revival will come when God's people pay the price of confession, surrender, faith and intercession.

Believing that God's hour has struck, the World's Christian Fundamentals Association calls upon God's people everywhere to set aside the last day or the last night of the year 1929 for mighty intercession for a world-wide revival in the body of Christ. Churches in every land are requested to open their doors for such a day or night of prayer. Let praying people assemble in every city and community throughout the world. Where churches are not available, let believers assemble in private homes. Where a believer cannot find others who are willing to pray, let him have a day of prayer by himself. If we can belt the globe with real prayer meetings, the revival will come.

We ask editors everywhere to publish this call and make editorial comments. We request pastors, evangelists, missionaries, and Bible teachers to re-echo the call. The time has come for God's people unitedly, fervently, and believingly to pray for a God-given revival. Will you pray, "Lord, send a revival and let it begin in me?"—Selected.

GOD'S MAN

He comes, God's man, across the hills!
With high resolve, he fronts the dawns;
He swiftly trails the upland lawns,
And, eager, hears the song that thrills.

His heart is warm, and clear his brain;
He scorns to wrong a brother man;
In honor's march he leads the van;
His dreams are sweet as April rain.

When error's hordes the right invade
And justice strive to overthrow,
Then God's man dares to face the foe,
And, lightning-quick, descends his blade.

The heartless jibe and ridicule,
The swish of envy's stinging whip,
The firmer make him set his lip,
And stricter draw the Golden Rule.

He brooks no compromise with sin;
His steps are ever Godward bent;
He lives for that divine event,

"YOU CAN'T MAKE MEN SOBER BY LAW"

They tell us that we cannot be made sober by act of Parliament. I hate these little, smug, pettifogging, and inaccurate pieces of proverbial philosophy. They are thrown off by men who cannot think, and they are beliveed in by fools. I say that every experience that the world has had, and I do not care where you go for it—go north, go south, go east, go west; keep within your own empire or go outside; confine your attention to the Anglo-Saxon race or go outside it and take the Slavs—go anywhere experiments may have been made, and the conclusion is absolutely inevitable and irresistible, that you can make men and women sober by act of Parliament.—Premier Ramsay MacDonald.

OUR STORY PAGE

HIS COUNTRY'S FLAG

Breathless from running, Lester gained the summit of the hill and, just as the sun rose, pulled the rope that sent the flag gliding smoothly to the top of the staff, where it spread its graceful silken folds to the morning breeze.

The boy's heart beat proudly. How splendid the flag looked floating above him! His flag!

A shout rang up the hill, and, looking toward the school house, Lester saw a man standing with hat off. It was Mr. Williams, his teacher.

"Good work, boy!" called the man, waving at him.

"He saw it," thought the boy happily, his eyes following Mr. Williams' departing form.

There was to be a picnic in the school grove that Independence Day, and Mr. Williams had appointed Lester guardian of the flag owned by the school. As he gave it to the boy, he had said,

"Take care of your country's flag. Be at your post on the hill to raise it promptly at sunrise. Be there to lower it at sunset, and on no account let it touch the ground. I know I can trust you, Lester."

The lad's face glowed as he passed over it. The other boys had not approved of Mr. Williams' choice.

"A'w—what did he choose Les Hickey for?" Billy Gates had protested. "Les Hickey's a 'fraid cat!"

"I'll say Les Hickey's a 'fraid cat," echoed Tommy Coons, giving Lester a dark look, and adding,

"Better run home, 'Fraidy. It's clouding up and is going to thunder and lighten like anything!"

" 'Fraid Cat, 'Fraid Cat!" yelled the boys, and Lester had gone away furious.

And yet, what they had said was true. He was afraid of thunder storms. In the locality from whence he had lately come such storms were practically unknown, and Lester had not yet become accustomed to them. The boys had seen him turn white and shiver at a vivid flash of lightning and an ominous peal of thunder.

Mr. Williams had seen him cringe, also, and yet Mr. Williams had made him guardian of the flag, saying, "I trust you, Lester." The boy determined to be worthy of his teacher's trust.

Fearful that he might fail in his duty, he had tried to stay awake the night before the picnic. But he dozed off just before sunrise, waking in a panic from a dream that he had failed after all. He had, however, been promptly on time, and Mr. Williams had seen him raise the flag. The glow of happiness, which had subsided at the thought of his recent humiliation, returned, and Lester felt glad, very glad as he went back over the hill to his home.

The day was likely to prove somewhat of an ordeal, for since that fateful thunder storm the boys had not asked Lester to join in their games.

It turned out as he expected. He was left to himself and felt lonely and awkward, until Mr. Williams, dropping down beside him under a tree, engaged him in talk of the boyish sports he had enjoyed in the West. Lester forgot the attitude of the boys toward him as he talked with his teacher upon the subject dear to his heart. But presently, Mr. Williams being called away, Lester strolled over to the ball field.

"Got the flag up, I see," began Billy Gates, eyeing the emblem on the hill. Then, turning a mocking face toward Lester,

"Good thing it didn't storm this morning at sunrise. Hi, Lester?"

Lester turned his back upon Billy and walked over to an excited group of boys who were trying to find a substitute for one of their number on the nine.

"Here's Les," sang out Tim Robbins," "let's put him on, fellows." Then, looking up into the sky, "No storm in sight. Want to go on, Les?"

For a moment Lester believed Tim meant it. His eyes shone, as he replied eagerly,

"I'll say I do!"

Then his heart sank as a perfect babel of mocking laughter arose.

"Aw-w—that a good one!" yelled Tommy Coons. "Les on a ball nine! Think of that fellows! 'Fraidy wants to play ball! Haw, haw!"

Lester turned on him furiously,

"I know a sight more about the game than you or your old bunch ever dreamed of!" he retorted hotly, and then dashed away amid shouts of derision, blinking back the angry tears that would come in spite of himself. He'd get away from all this. He'd go home.

Then he saw the flag floating high above then on the hill where he had raised it that morning. His country's flag! He was the guardian of that flag. He would not go away. He would stay by until sunset.

Going slowly back to camp, he offered his services to the teachers, who were preparing the picnic lunch. His help was thankfully accepted, and he sturdily set to work collecting wood for the fire, sharpening sticks for the marshmallow roast, lugging heavy pails of water and big baskets of food and putting up swings. He tried to shut out all thought of the boys, combatting his loneliness by filling in every moment with hard work.

After lunch came the races and contests. Lester was stealing off to watch them from a distance when Mr. Williams detained him.

"Boy," he urged earnestly, "here's your chance to show those fellows the stuff you're made of. Get into the races and win! You can do it, boy, you can do it, I know!"

The words, the look of certainty in Mr. Williams' eager eyes, gave Lester a feeling of strength and confidence he had not known before. The scorn of the boys was nothing to him now. He didn't care much about "showing those fellows" what he could do. All that mattered to him was that he should prove to the man who had faith in him that he was worthy of his trust.

Lester entered every race and contest to which he was eligible, and won them all.

The grove rang with shouts of applause as he won race after race, contest after contest. But Lester noticed, although sneering faces had taken on looks of reluctant admiration, the boys did not applaud him. And somehow, he didn't care at all. The honest pleasure upon the face of his teacher counted far more with Lester than anything else.

But a test yet awaited him.

It had been a hot, close day and late in the afternoon a storm came up; a sudden, terrifying hurricane of wind and rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning. The merry-makers fled to the school house. Lester, in a frenzy of fright, had started with the rest for shelter, but a sudden thought made him stop. The flag! He must haul it down.

He glanced up the steep hill where it flapped madly in the wind, and then dashed toward it, facing the terrific gale. The lightning flashed sharply about him; the thunder crashed violently. His heart beat wildly, and he shook with fear, but he kept on, his one purpose being to reach and haul down the flag.

Half way up the incline he fell, and lay a moment before he could catch his breath. Then he struggled on once more, and at length gained the crest of the hill. Putting forth every ounce of strength which he possessed, he pulled wildly at the rope attached to the flag. The heavy sliken emblem was hard to manage, for as it began to descend the wind caught and wound it about the flag-staff.

Lester heard an ominous cracking of wood. The violent wind had broken the pole. The flag was falling!

Leaping forward, he caught and held it as high as he could one hand grasping the base of the broken pole, the other forcing the flag away from the ground. He could not hold on much longer; his arms were growing numb and he was conscious of a pain shooting through his shoulder. The pole must have hit him, he thought dimly.

He believed—he was—falling and—the flag—would touch —ground after all. Too—bad—when Mr. Williams was—trusting him—

"O God," he prayed frantically, "don't let her touch ground—please don't!"

He had forgotten the storm; the pain in his shoulder didn't matter; nothing mattered—if only—he could keep—his country's flag—from touching—

"Hold on, boy," called a reassuring voice, "I'm right here! Hold on, like a brick!"

Lester rallied and clutched the pole desperately. He would hold on. Mr. Williams was trusting him.

And then a strong arm came about him and someone raised the heavy banner from his numb body and he looked up into a pair of eyes that were full of a strange light.

"Mr.—Mr. Williams," he gasped swaying back against the strong arm, "did she touch? I—I tried awful hard—"

"No, boy," answered his teacher in a voice with a proud, glad tone in it. "No, scout, she didn't!"

Then, lifting the lad, he carried him and the flag down the hill and into the school house.

Everybody crowded about them and all looked very kind.

"Now, then," shouted Mr. Williams in ringing tones, "three cheers for the boy who remembered his duty while the rest of us only thought of ourselves! Three cheers for the boy who braved this violent storm to protect his country's flag! Three cheers for the boy of whom we are all proud! Hurrah for Lester Hickey!"

And then everybody—Billy Gates, Tommy Coons and Tim Robbins included—yelled at the tops of their voices, HURRAH! HURRAH! HURRAH!—Anna B. Boyce, in The Uplift.

ED TRAPS THE TIGER

Ed Friar and I were on the good ship Hercules, plunging through a gale somewhere between Cuba and the Panama Canal. The ship would bury her nose down under a wave every once in a while, and then lift a couple of tons of green sea water high into the air and tumble it down over the fo'c'sle into the forward deck below. It was good fun watching the sea breaking over the bow that way, but I noticed that Ed didn't seem to be enjoying it.

"What's the matter, Ed?" I asked.

"Oh, nothing," he replied.

"Don't you like this?" I queried.

"Sure I do."

For a minute he kept quiet; then he went on to say: "But honestly, George, I wish I could get off this ship at the Panama Canal and go into the jungle with Mr. Buck. The sea is all right, but I'd have a better time hunting big game."

"What would your father say?"

Ed's father was Captain of the Hercules, and it was because of him that we were making this trip.

"He wouldn't mind," was Ed's answer. "If I could only get Mr. Buck to say it was all right."

"Why don't you ask him?"

"I did. He said he was sorry, but he always liked to have men with him who would be useful in a tight place."

"Well, wouldn't you be?"

"How do I know?" replied Ed, sadly. "I've never been in one to find out."

At this point in our talk the ship lifted herself on a high wave and stood for a half-second or more on the crest; then it plunged deeply into the next roller and buried its nose into the ocean.

"Watch out!" warned Ed's father. "This is the worst wave we've hit and it may do some damage."

The force of the impact was so great that for a moment the Hercules stood still in her tracks. Then she struggled ahead, trying to lift her bow at the same time; and when she did rise again, she poured tons and tons of green water down into the forward deck.

The spray had no sooner cleared away when Mr. Buck ran up the ladder to the bridge.

"Captain Friar!" he shouted, very much excited. "The tiger's loose."

We looked over the front of the bridge to a spot on the deck where a moment before there had been a large cage occupied by a prize tiger that Mr. Buck was shipping to a zoo in San Francisco. The cage had been torn from its lashings by the heavy sea and smashed against the bulkhead of the deck-house, and Bengal Jo, the tiger, was roaming savagely between the hatches, letting out angry roars that made everybody shudder.

"Quick, Ed," cried Captain Friar. "Go down below and get my rifle."

"Don't shoot him!" pleaded Mr. Buck. "Give me a chance to recapture him."

"I can't risk anybody's life," replied Ed's father. "And if that tiger ever gets up on the promenade deck, the passengers will be in danger."

"He won't ever get up there," promised Mr. Buck. "We'll get him in a corner and then rope him down."

"All right," agreed Ed's father. "I'll give you ten minutes to make the try."

"Come with me, Ed," said Mr. Buck. "I may need your help. Have you got a revolver?"

"No, but I can get one."

"It would be safer if you did. If Bengal Jo should happen to spring, you'd have some way of defending yourself."

When Ed came back with the revolver, he started down the ladder with Mr. Buck. But just as they got on the second rung down, the ship took another dip and tumbled some more water over the deck. The tiger turned to run away from it, and as he did so, he caught sight of Ed on the ladder.

With a wild roar, he bounded along the deck and leaped up on the ladder, springing so high that I thought sure he would land right on top of Ed. But he misjudged his spring, or perhaps the lurch of the ship threw him off, for he fell back to the deck, clawing at the ladder rungs as he went down. By the time he had regained his feet and made a successful leap, both Ed and Mr. Buck were safely inside one of the staterooms.

"I hate to do this," said Mr. Buck, drawing his revolver. "But I guess I have to."

He went to the porthole and leveled his gun at the tiger, who had caught the scent and was now prowling up and down before the door.

"Wait a minute!" cried Ed. "Why can't we trap him in this cabin?"

"Is there an inside door?" asked Mr. Buck, catching the idea quickly.

"Yes," said Ed. "We could escape by that and then I could creep around and close the outside door on the tiger after he had entered the cabin."

"It's a good idea, but dangerous," said Mr. Buck. "I'm willing to try it if you are. It's our only chance to recapture the tiger alive."

They opened the inside door and saw that the passageway was clear. Then, while Mr. Buck held one door open so that Ed could escape easily, Ed turned the knob of the other door and kicked it wide open.

The tiger was so surprised for the moment that he did not move. Then he bounded into the cabin with a single leap, but not before Ed had skipped out into the corridor and Mr. Buck had closed the inside door.

"Now," said Ed. "If I can only run around to the outside fast enough to close that door before the tiger comes out again!"

He started down the passageway, but changed his mind and decided to take a short cut through one of the other staterooms. Soon he was on the promenade deck again, and without hesitating even a seond, he ran to the open door and shut it tight. The tiger was now shut trapped in the stateroom.

"But what are we going to do with him now?" queried Mr. Buck. "We can't let him stay in a first-class cabin all the rest of the trip, and even if we did, we'd have to find some way of getting him out when the ship arrived at the Panama Canal."

Ed, puzzled for a while, and then he asked Mr. Buck if the tiger was hungry.

"He ought to be," was the answer." He hasn't had his day's supply of raw meat yet."

"Then getting him out of the cabin will be easy," returned Ed. "All we have to do is build a new cage and place it and the cabin door to door. Put some meat into the cage and the tiger will walk from one to the other without any coaxing at all."

"Ed," said the animal trainer in admiration. "You certainly do have some of the most brilliant ideas I ever heard of. They work, too."

The one about the cage worked all right, because I was there when the transfer was made, and Bengal Jo came for the meat as though he were a kitten coming for a saucer of milk. Mr. Buck shook hands with Ed and said:

"How would you like to come into the jungle with me? I need somebody who can be handy with wild animals without hurting them."

"I'd like to, if George could come too."

"Of course he can. It would be a fine experience for you both. If you want me to, I'll ask your father."

Ed's father didn't mind, and so while the Hercules went on to San Francisco, Ed and I stayed in the jungle with Mr. Buck, and lots of times now, we can go to the zoo at home and see some animals that we helped to catch. Some of them know us and some of them don't, but Ed says none of them mean as much to him as Bengal Jo does.

"That's natural," I always tell him. "Bengal Jo is the only tiger you ever captured single-handed."—Selected.

CHARLES LAMB'S EXPERIENCE WITH WINE

"Out of the black depths could I be heard, I would cry out to all those who have but to set a foot in the perilous flood. Could the youth, to whom the flavor of his first wine is delicious as the opening scenes of life, or the entering upon some newly discovered paradise, look into my desolation and be made to understand what a dreary thing it is when a man shall feel himself going down a precipice with open eyes and a passive will—to see his destruction, and have no power to stop it, and yet to feel it all the way emanating from himself; to perceive all goodness emptied out of him, and yet not to be able to forget a time when it was otherwise; to bear about the piteous spectacle of his own self-ruins—could he see my fevered eye—feverish with last night's drinking, and feverisly looking for this night's repetition of the folly; could he feel the body of the death out of which I cry hourly with feebler and feebler outcry to be delivered—it were enough to make him dash the sparkling beverage to the earth, in all the pride of its mantling temptation; to make him clasp his teeth, * * * and not undo 'em, to suffer wet damnation to run through 'em.

"But is there no middle way betwixt total abstinence and the excess which kills you? For your sake, reader, and that you may never attain to my experience, with pain I must utter the dreadful truth, that there is none—none that I can find."

Leader's Talk

If we contemplate the abolishment of missions we are going directly against the great command, "Go ye unto all the world and preach the gospel . . " We have no choice whatever. Jesus alone has authority to say whether or not missions shall be abolished or expanded and we see that He has spoken clearly. If we abandon Christ's program He may abandon us. Are we prepared for that?

The church exists not for itself but for others. This very word "others" would imply missions. We are not competent to judge whether or not the world needs missions. Only Christ is able. In abolishing misions we would be surrendering to evil, giving up the mainstay of the church. There is vast room for expansion as we are merely on the edge of the work. We need to expand our heart, our gifts and our lives.

To Be Answered

1. What missions do you know of which we could abolish? In your own denomination?
2. What mission work needs the most expansion? Tell why.
3. How can we aid in expansion and deter abolishment?
4. What can we do to help our church increase her gifts to missions?
5. Have the various mission fields briefly surveyed—giving needs which are most pressing.

Brothers of the Faith

In Christ there is no East nor West,
  In Him no South nor North.
But one great fellowship of love
  Throughout the whole wide earth.
In Him shall true hearts everywhere
  Their high communion find;
His service is the golden cord
  Close binding all mankind.
Join hands, then, brothers of the faith,
  Whate'er your race may be;
Who serves my Father as a son
  Is surely kin to me.
In Christ now meet both East and West,
  In Him meet South and North.
All Christly souls are one in Him
  Throughout the whole wide earth.

DENOMINATIONAL YOUNG PEOPLE'S DAY

Sunday Evening, January 26, 1930

Did you place your order for materials with which to observe this Day? We have received a large number of orders which indicates that there is a widespread interest in a Youth Service for the church.

Last Minute Orders—Send them on. We are prepared to take care of them. They will receive very prompt attention.

Another Date—If you are planning to have this service at some other time, please let us know so we can reserve supplies for your use. We have a six-page Leaders' Leaflet to be used in preparing the program and an attractive Program Leaflet for distribution in the audience.

In Every Church Possible—The program can be used in every type of church. On Conference is endeavoring to reach every church. In order to do this their leadership is asking that the pastors continue the round of their charges until every church has the service. This will take most of February since most of the charges have more than three churches. Let's join this conference in making it 100 per cent if possible. That this service will be a great blessing to the entire denomination and the Kingdom is our earnest prayer.

Assistant Sec'y.

A LETTER FROM MRS. THOMPSON

Now that the holidays are past and the various branches are entering the last quarter's work of the missionary year, we are all looking forward to closing up the year's work with a good showing from each Branch. We feel sure that it is the desire of every Branch officer that the goal be attained, not only from a financial, but from an educational standpoint. To this end we are writing to most of the Branch officers, as we feel sure you would all like to know how the work is coming on.

The interest is growing, and new auxiliaries are being organized in all of the Branches as well as many re-organizations. By reason of the letters we are receiving from new officers of the women's organizations as well as pastors of churches asking for information, we realize there is a cast amount of energy represented in the willingness of the women to serve. It is the problem of each Branch to harness this energy before it becomes inert. This can only be done through the activity of the Branch officers. The quantify of literature we are sending is also indicative of the increasing interest. We want, however, to call your attention to finances. Up to January 1 we have received from the Branch Treasurer of the North Carolina Branch $3,778.86. This sum is about the same per cent of the apportionment as other Branches have paid up to this time. We have received more from all the Branches this year than was received during the same time last year. These figures show us, however, that there will need to be some speeding up in the next few months if the Branches raise even the equivalent of the amount raised in years past.

The committee on programs and findings meets in Pittsburgh today, the 10th, to plan for the Annual Convention; the date and place of meeting will be published in our church paper and Record, as will also the program when it has been arranged. We hope that each Branch will make plans at their annual Branch meeting to send their full quota of delegates to the annual Missionary Convention. We hope to have a very helpful program, not only inspirational, but practical, with plans for definite work.

Desiring for you and your Branch all good things for this new year of 1930. If I can be of any help in putting over your work, I would be grateful for the opportunity of service.

MRS. MARIE THOMPSON,
Asso. Exec. Sec'y.

—Prof Lindley of High Point College made a very interesting and suggestive talk to the men of Calvary Brotherhood in their regular meeting on Tuesday night. Regret was felt that a number of the men of the Brotherhood were prevented from attending the meeting. It was jestingly suggested that the absent ones were afraid the Professor had come to take a collection for High Point College which has recently been represented as in need of funds. Prof. Lindley never referred to the college, but discussed the value of such an organization or our brotherhood and suggested ways of procedure to realize the best results.

MARRIED

Wedding in Albemarle

A wedding of beautiful simplicity was that of Miss Louise Green of this city to Mr. William Ferrell Sanders, of Badin, which was solemnized on January 3 at the First Methodist Protestant church here.

To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, which was played by Mrs. John Johnson, the couple entered unattended, and took their places before the altar, which made a beautiful setting with its palms, ferns and cut flowers. Cathedral candles were used as a background, and these further enhanced the beauty and solemnity of the occasion. Rev. J. R. Anderson, pastor of the bride, officiated, using the impressive ring ceremony, during which the ever-beautiful Traumerei was softly played. Mendelssohn's wedding march was used as a recessional.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for a southern trip, after which they will be at home in Badin, N. C.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. S. R. Green of this city and is very popular, both in the social and church life of the city.

Tte groom is the only son of Mr. J. C. Sanders of Belmont and holds a responsible position in the engineering department of the Tallahassee Power Company at Badin.

Lambert-Glasgow

January 11th, 1930, 9 o'clock p. m., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. O'Briant, Rosemary, N. C., Mr. Martin Lambert and Miss Mabel Glasgow were united in marriage by the writer. These young people are both from Littleton, N. C., R. F. D., and have many friends in their community who are wishing for them happiness and prosperity all through life.

—Mrs. Claude Burleson of Albemarle, is suffering from painful burns about her limbs and back, as a result of her clothing catching fire while standing near a stove in her home. Her mother, Mrs. D. F. Harkey. was also severely burned about the hands while trying to extnquish the flames. Mrs. Burleson is still confined to her bed and will be for some time. Mrs. Harkey is now improving. We hope and trust that their condition will continue favorable.

—Mrs. Marshall Hatley has been seriously ill at her home for several days, suffering from a complication of physical disorders. She is missed very much in the activities of the church.

—Chief Justice Taft has come to Asheville for a month's rest. It is no easy job to serve as a member of the United States Supreme Court.

—Effort is being made to improve scholarship in Asheboro schools. Improved scholarship is its own best reward, but certain other rewards and privileges are offered in the Asheboro schools.

—Chicken thieves are becoming so active as to suggest that they form an organized band. Couldn't chicken owners organize and provide some means of defense?

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Siler City Church.—Dr. Williams filled his appointment last Sunday. It seems that each sermon gets better, if it were possible.

On Monday night, the 23rd of December, we had an old-time Christmas tree for the children, but I really believe the grown-ups enjoyed it as much as the children. The tree was loaded with gifts and was beautiful. After a short exercise by the children and a talk by Dr. Williams, the tree was unburdened of its load. Each child in the smaller classes was presented with a treat from the Sunday school. We are having a good Sunday school with Mr. W. E. Sharpe, superintendent, and we feel sure with the cooperation of the church the school will flourish under his leadership.

Our mid-week prayer services are very interesting. Each week Dr. Williams gives us a talk on one of the "Miracles of Jesus." We are sorry that more of our members do not come out to hear these wonderful messages. There is so much being said in the pulpit and over the radio about people making and breaking New Year resolutions. I wish some or all of our church members would make a New Year resolution not to miss one single mid-week prayer service, then not dare to break it.

The chairman of the "Dollar a Member" campaign for High Point College reports one-third of the money collected. We hope to have this completed in a few weeks.

We saw Mr. Charlie Fox in our congregation last Sunday. We hope he may soon make up his mind to join with us as we need him; also Mr. and Mrs. Schoonmaker, of New York, worshiped with us two weeks ago. They spend a few weeks each year at the Chatham Inn with Mrs. D. L. Johnson and we are always glad to welcome them and all other visitors to our church.

Union Grove Church.—Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, preached a grand sermon Sunday morning. In the afternoon funeral services for Mrs. Serella Grogan, who died Friday night at Leaksville, N. C., and was brought to her father's, Mr. Wilk Jurney, and kept until Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. Rev. Grady White conducted the service. He had known Mrs. Grogan since childhood, and his father belonged at Union Grove many years. She joined the church at the age of 13 years and lived a devoted Christian life. Her mother, Mrs. Fannie Jurney, two sisters, Mrs. Evie Huie of Olin, N. C., Mrs. Swannie Jones, Bassett, one brother, Huston Jurney of Jennings and her husband, Mr. Robert Grogan of Leaksville, N. C., survive.

Her death was unexpected and came as a great shock. She had been sick but was thought to be better. The entire family has the sympathy of many friends.

Haw River Circuit.—We are still here, and we believe that all is well. It is true that we haven't written to the Herald in a year, but that doesn't mean that we are dead; for I believe that Haw River Circuit is very much alive.

The parsonage family is convinced that it as much alive as any other charge in the conference. We were reading a few weeks ago of how the Burlington church helped Brother and Sister Gerringer to celebrate their 13th anniversary, and since their celebration and ours is rather a coincidence, their gifts and ours were somewhat in common.

The week prior to our 13th anniversary which came on December 23rd, the Parsonage Aid Committee had a very beautiful living-room suit delivered at the parsonage. Then on December 27th this same committee of ladies had Brother Albert Troxler to deliver a new Cole's hot blast range to our kitchen. These recent additions to the parsonage furnishings were much needed, and are highly appreciatted by those who are honored in living in the parsonage of Haw River Circuit. In fact, these people are very zealous in doing good and nice things for their pastor. It is not one church, or one family that is doing these things, but the entire charge, and practically every family in some way has added to the comforts of our home during the 14 months of our stay here. And may the dear Father bless all who have had a part in any of these many kindnesses of the year.

We had hoped and planned for a pageant to be given at Christmas by the Brown Summit and Friendship churches and the people were ready to give it on Sunday night, December 22nd, but the weather was so very cold and disagreeable the folks could not get to the schoolhouse where we were to give the pageant, so we had to postpone it. All our churches were hindered by that snow and sleet storm, and will have to try again later in the spring.

We were fortunate to have Brother Lawrence Little with us on the fifth Sunday night in December to address an all-circuit rally for our young people. The weather was still bad, and the roads were almost bottomless in places, but there was a good congregation present for the meeting, which was held at the Brown Summit church. Every church on the circuit was represented, and all present enjoyed and were benefited by Brother Little's sermon.

We are now busy in our "Dollar a Member" campaign. We are hopeful, even though our farmer wolks are having to get little better than nothing for their tobacco crop. I am confident that if we do not raise our entire quota of more than $400 we will get an amount that will give us a good showing. Our people out here in the farming districts are just as willing and eager as our city brethren, but sometimes we can't bring things to pass just like Conference wants us to, but it isn't always our fault.

Congregations are good. The attitude of the people is one that encourages, and we believe that there is a good year's work ahead of us. We hope to have a great revival on the circuit this year, and to carry an honor roll report to Conference in November.

J. L. TROLLINGER, Pastor.

West Forsyth.—On the first Sunday we met our appointments at Baltihore and Stony Knoll churches, with usual attendance and interest. The Lord's Supper was observed at Baltimore church. The pastor enjoyed a visit and dinner at the splendid home of Mr. and Mrs. Arzie Doub, of the Baltimore church.

The appointments last Sunday were with Tabernacle and Union Hill churches. The recent change in appointments at these churhces was in effect for the first time and we believe there were larger congregations present at each service than formerly. Tabernacle now has the second Sunday morning at 11 o'clock and Union Hill's appointment is at three o'clock in the afternoon of the second Sunday, according to the new plan of appointments involving these two churches. The Lord's Supper was observed at Tabernacle last Sunday morning. Immediately after the church service the Sunday school was reorganized for the new year with the following officers: Mrs. J. W. Masoncup, superintendent; B. A. Long, assistant superintendent; C. R. Watts, secretary; Miss Ola Long, assistant secretary. Teachers were elected also. New literature has been received and the Sunday school will start work next Sunday morning.

A number of people of West Forsyth charge have been and are yet sick with a general illness known as influenza. Some are better and others have about recovered, while new cases are reported. Luther Smitherman, member of Baltimore church, has been in the Baptist Hospital at Winston-Salem for the past week or ten days, having undergone an operation for goitre. We trust all who are sick will recover speedily.

The pastor and family are thankful for a nice box of fresh meats and butter received from Mrs. S. M. Speas, of Stony Knoll church. We appreciate this gift. Other needful gifts have been received from Mrs. Ellis Long, Mrs. Pearson Sprinkle and Mrs. Mollie Long, for which we are thankful.

The "Dollar-Per-Member" effort for High Point College is being presented at each church on West Forsyth Charge. We are not able to give a report of the response to the appeeal, as it has not been presented to all of the churches yet. We believe, however, that the response will be fairly good.

Our appointment for next Sunday will be at Pleasant Hill church at 11o'clock. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Bellemont Church, Mt. Hermon Charge.—We were all delighted with the return of our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, for the fourth year. Every one welcomes him back. His work has been a success here, and we hope his work this year will be even more successful.

The 2nd Sunday in December Coble's Township Sunday School convention was held at our church. The President, Mrs. Hermon E. Coble, had a splendid program arranged. Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of High Point College, delivered a splendidi address at eleven o'clock. In the afternoon the principal speakers were Miss Essie Mae Catton, director of religious education at First Christian Church, Burlington, and Prof. S. A. Bennett, professor of religious education at Elon College. They spoke on various phases of Sunday school work. These addresses were good and enjoyed by all.

On Tuesday night, December 24th, our Christmas exercise was very ably rendered by the children of the Sunday school, under the direction of Misses Mamie Coble and Mamie Moser, which was well rendered and enjoyed by a full house.

A Christmas tree and treat was also a worthwhile part of the occasion.

Our Sunday school seems to be starting out with new interest this year, under the direction of our new Supt. Mr. Roy L. Sharpe. We had a large attendance Sunday—every teacher for the ten classes being present, and quite a number of new scholars, which was very pleasing to us all.

The Christian Endeavor Society of our church is doing a great work among the young people.

Our pastor filled his regular appointment Sunday night and delivered to us a good sermon as he always does.

We hope to have a good year this year, even better than 1929, if possible, and it was one of the best in the history of our church, but we are going to strive to do even more this year.

REPORTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—Our Christmas programs was given at Tabernacle church on the evening of December 24th. It was in the form of a pleasing cantata, and was in charge of the C. E. Society. Much credit is due the Society for working so faithfully arranging for this service. At the close of the service the beautiful Christmas tree was undressed and presents distributed to the people present, the pastor and wife receiving a number of useful gifts. But the real pounding came just before leaving for home, consisting of many things needed for the pantry. Since we can not furnish all the names of the donors we will not give any. Since the holidays the following have remembered us in a substantial way: Mr. and Mrs J. E. Hanner; Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Smith; Miss Lelia Kirkman, and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Garrett.

Julian church is not left out. Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hanner, and Miss Anna Harden, have remembered us time after time. All of these people from both churches have our sincere thanks. We shall continue to serve them to the very best of our ability.

One of our goals this year is to put the "Herald" into every home. Mrs. G. A. Garrett, Miss Ola Whitely, and Miss Lizzie Harden, have been appointed to assist the pastor in making the canvas.

Tabernacle church has a splendid choir under the direction of Bro. T. B. Reynolds. We were delighted to hear them broadcast over the radio on Wednesday night before Christmas.

Mrs. W. T. Hanner and Miss Anna Harden threated their Sunday school class in Julian on thee afternoon of December 24th.

H. L. ISLEY.

South Winston Circuit.—Brethren pray for me and those committed to my care. I feel more and more the need of the guiding hand of our Christ. I feel such a trmendous responsibility in trying to preach the Gospel of God. I realize it is the power of God unto Salvation to every one that believeth, and it seems there are so few believing to the saving of their souls.

I stop and wonder why it is that no more come to Jesus. I look on the highways and I see so many going to and fro seeking rest and peace. And not finding any. We sing that old familiar song:

Oh! for a closer walk with God, a calm and Heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road, that leads me to the Lamb.
Where is the Blessedness I knew when first
I saw the Lord.
Where is the soul's refreshing view of Jesus and His Word.
(And the other verses)

I think our work is moving on very well considering the circumstances.

The spiritual condition we think is on the upward move we feel encouraged along that line, we are hoping for a great ing ahering of souls this conference year. And looking to Jesus for our reward.

As we go on down the path of life we pray this prayer:

O for a faith that will not shrink,
Though pressed by ev'ry foe.
That will not tremble on the brink
Of any earthly woe.
That will not murmur or complain,
Beneath the chastening rod.
But in the hours of grief or pain,
Will lean upon its God.
A faith that shines more bright and clear,
When tempests rage without
That when in danger knows no fear
In darkness feels no doubt.
Lord give us such a faith as this,
And then what ere may come
We'll taste e'en here the hallowed bliss,
Of that eternal home.

We commemorated the Lord's Supper at Union Grove Jan. 5, about 20 or 25 partook.

Jan. 12, at Oak Grove 23 communed, several from neighboring churches were out at 11 o'clock. We made several visits in the afternoon in sick homes, read and had prayer: they seemed to enjoy the visits.

Our South Side church is doing fine; the Sunday school started off fine Jan. 5, there were 85 present.

The young people's class which is being taught by Bro. John Rick, call themselves loyal sons and daughters, had 24 or 25 present Jan. 5.

The Ladies' Aid is doing some kood work; they turned $100.00 over to the Building fund at their first meeting in the new year.

We are looking forward with glad anticipation and good hope that it will not be so long before we may be able to begin to dig out our foundation, and start a structure of our own.

We are asking that every one that reads will lift your hearts to Jesus, that we may have the faith described above in the song.

Then say gather, if I can spare 1.00—2.00—5.00—25.00 or 50.00 dollars please let it come our way. He will bless you in many ways.

Christmas was a happy time so many were mindful of our needs. For which we praise the dear Father. And ask his richest blessings upon them.

Humbly your unworthy servant,

P. L. KINNAMAN.

P.S.—I havn't done much in the financial way yet, but still trusting all will come along all right.

Roberta Station.—We had a fine attendance and collection Sunday for the weather to be cold. There were 183 present for Sunday school and something over $18.00 collection. Rev. Robt. Short delivered a fine sermon at the preaching hour. Every one present enjoyed it very much.

Immediately after preaching Sunday, pastor Short organized a teachers training class. We have ten members to start on, but we hope to have more in the future. We want our class to grow in grace and number.

MISS ELMA MILLER, Reporter.

Lineberry Church.—The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. J. P. Elliot for their monthly meeting Jan. 11.

Owing to the absence of our president, Mrs. Walter Lax, Mrs. W. A. Frank, vice-pres., called the meeting to order, with song.

Devotional by Mrs. Marshal Skeen, nine members answered to the roll call.

Money was taken out of the treasury to buy the quilt lining for a top which members of the Aid have just completed for Ava Lax. Mrs. John Delk will quilt and fix it ready for use.

Total amount of money left in the treasury $11.30. After the regular routine of business was transacted new officers were elected for the following year. After which a social contest was enjoyed. Mrs. E. D. Lanier was fortunate to win the prize.

Most delicious refrshments were served which were enjoyed very much by all present.

The Aid adjourned to meet with Mrs. Thomas Hall, Feb. 8, 1930.

REPORTER.

Why Not.—Four Christmas services were held on the charge and were well attended. The occupants of the parsonage were remembered in a generous way. Among numerous other things received New Hope gave the writer an excellent pair of shoes, and Seagrove gave a nice shirt. A Mr. Rissy of Fairgrove community donated a big load of wood.

The attendance at Lovejoy and Macedonia yesterday was encouraging. Lovejoy is the furthest point on the charge, but is easily reached within an hour when roads are dry.

At Seagrove our next appointment, and at Lovejoy in February, an opportunity will be given for the reception of new members.

On yesterday Lovejoy raised $14.50 cash, and Macedonia $4.00. Pledges for later payment on "Dollar-Per-Member" were made at each church.

Wm. H. NEESE.

Macedonia, Why Not Circuit.—Pastor Neese yesterday preached a most excellent sermon. We all like Bro. Neese, he is a man that believes in preaching the Bible, and that's what we need. Our church seems to be taking on new life. Our church has set a goal, to pay every cent of every claim. We are going to look forward to that end. Our members seem to be coming up nicely with the finance on the preacher's salary. Our Sunday school is progressing nicely.

We are looking forward, hoping and praying for the greatest year yet.

Man many souls gather in the Kingdom of God on this circuit this year.

Yours in His service,

JEWELL FURR, Reporter.

Kannapolis.—Our church is moving forward. We are very much encouraged with the increase in attendance for the past five weeks. Our Sunday school has increased from fifty-one to seventy-one. This is near the high-water mark. The highest attendance on record is seventy-eight. The church attendance is good also. On last Sunday we had seventy-one for Sunday school and seventy-three for church. We have worked out a plan and put into operation a Sunday school contest ending quarterly. A prize is to be awarded the scholar having the greatest number of points. These points are based on regular attendance, bringing new members, best conduct, and remaining for church services. We worked this out with the fact in mind that the way to increase the church membership is largely through the Sunday school. The members in general are apparently optimistic for the future of our church. Due largely to a more economic arrangements for the running expenses of the church and other phases of the work seems more favorable. Our Ladies' Aid Society held its monthly meeting at the parsonage on last Monday night, Jan 6, with good attendance. New officers elected for the year are as follows: Mrs. N. F. Harris, pres; Mrs. C. B. Price, vice-pres.; Mrs. J. L. Love, Sec'y-treas.; Mrs. C. B. McCommons, assistant sec'y-treas.

Our society is planning an oyster supper and bazaar in two weeks, Sat., the twenty-sixth. The funds will be used for the benefit of the church.

REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—The report of the Sunday school for Sunday, January 5th, is as follows: Attendance, 342; offering, $21.80.

At the Sunday morning service Rev. R. I. Farmer spoke on the text from Philippians 3:13-14, "But this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before. I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." He said in part: "Everybody admires the fellow who comes out second in the race. There are three classes of people in the world; one kind is driven by sheer necessity to toil and labor; another is the "eat, drink, and be merry" type with no thought of duty or responsibility; while still another type is those who have idealism and try to do something for others. I am setting up for us today a high standard, a one-purpose life. You have brushed aside many things that you would like to do. A good mechanic has laid aside a thousand things that he could have done in order to fit himself for his profession; comradeship with loved ones has been set aside for that chosen career. Our problem is this, are our aims in life and the tasks that we have chosen in obedience to the will of God? As a congregation there are many things that we must forget, words of scandal and gossip, bitter words of scorn and distrust. What is the matter with the world about us? It takes a divine idealism, courage, strength, and mettle to resist temptation, and to live up to high standards of a unified life. Will you then in this new year, this new lease of life, make the high calling of your election sure?"

Funeral services for Mr. W. H. Setliff, aged 63, who died Sunday at noon at his home following an illness of six months, were held in First church Monday at 2 o'clock, p. m., being conducted by Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by Rev. E. L. Ballard. His wife is a member of First church. He was born in Rockingham County, N. C., October 15, 1866, the son of J. J. and Nancy Wall Setliff, and was married in 1894. Surviving relatives are his widow, two sons, W. D. and D. R. Setliff, two daughters, Mrs. P. R. Dixon and Miss Nannie Setliff, all of this city, and two sisters, Mrs. E. M. Harville, High Point, and Mrs. P. D. Young, Leaksville.

A delightful meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held at the home of the president, Mrs. S. S. Coe, in Emerywood Monday afternoon with an attendance of 40 members present. Mrs. J. C. Whitesell presided, and Mrs. Richard H. Shaw had charge of the program and conducted devotionals. The Auxiliary voted to send $100 for a Pine Ridge scholarship. All members who can do so were asked to contribute shrubbery for the parsonage grounds. The date of the spring flower show was set for May. A motion to serve a meal for Wesley Memorial M. E. Young People's Meeting in April was carried. After the business session, Mrs. Coe served delicious refreshments. Among the visitors were Mrs. M. D. Stout and Mrs. H. M. Varner, of Greensboro, Mrs. W. G. Fogo, Mrs. McPherson, of Burlington, and Mrs. Baldwin.

Church Fellowship Night will be tried out for the first time Wednesday evening, January 15th, and we are hoping to have one hundred in attendance. The program will be carried out as follows: 6 o'clock, visiting hour; 6:45, supper, 7:20, old-fashioned sing, 7:30, devotional services to continue one-half hour, and at 8 o'clock Workers' Council, choir practice, and board of stewards meeting. Every family is asked to bring a covered dish and Mrs. P. S. Kennett's Circle No. 6 will serve a dessert. A free-will offering will be taken to defray expenses.

Station WNRC, Greensboro, will broadcast a program from First church Wednesday at 11 p. m., and will be under the direction of Prof. Ernest B. Stimson.

Hosts of friends will regret to learn that Mrs. E. L. Ballard is in High Point Hospital, where she underwent a serious operation last Tuesday. The entire congregation unites in sympathy and best wishes for her early recovery. Mrs. Ballard is an ideal pastor's wife, and is greatly beloved by the entire membership.

Mrs. W. G. Fogo, of Steubenville, Ohio, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. R. I. Farmer.

Mr. Earl Teague, of Durham, was the week-end guest of his brother, Lester B. Teague.

Mr. Garland McPherson, who is a senior at State University, spent the week-end with his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McPherson, on Woodrow Avenue.

Mrs. John S. Pickett is expected to arrive at home today from a visit to her sister-in-law, Mrs. Herman Meredith, at Tampa, Fla.

Mangum Hartsell, who spent the Christmas holidays with his mother, Mrs. Minnie P. Harrell, has returned to State College, Raleigh, to resume his work as a student.

Mrs. J. C. Whitesell has returned from a visit of several days to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Moffitt, of Ramseur.

Miss Willie Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Davis, has returned to her studies at N. C. College for Women, and Robert Davis, to the State University.

Mt. Carmel Church.—The Sunday school of 1930 has been organized and the various officers and teachers have taken their places in the work in the church.

For several months we have looked forward to see a new church placed on the yard of Mount Carmel church. This has not yet been done, but we are still waiting with joyful anticipation to see a new and modern building take the place of the one we now occupy.

We ask for help in our missionary society that we may have better and more loyal service for the cause of missions.

Many a time we have seen willing children helping in spirit to lighten the load for father and mother and let us help in spirit to lighten the burden of others so the way will be less difficult.

BEAUTUS WAITMAN, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—Our anniversary celebration was a most enjoyable and helpful coming together, and was well attended throughout the whole program. Attendance at Sunday school only lacking eight of totaling the number on roll. This goal we have set of bringing the attendance up to the number on roll is going to be worked for until it is reached, and then we will set the goal higher.

Special music at the 11 o'clock hour was much enjoyed by all present. The choir sang an anthem in so beautiful a manner as to surprise all who knew how little time they had had for practice. Miss Mary Ruth Huffman, of Greensboro College, sang two numbers for us, one at 11 o'clock service and one in the afternoon service which was conducted by our president, Bro. Taylor. The bountiful and delicious luncheon served in the church dining room at 12:30 was a pleasing feature of the day. Practically all our membership was present, and visitors from other churches in town and a few from out of town. At the afternoon hour we had visitors from many of the other churches here and some from our own denomination from High Point, Shiloh and South Lexington. Many expressions of appreciation were heard for the splendid preaching and for the music rendered by our own choir and especially for the beautiful singing by Miss Huffman. We feel much indebted to her and extend to her a most urgent invitation to be with us any time she can. Bro. Hendry was at one time her pastor and Bro. N. G. Bethea is her pastor now, so she seems one of us.

At the regular preaching hour of the evening, 7 o'clock, we were inspired and delighted by the fine singing of the Crescent Quartet. Our pastor's address at this hour was one of the most helpful and challenging he has given us. We had a large number of visitors at this service and were so glad to welcome them.

All branches of the work are going forward pleasingly. One thing in particular we are most grateful for is the fact that not one has been taken from our membership by death since our organization.

REPORTER.

Seagrove.—We are few here, but are still on the job. On Tuesday night, December 24, we had a Christmas tree and a short program by the children; also a short talk by our pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese. The weather was very rough, but we had a good crowd and all seemed to enjoy it, especially the children, for Santa Claus made his appearance and helped distribute the presents and gave the children candy.

Owing to the snowy weather last fourth Sunday we had no preaching, but there being five Sundays in December enabled our pastor to preach for us the fifth Sunday afternoon. Bro. Neese preached a good sermon. We are glad indeed to have Bro. Neese and his wife and daughter living her among us. They seem more like they belong to us by living her and we believe much good will result by their being here.

A number of the ladies met at the parsonage Monday night, January 13th, and with the help of the pastor organized a Ladies' Aid Society. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Nettie Allen, president; Mrs. C. E. King, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. W. H. Neese, vice-president.

Our Sunday school is progressing nicely under the efficient management of Mr. C. E. Stuart as superintendent. Mr. S. G. Richardson has been a faithful secretary for awhile but resigned last Sunday and Miss Euna Walker was appointed in his place.

Gideon Grove, Flat Rock Circuit.—Rev. J. D. Cranford exchanged pulpits with our pastor Sunday at 11 o'clock ,at which time he brought an inspiring sermon to the congregation. He also presented the "Dollar a Member" drive for High Point College.

The Sunday school is in session each Sunday, and the attendance very good for a rural community during the winter months. The Sunday school had a Christmas tree and program on Christmas Eve. A treat of a hundred bags was given away. It was an enjoyable time for the children, and an inspiration to the older people. The Ladies' Auxiliary of the church served an oyster supper at Stokesdale before Christmas, for which they realized a nice little sum. They hope to do other things, and be able to help the church in some needed way. We are very glad to note that one of our members, Mrs. S. G. Lemons, who has been seriously ill, is very much improved.

As has already been expressed, we are very glad our pastor, Rev. Paul Pegg, is working with us again this year. We appreciate very much the work he and Mrs. Pegg are doing in our church.

Whitakers.—The work here is moving quietly but steadily. All organizations are functioning regularly.

The Ladies' Aid and the Missionary Society have merged. The new organization, according to the plan adopted by the last General Conference, is carrying the obligations of both the Ladies' Aid and the Missionary Society. One set of officers, one fund. But the money collected is distributed to the same interests and in similar amounts as when two organizations were functioning. One feature, however, of the new General Conference plan has not been realized, namely, that all the women of the church are automatically active members of the new organization. If some Auxiliary that has reached this happy stage will tell us how, it will be thankfully received.

The Junior, Intermediate, and Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies held recently a joint promotional exercise, promoting members from the Junior to the Intermediate and from the Intermediate to the Young People's. Some of us cringed for the societies losing members, but it seems to have quickened interest all along the line. There are now more young lives being developed and the development is more rapid because of the quickened interest.

We have received the literature for Young People's Day and are preparing to observe it.

The financial situation in this eastern section is testing sorely the faith and courage of church people generally, ours included. But church people possess a type of faith and of courage that does not fail.

It will pay any reader when out driving to drive somefhat out of his way to come through Whitakers to see the prettiest parsonage lawn in the whole Conference district —the beautiful, tender, fresh green of spring or summer. And on this lawn a gem of a parsonage not second in beauty within or without to any in the entire Conference district.

Our hearts are saddened by the continued illness of Mrs. Mary Outerbridge, one of our faithful members.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We are sorry to say that bad weather and roads prevented any services here on December 22. The young people had planned a Christmas program for that night.

Sunday, January 12, being our regular preaching day, Rev. J. C. Russell brought us two very interesting sermons. If the people of Liberty Hill would heed, we will be a better people and church.

We are asking all who are interested in us to pray that this may be so.

Gibsonville Church.—New interest is being manifested among the various organizations of the church.

The officers of the Sunday school have been elected and are functioning well. Our Sunday school is on the increase in numbers. We hope to reach the two hundred mark within a few Sundays.

The Young Ladies' Bible class held its regular monthly meeting last Friday evening with the Miss Fausetts. The president, Miss Clara Faucett, conducted the devotionals and presided during a short business session. At this time the following members were elected officers for the new year: President, Orpha Burgess; vice-president, Lois Faucett; Hazel Woodard, secretary; Estelle Allen, assistant secretary, and Okla May, treasurer. The committee will be appointed next Sunday morning.

We have a real live bunch of boys and girls in the Intermediate Christian Endeavor. They have elected their officers for the new year and are having some interesting programs. For Sunday, January 5th, each member was asked to come prepared to state one specific purpose that he would like for the society to have and try to accomplish during the new year. Several purposes were stated and each one expressed a desire for the society to do a bigger and better work this year than last year.

The Woman's Missionary Society will meet at the church hut Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock.

LAW TO PROTECT SCHOOL CHILDREN

"Before passing or attempting to pass a public school bus while it is standing upon any public road and taking on or putting off school children, the operator of the passing vehicle must bring it to a full stop at least 50 feet from the bus." The responsibility, however, does not all rest upon the driver of the passing vehicle, for section 3 of this rule states, "Every school truck, and every passenger bus, is required to come to a complete stop at every railroad crossing, whether designated as a 'full stop' crossing or not."

PARTNER TO GOD

I

I had an idea God was not much good
Away off yonder out of sight . . .
I thought He might
—And probably He would—
Come close to me if I were as polite
To Him as I am used to be
To great, good, but mere—men . . .

II

And then
(I am a busy man, I have to be to make Ends meet) I thought to take Him into partnership with me . . .

III

But He would not accept the proposition; He
Said, "I'll do better by you: I
Will take you into partnership with me.."
And why,
I found out later!

IV

We agreed
That He should then supply the need
Of capital and all the system by
Which busineses are run successfully, indeed,
He also gave the strength to do
The work; . . . yet He, He who
Was to invest so much
Insisted that He must
Be but a Silent Partner in the firm.

V

Then just
As I was painting, plain and slow,
The name upon the sign to go
Over the door where God and I
Were to do business, He—forever nigh—
Said earnestly and positively: "No!"
Write not your name alone,
Not just your own,
My name must be upon that sign for all the world to see—
Though silent I may hold my interest—
It must be carried on now in the best
Fine way—and 'in My name!'"

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

OUR FRIENDS ARE PASSING ON

In 1929 seven of our friends passed into the beyond. First our own dear sister of Burlington, N. C., was called to leave us. Her passing was very keenly felt by us as she was older than we and we had gone to her many times while in our boyhood days for advice and she never told us wrong.

Second was our friend, Brother Paul Vincent, who was called to go almost suddenly. We miss his friendship and kindly acts toward us.

Third was Mrs. Lou Green, who was getting old, yet we valued her friendship most highly and we miss her.

Fourth, was Mrs. M. S. Hamil who was very feeble and old but was a true friend.

Brother Vincent, Mrs. Green and Mrs. Hamil were all members of Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Charge.

Fifth was Brother John Morris, of Corinth Church, Littleton Charge. He, too, was our friend. We were pastor of Littleton Charge for six years and we learned to love these dear people, and we miss them since they are gone.

Sixth was the passing of Mrs. E. L. Hayes, of Randleman Charge, where we spent six years as pastor. Her going was unexpected as we did not know of her illness.

We missed her face when we were at New Salem Church on last Conference Sunday.

Seventh was the going of Brother Hunter Satterwhite, Vance Charge. We laid his body to rest last Friday, December 6th. We were pastor for only ten months of last conference year, but we had learned to value him as one of our best friends. We would soon have more friends in heaven than on earth if we could not make new friends while we live. How good it is to be able to make new friends while old friends are passing on. How blest the man who can so live that some sweet day he can join the friends who have gone before.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Huff

Lewis Walter Huff departed this life December 13, 1929. Mr. Huff had been in declining health for some time, but no one knew that the end was so near, but on Friday morning December 13, he passed almost suddenly into the world of spirits. He was a member of Union Chapel Church where he had lived a faithful, consistent Christian life for many years, and it is said of him that he was faithful to attend his church as long as he was able to attend.

He was a very popular man in his community, and was loved by those who knew him, and a very large crowd of friends and relatives attended his funeral service.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, pastor of the church at Henderson, and Rev. Mr. Pittman, pastor of the M. E. Church at Kittrell. The Woodmen of the World of which he was a member had their service at the grave which was very impressive. After which he was laid to rest in the cemetery beneath a large mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

The deceased is survived by his wife, and eleven children, as follows: Dr. J. M. Huff, of Philadelphia, Pa., Clifton Huff, of Canada, Mrs. Lillian Bivens, Mrs. T. R. Smith, Lewis, Eugene, Dalton, Rupert, and Misses Lois, Eunice and Hilda Huff of Vance County.

C. L. SPENCER, Pastor.

Howard

On December 11, 1929, as the evening shadows was covering the earth, Mrs. Malinda Lowder Howard, passed over to meet Jesus on the other shore. Age 84 years and 10 days.

On May 22, 1870, she was united in marriage to Isaac C. Howard. To this union were born three children.

The husband and two children preceded her to the home beyond. She professed faith in Christ and joined Friendship Methodist Protestant Church in her early girlhood where she remained faithful to the end. Although her being so feeble in her last days kept her away from service in person, her mind and prayers were with us. She loved her church and pastor. Often when I visited her I found her reading her Bible, and she would say to me I will soon be at rest. At the last attack she made the remark that it was a call for her to go home, and there was nothing in the way. She leaves one son, W. H. Howard, at home, 20 grandchildren, 21 great grandchildren, one brother, Mr. Monroe Lowder, of Finger; one sister Mrs. Maryann Moose of Albemarle, and a host of friends and relatives to mourn her departure

May they be submissive to the will of God, and say he gave her to us, and has taken her away, blessed be His name.

On December 12 her funeral was held in Friendship Church, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. H. Green, of Salem M. E. Church, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery beneath a bank of lovely flowers.

C. H. HILL.

Capehart

During the night of October 9 the soul of Mrs. F. M. Capehart left this earth for its eternal reward. She was a good, upright Christian and those who have loved her long since and have lost her for awhile should not weep as those who have no hope. Her soul made its departure during the dark hours of the night and we have reason to believe that now her soul dwells in that city in which no night cometh, for we believe that she has been ushered into the land of eternal day.

For more than forty years Mrs. Capehart was a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. However, she was not a member of the Asheville Methodist Protestant Church but fifteen years, having moved her membership here in 1914. She lived to the ripe old age of eighty years, eleven months, and six days.

One of the most impressive things about her life was her cheerful disposition. She had her problems; trying experiences; heavy responsibilities; but she always manifested a cheerful, hopeful spirit. She seemed to live so close to Christ that she was lifted above the perplexing things of life. She seemed to rejoice in the love of Christ and to possess the peace of God which passeth all understanding.

Mrs. Capehart is survived by one brother; six children; twenty grandchildren; fifteen great grandchildren; and one great-great grand child. Her body was buried beside the grave of her husband in the Flat Creek Baptist cemetery near Weaverville.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. S. Williams.

May the God of all grace and comfort abundantly bless and comfort the bereaved ones.

Kimball

Bartholomew Richard Kimball died December 2, 1929, age 77 years, 20 days. He was married twice. To the first union one son was born and to the latter three sons were born. Three of the sons, W. G., B. R., Jr., and C. N. Kimball, reside in Enfield. The other son, A. F. Kimball, has made his residence in Shanghai, China, for a number of years, and was of course unable to attend his father's funeral. Brother Kimball was a faithful and loyal member of the Enfield Methodist Protestant Church. When he was able he rarely missed a service. He was always mindful of his pastor and his family, in reality it can be said that he verily lived his last years in endeavoring to serve others. His goodness and congenial spirit made a lasting impresion on all with whom he came in contact. His strength of character won for him a high place in the hearts of the people of Enfield and we believe won for him an eternal abode in the Great Beyond on the right hand of the King of kings.

He spent his latter years with Miss Margaret Quency, his sister's youngest daughter. He had lived with his sister since the death of her husband and the death of his latter wife for upwards of thirty years. At her death he continued to live with her daughter.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. H. B. Anderson, the pastor of the Baptist Church, and his body was laid to rest in the Maplewood cemetery.

Mr. Isley was born June 10, 1843, and deceased at the age of 86 years, six months, and 26 days. He had been in failing health for about a month. For some time he had been confined to his bed, spending two weeks in the hospital.

having joined that organization while it was yet very young. He held several important offices in the local church and was reputed by many as being "Mount Hermon's best steward." Even in his old age, within a few months previous to his death, he contributed liberally to the construction of the Sunday school rooms.

During the entire Civil War he was actively engaged except for a short period while wounded. He was a member of Company F., 53 Regiment, Daniel's Brigade, Rhodes Division of the North Carolina troops. In 1863, he received a severe wound at Gettysburg, a minie ball passed through both shoulders. In this time of suffering, after crude medical aid was given, an oak tree was his hospital, the ground his sick-bed, and the great God of the blue sky his Physician. The Providence of his recovery ever remained with him.

Mr. Isley is survived by one brother, Mr. T. T. Isley, Greensboro; one daughter, Mrs. Ben Williams, R. 1, Graham; two sons, Milton and W. Micheal Isley, R. 3, Snow Camp, His wife preceded him from this life about two years ago.

Funeral services for Mr. Isley were conducted from Mt. Hermon Church, Jan., 7, at 2:00 o'clock. Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, assisted by Rev. George W. Holmes, conducted the service. Interment followed in the local cemetery.

Hardy

On December 19th, 1929, the spirit of our beloved aunt, Mrs. Sarah Lee Hardy, took its flight. She was 79 years, one month and 15 days old. She was a loyal and faithful member of Hollister M. P. church. She loved her church and was always present at services as long as her health would permit. She lived a beautiful and useful Christian life. Her ideal was to "live in the house by the side of the road and be a friend to man." She was a friend to all, and especially to those less fortunate than herself, and was always ready and willing to lend a helping hand. Although physically unable at times to visit her friends many a sick room has been brightened by her presence. She had been suffering with heart trouble for some time, but was confined to her bed only a few days.

On October 26th, 1872, she was united in matrimony to John H. Hardy. To this union were born nine children. Her husband preceded her to the glory world 11 years.

A large circle of friends were grieved at her death. She will be missed in her home, her church and her community, but our loss is her gain. The funeral was conducted by Rev. Mr. Miller, of the Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Fogleman, and her body was laid to rest at the old family cemetery beside her husband to await the resurrection. The floral offerings were beautiful.

The bereaved family has our deepest sympathy.

"They have lost their darling mother,
She has bid us all adieu,
She has gone to live in heaven,
And her form is lost to view,
Oh, that dear one, how we loved her,
Oh, how hard to give her up!
But an angel came down for her
And removed her from our flock."

Morgan and Pugh

Since the close of Conference Bethel church has lost by death two of its aged and best members. Mrs. George Morgan was suddenly called home a few days ago. The funeral was conducted in the home by the writer, assisted by the pastor of the Presbyterian church of Graham, and her body was laid to rest in Moore's Chapel cemetery.

A few days later Mrs. Pugh, the mother of James Pugh, of Center church, and William Pugh, of Sapling Ridge church, was called to her heavenly home. The funeral was conducted by the writer in Center church, assisted by Rev. Talton Whitehead, pastor of Saxapahaw charge, and Bro. Ed Harris, of the Friends church. The body was laid to rest in Center cemetery. These servants of God have left many friends here and have gone to join the heavenly host over yonder. The influence of their lives remains to bless us while their presence has passed over the river to make heaven richer.

WILL ROGERS REMARKS

(To the Editor of the "Times," October 7.)

Everybody is talking about the fine prospects of a world peace from this trip of Mr. MacDonald, and already it has tremendous effects. But after it's all forgotten and a couple of different men in both countries are in these high positions with many different ideas, why the lasting impression of Premier MacDonald's trip will be the same effect that daughter of his has had on these girl cigarette ads, lip shellac and nose kalsomining of ours over here. Miss MacDonald has been so busy all her life learning how to be agreeable and wholesome that she hasn't had time to worry about how she looks, and as a consequence she looks lovely.

Yesterday—Today—Tomorrow

All yesterday we wrote a book
And every leaf was foul or fair.
It may be little pains we took
In shaping what we entered there.

Today that book's securely sealed.
Its records now cannot be changed.
'Twill wait till secrets are revealed
When men for judgment stand arranged.

Tomorrow's book is still all white
And blank may be through all the ages;
For who can tell that he will write
A single word on all its pages?

The book of books for you and me
Is that great book we write today:
How careful should we be to see
It says just what it ought to say!

How to Fold a Letter

This may not seem a fit subject for editorial comment, but it is of some importance to us. We receive many letters that give us unnecessary trouble because they were improperly folded. Some contributors write on a sheet about an inch wider than the envelope is long. Then they turn up a fold about half an inch on each side of the sheet so that when they fold in the right-angle direction the letter will just fill the envelope. Others err in other ways. Please give up the thought that the letter must just fill the envelope.

If your sheet is narrower than the envelope is long, two parallel folds or maybe one fold will suffice except in the case of very long sheets. In that case more parallel folds will answer.

If your sheet is wider than your envelope is long, turn up the bottom of the sheet and fold in the middle if your sheet is of any standard length. Then fold one or two folds across the first fold and your letter will be ready to slip into the envelope.

The point is to mail your letter in such shape that it will not have to be subjected to a smoothing iron to make it readable.

A History-Making Week

This week the five greatest naval powers of the world meet in London to discuss the reduction of armaments. The fact of such a meeting indicates that the spirit of peace is gaining over the spirit of war. The nations are trying to learn how they may live at peace. Great things making for the world's betterment may come out of this conference. Surely it will be so if the men gathered there yield to the guiding of the Spirit of the Prince of Peace.

Fighting Narcotics

It is surprising how many kinds of villains there are to contend against in this world. But among the most villainous of all these villains are those who entice boys and girls to begin the use of destructive narcotics. Our boys and girls are not safe against them anywhere. They do their work so quietly and secretly that parents know nothing about it until the injury is done. They distribute free samples and thus excite a taste for the poison. Every new addict is another patron for their trade. It might surprise you to learn how numerous are these dope dealers. In a recent check-up in a federal penitentiary there were found to be 896 drug peddlers to 56 bootleggers. The whole country is invaded with them. You need not flatter yourself that your part of the world is free from them or that your children are not subject to the danger. Children should be instructed to beware of candies or other articles given them by strangers.

So formidable has this evil become that a world conference has been organized against it. The evil is international, world-wide in scope. The governments of the nations have tried to restrict the production of opium, the base of many dopes, to medical needs, but legal restrictions are disregarded, and the quantity produced supplies the trade in dopes. The committees of the World Conference will have a meeting in New York, February 20 and 21. February 21 to 28 has been designated as Narcotic Education Week. All citizens, schools, churches, organizations are asked to aid in making this week specially impressive in its teaching of the nature and effect of narcotics.

The following paragraphs were written by one familiar with the awful effects of drug addiction:

"When the drug begins to subside, a condition of torture sets in. Pains often succeed each other as though a sword were being thrust through the body. In advanced cases this suffering (called 'withdrawal symptoms') is considered the most acute torture ever endured by man. The drug of addiction will quickly relieve this torture. Naturally, the addict comes to consider getting his supply of the drug as a matter of life and death.

"The mental suffering and anguish endured are commensurate with the physical sufferings. The fear of not being able to get the drug supply is perpetual, and the thought of the torture of 'withdrawal symptoms' brings abject submission to a pitiless master. The sympathies of mankind have always been aroused for the sufferings of slaves in the days of the slave trade. Their bondage was easy and light compared to the 'Living Death' of drug addicts. It would be hard for any normal person to appreciate the anguish of mind and of soul that comes to an addict as he gradually realizes his helplessness and sees his own elements of character, his own morals, his own principles disintegrate, and beholds the sufferings of his family and friends and the scorn and hate of Society as it

PRACTICAL POINTS ON PUBLICITY

By William T. Ellis

There is one wonderful way whereby every Christian may extend his influence immeasurably, and count for all the things which make for righteousness in the world.

That way is to co-operate with the press in Christian Publicity.

This is not a plan for experts. It is work for the average church member. What this article suggests is practicable for everybody everywhere.

The aim of Christian Publicity is to co-operate with the press in securing adequate, intelligent and sympathetic presentation of the real news, local and general, of the Church.

There should be no effort to circulate anything for which there is not real warrant as honest news. The activities of the Church are great enough, and diversified enough, and inherently interesting enough, to stand on their own feet as news.

Christian Publicity is not a scheme for "working" the press. It is a sincere and open endeavor to co-operate with periodicals of all kinds.

What Is News?

Whatever is new and important is news.

New forms of service, new workers, new organizations, new buildings, new members, new gifts,—and the unclassified and unpredictable,—these are church news.

Whatever in a church touches the life of a considerable number of persons is news. Thus, all civic, state, denominational, or inter-denominational organizations are a prolific source of news.

Routine announcements—as that the regular services are to be held, and the regular minister is to preach—are not news. They are advertisements, and preferably to be inserted as such. The filling of newspaper columns with these "notices," as typical of church news, has given the world an inadequate and misleading impression of the Church's mission and activities.

The congregation's work is a more prolific source of publicity than the pastor's words.

"Human interest" items—concerning veterans in service, unusual forms of endeavor, and work in jails, almshouses, hospitals, etc.—are a good sort of news.

Special church days always afford opportunity for publicity.

Every new missionary who appears in a community affords "copy" for at least one article.

Kingdom news is good news; and often better worth printing than local items. Every congregation is a branch agency of a world-wide work; and there is a sound warrant for printing locally the great news about world-wide missions.

This sort of news, in the form of incidents, statistics and important generalizations, may be obtained from the missionary magazines and from the missionary boards. It may also be secured by newspapers from various syndicates.

But only local persons can get it into local papers.

Good publicity also insures editorial comment upon religious news and tendencies. It helps give Christianity its place in the eyes of the world.

What to Do With News

Every congregation should have a publicity committee, preferably one layman or young woman.

The Young People's Society or the Adult Bible Class could profitably take on this service. The local church advertising should also be handled by this committee. Publicity work answers the common question of Bible classes for "something to do."

These committees should co-operate with, or consolidate as, a community Publicity Committee of laymen, for the city, town, or county. Such a committee should have charge of financing and preparing any general advertising project undertaken by the united churches.

Have a definite understanding with the local editors as to what they desire. They will be found ready for any fair co-operation.

Furnish typewritten copy.

Treat all the newspapers in the community alike.

Beware of personal puffery or self-advertisement.

Give the editor advance information of news.

Help him get pictures when possible.

Keep news brief.

The success of publicity is not measured by the length of the articles printed, but by the impression upon the readers. Better four small items than one long one.

The occasional person can write religious news for the great magazines.

Having done all—keep on doing it. The grace of continuance is a fundamental virtue in publicity work.

About Religious Advertising

The day of the Church's mendicancy is at its sunset.

Christianity is no longer asking favors of the press. It is good naturedly requiring its rights.

Whatever is the business of the Church to say to the public, it pays for, business-fashion, just as it pays for the sign at the church door.

Announcements of the place, time and character of meetings are the business end of the church. These belong in the advertising columns; reports of what a church has actually done belong in the news column, as a matter of right, and not of courtesy.

The concerted invitation of all the churches of a community to all the people should be printed as disply advertisements, and paid for. That is the new way (and the only way) of reaching all the men and women who do not attend church. When the church pays for printing her plea to the people she gives clear proof of the sincerity of her interest in them.

Wherever the churches regularly advertise, it is easiest to secure sympathetic publicity on a large scale for all classes of church news.

The Religious Press

Every Christian family should subscribe for a religious paper. The importance of this is stressed. Such a publication is really necessary for the dissemination of the news of the denomination, and of the church the world round, and for inspiration to Christian living.

The promotion of the circulation of Christian literature is a far-reaching and proper service for publicity workers.

Real news and helpful methods should be sent regularly to the church papers.

Hospitals, jails, asylums, etc., should be kept supplied with religious literature.

Writing to the Editor

Investigation has shown that editors of many daily newspapers are really troubled by lack of co-operation on the part of church people. As a rule, they do not hear from them—except when they ask for something.

Every newspaper reader can be of service to the public and to the church by telling his editor what he thinks of the way his paper handles religious subjects.

Many a newspaper has dropped its religious features simply because it has never received a word of interest in them from readers.

Is a newspaper doing well by the Church? Say so.

Is it not doing well? Say so, with particulars.

If the church news is too petty and local, too one-sided, too neglectful of big kingdom movements, say so.

If you would like special religious features, like a Sunday School lesson, a missionary or social service department, a Bible study column, a young people's feature, a weekly sermon,—say so.

The editor must run his own paper, but he will prize the counsel of every fair-minded reader. Many editors fail to print religious matter, simply because they have never heard any demand for it.

If the church folk sincerely want religious news, let thme express that desire, in courteous, friendly fashion.

And when you know any real news, upon any subject whatsoever, telephone to the editor about that, too. He will learn that church people are friends worth having.

Swarthmore, Pennsylvania.

AN IMPRESSIVE INCIDENT

Dr. J. C. Massee tells an incident which happened several years ago in a meeting which he conducted down in Washington. Among his auditors on the second evening was a stalwart young soldier in uniform. He stood in the rear of the audience room, listening intently to the words of the speaker, and remained for a time at the close of the service. When Dr. Massee shook hands with him, he inquired:

"Are you a Christian?"

"No, I am not, and I would not be for my right hand."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, I am an officer in a certain hospital corps stationed here at Washington. Every officer in that corps is an avowed infidel. If I were to go out to camp tonight and announce myself a Christian, they would ridicule me to death. I cannot and will not do it."

"Where did you come from?" inquired Dr. Massee.

"My home is in the mountains of North Carolina."

"Is your mother living?"

"Yes."

"Do you think she ever prays for you?"

"Without a doubt," replied the youth.

"Then, which will you choose, your mother's Christ or the scoffing infidelity of your companions in the army?"

The eyes of the young man moistened as he said: "Please do not talk to me about my mother." Dr. Massee left him for that evening, but on each subsequent evening the youth was there in the same seeming attitude of resistance.

On the last night of the campaign Dr. Massee prayed earnestly for the man's conversion, but when the invitation had been extended and the last song had been sung, he had not come. Dr. Massee left the pulpit, before dismissing the audience, and going down to where the youth stood, he asked: "Are you going to yield to Christ? This is the last invitation I will have the privilege of giving you. The Spirit of God is speaking to you, I am sure. Will you not yield to Him now?"

With much earnestness and something akin to defiance, he replied: "I told you the first night, and I tell you now, I would not become a Christian for my right arm."

Laying his hand upon the young man's shoulder affectionately, and looking into his eyes, the minister asked: "What about your mother's prayers? I will put them over against the infidelity of your comrades."

Again the man's eyes filled with moisture as he said: "Please do not mention my mother. I do not wish to talk about her in this connection."

There was seemingly nothing left to do but to return to the platform and close the meeting. That was done, and friends gathered about the speaker to wish him good-bye. Then, there was a sudden commotion. Looking up to see the cause, Dr. Massee saw his soldier, with shoulders squared, jaws set and eyes aflame, coming through the crowd. Reaching out his hand, he said: "I am going to take my mother's Christ as my Christ, and I am going to do it now. Then I am going back out to camp to tell those fellows and let them laugh if they will."

Whether that young man ever won military honors in subsequent years I do not know. Of this, however, I am certain that his soul was never more courageous than when he made that decision and took up his cross to follow Christ among his companions in arms.

In the name of the One who "endured the cross, despising the shame," that He might bring many sons into His glory, I bid you follow Him "until the day dawns and the shadows flee away" in the splendor and joy of His immediate Presence.

"Jesus calls us: by Thy mercies,
Savior, may we hear Thy call,
Give our hearts to Thy obedience,
Serve and love Thee best of all."

DENOMINATIONAL ENTERPRISES

NEW CENTURY SERVICE

The Method

New Century Service is the General Conference Budget.

The General Conference Budget is the aggregate assessment on the entire denomination for its operating expenses; for missions, education and benevolences.

The total assessed is $500,000.

This total is divided among the Conferences and by them assigned to the local churches.

How can the churches meet their apportionment?

New Century Service has a method:

1. To secure in each church an agency (called the New Century Service Commission) whose sole business it is to foster the budget by educational ,stewardship and financial methods.

2. To have the local church by formal action endorse the following loyalty card:

Church Loyalty Card—New Century Service

....Church, ...Charge

....Conference, hereby records its loyalty to and support of New Century Service (general conference budget) of the Methodist Protestant Church in the following respects:

1. We are humbly and devoutly grateful to God for the love and grace which has come to us through our Lord Jesus Christ, and for the place we have in the affairs of the Kingdom.

2. We realize we have a definite obligation to the great activities of the Kingdom which lie outside our own personal and church life.

3. That most of such activity, possible to us, is through the boards and institutions of our denomination.

4. That we desire to unite our efforts in a co-operative way with other Methodist Protestant Churches to achieve the great missionary, educational and benevolent purposes set forth in N. C. S. (the general conference budget.)

5. In accordance therewith this church by a vote of its membership-quarterly conference (strike out one) hereby pledges itself to its utmost efforts to raise its annual and general budget in full this coming year.

6. In order to finance our church by Bible Methods we endorse the principle of stewardship as expressed in tithing and will encourage every effort to extend its accetpance and practice by our members.

3. To have each pastor sign the following card:

Pastor's Loyalty Card—New Century Service

1. I am deeply grateful to God for the love that found and saved me in Christ Jesus my Lord.

2. I am deeply grateful for the blessed church to which I belong and which gives me the opportunity to preach the gospel.

3. I realize I am a part of its leadership and that I share with others the responsibility of its place in the affairs of the Kingdom.

4. I want to serve both my Lord and my church with a full heart.

In such acknowledgment I prayerfully pledge myself:

1. To use my best efforts to promote all the interests committed to me by my denomination, and in particular to secure in full the annual and general conference budgets laid on my charge.

2. And, as involving my leadership, I commit myself to the practice and preaching of the principle of stewardship, by which I mean that I will tithe my cash income and undertake to get my church people also to accept this Bible way in the use of their money.

Signed, in love of Christ and the Church,

Date .... Pastor
Conference .... Church

It is our belief that any church which will authorize the appointment of a New Century Service Commission (which works) supported by the two loyalty signatures can and will do anything asked of it.

How goes the method?

NOTICE: 1. These results represent months of effort.

2. The church loyalty card does not ask the church to guarantee the payment of the budget; but only to use its utmost efforts to raise it. Further, it does not require the church to become tithers but only to endorse the principle and so encourage efforts to secure tithers. Both requests are so very reasonable as to seem almost unnecessary.

3. The pastor's card as to attitude on raising the assessments is but the repetition of the vow he made when ordained. The tithing pledge is a "step out front," and that's where the pastor belongs.

There is a whole lot more to be said. In the menwhile my beloved brethren of the ministry and laity, peruse (a good word), the financial report of last week, our first eight months, and the above tabulation.

Watchmen, what of the night!

Fighting Narcotics

pursues him. Drug addicts endure more suffering and anguish, physical and mental, than any other group of sufferers.

"We have only to bear in mind that the drug addicts of the Orient are numbered in tens of millions and the drug addicts of the Occident in hundreds of thousands. The suffering of the average addict, multiplied by the number of addicts, make a product incredibly huge.

"The sufferings of the families of addicts are second only to the sufferings of the addicts themselves. First comes the shock of discovering that a dear one is an addict. Then the long period of efforts at rescue, with hopes rising, only to be wrecked, witnessing the physical, intellectual, moral and spiritual disintegration of a dear one in the grip of progressive addiction, tear asunder the heartstrings of loved ones as nothing else can do. The dissipation of family substance, the humiliation from the conduct of the addict member as he sinks deeper in moral turpitude, the silent, perpetual shame of it all, the mockery, the despair, constitute a cup of suffering second only to that of the 'Living Death.' Multiply the total number of addicts by five to get the number of close kin, and multiply this product by the suffering of the average kin, and think what the grand product must be. Of course, more distant relatives and friends also suffer keenly and their number is very large."

Colonel R. P. Hobson, the hero of Santiago, is leading in this movement against the abuse of narcotics. If you wish material for sermons or addresses, write to him at 578 Madison Avenue, New York City.

All Things Through Christ

ASHEBORO

January 19, Sunday.—We had a delightful stay with this church on this date, worshiping with them in two services. The plan of the pastor was for us to present "Dollar a Member" at the morning hour, and follow this with a sermon. We did the first but did not attempt the latter. By the time a dollar a member for 343 members was provided (though it should be said that about half of it had been previously promised) with a plus of seven dollars, there was no time left to preach. In fact, when we were through with all of this, one layman spoke out "in the meeting" and said, "We have already had a good sermon." If all efforts to raise money for God's work met with as ready response as this did, then raising money would be a pleasant undertaking. We have never seen people respond more readily and more gladly. The giving was "hilarious," as Paul exhorts. We closed the hour's service with everybody feeling that God was with us, and that we had received a benediction from Him.

It was not our plan to remain for the night service, but at the solicitation of the pastor we did, and preached at that time. At both the morning and night service the congregation was pleasing as to numbers, and helpful in attention. We were impressed at each service with the number of young people present. There is always hope for a church that holds the young people. Brother Pritchard is in his fifth year with this charge, and is popular with his people. He spoke of the Sunday School as being larger than at any other time during his pastorate. The church is well organized, and all organizations are functioning regularly. We expect another good year here. Mrs. Taylor and S. W., Jr., accompanied us on this trip, and enjoyed it with us. It was our pleasure to be the guests of Mrs. W. C. Hammer and family, whose hospitality was kind and generous. We missed, of course, Congressman Hammer. His duties keep him in Washington the greater part of his time.

We are very grateful to Brother Pritchard and his people for their cordial reception of us, and for the kindnesses shown us while we were with them. God's continued blessings upon them.

"Dollar a Member"

Yes, sir, a good report this week. High Point, First has paid in $708, a dollar a member for every member on the roll of that church. And we ditto Asheboro, with the exception that all of theirs is not paid in, though the total amount of a dollar a member for 343 members is pledged, with a plus of a few dollars. A considerable amount has already been paid in, and the balance will be forthcoming in due time. We are grateful to these churches for their ready and generous response to "Dollar a Member," and for the inspiration of their good example to other churches. The Auxiliary at each of these churches paid $100. Thanks to the women! We glean the HERALD of last week: "The chairman of 'Dollar a member' reports one third of the money collected. We hope to have this completed in a few weeks."—Siler City. "On yesterday, Love Joy raised $14.50 cash, and Macedoina $4.00.

Pledges for later payments on 'Dollar a Member' were made at each church."—Wm. H. Neese. Our full appreciation of these, and all the other churches that are working at "Dollar a Member." We are all with this undertaking, and all of us together will see it through to a good finish.

We want some good "boost" for this space next week, and we are sure that some pastor or director can supply it. Please let it come on in, either through the HERALD or by mail direct to me. Thank you! Thank you!

We want to acknowledge here our appreciation of the splendid article on "Dollar a Member," written by Brother E. S. Wills, and appearing in a recent number of the HERALD. It was timely, forceful, and helpful. We urge that other laymen do likewise.

Herald Subscriptions

It is interesting and pleasing to know that in far away France is a friend of the HERALD, and that se sends his check for ten dollars to assist Dr. McCulloch and the Committee in their efforts to increase the circulation of this worthy paper. We owe it to the Editor, for his invaluable and sacrificing service to the conference for many years, to give to him this increase in subscriptions. And we owe to ourselves the value that this larger circulation of the paper would give to the conference. It is highly gratifying to find our pastors working in this direction. Brother H. L. Isley says in last week's issue, "One of our goals this year is to put the HERALD in every home." Another pastor writes in personal letter, "I am getting things going now on HERALD subscriptions, and feel sure of a full response." From what we heard at Asheboro Sunday, we are sure of the full quota there. Push the HERALD, brethren. Push the HERALD.

Interpretation of Church Law

We have been asked by a pastor to interpret the church law on this point: Is the pastor a member of the quarterly conference examining committee by virtue of his office as pastor?

Answer: He is not. The committee is "chosen by the quarterly conference." (See Discipline, 1928 edition, page 22.) Again: "The first quarterly conference shall appoint a committee of five." (Discipline, page 49, section 3.) The pastor may, and should be a member of this committee, but the law does not make him a member by virtue of his office as pastor. He must be elected by the quarterly conference in order to be on this committee. When I am presiding it is my practice to ask the conference to do this.

At the suggestion of this pastor, this opinion is given here.

The Chief Purpose

We quote from the "Bible Champion," November number. "What is the chief purpose of all the Christian work of the world?" The sole authority for the purpose of Christianity is Jesus Christ its Founder and Author. He declares His purpose when He said: "The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which is lost." No one can accept Jesus as the founder of the church, and acknowledge this as his declared purpose for his church, without, at the same time, admitting that this must still be the moving purpose in all that the church does. Unless, perchance, the Founder and Head of the church has issued a decree changing the purpose of His church in these modern days. And that, of course, no one would claim. The fact is, the one mission of the church has been, is, and will be, the salvation of men. Nothing else lies so close to the heart of God as that, and nothing else can supplant that purpose in his church. But God will be disappointed in this expectation unless there is a passion in his church like the passion that moved Jesus "to give his life a ransom for many." The ministers of the church must be stirred by this passion until they cry out in the anguish of their souls, "my heart's desire and prayer to God for my people is, that they might be saved."

This passion must be dominant, likewise, in the heart of church leaders among the laity; it must be re-echoed in the music of the church; it must be felt in the Sunday School and the young people's meetings. The whole set-up of the church should be so charged with this purpose of Jesus that no one could come under the influence of the church without feeling the force of that fact. In these times when many things go into the programs of the church we need to be on our guard lest we forget that "one thing is needful," and that one thing is, "to seek and to save that which is lost." The Lord burden us with this sense of the Church's first mission, and help us to fan the smoldering fires of evangelism into a burning flame.

Let Us Pray

For the disarmament conference in session now in London. This should be a history-making meeting, and it will be, if the God of peace and good will can have his way there. The cost of war, viewed from whatever standpoint, is so enormous that civilized nations should be unwilling to tolerate it longer. We are told that 80 per cent of all of our federal taxes go to pay for past wars and preparation for future wars. France has just appropriated $40,000,000 for fortifications in Alsace and Loraine, and plans to treble this in five years. Think of a nation, already burdened by war debts, having to add this additional burden upon the people to provide military defense. This is only the money cost of war. The destruction of human life, with the attending sorrow and distress, and the breaking down of moral standards and the crime wave that follows, are even more appalling than the money cost. War should be outlawed. God wills it. Let us pray daily that the conference at London may head bravely in that direction.

MENTAL POISE

To develop mental poise a few simple rules will work wonders. Take special means to divert the mind from self. Rigidly avoid all self-centered tendencies.

Respect the rights of others. There are no relations between mature persons that give us the right to demand or expect favors. We may hope for and receive and we may give. We may express our wishes but should not be offended if they are not granted. To show offense, to argue or threaten, is evidence of weakness. Avoid all forms of contention for your own wishes. Cultivate a yielding disposition.

A cardinal rule for emotional control is to receive everything phlegmatically. Do not indulge in the slightest form of resentment. Be deliberate in speech and action.

When your mind works too rapidly and intensely read aloud, very slowly, and pronounce each work distinctly. The Psalms are particularly good subject matter for this purpose.

The most vital rule of all for securing mental control, is to do everything very slowly and thoroughly. It may take some time to establish this as an unconscious habit, but in many cases of nervous breakdown it has produced marvelous results.

3. Pleasant Hill, Cleveland charge.
4. Efland, Orange charge.
5. Thomasville, First.
6. High Point, First.

8. YOU.

We are adding two recruits to our list this week, thanks to High Point and Asheboro. High Point is the second church to send charts back to us. Asheboro has third place. We brought the charts from that church home with us Sunday night. They are now on file; we want 230 more. Just ten more days remain of the time allotted for this undertaking. Much can be done in that time, and we are expecting that much will be done. The importance of this matter has been stressed in such a way that no one can fail to understand how imperative it is. We know that our people are working to make this thing go, and when the counts are all in there will be much to encourage our hearts.

Brother H. A. Garrett, one of our directors, gave an encouraging report of the prospects on Saxapahaw, Alamance and Mt. Hermon charges. We have also an encouraging word from Pastor Burgess. We are confident of some 100 per cent churches on these charges.

If other pastors and directors will give us the good news from their respective fields, they will help the cause very much. The success of one church or one charge is an inspiration to other churches and other charges. Let us have this good word by next week, please.

And with all of our efforts, we are not forgetting that our hope is in God. Let us call upon Him daily for his blessings upon this effort.

THE COMMITTEE.

A HELPING HAND

"But he is dying."

These words reached me as I was sitting in the sun parlor at the end of a long hospital corridor. The tone of the small voice, more than the words aroused my interest; so I immediately made an effort to find out what was happening. I could hear the harsh voice of authority reply:

"You have plenty to do without worrying about a nameless foreigner for whom nothing can be done; he is past human assistance."

The sweet young voice replied, "Oh! that is just it, medical skill is useless, but could we not call some person to minister to his spiritual welfare?"

Again the voice of authority more stern than before—"Resume your duties, there are many depending on your professional knowledge and skill."

I watched the young nurse walk down the corridor to continue her duties for the suffering ones in a mechanical manner. All lightheartedness was erased from the countenance which a moment before would have been an inspiration to the most cynical. My curiosity to know the reason for those heart-rending words, "But he is dying," led me to follow as the nurse passed, bowing her head as though in deep thought. Could I read her mind? No, but I could notice those young lips move in an earnest entreaty. Then the countenance cleared, and a look of determination crossed her face as she hurriedly continued on her way.

Down the length of the ward, where the first beam of morning light was peeping through the windows, I saw her approach the bed of a young lad. Though the light was dim, I, a casual observer could tell the boy was fighting a losing battle for life on earth. Reaching under the covers, she found his hand, apparently to count the dying lad's pulse: but again I observed that look of light and inspiration cross her face, her lips moving as though in prayer.

I was so entranced as I witnessed this sad scene, that I scarcely realized she had left the patient's bedside. She walked past me to a window where she stood buried in meditation. I passed her to finish my night's vigil in the sun-parlor; she turned to me and said:

"Oh! nurse, I may have neglected my duties for a few moments: but you understand. I could not leave that poor boy to go on his last journey without a prayer or a friend. He was brought in a few hours ago by an officer who found him critically ill in a railroad station. He has been unconscious since his arrival. We do not even know his name. The police are trying to trace identification. However, it will be too late for those near and dear to see him alive."

"May I ask if you were praying for the lad?"

"Yes, my prayer for him was—

"The Lord is my Shepherd: I shall not want, He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me: Thy rod and Thy staff, they comfort me."

"Now I can continue my work without a guilty conscience. I could not have performed my duties if that poor boy had gone as many others go, without a prayer or a friend to guide them 'Home.' Do you wish to see my reward?"

She led me to the bed of the boy who five minutes before had been drawing most agonizing breaths. He now lay quietly breathing. As we stood there he looked up into the nurse's face, his sinking lips trying to murmur some message that we were never to hear.

She leaned over him and whispered these words—

"Remember what our Christ said, 'Lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world.' "

The boy had passed to the other side: we could not tell whether or not he heard her last comforting words but I know that I turned to this young nurse and quoted—

"Well done, thou good and faithful servant."—Margaret Duvall Lee in United Presbyterian.

OUR STORY PAGE

A TRUE STORY OF A COMMON CAT

As the cold winds begin to blow and there is a hint of heavy snow in the air, and as we sit closer at home and feel grateful for comfort and security, my mind goes back some few years to a high hilltop in Berkshire county, and a yellow cat, roaming the dark woods at night and living as cats may in the wild country. This is the story of "Tommy." It is a true story; there is something of tragedy in it, much of drama, a deal of mystery. It has a happy ending.

Back thirty years ago my parents bought an old farm in the town of Otis, but some five miles from the village. A remote, isolated, beautiful place, the house perched on the hill, about 1800 feet above sea level. Standing on the front piazza one looked across a rolling expanse of low hills, and on the horizon stretched a purplish haze of mountains melting into the sky. Behind the house the slope rose another 50 feet, to a bare, bleak, stone-capped summit whence the watcher saw a great sweep of horizon, with Mt. Tom, Greylock, Monadnock and, on clear days, the Catskills in the distance. Woods of maple, beech, oak, birch and pine, with some ash and other trees swept like a benediction along the slopes of our farm.

When we took over this great old place there went with it, along with farm tools, horses, Jersey cows, and other farm necessaries, two cats—"Tommy" and "Beauty." If ever there was a married couple, here was one! They were devoted. When Beauty had her little family of yellow kittens to care for, Tom provided her with wild food. The house gave her milk and odds and ends, but it was Tommy's delight to bring her field mice, and we could see him come across the mowing with a mouse in his mouth. Now, let's keep clear of moralizing at this point on the hurting proclivities of cats. I have no quarrel with them. I may write something about this some day, but not here. I love birds, and all living things; but I will not judge the cat, or other animals who are as the Lord made them. Just as the fact let it be said that Tommy brought Beauty field mice, not birds.

But that is not the story. The hired farmer who had charge of the place owned several dogs. It is not easy to mix dogs and cats, unless they have been brought up together. Here is another of nature's ways with which I shall not quarrel. The facts in this case were that Beauty, after some months, disappeared. We always supposed one of the farmer's dogs killed her, and we mourned her. Tommy remained a short time after Beauty went, and then disappeared. We felt sure he had also fallen a victim to the dogs, and we mourned again—and even more, for Tommy was a most engaging cat, firm fleshed, sleek, responsive, soft-furred—not like a city tomcat, but a bit of wild life consenting to human companionship.

We did not forget Tommy, and often spoke of him as of a friend lost. Time passed, and with it the farmer's reign. On a spring day he packed his household goods on wagons, prepared to depart with his family on the morrow.

On the day he packed his wagons, Tommy reappeared. He sat perched on one of the highest rafters in the great old red barn, safely out of reach of dogs or men. There the old fellow sat, leaning his head over and watching the goings and comings of those beneath. We called him, tried to tempt him with a saucer of cream; but he moved not. Night came, and on the high rafter slept, or watched, Tommy.

The next day the farmer, his family and his dogs departed. The caravan had not gone a quarter of a mile down the road when Tommy came trotting and chirruping to the west door of the house. He rubbed, purred and joyous against our legs arched his fine yellow back, nosed into once-familiar corners of the kitchen, and then settled down, crouching, to a saucer of cream, his tail gently swaying at the end, lapping contentedly the renewal of things as they had been.

Where had he been? All through the last half of the summer before, through the winter—and they have old-fashioned winters in the Berkshire hills—through the melting spring, Tommy must have ranged the fields and woods, living maybe in deserted, tumbled-down barns or sheds, perhaps in caves or other natural shelters. Tommy for those long months had gone wild. He had skipped back some thousands of years to the time when his kind were self-sufficient wanderers of the woods.

But, and here is the point of the whole story, while he had gone wild in his way of living, the ties of civilization had stuck. The claim of human companionship had stayed with him. Else, how was it that he made his reappearance on the very day that the farmer's loaded wagons stood in the yard?

I feel sure about Tommy. He liked us; and though circumstances told him he must make his living elsewhere or perish before hostile forces, he kept his eye on home. Like some wandering exile, he crept close in the dark hours, and peeked in the lighted windows. The thought of warm firesides, of stroking hands, of saucers of food by the kitchen stove, the members of a pleasant couch or chair in the living room, a thought of his favorite spot in the spring sunshine on the south steps—these lived with him.

Tommy had faith in us, in the future, in homes and friendship. So he watched and waited, patiently, unspoiled. He came back.

Tommy lived his span of life, a good cat, loyal to his friends, faithful to the demands of cat nature. He has gone to the place for good cats; and he is not forgotten. For no good cat ever is forgotten.—Edward E. Witing in Our Dumb Animals.

CHRISTMAS SHIPS

By J. L. Glover

"What are you doing, children?" asked Uncle Jim, coming down to the river side and finding Jack and Ethel very busy.

"We are sailing our Christmas ships," Ethel answered, fitting a sail to a rather top-heavy craft, and sending it forth on the crest of a little wave. It wobbled a little, then bumped against the side of the wharf, turned over and floated forlornly upside-down, too far away to reach. Ethel watched it ruefully.

"That one's gone," remarked Jack. "You did it in too big a hurry."

"But tell me about it," said Unlce Jim, who, being something of a sailor himself, had seen that catastrophe was coming. "Why is that unfortunate little craft a Christmas ship, and where was she bound? I saw she was carrying too much sail for safety. She was bound to capsize."

"Then you might have told me," said Ethel. "It was my very best wish, and I put on a big sail so that she would be sure to go right to the North Pole, to Santa Claus."

"Was that her port? Then she was headed the wrong way anyway, so it wasn't my fault. But tell me about this fleet of Christmas Ships. Maybe I can help you chart a straighter course for them."

"Oh, Uncle Jim, if you only could! They all tip over, and we've sent out so many. I'm afraid Santa Claus will never get any."

"Any what?" asked Uncle Jim.

"Any of our letters telling him what we want for Christmas."

Jack was busy fitting out another little vessel while he spoke. It was a flat-bottom canoe made of an empty cigar box, carefully caulked with wax to prevent it from leaking. It had a mast and a fine sail, and it was loaded with quite a little bale of papers, tied together with a bit of red ribbon. That had been Ethel's idea.

"Not very seaworthy," said Uncle Jim, shaking his head; but the breeze was gentle and the tide favorable, and the little boat floated away south toward the ocean and presently out of sight around the bend of the river. Jack and Ethel clapped their hands.

"She's bound for the South Pole; but no doubt Santa Claus has a branch house there," said Uncle Jim. "Well—now tell me about it."

"Well, you see," explained Jack, "it's such a warm Christmas, we haven't any fires, so we couldn't send letters up the chimney, so we thought we'd send them by water instead. If they float out of sight before they upset, we think they have gone all right."

"A good idea," Uncle Jim agreed. "And what was in all those letters you sent?"

"I asked for an express wagon, and a pair of roller skates, and a radio set," said Jack modestly, and Ethel took up the tale.

"And I asked for a big beautiful doll, and a carriage for her, and a new book, and lots of other things, so in case some of our ships got lost, you know—"

"I see. And didn't you ask for anything for the rest of the family?"

"Why, no, Uncle Jim. They can ask for themselves, can't they?"

"I suppose so," said Uncle Jim thoughtfully, "but I have an idea that our Christmas Wishing Ships go straighter if our wishes are not all selfish. Do you think we might try it?"

Ethel looked a little ashamed. "Why, I never thought of that. I don't believe mother ever thinks of asking for presents for herself. She's always helping somebody else with theirs. She made a shawl for me to give Grandma, and a pair of slippers for Jack to give Father, and she bought some handkerchiefs for my present to Auntie. And Father gave Jack and me each a dollar to spend."

"Then it seems to me that those gifts are not yours, but your father's and mother's," said Uncle Jim. "Now let's plan a different kind of ship, carrying a cargo of unselfish wishes. She can sail through the air just as well, but we'll launch her on the river, if you want to see her sail away. You can be making up her cargo, and tomorrow we'll send her off."

He went away, and Jack and Ethel, rather puzzled, but trusting Uncle Jim, wrote their letters to Santa Claus, asking for gifts for the other members of the family, and especially for Uncle Jim himself. He had not said a word about himself, and it would be such a surprise for him. "Let's not pick out the things, because we don't know just what grown-ups want," proposed Ethel. "Ask him just to bring them something very nice; and then for our very own presents, we'll get Daddy to take us into town on Saturday and spend our own money on presents for them."

Jack wrote, very slowly and carefully, all this. Then he paused. "And Ethel, let's ask him to bring something nice to those poor little children in that little brown house we pass on the way to town. I don't believe they will have much of a Christmas."

"All right," agreed Ethel.

The unselfish letters were all written by the time Uncle Jim came back the next day. He brought with him a beautiful little boat, all rigged. Jack and Ethel could hardly wait until he was ready to go with them down to the wharf to launch the "Merry Christmas," as she was named. Uncle Jim had a very long string in his pocket ,and this he fastened to the boat, tying the other end to the wharf. We will let her sail away as she pleases, and this afternoon we will tow her back. If the letters are gone, it will be a sign that Santa has them," he said.

This made the game better than ever, and Jack and Ethel could hardly wait till afternoon, when they went down to the wharf again to tow in the Christmas Ship. Very carefully Uncle Jim pulled in the string, rolling it up as it came to prevent its tangling. The little ship had sailed a long way, and when at last she came in sight, she was floating upside down, but unhurt. There was not a letter aboard her.

"Oh, Santa Claus did get them," cried Ethel joyfully. "Now we shall have a real good Christmas, and we are going to town tomorrow to buy our own presents for Mother and Daddy and all."

"Good!" approved Uncle Jim.

The Christmas dollars went such a long way in the ten-cent store that there was enough left to buy some toys and candy for the children in the little brown house, and when Daddy heard about that, he added some more; and when Mother heard about it when they got home, she found some nice things which Jack and Ethel had outgrown, and added them to the basket for the Brown's Christmas, too.

Jack and Ethel were awake on Christmas morning. You have to be, when there is a fat stocking to be investigated, besides all the other things that won't go in it, all before breakfast. The thing they liked best of all was the Merry Christmas, newly rigged, with a lovely white silken sail, and a bright little pennant floating from her mast, bearing the words, "Best Wishes from your Christmas Ship!"

The family were delighted and surprised to find the gifts from Jack and Ethel themselves on their breakfast plates, and Uncle Jim hardly knew what to say when he found a beautiful necktie from them both on his. He guessed that it had meant some self-denial, and his kiss of thanks was very tender.

"You have learned the right kind of Christmas giving," he whispered, "and your Christmas Ships, sent out in that spirit will always find favoring gales to waft them to the right havens, and come back to you bringing rich cargoes of love and happiness, for the great Captain, Love, will guide them safely."

AN APPRECIATION

I have just read Mr. W. T. Ellis on the Sunday School lesson, "Standards of the Kingdom," for next Sunday. His reasoning is clear and convincing. If possible, read what he has to say before teaching the lesson next Sunday.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER
President C. E. Society, High Point College

JAN. 26: "WHAT IS OUR CHURCH PLANNING THIS YEAR?"

Acts 2:41-47; 13:1-3

To the Leader

To obtain the best results from this meeting it would be well for the executive committee of your society to meet with the minister and leaders of organizations in the church. In this meeting discuss the work for the coming year. This will give the leader an idea of the work to be done so that he may plan his program accordingly. The program might be arranged something like this:

Song service: "Work for the Niht Is Coming," "T.rue-Hieated, Whole-Hearted," "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning."

Scripture: Have Acts 2:41-47 read—a verse by seven persons.

Song: "The Church's One Foundation."
Prayer, concluding with the Lord's Prayer.
Offering.
Announcements.
Scripture: Acts 13:1-3, read in concert.
Leader's introductory talk.
Special music.
General participation.
Mizpah.

The Leader's Talk

Christian Endeavor, if it accomplishes its purpose, will help us to think through and in some measure solve our problems. Today we are thinking more seirously than ever before about those things which puzzle us. We are not willing to accept everything just as it comes without thinking it through. Tennyson said:

"There lives more faith in honest doubt,
Believe me, than in half the creeds."

Truth only stands the more firm when questioned. Christian Endeavor is indeed a wonderful guide to help keeps us on the right track.

We should, by all means, know what the church reeally is, what its principles are and how it is accomplishing its aims and ideeals. By searching God's Word we are able to find out those things which were brought about by the early church and their very marked influence. The early church gained in numbers; it possessed a warm and abiding fellowship and a spirit of generosity toward the needy. It was embodied with the spirit of consecration and missionary zeal.

It is, then, the business of the Christian Endeavorers in general to find out the program of the church and then to endeavor in every way to support this plan to the utmost.

Topics

Things we may do:

1. Give more liberally and more loyally.
2. Build up the Sunday school.
3. Hold Daily Vacation Bible Schools.
4. Organize Boy and Girl Scout Troops.
5. Arrange Teacher Training classes.
6. Build a bulletin board just outside the church.
7. House to-house canvasses.
8. More consecrated spirit of evangelism—personal work.

To Be Answered

1. What did you do last year that is worth continuing as regards church woork?
2. What do you consider the best way to build up the church and Sunday school, generally speaking.
3. What are some outside activities in which you might engage to good advantage?
4. What do you think is the best method of discovering and training the young people for leadership.
5. Give several ways by which you might be more loyal to your pastor and his program.

Quotations

The Christian church is the fellowship of those who believe in Christ, and endeavor to live that way; it associates God's children in the worship of their common Father; it organizes them in order that they may render more effective service in Christ's name, both to God and to their fellow men.—L. A. Weigle.

The church deals in ideals and ideas. It does much of its work by preaching. It creates standards regarding slums, child labor, brotherhood and so on. It is God's prophet and priest.—Morgan.

O God, within whose sight
All men have equal right
To worship Thee,
Break every bar that holds
Thy flock in diverse folds;
Thy will from none withholds
Full liberty.
Lord, set Thy churches free
From foolish rivalry!
Lord, make all free!
Let all past bitterness
Now and forever cease,
All our souls possess
True charity.

An Error.—In our issue of January 9 we made an error in Dr. Brown's report of receipts for college. We credited Charlotte First, with $500 and High Point, First, with $37.50. This was a little too much for Charlotte and not quite enough for High Point. Interchange the two and you will have both right. We regret the error and crave pardon, but we dare not promise never to make an error again. High Point has since paid her full dollar per member, over $700.00. Hurrah tor High Point, First!

My "second" love has done almost as well, according to its membership.

Your treasurer and his wife hope to be in Florida by the time this report is printed. My mail will be taken care of, and all remittances promptly receipted, so please do not hold any money that ought to come into the treasurer.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth.—We presume that our reporter for Pleasant Hill church will write a report of the services there last Sunday. Will state, however, that we had a fairly good attendance, despite the cold weather. The college appeal for "Dollar a Member" was presented by the pastor and a fairly good response was made. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed for the first quarter. After the service the pastor and family enjoyed a visit and good dinner at the hospitable home of Bro. E. G. Long, who is the father of Miss Lola Long, the reporter for Pleasant Hill church.

The people on this charge have continued to make donations of needed things to the parsonage family. Since our last report we have received gifts from Mr. and Mrs. Walter Long, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Speas, of Pleasant Hill church, and Mr. and Mrs. Pearson Sprinkle, members of the Baptist church residing in our community. We appreciate these kind remembrances.

We are sorry to note the illness of Mrs. W. W. Whitman, one of the stewards of Tabernacle church. We hope for these a speedy recovery. Others who were previously reported sick are improving, we are glad to report.

Our appointment for next Sunday is with Harmony Grove church at 11 o'clock.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

New Hope, Vance.—Our new pastor, Rev. Jabus Braxton, filled his appointment the first Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He gave us a very inspiring message, his subject being along the line of New Year's resolutions. On the second Sunday night Mr. Jasper Hicks presented the "Dollar a Member" campaign for the college. A committee was appointed to see and collect from each member.

A Christian Endeavor Society has been organized with the following officers: President, Kathleen Paschall; vice-president, Mrs. R. H. Paschall; recording secretary, Eleanor Capps; corresponding secretary, Gertrude Paschall; treasurer, Edna Williams.

We feel sure that this organization will add much to the religious life of our community, for it includes not only the Methodist Protetsant church, but the other two churches as well.

Our Sunday school seems to have taken on new life. Mrs. R. H. Paschall, the teacher of the Young Ladies' Class, is offering prizes for attendance and Bible reading which has greatly stimulated the interest of that class.

Although death has taken a large toll from our membership and many have moved from the community in the last few years, we still have the faithful few who will continue on in spite of discouragement and difficulties. Let us hope that this interest may continue and that this may be the most successful year of our history.

◆

Spring Hill, North Davidson. The Sunday school is doing very well considering the cold weather. New officers have already taken their places. They are as follows: Superintendent, C. W. Haynes; organist, Mildred Swain; secretary, Glennie Craven; teachers, Henry Byerly, J. L. Craven, J. D. Collett, Alice Haynes, Eula Swaim and Bessie Swaim.

Mr. Powell was with us today, bringing an interesting message.

The Ladies' Aid will meet at Mrs. Henry Byerly's home Saturday afternoon, January 25. At the present time they are doing real good work.

The C. E. Society held a business meeting in connection with a social Saturday night, January 11, at the home of the president.

Through a special effort of Mrs. J. L. Moore and her daughter, Mrs. Clyde Payne, Spring Hill has a tent to use in the cemetery, when friends are forced to gather there during rough weather. There was quite a bit of money left which will go to the improvement of the cemetery. We certainly appreciate what they have done for the church. Even though they are not members of the church they are faithful workers. They are as willing to help do a thing as if they were members. We trust that they will be richly blessed in their work.

Since our last report, Mrs. Surratt, of Winston-Salem, and the daughter of the late Rev. I. I. York, was laid to rest in the Spring Hill cemetery.

We are sorry to say that Cleatus Glascoe, young son of Mr. and Mrs. William Glascoe, is in a very serious condition at this time.

Shoals, Pinnacle Charge.—Our good pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, brought a good and helpful sermon last Sunday. This was a New Year's sermon to remind us that precious time is fast passing by, and we are glad indeed to have Brother Hunter back again to preach for us. Bro. I. O. Hauser, of White Plains, was with us last Sunday and made a short talk. We were glad indeed to have him with us.

Our Sunday school is doing very nicely this winter. We want to make our Sunday school in 1930 better than we did in 1929, and if we will all work together we can do this.

Concord.—The attendance at S. S. Sunday was 248. This was a decrease over the previous Sunday, owing to the extreme cold weather. The pastor, Rev. G. F. Millaway, is preaching some splendid sermons, and the people are pleased with him. He and Mrs. Millaway have won their way into the hearts of the people already, and are busy in the work, visiting the sick, shut-ins, and others. Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle, and Mr. Millaway exchanged pulpits on the second Sunday. Mr. Anderson came to us in the interest of High Point College. A part of the money was raised and a committee was appointed to raise the balance.

The annual young people's banquet will be held in the dining hall of the Sunday school building on Thursday night, January 30. A splendid program of fun and fellowship is being arranged. Revs. Paul S. Kennett and P. E. Lindley, of High Point, are on the program and perhaps others, and it is the desire of the committee to have about 200 people present.

Our people are looking forward with pleasure to Sunday night, March 9, at which time Dr. Ira Landreth and Mr. W. Roy Breg, of the United Society of Christian Endeavor will be in our city.

On next Saturday evening, January 25, Mr. Fred Hunter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hunter, of our church, and Miss Lois Holshouser, of this city, will be married in the studio of Station WBT, Charlotte. This young couple will have the distinction of being the first couple to be married over radio in this section. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. H. C. Kelleymeyer, of Trinity Reformed Cchurch, pastor of the bride, and will be broadcast over WBT.

◆

Laurel Hill, Fallston Charge.—Our attendance in Sunday school has not been what we would like it to be. Probably it is due to the winter weather. We are hoping our attendance will get better as the spring Sundays come.

We are glad to have Mrs. Emma Mull and children back in Sunday school again. Mrs. Mull has moved back into the community to her new home, which has just been completed.

Rev. J. M. Morgan preached another one of his interesting sermons Sunday morning. A very large congregation was present. We had lots of visiting members which we were very glad to have.

One of our Sunday school teachers, Miss Willie Robinson, and Mr. Ellis Hauser were quietly married Sunday evening. If Mr. Hauser has gained her we hope we have not lost her as one of our Sunday school members and teachers.

There is a correction to be made due to my fault. In the last writeup I stated that Mrs. Kate Sain had donated collection plates to the church. But it was Mrs. Etta Sain instead. We wish to thank Mrs. Sain very much for them.

Sunday was the day set aside for each member to contribute a dollar to High Point College. Several contributed, but not as many as we would have liked to see. We wish our church could pay up in full and be put on the "honor roll."

Rev. J. M. Morgan was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cletus Hulls Sunday.

Glen Raven.—Just at the time when Glen Raven M. P. church was beginning to feel the need of a revival Rev. and Mrs. O. C. Loy came in as a "live wire" and a "ray of sunshine" to brighten things up and show people where they stood. One of Mr. Loy's first sermons was preached on a cloudy Sunday on the subject, "Sunshine." Before the close of the sermon the sun began shining and it seemed that there was an inspiration which swept across the entire congregation. Things began to brighten, people became more interested and went to work.

One of the first things done: The Philathea Class had a supper for the benefit of painting the parsonage and to get new banners for the Sunday school. This class was very proud to report that they cleared $40.25 for this cause.

Mr. Loy reorganized the Senior Christian Endeavor and Mrs. Loy organized the Juniors into a Christian Endeavor. These young folks are showing a great interest in this work and are having some quite helpful programs.

On Christmas Eve night a quite interesting pageant, "The Shepherd of Bethlehem," was given by several members of the Sunday school; after the pageant Mr. Loy presented the new banners, (Collection and Attendance) to the Sunday school, and next on the program the small children enjoyed the Santa Claus treat.

Everybody came back to Sunday school and preaching after Christmas as if to say that they were going to begin the new year with a new resolution, and we have had a growing interest in the church ever since. The weekly prayer meetings are having larger attendance than ever before. The Sunday school record attendance for last Sunday was 159, showing a gain over 14. For preaching Sunday night the church was filled almost to its capacity.

The Sunday school of last Sunday compared with Sunday school of last Sunday a year ago was as follows: Number on roll, 175; attendance today, 159; a year ago, 88; offering today, $7.41; a year ago, $4.01. With the record attendance of 159.

We feel very fortunate to have Mr. Pete Troxler re-elected as our Sunday school superintendent, as he is always looking and asking for suggestions to create more interest. He has recently put a chart up in the church giving every person one gold star for each new member they bring to Sunday school. Our chart is filling out fast, but Mr. Troxler is not satisfied; the saying holds good, "The more you get the more you want," and now he has suggested that just as soon as we get our Sunday school attendance up to 200 members that we will have a free supper. So we wish to extend to everybody a welcome to Glen Raven M. P. church.

Preaching at 11 o'clock every Sunday except the fourth and fifth.

Christian Endeavor, both Junior and Senior, at 6:30 o'clock every Sunday night and preaching following.

Prayer meeting at 7:30 o'clock every Thursday night.

Sunday school at 10 o'clock every Sunday morning.

The Ladies' Aid Auxiliary meets once a month, on Monday night after the second Sunday, at the home of some of the members.

Tabernacle Charge.—Encouraging congregations were present at both churches for the preaching services last Sunday in spite of the extremely cold weather. The Lord's Supper was observed at Julian with almost every one present partaking. We were glad to have Miss Elizabeth Hanner and Miss Young, of High Point College, worship with us. A number of visitors from Greensboro were present at Tabernacle for the afternoon service.

The Sabbath schols at both churches are in a flourishing condition. Bros. C. M. Fields and W. T. Hanner, the efficient superintendents, are deeply interested in the work and are always on the job. Both churches are fortunate in having well trained teachers who are spiritual.

The "Dollar a Member" drive is on. Julian church has almost reached the goal and Tabernacle has raised in cash and pledges about $175. We are doing our best to get the full amount.

Mr. Arvel Reynolds, one of our members, living in Greenboro, ha been appointed "Herald" agent to canvass our members who live there.

Tabernacle church has two members more than 90 years old: Mrs. Charlotte Woodburn and Miss Angeline Causey. May there be no darkening clouds for these good women as they face the sunset of life. "At evening time may there be light."

Our hearts were made sad on January 11 when it was learned that Mrs. Harriett Harris, mother of Mrs. P. A. Hardin, had been almost suddenly called home. Surely a good woman has gone to her reward and Tabernacle community is poorer because of her going. Her funeral was held at South Fork Friends church Sunday afternoon, January 12, by the writer, assisted by Revs. T. F. Andrew and E. B. Harris, of the Friends church, and Rev. A. O. Lindley. To this church she was always loyal. May grace be multiplied to Bro. Hardin's family and all who feel the loss most keenly.

St. Paul.—It has been some time since we have written to the Herald, but that doesn't say that we haven't been busy We are striving to put on the "Dollar a Member" campaign for High Point College. We are going slowly, but we hope to reach our goal sometime.

Last Sunday Dr. S. K. Spahr preached for us; he brouht us a mighty good sermon. His text was Malachi 8:10. The message was a soul-mover, and made us want to get closer to the Lord, that He might use us to build up His kingdom here among men. Then, too, the message moved upon our hearts in such a way that we longed to receive the gift of the Holy Ghost that we might be filled with all the fullness of Christ, the blessedness of having the presence of God in our lives in such a degree that we will be soul-winners for Him.

On January 12 we had great services, great because the Holy Spirit was in the services in convicting and converting power. There was no revival going on; however, there was a lost sinner that got under conviction, and wanted to find the Savior. And, bless the Lord, he did find Him. We have had some glorious services here at St. Paul when there was no revival in progress.

We have a very active Ladies' Aid Society here. They are always doing something for the church or parsonage. Last year they helped to paint the church inside, and this year at Christmas they placed a nice bookcase in the parsonage, which was greatly appreciated.

N. BRITTAIN, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove. The attendance and interest at most all the church services are very encouraging. The Sunday school and C. E. Societies are keeping up real well. Brother Williams delivered another one of those splendid sermons Sunday morning.

We are hoping to put over the "Dollar a Member" campaign for the college next Sunday.

Mr. Clyde Payne has not been able to be at church for a few weeks, since he has diphtheria.

Mr. G. L. Hilton is also being kept away on account of sickness. We hope they will soon be back in their places at church.

We were very glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Keiffer Morris join the church last Sunday.

We are planning to observe Young People's Day the second Sunday. The Brotherhood meets at the parsonage next Saturday night.

REPORTER.

Enfield.—We have recently had a new heating system installed in our church which provided a comfortable temperature at both morning and evening services yesterday. Mr. Auman's sermon at the morning hour was excellent. He used as his subject, "Who Can Be Saved?" His text for the evening was "What Must I Do to Be Saved?" This also was a good sermon and everybody enjoyed it.

Mrs. Auman and little Harvey have been on the sick list for the past week, but at this time are improving.

We were glad to have a former pastor, Mr. R. C. Stubbins, visit among us last week. We are always glad to have him.

Miss Ruth Barnes, who is president of our Senior C. E., was absent from the meeting last week on account of the death of her mother. We extend our sympathy to Miss Barnes and truly hope she will be able to meet with us at an early date.

The various organizations of our church are moving forward in an encouraging manner. We are still soliciting for the "Dollar a Member" campaign. So far, we have had very satisfactory results. We hope, however, that not a single member will neglect paying his dollar. The need is great, and the cause is good.

Davidson.—Bro. Wade Surratt, our youthful superintendent at Chapel Hill, was shocked by a surprise birthday dinner. He had said that they couldn't fool him, but they showed him. A large crowd of his friends were present to mark his passing another mile-post in life's journey. After a short talk by his pastor they all partoog of a bountiful dinner.

Our last monthly C. E. business meeting was held at Lineberry church. It was one of the most encouraging meetings we have held. The reports were the best yet. After the business was over we enjoyed a delightful social hour directed by Misses Flada and Bruce Smith. We closed with sentence prayers. Our young people are learning to play Christ as well and pray Christ. The next meeting will be held at the home of Bro. J. P. Elliott.

Many of our people are sick. The most seriously ill is Bro. J. B. Cook, who is in a High Point hospital.

Efland, Orange Charge.—Young People's Day program was given at our church Sunday night, that being our regular appointment. This was a very impressive service. Some of our young people had part and rendered their parts well. Our pastor made a talk on "How Young People May Share With Adults in the Life Work of Our Church."

The parsonage has recently been recovered. This work was very much needed.

Mr. Joe Thompson, one of our members, suffered a stroke of paralysis about a week ago. We are glad to report Mr. Thompson's condition some better. We are also glad to know that Mrs. Curtis Cecil has returned home from Watts Hospital.

Our Sunday school is moving on nicely. We have 120 enrolled for the New Year.

The Auxiliary will meet at the parsonage Thursday afternoon.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—Sunday school officers elected for the year 1930 are: Superintendent, Mr. W. B. Speas; secretary and treasurer, Miss Ruth Long; teachers, Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mrs. R. J. Whitman, Mrs. B. A. Sprinkle, Lola Long, Mrs. Argia Davis, and Mr. C. G. Hunter. Before Christmas the attendance of our Sunday school dropped to a low mark but since Christmas it has been climbing toward the usual standing. We hope the attendance this year will continue to climb until it has passed the highest mark of last year.

The Junior Missionary Society met at the home of Misses Grace and Virginia Sprinkle on Saturday afternoon, January 11, to hold its regular monthly meeting. After the program was given, a delightful social hour was spent in games and contests. Then the hostesses served tempting refreshments.

The pastor filled his regular appointment at this church Sunday morning. The Lord's supper was observed at this service. The subject on which Mr. Way spoke was: "The temptations of Jesus." These temptations came to Jesus just after His baptism. The three temptations that were presented to Him by the devil were very clearly discussed by the pastor. The lesson that was taught in this text should appeal to the minds of all Christians because we all face temptations some time or other in life.

Mount Zion, Pinnacle.—Our people enjoyed a brief sermon by the pastor Sunday at the regular hour, using as his subject the question of saving the soul. First, the personal soul, or "What shall I do to be saved?" which he very impressively delivered.

Our Sunday school seems to be holding up reasonably well for the winter months. We hope always to keep improving in interest and our methods of carrying on the work of the master.

We are glad to report that Brother R. S. Barber has recovered from an attack of pneumonia sufficiently to attend services again.

We are also glad that Mrs. O. W. Barber and Miss Lola Barber, who have been ill with pneumonia are recovering nicely and hope they will be able to attend services.

At 2:30 p. m. Sunday, the 19th, the remains of Mr. W. O. Fowler, who died at his home in Mount Airy, were interred in Mt. Zion cemetery. Mr. Fowler was formerly of this community and was the last member of the family of the late Charles Fowler.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Allen and family who moved from our community are missed very much. We wish for them much success.

Graham.—Things have been happening even if they were not reported immediately. Our pastor and family being away the fifth Sunday in December, visiting relatives in Maryland, we were pleased to have Dr. A. G. Dixon preach for us at the 11 o'clock hour of worship. Those privileged to hear him enjoyed and were benefited by the splendid sermon and also the interesting facts about the Children's Home.

The young people of the church presented a very fine program the first Sunday evening in January. The pastor has announced the young people will have charge of the services each first Sunday evening.

At the morning service Sunday Rev. J. F. Minnis, pastor, spoke inspiringly on the subject, "Success After Failure." He based his discussion upon Luke 5:5.

We were fortunate to have Rev. E. L. Ballard with us last Sunday night to lecture on and show pictures of the Holy Land. As he finished we almost felt we had accompanied him on the trip, so vivid was his description of scenes and points of great interest.

The usual monthly meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary will be held in the hut the fourth Monday evening. Circle No. 1, of which Mrs. Heenan Hughes is chairman, will present the program.

Albemarle.—Mrs. J. A. Furr and Mrs. Boyd Gantt were hostesses to the Ladies' Aid Society at their January meeting. A large number of our members were absent on account of sickness, which lessened our attendance considerably. The devotional period was led by the president and the hymn, "Wonderful Words of Life," was sung, after which Mrs. Anderson led in prayer.

The business was transacted in an interesting manner. A suggestion was made that we divide the society into two circles, as we now have about 36 enrolled. This cause quite a discussion, and as there were so many absent, it was decided that we wait until next meeting to make a decision on the matter. There was no special business to come before the meeting at this time, so adjournment was made, after repeating the Lord's Prayer in concert.

During the social hour, the hostesses served delightful refreshments, consisting of a salad course followed by a sweet course.

Hostesses for next meeting will be Mrs. D. L. Hatley, with Mrs. D. J. Hatley as leader.

The condition of Mrs. B. C. Burleson, who was severely burned about two weeks ago, continues to be quite painful, although she is slowly improving. The little tots in the Cradle Roll department are hoping she may soon be able to return to her post as their teacher.

Our pastor and Rev. G. F. Millaway of the Concord church exchanged places on Sunday, January 5th, at the morning servee. A large congregaton came out to hear the message, and they were not disappointed. We only hope the Concord peopde enjoyed our pastor's message as much.

Mrs. J. R. Anderson has been selected as teacher of the class formerly taught by Miss Louise Green. We are sure Mrs. Anderson will make them an excellent teacher as she is well qualified for the job. Another change in teachers is Mrs. Onnie Hathcock, who takes Miss Virgie Harwood's place in the Cradle Roll department. Miss Harwood has been a great help with the children, which the mothers of the church greatly appreciate, and it is with regret that we heard of her resignation.

The Junior Department had an attendance of 101 Sunday, which we think is a record attendance. Their number has increased until they do not have enough chairs in the assembly room to seat them. If we could get the grown-ups to attend Sunday school as well as the youngsters, we would soon have to start building more classrooms. However, we seldom ever fall below the 200 mark any more.

We are sorry to report quite a bit of sickness among our members at present. Mr. Marshall Hatley is very sick and Mrs. Hatley has not yet recovered from her recent illness. Mrs. Ira Smart, Mrs. D. L. Hatley and Mrs. W. J. Kennedy are also suffering from various physical disorders. We pray that the Great Physician may attend these in their suffering and that they man soon be restored to health and strength.

South Lexington Church.—Our work is going on just fine. On Thursday night, January 16, our Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of the pastor and his mother; there were a good many of the members present. Mrs. B. F. Everidge, the president of the society, led the meeting. Plans were laid for raising some money, and it was decided to give a supper on Saturday night, February 22 at the church. After the meeting Mrs. Isley served ice cream and cake. All present seemed to enjoy the occasion.

We held our regular services Sunday, January 19. Sunday school was well attended considering the cold weather, there being 168 present. There were larg congrgations at the morning and evening services. Brother Isley preached interestly and all present seemed to enjoy it very much.

Our service for Sunday evening, January 26, will be given over to the young people for their program, which they have been working for quite a while. A large number are expected to attend the service. The offering at that time will go on the budgets.

The Christian Endeavor Society is getting along fine in their work; they hold their meeting every Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock. Mr. Clifton Kissel led the service on Sunday night with a good crowd of young people present. We extend a hearty welcome to visitors at all times to worship with us when in Lexington.

First Church, High Point.—The First Church Fellowship Night on last Wednesday evening proved to be a decided success, there having been 80 present, and everybody enjoyed the supper and a pleasant social hour. The supper will be repeated this week, and each family is expected to bring its own dessert. Circle No. 5 of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, will be in charge. Rev. Mr. Farmer will speak on "Telling the Good News," and every one is asked to bring a bit of good news abut some person or occurrence of recent date. The executive board of the Woman's Auxiliary will hold an important meeting Wednesday evening, following the supper and devotional period.

The Sunday school report for January 12 is as follows: Attendance, 382; offering, $21.16. The goal is 500 present.

Our treasurer reports that the "Dollar per Member" for High Point College was sent last week to the Conference treasurer, Dr. George R. Brown, and this means $708. Of this amount the Woman's Auxiliary paid $100, and this organization has recently sent the same amount to Pine Ridge for a scholarship.

At last Sunday's morning service Mrs. J. C. Whitesell sang a beautiful solo, "Teach Me to Pray," and the choir rendered the anthem, "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say," with solo parts given by Mr. Arthur E. Fidler and organ accompaniments by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson.

"How Firm a Foundation," that grand old hymn which was Gen. Robert E. Lee's favorite, and which has brought comfort to thousands of God's saints through the ages, was sung by the congregation, the day having been Lee's anniversary. Rev. R. I. Farmer chose for his subject, "Re-opening Old Well-Springs." He said, in part: "It was a wise instructor who said "Burn your bridges behind you, forget the past." There are old home ties that we shall never forget. When the old homes of our childhood pass into strangers' hands and fall into ruins, becoming unrecognizable, it brings to us a feeling of deep sadness. When the young man, Isaac, went back to his childhood's home with his caravan, flocks, herds and family, he found that the wells which his father, Abraham, had digged had been abandoned and filled up. The Philistines had done this. Isaac had the wells reopened for use of the water. People are saying that the church has lost its power to change men's lives, and the waters of salvation are dried up. I am not willing to concede that the church has lost all power; there have always been dark hours, often the darkest is just before the dawn. There are some wells that must be opened. The greatest piece of legislation ever enacted on the globe was the Prohibition Amendment, which has just passed its tenth birthday, January 16th. One well that needs re-opening is a better regard for the laws of our land. Law and order belong to God. Another well is a more honest regard for our duties of citizenship. The duty of every man and woman worthy of the name is to stand shoulder to shoulder against evil in every place. I am not for force, but if there is no other way, let it be civil war, and if that be treason, so be it. Isn't it time that we open our eyes to the illicit traffic in whiskey? I think sometimes God wants us to answer our own prayers. Another well-spring that needs to be re-opened is Sabbath observance and reverence for God and His church.

This sermon was timely and full of spirit, as the minister denounced the evils of bootlegging, bomb outrages, and strikes that are prevalent in these days.

The Circle meetings of the Auxiliary were held Monday afternoon, as follows: Circle No. 4, Mrs. Douglas, chairman, with Mrs. W. A. Davis, Woodrow Avenue; No. 5, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, with Mrs. L. J. Diffee, Johnson street; No. 6, Mrs. P. S. Kennett, chairman, with Mrs. O. D. McPherson, Woodrow avenue; No. 7, Mrs. Ben Moore, chairman, with Mrs. John S. Pickett, North Main street. and No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, with Mrs. Allie Foister, North Hamilton street.

Circle No. 1, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, will meet Thursday evening with Miss Josephine Ferguson, 800 English street.

Circle No. 2, Miss Mary Young, chairman, will hold their meeting Tuesday evening with Misses Stowe on Hawthorne street, and No. 3 Miss Nellie Martin, chairman, will meet with Miss Ruth Welch, 612 North Main street.

The members of Circle No. 1, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, will serve a supper to the members of the executive board and workers in the Y. W. C. A. next Monday evening, at which 150 persons are expected.

Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Coe and children went to Winston to spend last Sunday with Rev. and Mrs. H. F. Surratt.

We are much pleased to announce that Mrs. E. L. Ballard, who is in High Point Hospital, is improving, and is able to see friends who call.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—Our pasto, Rev. J. B. O'Briant, preached a good sermon Sunday morning. The rough weather and bad roads caused our congregation to be small. I hope the people will realize what they are missing by not coming out to hear our new pastor. If the weather is bad and roads rough, I think we will get well paid for it after we go and hear Bro. O'Briant preach, for he always brings us good messages, and to have him in our homes is a pleasure, for he seems just like home-folks.

We hope to have a good year this year and trust that many souls will be brought into the kingdom.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. L. R. PEARSON.

Burlington, First Church.—Two members of First Church have recently died. Mrs. C. W. Bradshaw passed away on December 27th and was buried December 29th. The service was conducted at the residence by the pastor. Besides other relatives she leaves the husband and two small girls to mourn her going.

On Sunday morning, January 19th, Mrs. W. C. Crisco went to her reward. She had been a member of First Church for more than 30 years, having joined before her marriage. Her maiden name was Mary Vincent. The funeral was conducted by the pastor at the residence on Anthony street Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The leaves the husband, one sister, and four brothers and other relatives to grieve over her departure.

Both of these left the testimony that they were ready for the great adventure into which death carries one. May all the sorrowing ones be comforted because of their faith in God, and cultivate the same faith and be ready when their time comes.

The work at First Church moves on, though not at a rapid pace. We have all the problems incident to a large membership, with the added problems brought on by many of our people being without employment. Our people, as the Conference knows already, have a willing mind. And they are doing, on the whole, perhaps, as well financially as could be expected. We trust that the industrial situation may soon improve so that our people may be more happily situated, and then we are sure the church work will show a corresponding improvement.

Two valuable members were added to our membership last Sunday. Brother and Sister H. L. McPherson came to us by transfer from the Mebane Presbyterian church. Brother McPherson had been a member of First Church before placing his membership in the Presbyterian church; and Mrs. McPherson's mother was originally a Methodist Protestant, so we are sure they will not be long in finding a place among us and in feeling at home. Mrs. McPherson while living in Mebane was organist of her church, retaining that position for some time after moving to Burlington. We welcome her to our church, and trust that her talent may find a place of usefulness with us.

All the organizations of the church are functioning. The Senior Christian Endeavor Society, led by the president, Miss Tula Paul, will have charge of the service next Sunday evening. They are using the program as prepared by the Department of Religious Education of the Board of Christian Education. It is always encouraging to the pastor and other church leaders when the young people are willing to undertake services of this kind.

The pastor is now giving a series of evening sermons on some of the great parables of Jesus. Beginning with Sunday, February 2, he plans to begin a series of morning sermons on the general topic of "Love." Some of the sermon subjects will be: "God's Love for Man," "Man's Love for God," "Man's Love for Man," "The Insufficiency of God's Love," and perhaps others.

WORDS THAT ENCOURAGE

Hotel Westminster,
Nice, France, Jan. 1, 1930.

Just to wish you and the Methodist Protestant Herald all good things this New Year

I am sure your modest magazine is giving sunshine and courage to many a struggling soul. Service to others is the one worthwhile thing we can all do, in small or large degree. There is ample reward simply in the doing. With every good wish.

Yours sincerely,

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Cheatham

Miss Nannie Cheatham departed this life December 13, 1929. Miss Cheatham was a member of Rehoboth church. She joined the church when she was about seven years old, and she was 57 years old when she died, which makes 50 years that she had been a member of Rehoboth church. She was faithful to attend Sunday school and preaching services just as long as she was able, but for the last few months she was not able to take the active part in the services that she once did.

We have heard many good things said of her since we have been on the work. She is survived by one brother, J. D. Cheatham, with whom she lived, these two being the only ones of that family living.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer at Rehoboth church, after which the remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery.

C. L. SPENCER.

Woodleaf

Alridge E. Woodleaf was born May 27, 1879, and departed this life December 28, 1929. He joined Union Chapel church when only a boy, and had remained a faithful consistent member since that time.

He had been in poor health for some time, but he was seriously sick only about two weeks. In the departure of Bro. Woodleaf the church loses a good member, and the family a good husband and father, and the community a good neighbor. He leaves to mourn their loss his wife and four children, as follows: Lessie, Eleanor, Kenneth, and Theresa Woodleaf, and two brothers, J. M. Woodleaf, of Henderson, N. C., and J. P. Woodleaf, of High Point, N. C. And two sisters, Mrs. M. P. Lowery, of Durham, N. C., and Mrs. J. W. Hedgepeth, of Kittrell, N. C. The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Union Chapel church on Sunday, December 29. The Juinor Order, of which he was a member, held their services at the grave, which was very impressive, after which his remains were laid to rest in the church cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers.

C. L. SPENCER.

Satterwhite

On December 5 the death angel entered the home of Mr. S. H. Satterwhite and called him home. Mr. Satterwhite was 76 years old. He was stricken with paralysis on his last birthday, September 21 (last). He was a charter member of Flat Rock M. P. church on Vance charge. Here he gave his support in a very substantial way. He was interested in the advancement of the denomination as a whole, lending his aid to college and Children's Home.

He married Miss Sallie E. Wade, of Granville County, who preceded him in death.

Surviving are two sons, W. J. and J. H. Satterwhite; three daughters, Mrs. R. A. Harris, of Macon, N. C., and Misses Annie and Rome. Rev. J. B. O'Briant, a former pastor, assisted by Rev. R. A. Hunter, conducted the funeral service from Flat Rock church, and the remains were laid by the side of his wife in Flat Rock cemetery.

M. V. W.

Moore

Mr. Joseph Moore passed away at his son's home, near Roanoke Rapids, N. C. He had been in poor health for a good while, and no doubt when the end came it was a relief to the flesh, as he suffered much. He belonged to Ebenezer M. P. church for a long time. He was 70 years of age and leaves a wife, five boys and three girls who have the sympathy of many friends.

The funeral service was held January 7 at Ebenezer church by the pastor, assisted by Rev. A. D. Shelton. His body was then laid to rest in the church burying ground.

J. B. O'BRIANT.

Crutchfield

Carrie Etta Crutchfield passed to her reward December 23, 1929, aged 56 years, 10 months and 13 days.

She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Gurney Wright, Burlington, and Mrs. Graham Morrow, Saxapahaw; two half-sisters, Mrs. Bettie Durham, Saxapahaw, Mrs. Maggie Thompson, Swepsonville; one brother, W. G. Crutchfield, Burlington, and two half-brothers, G. W. Thompson, Mebane, and J. C. Thompson, Burlington.

She was a faithful member of Salem church. The church will feel a great loss, but our loss will be her gain.

The funeral was held at Salem M. P. church on December 24. The pastor was assisted by a former pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley.

T. J. WHITEHEAD.

Curtis

Mrs. Carrie Fields Curtis was born March 13, 1868, and passed from this life December 25, 1929. In young girlhood she was converted and united with Gray's Chapel Methodist Protestant church, but after her marriage to H. T. Curtis, she moved her membership to Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church. For several months she was unable to attend church. This did not cause her to lose interest. During the pastor's visits she liked to talk about the things pertaining to the church and the kingdom of God.

Mrs. Curtis is survived by four daughters and two sons: Mrs. W. A. Crosby, Mrs. H. B. Coble, Mrs. F. M. Coble, Miss Jennie Curtis, W. A. and P. B. Curtis.

The funeral was conducted at Tabernacle church on December 26 by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. D. Williams, D. D., and the burial took place in the church cemetery.

H. L. ISLEY.

Hight

Our church circle is broken again by the passing of Mrs. Minerva Grissom Hight, who was surely a "mother in Israel." Her presence in the class was like a sweet benediction. We learned to reverence her, and always loved her. Her burial, at the old home church in the silent woods, where were shady paths and fragrant oders, was ideal. On New Year's day she was rejoicing in her new home "beyond the sunset's purple rim" and "where Sabbaths have no end."

We are sorry to miss her, but we have abundant hope of her everlasting joy; therefore, Resoldved, that we tender our sincere sympathy to her bereaved family and host of friends, trusting that they all may pass out of the harvest with abundant sheaves, which their goodly heritage insures. May we all follow her as she followed Jesus.

This paper was adopted with the request that it be published in our M. P. Herald and a copy be sent tot he family.

Whitaker

The tragic death of Dr. Asa C. Whitaker, of Julian, N. C., which occurred in Winston-Salem on the 29th of December, 1929, brought sorrow to many hearts besides his family. While his family will suffer most keenly his passing, yet the people of Julian and the surrounding country feel keenly the loss of a good physician, a good citizen, a man of high ideals, a friend, generous toward a fault, devoted and affectionate in his family. He was 56 years old, had practiced medicine at Julian about 26 years. The funeral rites were held at Shiloh M. P. church on the 31st day of December, 1929. The high esteem in which he was held was attested by the large number of people gathered to pay their tribute of respect and sympathy; also eight or ten physicians, and the many beautiful floral designs brought by many of his friends.

Dr. Whitaker was a member of the Methodist Protestant church at Julian. The church will reaelize a great loss in his death. We, (myself and family), shall miss him very much; he was a true friend to us in sickness and in health. May the Lord bless the family.

Those who had part in the services were Rev. H. L. Isley, his pastor; Rev. D. I. Garner, pastor of Shiloh; Rev. D. I. Offman, of the Lutheran church, and the writer.

G. F. MILLAWAY.

Hight

Mrs. Minerva Hight, oldest member of the Henderson Methodist Protestant church, having reached the age of 87, died December 31, 1929, after being confined to her room for a number of days. She had made her home with her son, J. E. Hight, of Henderson, for a number of years.

"Grandma Hight," as she was called by all who knew her, joined the Methodist Episcopal church early in life and became a charter member of Antioch Methodist Protestant church on the Granville charge at the time of its organization, of which she remained a faithful member until she transferred her membership to the church in Henderson years ago with the family. Her husband preceded her to the glory world a number of years ago. She is survived by four children: W. C. and J. E. Hight and Miss Etta Hight, of Henderson, and Mrs. J. P. Woodlief, of High Point. Also by one sister, Mrs. W. H. Gerrell, of Kittrell, and Mrs. Ida Brewer, of Woodworth.

I had been the pastor of this good woman for more than four years and had found her a consistent, faithful member of the church of her choice, seldom missing a service when physically able to attend; even then her heart was in the work, for she often enquired about the services and the work in general. It was my privilege to visit her, especially during her last days. Her faith was strong and her love for her Master deep. I never talked or prayed with her without having my spiritual life strengthened. I shall miss her, as will the family, the church and a large number of relatives and friends.

The funeral service was conducted at Antioch church on New Year's Day, by the writer, in the presence of a company of friends and loved ones that filled to capacity the church building. The floral offering was large and beautiful. Interment was made in the church graveyard, by the side of her husband.

The bereaved loved ones have our sympathy and prayers and we join them in the expectation of seeing her again.—B. A. HUNTER.

George W. Paterson, one of the most widely known and prosperous farmers of Alamance county, passed away at his home in the Friendship community, January 17, 1930. He was prominent in educational, civic and religious activities. His health had been waning for several months.

Mr. Patterson had reached a ripe old age, being 12 days more than 76 years old. He was born in Chatham county, January 5, 1854.

I. Offman. Music was furnished by the choir of the Reformed church of Burlington. The attendance was extremely large. The floral designs were numerous and appropriate.

Mr. Patterson was one of the leading members of Friendship M. P. church. He had held sereval important church offices. His going will be greatly felt by the church and community.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation to our friends and neighbors for the expressions of sympathy and many deeds of kindness shown us in the sickness and death of our dear mother, Mrs. Harriet E. Harris.

TRANSITION

Life to me
Was a great gaunt tree
With branches stark and bare
No leaves were rustling overhead,
No robins nestling there.
The roots were dead
For love had fled,
My heart was full of care;
Life to me
Was a great gaunt tree
With branches gnarled and bare.

Life to me
Is a great green tree
With blossoms rare and bright,
For love is there
And binds her hair
With petals pure and white.
Life to me
Is a great green tree
With blossoms rare and bright,
That shine with radiant beauty
In love's soft golden light.

The Way Jesus Went

In childhood days he went the way
Parental care directed him;
He freely did appointed tasks
And labored on with steadfast vim.

When older grown he finds his way
To meeting-place of men of God:
He chose to be a worshiper
And not a piece of senseless clod.

When youth is past and manhood comes,
He stands again by parting ways;
Great gains allure him up the heights -
He turns his back, in low land stays.

Here men would gladly make him king,
But he prefers another way:
He'd show to men the way to live
In view of coming judgment day.

Among the thousand ways of death
He chose a way of pain and shame.
He called aloud for followers
Where duty leads and men give blame.

When life was o'er and duty done,
He moved about in mystic way,
As though he knew 'twas time to go
But strongly felt inclined to stay.

At last he took his wingless flight
And disappeared in clouds of glory.
But now He's here and everywhere
And will remain to end of story.

Form of Organization of the Board of Education

Surprise has been expressed that the members of this board are elected for life and elected by fellow-members instead of by the Annual Conference. Two lawyers volunteered the advice that the arrangement be changed. They scented danger in the present arrangement. These lawyers may be right, and it is well to give serious attention to what they say.

But there was a cause if no good reason for adopting the present plan of organization. However, this cause no longer exists.

We will give a bit of history that will help to explain.

Appeal was made through our church paper (then called Our Church Record) and otherwise for $5,000 to build a publishing house. This appeal yielded nearly $5,000 and a meeting of contributors was called to elect officers and form a plan of organization. This meeting was held in the basement of Grace Church on Lee Street and was attended by only eleven of the hundreds of contributors. It was understood that a contributor would have voting power in proportion to his contribution. Two of those present had pledged $500 each and enough proxies were present to make procedure legal. The meeting lasted about all day because there were two fundamental ideas that conflicted. One of these ideas was that the money contributed was an absolute gift to the church. The other was that it was simply an investment with strings attached to be recalled at the pleasure of the investor. All the appeals in the church paper had been made with the former idea in view, but one brother who had not, perhaps, carefully read the church paper, had made a pledge of $500 with the other idea in view. He argued that he should have a right to rule his own contribution. To meet that objection some one suggested that the trustees be elected for life and this was adopted. Then the brother said that he did not like to think that his son could not succeed to control after him. To this it was answered that the son might be elected to succeed the father.

The plan adopted seemed to be the nearest approch to general satisfaction of those present of any that could be suggested. It was adopted with a feeling of regret that it was not perfectly satisfactory to all.

If the right to rule the property was inherent in the creators of the property, it was but a step to the conclusion that they had also the right to select their successors.

The editor of the HERALD, one of the eleven present, suggested that the President of the Annual Conference be ex officio a member of the body of trustees and that the body report annually to the Annually Conference. These suggestions were adopted.

The plan adopted might have been the best at that time and not the best at this time.

I would call the attention of the members of the Board of Education to the following expression from the Annual Conference in 1895:

"We recommend that the proposition (to build a publishing house) be accepted under the following conditions:

"First, that the lot and building shall be the property of this Conference, and shall forever be devoted to the publishing interests of our church in this state."

A Home Without a Trouble

One bright day the impulse came to search for a home without a trouble. We passed by the homes of squalor: their troubles were evident enough. We came to a pleasant street adorned with elegant homes and decided to make a survey of them. Some of them refused to admit us. We decided that they were afraid of trouble and therein already had real trouble. But into many homes we were admitted without stating our business. We were invited to a seat and permitted to engage in general conversation. Our inquiries about members of the family were answered, sometimes freely and

CHAIN STORES and RADIO CHURCHES

The independent merchants of this and other states, are putting on an extensive campaign fighting the chain store 'menace.' And I am frank to say that I approve the move, for it is the local merchant who lives near me, who helps me carry the tax burden of the city, county and state.

There is another campaign that should be waged in our world. It is in many respects parallel to the chain store proposition. And the campaign I have in mind is one to encourage our people to go to church in the local church of the community, rather than stay at home and listen to a service broadcast by some large city church.

The local church in many communities is suffering from laxness in the attendance of members who should be present for the service. When a man or woman stays away from church they are always missed. Their absence encourages others to be absent. And not only that, it also causes the public to say they are not supporting the church, and since members are not careful to support it, why should a non member be so careful to support it?

There is in North Carolina a church of another denomination that has been receiving members over radio. They make application and are admitted to memebrship, when the pastor, nor any of the members have ever seen them, and don't know whether they are white or black. They, of course, send a contribution to the church, and this is applied to the financial program of the church. They sometimes are shut-ins, and in other cases are not shut-ins, but mothers who, perhaps, can not attend church, and others who, perhaps, refuse to go.

Now let's use the argument of the independent merchant when he speaks. It is the independent merchant who credits the man that trades at the chain store when hard luck strikes him and cash is gone. Now, who is it that will visit these radio members, or aid them when they need assistance, or visit their sick, or bury their dead? Will that city pastor come out into the back places to see them when they are sick?—No, he will speak over radio to them. Will he drive out to the remote village or rural home, go with the corpse of a loved one to a church yard, or family burying ground many miles away, and never say a word about charging for it? No, he won't do it. He is pastor of the big city church, and doesn't have time to do those things. And what's more those radio-Christians, and radio-members will not ask him to come, for they know it is useless. But I'll tell you what they will do; they will go after the preacher in the community, or the adjoining community, a man whom they won't go to hear preach, and ask him to do this service for them. He will drive perhaps 30 or 50 miles to do the service of burying a persons who belongs to a radio church or listens to radio sermons, and go home tired and worn, without so much as a word of thanks.

Now, you will say this is overdrawn. Perhaps. Perhaps not. If the people of some of the Methodist Protestant churches in North Carolina continue to stay home and hear "fine," "wonderful," "splendid," "deep" radio sermons, the pastor of the little local church and his band of workers will have to shut up shop and go into some other business.

I am in sympathy with the independent local merchant. And what's more, I'm in sympathy with the local church, and the local pastor. And regardless of whether he can preach like one of these prominent radio preachers or not, the local pastor is the pastor of my community, and I am not living up to my duties as a church member, or privileges as a citizen if I had rather stay home for a radio service than hear and take part in the one in the little brick church on the hill.

The church member who had rather listen to a radio service than be true to the vows of his church regarding membership and attendance, is a slacker. May God help us to stand by our local church, attend its services, and then if we have time, listen to a radio service.

Yours in favor of the local church,

"X."

HONORING D. L. MOODY'S BIRTHDAY

The annual gathering of Christian workers will for the twenty-fifth year convene at the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, February 3 to 6, for the four days of the Founder's Week Conference.

The auditorium at the corner of LaSalle Street and Chicago Avenue has been provided with an electric amplifier system by which the speaker's voice will easily carry to every part of the hall. The system is also extended to a number of other lecture halls so that overflow meetings will have the privilege of hearing the chief addresses from the main auditorium. Many hundreds of sittings are thus added to the hearing capacity of the auditorium.

Three continents contribute to the program in the participation of Rev. Charles W. Abel, from New Guinea; Rev. William Lamb, from Australia, and a strong group of speakers well known to American church gatherings—Bishop Horace M. DuBose, Rev. Herbert W. Bieber, D.D., Rev. Francis W. Russell, D.D., and Mr. H. A. Ironside.

The missionary emphasis will be marked and triumphant. In addition to Mr. Abel, speakers from abroad will include Dr. H. W. Hudson, from China, and Mr. Harry Strachan, from Central America. Alumni Day, Wednesday the fifth, and Missionary Day, Thursday the sixth, will be days of outstanding power and significance.

Dr. James M. Gray, president of the Institute, will preside at most of the sessions, and the inspiring Institute auditorium choir will be directed by Mr. T. J. Bittikofer in rendering many soul-stirring anthems and in leading congregational song.

AFTER CHRISTMAS—WHAT?

Rev. W. A. Ledford

Christian people in all lands celebrate Christmas. They hear the angels sing anew in the heavens each successive Christmas the same Carols sung on that first Christmas morning. With the humble shepherds they visit Bethlehem's manger that cradled the King, and with the wise men they bring their gifts of love and devotion. The Christmas celebration raises Christians to heights of generosity, joy and gladness unknown at other times of the year. If Christmas means so much to us at this far off day, what must it have meant to those who witnessed the first Christmas celebration when the angel choir sang over the plains of Bethlehem that first Christmas morning!

The hope of this brief meditation is that the high tides of generosity that swept over our lives during the yuletide, and the messages of peace on earth and good will among men, which thrilled our souls to their very depths, might be conserved. Just as each successive high tide lifts the boat higher and higher on the shore, the high tides of Christmas should lift Christians on higher and higher plains of Christian living. The danger and tendency is to fall back into the old ruts and lose the songs of praise and hymns of glory so much enjoyed during the Christmas season. Many of the readers will suffer alike anti-climax after the revival campaign is over and the dull routine life is on again. They see nothing ahead, except temptations, tests, pit-falls, with "brook-gladdened meadows and mountains of wearisome heights."

It is hard to step out of the world's spotlight into daily toils and drudgery and carry the glory of the high places along with one. The soldiers in the late World War witnessed many difficulties in finding their places on their return from over seas. Those shepherds, who went even to Bethlehem, and "returned glorifying and praising God for all the things they had heard and seen," manifested the spirit that should dominate all Christians during the whole year. The sights seen on our mountains of Transfiguration should not grow dim, nor disappear. The music that thrills our souls during our high moments should not be forgotten, but should be carried back to all our duller scenes of life. The spirit of Christmas should influence our lives for good during the entire year. Each Christmas celebration should lift us to new heights of Christian living, and that advantage should be maintained during all the year. Surely such results are possible as proved by the shepherds, and would be gratifying to the Lord of Christmas, and worth while to the pilgrims of the Cross, on their journey to that better country.

Once upon a time a number of wise men were asked what they regarded as the most nearly universal possession of mankind. After deliberation they are said to have replied that they thought it to be hope.

All people have hope, normally, "Hope springs eternal in the human breast," said Pope.

One who hasn't hope is in danger of disaster.

There may come time for any of us when darkness or gloom settled down upon us like a dark and threatening cloud, but, usually, sooner or later, there will be a rift in the cloud, and the sun will shine through.

Hope is the support of the way-farer who has lost his way in a forest; it is the stay of the seaman, whose rudderless vessel is drifting at sea; it is the distant gleam of the suffering invalid; it is the sheet anchor of the fallen and dissolute; it is the beacon light that shines for wretched and discouraged; it is the life line to the penitent sinner.

Hope is the remedy of cure for many ills of mankind –I had almost said the panacea for every ill. Paul wrote (1 Cor. 15:19 "If in this life only we have hope in Christ we are of all men most miserable." But in Titus 3:7, being justified by his Lord's grace, we should be made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.)

Hope is the anchor of the Soul (Heb. 6:19). Let us lay hold of the hope set before us (Heb. 6:18).

MEN OF POWER

The most ordinary, obscure man or woman, starting anywhere today, and fulfilling simple gospel conditions, can become a power for God and through God. When a man has faith to say with Athanasius of old, "One, with God, is a majority," he begins to be a man to reckon with. Nothing has amazed the world more than the tremendous power with which God's faithful workers have been endowed. How did Moses, the foundling, lead a slave nation out of powerful Egypt? Who can answer that question without taking God into account? How did Luther, the obscure monk, remake Europe, remold nations, and face kings? God's power is at His children's service; God's riches are at their call.

This is true in every life, and not only in the lives of leaders. The teacher struggling with a difficult class, the pastor in a debt-burdened or quarrel-ridden congregation, the mother of wayward children, the business man weighed down by care, the individual facing a seemingly impossible problem, the young man or young woman facing low ideals—all these Christians who face failure in their own strength can have the strength of the Almighty to re-enforce them if they will. The effort through our own strength to do God's work, which calls for God's power, is the cause of most spiritual failure, failure which is as unnecessary as it is painful. God's power is pledged to us in order that we may do God's work according to His plan. According to our faith, so it is unto us. We can live small, weak, limited Christian lives, or we can live big, inspiring Christian lives, and exert a compelling influence over all who come in touch with us. We can be bankrupt in plain sight of God's promises, or we can share in the riches he bestows. What shall it be?—Forward.

PRAYER

"I asked for bread; God gave a stone instead.
Yet, while I pillowed there my weary head,
The angels made a ladder of my dreams,
Which upward to celestial mountains led.
And when I woke beneath the morning's beams,
Around my resting place fresh manna lay;
And, praising God, I went upon my way.
For I was fed.

God answers prayer; sometimes, when hearts are weak,
He gives the very gifts believers seek.
But often faith must learn a deeper rest,
And trust God's silence when He does not speak;
For He whose name is Love will send the best.
Stars may burn out, nor mountain walls endure,
But God is true, His promises are sure
For those who seek."

WHERE SATAN'S STRONGHOLDS ARE

A church paper that came under our observation carried on its cover-page a picture of Lord Jesus Christ gazing on a modern city with an expression of tender pity and distress upon his face, which the artist doubtless intended to make as much like he fancied His appearance to have been when He wept over Jerusalem as possible. That our risen Lord sees what is going on in our great municipalities is undeniably true, and that it touches His divine soul with profound grief, we do not for one moment doubt. The strongholds of Satan are in our twentieth-century Babylons, and when righteousness has been established in them, the light of the Millennium will in all probability be streaming from the sky. The church needs in these congested centers of population ministers who possess not only intellectual capacity, but also an unwavering loyalty to the Word of God, a deep Christian experience, a large measure of faith, and a plenteous enduement of the Holy Spirit—men of oak and rock, not reeds that can be shaken by the wind. When the shepherd ceases to be true and goes astray, what hope is there for the flock?—Selected.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

MT. PLEASANT AND MT. ZION

January 26, Sunday.—Our appointment for the morning and afternoon was with these two churches. They are each in the western part of Randmolph County, and belong to Guilford Charge. Bad roads and sickness, we were told, reduced the attendance in the morning at Mt. Pleasant, though a goodly number were present, and we enjoyed preaching and worshiping with them. On the night of Sunday, January 19, a fire was discovered in the church by a passer-by just in time to prevent the complete destruction of the building. The origin of the fire is unknown. We feel very grateful that the church was not burned. The church has a very good Sunday School enrollment, and provision has been made for class rooms by means of curtains. Regular contributions are made to the Home.

In the afternoon we were at Mt. Zion, and conducted the funeral service of Mr. Junius Parker, who died at Italy, Texas. The deceased was reared in this community, and in his early days he professed faith in Christ and joined this church. In his early manhood he went to the Southwest, and spent the remainder of his life there, living most of the time in Texas. Our sympathies are extended to his bereaved family and relatives. Owing to this funeral service we could not have the usual contacts with our people that our visits to the churches make possible. However, we talked with some of them in private, and found that they are in a pleasing and hopeful state of mind. Our impression is that they have a Sunday School, and that they are functioning normally in this phase of the work. We shall provide preaching services for these churches as often as possible until their pastor can go to the charge in the spring.

Pleasant Grove

Sunday, 7 P. M.—After having supper with Pastor and Sister Williams at the parsonage, it was our privilege to preach and worship in the evening service of this church. A goodly number assembled for the worship. It was pleasing to note that a number in the congregation participated in the worship program by singing. John Wesley soon discovered the value of music in his movement, and set the people to singing. Every church does well to follow Mr. Wesley's leading in this particular. There is still power in congregational singing, and the pity is that it has gone out of practice in so many of our churches. Brother Williams and his people are doing a good work. Led by the pastor, the church is making it hard for "blind tigers" to thrive in the community. This is a wholesome sign. The church is doing business for God when it destroys "the works of the devil." This is one of the few churches in the conference that has a Brotherhood. This organization is active and helpful to the work. The church is organized, also, along other lines and is going forward regularly and hopefully in its work. Pleasant Grove should become one of our strongest and most useful churches.

The day with these three churches was spent with profit to us, and we trust to the people, as well. They were all kind and considerate of us, and we wish to acknowledge our appreciation of that.

Special Session

The special session of the Conference was held Monday, January 27, as announced. A considerable number of ministers were present, though only a few laymen attended. A distinguished visitor at this special session was the President of Western Maryland College, Dr. A. N. Ward. The Conference heard him gladly in a brief address. Mr. G. B. Cherry, Mr. J. M. Millikan, Mr. J. Norman Wills, Mr. W. L. Ward, prominent laymen of the church, were present and were made honorary members of the Conference. The business for which this special session was called was transacted timely and wisely, we trust. The meeting has given new hope and new assurance for adequately financing the college. This will be compensation, we are sure, for all that it cost the brethren to attend. And besides, we want to express the appreciation of the Finance Committee, the college management, and our personal appreciation to the brethren for their response to this call.

"Dollar a Member"

Yes, more good news this week! Brother Williams was not long in telling us, when we arrived at the parsonage Sunday evening, that Pleasant Grove went "over the top" that morning. I brought the chart home with me that night, and the money, $178—a dollar for every member in the church—is in hand and ready for Dr. Brown. That sounded good to me. It will sound good, likewise, to our readers. That's why I am passing it on to you. And more: Brother Bates had in his possession last night $200 that the brethren brought up to the special session to turn over to Dr. Brown. Dr. Brown is sojourning in Florida for a month, and could not be at the Conference. However, he has set up a temporary office in Florida, and will do business for the church just the same. Brother Bates will forward this money right on to him, and proper credits will be given. And more still: A good letter comes from Brother C. E. Ridge telling us that Oak Grove and Moriah churches raised $55 more Sunday on "Dollar a Member," the former raising $23, and the latter $32. He says, "Forty dollars of this is in hand ready to send to Dr. Brown this week." Let the good work go on, brethren; let it go on! "Dollar a Member" MUST succeed. Brother J. M. Millikan, the financial promoter for the college is giving his time unsparingly to his work, and is very hopeful of the outcome. An outstanding business layman recently gave a brief resume, in a public service, of the history of our conference, and declared that we were never in a better condition than we are now, and had never done more for the Kingdom than we are doing now. This is heartening. And so are all of these evidences of faith and good works, and for them we "thank God, and take courage."

Quarterly Reports

The blanks go out this week, and we trust the brethren will do us the service of returning them with the minimum of delay. We shall not know how to proceed with important conference matters until these reports are in.

District Rallies

It is the practice in some districts to hold these rallies on fifth Sundays. The first fifth Sunday is in March. It will be well if we can have some of these Rally Day programs on that date. The effect will be good for the work that lies ahead. We suggest that Chairmen of the various districts begin at once to plan a good and comprehensive program for rallies on the Fifth Sunday in March. We want to make much of these assembly occasions this year. They are possibilities of much good to us in every way.

Keeping the Church Close to God

We are under no necessity of keeping God close to the church. It is his dwelling place, and he wants to abide in it. The necessity is on our part of keeping the church close to God. It is, too, a real necessity, for which nothing else will do. Unless the church is kept close to God, it gets close to the world, and when that happens power and influence goes out of the church.

The church is not a social institution. Its mission distinctively and pre-eminently is spiritual. Its mission is to exalt Jesus as the supreme and indispensable need of every human heart, and to create on the part of sinners a hunger and a thirst for him. Its mission likewise, is to edify saints, and to encourage that holiness in daily living "without which no man shall see the Lord." This purpose of the church is not to be accomplished through costly church buildings, through wealthy congregations, through numbers on the church roll, through the perfect technique of worship programs. God alone can make the purposes of his church possible, and only as the church is kept close to him does it have any hope whatever of success in the work that it is given to do.

S. W. Taylor.

THE BEST THINGS MUST BE STRIVEN FOR

It is not the plan of the Heavenly Father to use compulsion in bringing men into the divine kingdom and in lifting them to the loftiest attainments. Jesus draws men, but not to such an extent as to override their free wills. People religiously are very largely what they make themselves not that they can do anything in their own strength, but because the aligning of themselves with the mighty forces of redemption is a work that they must perform, each acting for himself. A contemporary, in touching upon this point, very impressively says:

"Good things do not come of themselves. They must be sought, many a time struggled for. 'Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given you.' Such was the statement of God to Israel. The land was given them; yet it had to be fought for. God's gifts are not bestowed without some effort on our part to secure them. But what a promise attends the entering upon the struggle: 'I will be with thee; I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee; only be thou strong and very courageous.' "—Selected.

MY PURPOSE FOR THE NEW YEAR

To be a little kinder with the passing of each day,
To leave but happy memories as I go along the way;
To use possessions that are mine in service full and free ,
To sacrifice trivial things for larger good to be;
To give of love in lavish way that friendship true may live,
To be less quick to criticise, more ready to forgive,
To use such talents as I have that happiness may grow,
To take the bitter with the sweet assured 'tis better so;
To be quite free from self-intent whate'er the task I do,
To help the world's faith stronger grow in all that's good and true;
To keep my faith in God and right no matter how things run,
To work and play and pray and trust until the journey's done;
God grant to me the strength of heart, of motive, and of will, to do my part, and falter not, this purpose to fulfill.—Selected.

THE CONFERENCE JOURNAL

I do not need to tell any one that the Conference Journal has been delayed. But perhaps I need to tell you why. It is not the fault of the Secretary, nor of any one who had anything to do with the matter appearing in the Journal. I am glad to say that all matter was in the hands of the printer in record time this year. The fact is, there has been a strike at the plant of the Stockton Press where the Journal is being printed. It has taken some time to adjust matters. But it has been settled, and the proof is coming to me rapidly. Unless there is further delay, the Journal ought to be in your hands by the end of two weeks, perhaps sooner. If in the mean time any of the brethren can collect in advance, and forward the money to me, it will help much.

C. W. Bates, Secretary.

"WATCHMAN, WHAT OF THE NIGHT?"

"I feel that we are on the eve of some great impending disaster." These were the words of a very thoughtful man this past week, a man of tremendous power, but one who has not been a student of prophecy.

And this feeling is shared by many thoughtful men today, many who like himself have not been students of the prophetic parts of the Word of God. Just what is to happen they do not essay to surmise. But in view of all of this, it is interesting to note that there are many things happening today that are foretold must happen before the end of this age and the beginning of the next.

In Nebuchadnezzar's dream, which was interpreted by Daniel, he saw an image with a head of gold, chest and arms of silver, a body and thighs of brass, and legs of iron. The toes were of iron and clay mixed. According to that interpretation which Daniel gave him from God, the Babylonian empire was the head of gold, to be followed by the Medo-Persian empire; that in turn by the Greco-Macedonion; and that by the Roman empire with its two divisions, represented by the two legs. But before the ten toes, of clay and iron mixed, ever came into existence, the Roman empire fell. It must, therefore, be restored before the Stone cut out of the mountain can strike it and grind it to powder. And when it is revived it will take the form of a ten-kingdom affair, ten nations being under the domination of the imperialism of Rome, but mixed with the easily moulded clay, the democracy.

It is intensely interesting to see, in the light of this, what has been going on in Italy recently. Mussolini's avowed intention is the revival of the Roman empire. "We wish to render Rome as great as it was in the Golden Age." "All power of fascism." "The goal is this—Empire." "The rising faith must necessarily be intolerant and intransigent. Fascism has already trodden, and if necessary will calmly tread again, on the more or less decaying corpse of the Goddess of Liberty."

These are some of his utterances, and show better than anything else can what his purpose and spirit are.

He does not intend to neglect such an important power as the Vatican. Listen to what he says about that: "What an absurd mistake it would be to ignore such a moral power as that, a power two thousand years old and with an influence, daily increasing, over four hundred million souls." And events in this country of ours are of vast interest just now in the light of that statement.

Yes, the Roman empire is being revived; things are taking shape rapidly where the Stone can strike the ten toes.

A MORNING PRAYER

Our Heavenly Father, we thank thee for protection and sleep through the night and for the blessings of a new day. We beseech thee to guide us through all its hours, giving us wisdom to understand and grace to do thy will. Among ourselves and among all with whom we have to do enable us to keep and show the Spirit of Christ.

We pray thee to bless the children, with their companions and teachers, and do thou teach them always to be fair, to love truth and hate a lie. Guard our absent dear ones, keeping their hearts pure and their hands clean, and grant them health and prosperity according to thy will.

We ask thy blessings upon our neighbors, and especially upon any in sorrow or sickness or business trials or any trouble that their faith and courage fail not and that under thy blessing they may come to a better day. We pray for all who have yielded to temptation and all who refuse Jesus Christ,—that through repentance and faith thou mayest bring them to an assured salvation. Keep us humble and watchful and prayerful through all the day and help us to consider others rather than to please ourselves. Forgive our sins, fit us for our tasks in Jesus' name. Amen.—Rev. George N. Luccock, D.D., from God's Minute.

UNPLEASANT REMARKS

Never tell anybody an unpalatable truth when it can answer no good purpose. This sort of unnecessary candor is sometimes prompted by malace, sometimes by a mere looseness of tongue. Sydney Smith says and very justly, that friendship is frequently made an excuse for unpunishable impertinance by people who pride themselves on speaking their minds freely. The truth, maliciously spoken, and may be libelous; when volunteered in relation to matters with which the utterer has no concern it is very often unmanly. As surely as pleasant truths kindly meant and said are passports to friendship and affection, so surely do bitter ones provoke the enmity and hatred of those to whom they are addressed.

If you have a taste for sharp repartee, restrain it. It is better to lose a jest than a friend—to miss an opportunity of saying "a good thing" than to make an enemy.—Selected.

IF WE BELIEVE IN GOD

If we believed in God, there would be light
Upon our pathway in the darkest night.
If we believed in God, there would be power
To foil the tempter in the sorest hour.
If we believed in God, there would be peace
In this world's warfare, ever to increase.
If we believed in God, there would be joy
Even in tears, that nothing could destroy.
If we believed in God, there would be love
To heal all wounds and lift the world above.
Lord Christ, be near us, that, beholding Thee,
We may believe in God and be set free!

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS IN ARGENTINA

There were ten Daily Vacation Bible schools during the summer vacation which is the Christmas holiday season in the republics of the River Platte. Two of these were Methodist, two Disciples, two Baptist and four were held by the Mennonite Mission. There were approximately 600 enrolled in these schools and in all cases the enrollment represented the actual attendance as children had to be turned away for lack of space or teaching staff. The majority of children in attendance on these Vacation Schools are not Sunday School pupils but as a result of the work in Vacation Schools, many new pupils come into the Sunday School. Hugh C. Stuntz is preparing a new vacation school course in Spanish, the language of that country.

HAS WINTER COME?

If the word of Glenn Frank, the brilliant, courageous leader of our day, is only partly true, civilization is dangerously near the verge of spiritual winter. The biting blasts of the arctic circle, clear, cold and cynical, are sweeping over the heart life of the world. His startling sentences are these: "For more than a century, the chill winds of materialism have been blowing across western civilization. Its spiritual fires have been banked, if not burned out. Before the war, we were all guilty of the sin of surrender to pagan ideals ideals paganized by passion for power and pleasure. We practiced paganism while we professed Christianity. All of western civilization was thus a sort of corporate hypocrisy." In other words, we were a group of baptized pagans. Our world profession can not remain Christian, if our world participation remains pagan. The nation cannot remain half Christian and half pagan. Neither can the church.

If pagan ideals of power and pleasure rule the church, then the church is only an exhibition of ecclesiastical paralysis instead of being the vital and vibrant body of Christ. Is there anything in the analysis of Glenn Frank which applies to your church? That church, I mean, where your minister preaches, where you hold church membership, and where you worship?

Have the "chill winds of materialism" been blowing across the life and activities of your church? Have the "spiritual fires" in your church "been banked"? Have they possibly burned out altogether? Has spiritual winter fallen on your church?

Spirituality is never indefinite or indeterminate. It is always resident in personality. The spirituality of your church will rise or fall in temperature in strict proportion to the temperature of your own heart life. Has winter come in your heart?

My heart yearns with unspeakable concern that our church members, both new and old, shall not be baptized pagans, but genuinely born of the Holy Spirit, effectively trained by the Holy Spirit, unerringly led by the Holy Spirit, so that in spiritual fervor, spiritual fidelity this December shall be as "pleasant as May."—Bishop Henderson in Michigan Advocate.

THE POLITICAL STRENGTH OF PROHIBITION

Get the significance of this: We have had prohibition for ten years. The policy had a majority in Congress for a number of years before that.

In every succeeding Congress the strength of the wets has been less than in the Congress immediately preceding. Despite the most strenuous and unscrupulous propaganda, the political strength of the wets has steadily diminished.

Congress is elected by the people. If the propaganda against the prohibition law had any merit it would be registered in popular approval at the time of Congressional elections.

The wets have the noise. The drys have the votes.

HE OBEYED GOD

A year ago occurred the death of Kim Chang Sik, the first ordained pastor in the Methodist Episcopal Church of Korea and its first district superintendent. He assisted in establishing the first Christian Church and school in the city of Pyengyang.

If the Railroad Systems of the United States Had Been As Complete and Efficient In 1861 As They Are Today

THERE WOULD HAVE BEEN NO CIVIL WAR

This statement was made in an article appearing in a recent issue of The American Legion Monthly. According to the author the basis of this statement lies not in the fact that troop movements, transportation of supplies and equipment would have been facilitated by such a complete network of railways, but in the fact that a mutual understanding between the North and South would have existed because of the contact they would have had by easy inter-visitation.

Is it possible that the Methodist Protestants of North Carolina will fall into dispute and the denomination into decadence because of a lack of understanding of the existing problems of the church?

The METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD can help to iron out differences and suspicions and place the needs of the denomination before the people——IF the circulation covers the denomination in the State.

Do you remember the verse in the Bible which Herbert Hoover kissed when he took the oath of office as President of the United States? Here it is:

"Where There Is No Vision the People Perish"

In 1894, a severe persecution of the young Christian Church arose, and Kim Chang Sik, with other native Christians, was thrown into prison, where he was beaten. One night he was thrust into the death cell; he fully expected to be executed the next day, when once more an attempt was made to make him recant. But he responded, "We ought to obey God rather than man."

After more beatings he was discharged. On his way to the home of the missionaries, he was stoned. He was a man of strong Christ-like character and his service extended over forty years. He lives in the hearts and minds of his followers because he obeyed God.—Forward.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE HAPPIEST THING

It certainly was difficult to keep solemn. Some lively sprite of fun and mischief had possessed Tomboy all evening, and refused to go away, even when it was time for saying prayers. Perhaps it knew that some things sound funnier than usual when you say them in your prayers or in church. It must have been the sprite, for it wouldn't be nice to think that Tomboy was trying to be funny when speaking to God; but, then, with Tomboy you could never just be quite, quite sure.

"But people don't laugh when they're talking to God," said Daddy.

"Oh, don't they?" said Rosemary. "Poor God!"

"Why do you say 'poor God'?" asked her Daddy.

"Well, it must be awful for God if no one ever laughs with Him, and helps Him to be happy, too, and forget His trouble. It would make me sad if people always talked sadly to me."

"Perhaps you don't really mean what you're saying if you are laughing."

"Sometimes I'm so happy I can't help smiling and laughing a little when I say my prayers. Does God not like that? Does He think I don't mean what I say?"

"I am very sure God is glad when you're as happy as all that," said Daddy. "Of course, a serious and solemn face doesn't always show that you mean what you say. I think we should just be very glad that we can talk to God at all, and that He'll listen to us, but we should be very solemn, too, because it is such a wonderful thing to talk to Him. We should be both glad and solemn at once.

"Is there no way of praying with laughing in it? Daddies like little people to laugh with them, don't they?"

"Well, it's certainly not easy to be glad and solemn at once, but it can be done," said Daddy. "God made your lovely laughter, and I'm sure He would not like anybody to crush it in His name. But I believe we are all too bad and sinful to laugh happily with God. Perhaps we'll be able to do it better in heaven. Now, there is a way of praying that is far happier than laughing, and far nicer. A way in which you can be ever so glad and yet very solemn both at once. It is called being reverent."

"What does being rev'rent mean?" asked Rosemary.

"Being reverent is the biggest thing anyone can do or feel, little girl," said Daddy. "Whenever you feel great wonder and love at anything which is very great, or very good, or very beautiful, then you are reverent. When we think how great and good and wonderful God is, and Who it is we are speaking to when we pray, we are very glad, but very solemn, and we want to do something bigger and finer than laughing, something even happier; we want to be reverent."

"Is being rev'rent really happier than laughing, Daddy?"

"I think it is."

"Is that why you like to go to church?"

"Perhaps it is," Daddy replied. "And I can tell you this, too, that people's faces are always most beautiful when they are reverent. It makes people beautiful as the angels must be who see God. Not even laughing makes people look beautiful as reverence does. Your little face is lovely when laughing makes it all bright and radiant and happy, but it's far lovelier when you're praying from your heart to God, or singing beautiful things about Jesus. There are lots of things in the world to wonder at and to love—things that are beautiful and people that are good; and the happiest thing to do is not to look only for things to make us laugh, but to see all the good and wonderful things like that if we can learn to wonder and to love them.

> 'Earth's crammed with heaven
> And every common bush aflame with God;
> But only he who sees takes off his shoes:
> The rest sit round and eat black-berries.' "

"Oh! Daddy, how could they eat blackberries when God was there?"

"Just as some people do it in their prayers."—Rev. E. T. Vernon, in British Weekly.

THE HAUNTED WOODS

"No, said Marge Meredith firmly, "I'm not a bit superstitious."

"I'm not either," her brother Dick replied stoutly.

Their cousin Jim Bradford smiled shyly.

"Well," he remarked, "I've heard some pretty queer tales about this mountain. By the way, have you ever seen Old Goodman's grave? Of course, there must be some way of explaining it, but they do say that Old Goodman was a hermit who lived up here for years by himself and one day some hunters came up here and stopped at his little cabin. It was growing dark and when they went into the cabin, by the dim light they saw something sneak across the floor. It was a porcupine. They made a light and found the bench and stool and table all gnawed up. Then they knew nobody had lived there for some time. Well they looked around outside and pretty soon in the deepest part of he woods they found a tombstone, a neat marble slab—I'll show it to you. It marked the hermit's grave. Now, how did he manage to bury himself and put a tombstone on his grave? That's the question."

"Yes, I've heard that yarn," said Dick, "and about the ghost that prowls around here, too. But I don't believe it, no sir!"

"Neither do I," said Marge glancing quickly around.

They were gathering nuts in a little clearing near some dense evergreen trees. There was a brisk breeze blowing the boughs and leaves, making a sighing noise and causing the lights and shadows to dance and quiver.

"Don't it look spooky in there?" remarked Jim, pointing into the trees. "The trees sort of hiss, don't they? And it looks as though something was moving around in the shadows."

"Aw, hush up!" warned Dick. "You make me tired."

"Dare me to go in there?" demanded Marge boldly. "I'll show you I don't believe in ghosts."

"Gather your nuts, Marge," said Dick, "what's the use of wasting time."

"We've got the pail almost filled," said Marge. "Let's get Jim to show us the tombstone. He says he's been there and knows where it is."

"Sure I know where it is," said Jim, "but I'll tell you honestly I wouldn't care to go there after dark."

"Well, who wants to," Dick demanded.

"We want to go there now," said Marge.

Jim finally consented, but first he had to climb a tree to get his bearings and sight some landmark which he knew.

Afterwards he led his friends confidently along the trail saying:

"I hope we'll get back all right. Some very queer things have happened up here. Remember that Italian or some kind of foreigner who was found up here scared stiff and telling some story about meeting a ghost and being chased half the night?"

Marge took her brother's hand, but they kept on bravely until they saw a tumble-down log cabin before them. This had been the hermit's lodge, Jim told them, and of course, they went inside timidly and looked around.

After peeping in all the nooks and crannies of this gloomy shack, the young adventurers went to find the tombstone. They had not far to go. After skirting the cabin three times in widening circles they saw something white gleaming through the trees.

"That's it!" hissed Jim in an awed voice.

There in the dense growth of trees and underbrush stood the stone. Dick stooped down and read.

"Here lies Bill Goodman, a hermit.
Let him rest in peace."

"Gee!" Dick exclaimed. "It's all spelled wrong. That's funny, isn't it?"

"I'll say," agreed Jim. "It's awful funny. Everybody around here was mystified. And believe me, everybody locked doors and windows for a long time at night after all this was known."

Dick looked very thoughtful and turned questioning eyes toward Marge. She was reading the inscription on the tombstone.

"Pe-e-c-e," she said. "Hum. That hermit couldn't have been very well educated."

"He wasn't," explained Jim. "He could hardly read or write, but he had been brought up in the back woods and loved nature and hated people. He kept going off by himself into the woods, they say he could pretty near talk to animals. Anyway he ended, you know, by staying up here and being a regular hermit."

"Now, let me ask you," said Dick. "How could a man bury himself? It can't be done, that's all."

"Well, he did it, didn't he?" demanded Jim. "Maybe, at least, the folks say, his ghost came and did it."

"Huh," snorted Marge. "I bet—say—listen—" she looked excitedly from one to the other of her companions. "I bet I know! He didn't bury himself."

"What?" from Jim.

"I know," cried Dick, "he isn't under that stone at all. He didn't like hunters and nut pickers to visit him, so he went away and left that tombstone here."

Jim's face broadened.

"Say, why didn't anybody think of that before?"

"Jim," said Marge, "I noticed a spade in that cabin. Let's dig under the stone and see."

The boys ran and got the spade, it didn't seem necessary to disturb the tombstone, so they just dug around it. The earth was hard, and they stuck an immense root from a big tree nearby, which went down, down ever so far.

"This dirt hasn't been disturbed for ages," said Jim. "I'm sure now. The hermit isn't buried here at all."

"Well, after all," said Marge, "he had a right to go away in peace."

"I bet the ghost that chased the Italian was the hermit," said Jim, "Come on let's get away. I'd hate to have him catch me now digging in his grave."

"Sure," agreed Dick, "I don't mind ghosts, but a cranky hermit can stampede me any day."

Hastily the three put the spade back in the cabin and fearfully left the spot, expecting any moment to have the hermit dart out at them from behind most any tree.

"It's much scarrier to run than to walk along," panted Marge, doing her best to keep up with the boys.

When they reached the village and told their story, it caused quite a stir. Several of the men went up next day and dug up the grave. Sure enough, not a bone did they find under that white tombstone.

"It's a wonder we didn't think of it before," everybody said.—Selected.

THE RADIO WARNING

John Dewey heard his mother calling from down-stairs, so he answered, "Just a minute, mother!" and turned to his radio set to tell his friend Ernie that he had to go now but would be back later.

The radio was not a telephone radio, so John didn't actually say this to Ernie. It was a dot and dash radio, and whatever you said you had to spell out letter by letter according to a code. Both boys knew this code and this knowledge made it possible for them to send messages to each other over the one hundred miles of wild western country that separated their two ranches.

"I'm coming, mother," called John again. "So long, Ernie," he dot-dashed. "I'll call you up later."

"Go out on the field and get some prairie eggs, will you John?" asked his mother. "I do need some for cooking tonight."

As the boy went out of the house he noticed that the sun was partly hidden by a great black bank of clouds coming out of the east.

"Looks like rain, mother," he said.

"It does a little," was the answer. "But I don't believe it will rain very much."

But Mrs. Dewey was mistaken. John had scarcely reached the edge of the field where he usually hunted for the prairie chicken eggs when he felt the first drop of rain and heard the first mutterings of distant thunder. He looked anxiously toward the sky and as he caught the sight of his father galloping the plow horsees toward the barn.

"What is it, dad?" he cried.

"A tornado! Quick, John! Run in the house and help your mother close all the doors and windows. It's going to be a corker!"

He had just reached the house when the wind freshened. The thunder was heavier by now, and the sky darker.

"All the windows are shut," his mother said. "You'd better go upstairs and watch out for that radio of yours."

"You mean the aerial, mother?"

"Yes."

"Well, I can't do anything about that. If it blows down, it blows down. I can't stop it."

But mention of the radio gave him an idea. He ran up to his operating room and started up the rotary spark gap. Then he pressed down the key and called his friend Ernie

There was no reply.

He waited a moment and tried again.

Still no answer.

By this time the wind was howling, the rain was falling and the thunder crashing as though the world was coming to an end. John felt the house shake under the force of the rain and the wind. He tried the radio; this time with success, for in spite of the noise of the storm, he heard faintly the dots and dashes of Ernie's answer.

John did not waste time in any conversation. He switched over to his transmitting set and sent:

"Tornado heading your way two hundred miles an hour. Get ready."

But before he finished the word "ready," he heard a tremendous crash!

The aerial must have been blown down from the roof of the barn. It had taken the aerial and the guy wires down with it, so the radio was now out of commission.

"I got the warning off in time, anyway," thought John. "I wonder if he received it?"

There was another rending of wood, followed by a second crash. John looked out of the window and saw that the barn roof had blown off and had sailed through the air as far as the high stone wall of the cornfield. There it had smashed itself to bits. A tree blew down a moment later, and soon afterwards, with a wrench that almost overturned the house, the kitchen ell of the Dewey homestead broke away from the rest of the building and went tumbling across the prairie.

When the tornado passed, the family came out of the corner where they had sought refuge and surveyed the wreck. There were a few things left standing about the ranch, but not many; and the downstairs rooms were in hopeless disorder.

"The most serious thing is the loss of our kitchen," mourned Mrs. Dewey. "There isn't a thing to eat in the house and no way to cook it even if there was."

"I'll drive into town and get a stove and some supplies," said Mr. Dewey. "You can get along until I come back, I guess."

But when he came to look for the wagon it was gone!

"I can't walk in," he said. "It's too far."

"Never mind, dad," said John. "I'll rig up a small aerial out of what wire there is left and send a radio to the broadcasting station. The men there will see that we get help."

Half an hour later he was trying to get in touch with the broadcasting station. He called it over and over again, listening each time to the announcer and to the beginning of the musical number. Finally the music stopped suddenly and the announcer said:

"One of our listeners has just telephoned in to say that somebody is calling this station in the Morse code. If the person wishing to talk to us will send his message promptly we will do all we can to help him."

Then John sent his message. He told about the tornado and the wreck it had made of the house. He asked them if they would send out food and a few carpenters.

"We certainly will," came the announcer's voice. "Anything else?"

"That's all, thanks," was John's return message. Then he began to call Ernie, but no reply for two hours.

"Did it hit you?" he queried.

"Did it hit me?" was the reply. "I'll say it did. But thanks to your message of warning, we had all the livestock in the barns and everything else tied down with rope.

"Did your aerial stay up?"

"Nope. I came down with the first strong gust of wind. But do you know those radio towers built of steel like the framework of a windmill?"

"Yes. What about them?"

"Well, my father is going to buy two of them for me."

"How can you use two?"

"I can't. One of them is for you!"

"For me?"

"Yes. You see, my father figures that your warning saved him over three thousand dollars in damages, so he feels he can afford to spend a little bit to repay his debt to radio."

"That's funny," was John's reply. "My father feels we ought to have radio telephone instead of this dot-and-dash business. He has offered to buy us the tubes if we'll make the sets."

"And will we?" asked Ernie. "Both together now—"

And anybody listening in at that wavelength would have been surprised to hear two stations at once saying:

"I'll say we will!"—Selected.

A Home Without a Trouble

with evident pleasure, and sometimes reluctantly and with evident pain. In the first home we entered they told us that all the children but one were in school, and that one was in bed, a confirmed invalid.

In the second home we entered we were met by a motherly looking lady. She was very cordial and seemed to be glad some one came to talk with her. When we inquired about her children, she replied: "Alas, I have no children. We had three dear ones and a scourge of diptheria took them all away."

In the next home we found four lively children living with grandmother. When we asked about their father and mother we were told that they had parted. The grandmother said: "It's easy to rear your own children when you are young, but it's hard to rear another set when you are old."

In the next home we found the troubler was Charlie. His habits were bad and the family felt disgraced.

There was something about the next house that made us knock gently. A pale-faced lady mistook us for a minister and invited us in. I could see she had been weeping and I ventured to inquire the cause of her trouble. With an outburst of crying she said: "Jennie has been gone for a week and I can't find out where she is."

We gave up in despair our search for a home without a trouble. We recalled the Bible statement, "Man is born to trouble as the sparks fly upward." The only consolation we could find was in the thought that "these afflictions work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory."

A COURAGEOUS PREACHER

Any man who is filled with the Holy Spirit will preach the Word (not his own opinions) with boldness, not with fear and trembling lest he might possibly say a word to offend some godless church member. Sam Jones says, "The greatest blessing God ever bestowed on a church is a good preacher. The greatest blessing God ever bestowed on a preacher is a membership that will stand by his side when the blasts of a thousand cannon are belching in their faces."—Selected.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER
President C. E. Society, High Point College

February 2: How May Endeavorers Crusade With Christ? Rom. 12:1-9

(Christian Endeavor Day)

Read Your Bible

Monday—Personal dedication. Isa. 6:8.

Tuesday—Working for souls. Dan. 12:3.

Wednesday—Working for peace. Romans 12:18-21.

Thursday—Working for the church. Acts 20:28-35.

Friday—Working for others. Jude 21-25.

Saturday—Working with Christ. John 15:4-8.

Preparation

Since this meeting comes on Christian Endeavor Day comes as a culmination of Christian Endeavor Week, it is only right that we should celebrate this day in a special way.

Choose the best material in your society to insure the sucess of the meeting. Have your usual program but more than that—have two or three members to present something of the life and work of Dr. Francis E. Clark, including the founding of Christian Endeavor and its early years. A very interesting talk could be centered around the achievements and the spread of this great youth movement. If possible, hang a picture of Dr. Clark in front of the room, also a Crusade poster. It would be well to have your pastor make a brief talk on the "Crusade With Christ" campaign. Have some pledge cards ready to be signed at the close of the meeting.

Use any of the following hymns: "We're Marching to Zion," "Am I a Soldier of the Cross?" "Onward, Christian Soldiers," "Jesus Calls Us O'er the Tumult," and "The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

Leader's Lines

No better word than "Crusade" could have been chosen to fit the spirit of Christian Endeavor. Crusading cannot be done individually. It calls for cooperation, for carefully laid plans and for a long and strenuous campaign. A crusade is based on the cross; it is impossible without sacrifice. The ancient crusades failed because they lacked well-made plans and enthusiasm. They failed for still another reason: their purpose was unworthy. The aims of our crusade are spiritual; youth is enthusiastic—we must not contemplate any possibility of failure.

We need to strive to win others to Christ, after first making sure that our own strength and faith are secure. We must begin in our own circles. Evangelism is the foremost part of our crusade. Second, comes the crusade for world peace. Christian Endeavorers must be familiar with problems concerning world peace and then take a definite stand. Last, but not least, the crusade for citizenship. We must first become good citizens, for we lead others to be what we ourselves are.

We need to distinguish between the fighting for a better world through standing for the right and the militant spirit of war.

To Be Answered

1. Discuss briefly the early crusades.
2. Why is a crusade without Christ fruitless?
3. Do you think Jesus would join in all our activities? Why?
4. What is the best tool we have of Evangelism?
5. Distinguish between crusading for Christ and crusading with Christ.
6. Against what should Endeavorers crusade?
7. Name ten ways Endeavorers may crusade. (Divide this into several topics, allowing discussion for each.)
8. How may we help to bring about a sentiment against war for peace?
9. In what ways may we crusade for a better citizenship?
10. To what extent should such crusades be carried?

The Poetry Corner

The Son of God goes forth to war,
  A kingly crown to gain;
His blood-red banner streams afar!
  Who follows in His train?
Who best can drink his cup of woe,
  Triumphant over pain,
Who patient bears his cross below,
  He follows in His train.
—Reginald Heber.

Did we in our own strength confide,
  Our striving would be losing;
Were not the right man on our side,
  The man of God's own choosing.
Dost ask who that may be?
Christ Jesus, it is He,
  Lord Saboath, His name,
  From age to age the same,
    And he must win the battle.
-Martin Luther.

Carry on! Carry on!
Fight the good fight and true;
Believe in your mission, greet life with a cheer;
There's big work to do, and that's why you are here.
Carry on! Carry on!
Let the world be better for you;
And at last when you die, let this be your cry—
Carry on, my soul! Carry on!
—Robert W. Service.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Elbaville, Lexington, State Street.—Our Sunday school attendance is holding up fine.

Our pastor delivered a forceful sermon the third Sunday afternoon, after which he called a meeting with the young people for the purpose of planning to give a young people's program, but no specified time was set.

It was decided, and a date set, that we would have a "Home Coming" the third Sunday in April. This will be of course Easter Sunday. There will be special music for the day. We hope this will be continued as an annual affair.

Our Christmas program was carried out nicely and attended by a large crowd. Many nice gifts were received at the close of the program.

We were glad to have back in our community during the Christmas holidays our former pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, of Vance charge, now a student at Duke.

We feel very much grieved about the going of Mr. U. A. Orrell, one of our oldest members and also a trustee of the church. This man we all loved, and was a faithful worker. Funeral services will be conducted at this church Monday afternoon at 2 p.m.

Our Christian Endeavor is still striving for the Christian training of youth. We feel that this organization is something that we accomplished last year that is worth continuing this year. Thank God for those who attend and take part. We have not as yet reached one point of discouragement.

Piney Grove.—Our pastor preached an excellent sermon Sunday. It was mostly to the young people, but we older ones enjoyed it so much. The congregation was very good considering the bad roads. I hope that those who do not attend services will realize what they are missing by not coming out to hear Brother Bingham. We always feel that we have been well paid when we hear his inspiring messages.

Our Sunday school is in session every Sunday and attendance increasing some. We think it is doing very well for the winter months, but we hope to keep increasing as spring opens. We are glad to have our Sunday school teachers in the Sunday school and preaching service. Mr. J. C. Delk, our Sunday school superintendent, is always looking and asking for suggestions to create more interest. He has recently promised to give every person a goldfish for each new member they bring to Sunday school. Mrs. J. F. Delk was the first to win, bringing three new ones. The writer hopes to get some of those fish.

Many things have happened since we last reported. Our church has lost one of its members, Uncle Frank Cameron, who will be badly missed, as he was a good man and a liberal giver to the church. When we think of him we can't hardly realize that he is dead. Mrs. N. W. Lanier, a member of Cid church, has also passed away. We feel that church has lost one of its best members, as she was a great church and Sunday school worker. Most of her conversation was on church affairs and living for the Master. We don't know who can fill her place.

We are sorry to note the serious illness of Mrs. J. M. Yates. We hope for her a speedy recovery.

We were pleased to see one of the members give the pastor her subscription for the Herald. We think it is the best paper at all.

Hoping this will be a better year for Piney Grove than last year,

MRS. J. T. SURRATT.

First Church, Thomasville.—We want to thank the Young Men's Bible Class for the fine spirit they have shown towards the "Dollar a Member" campaign for the High Point College. They gave $25, two dollars more than there were members in the class. If everyone would do his best as these boys have done, there would be no more fear for the College. This is not all they have done. If any money is called for, for the church, this class is among the first to contribute.

The Christian Endeavor society is improving in every way. For a time the Juniors and Intermediates met with the Seniors, but now they have their own separate society. Mrs. E. O. Peeler has charge of the Juniors and Mrs. J. W. Baity the Intermediates. There is a large class of these young folks and we are looking forward to a larger one. These boys and girls are interested in the work, and if we can keep them interested they will do great work in the future. They need the training that a C. E. society can give them and it is the duty of the older members of the church to see that they get this training.

We are looking forward to the joint meeting of the C. E. societies in our city. The Community C. E. and the West End C. E. are going to meet with us at this church on the third Monday night in February. Both young and old are invited to attend this meeting.

Young People's Day was observed in our church Sunday evening, January 26. The theme of the program was "Youth Sharing." After some very appropriate songs and the scripture by two young people, Rev. E. O. Peeler, our pastor, delivered a fine talk on "How young people may share with adults in the life and work of our church."

Pleasant Grove.—Our pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, brought us a very able sermon Sunday morning from Matthew 6:21, "For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." At the close of this service the C. E. workers who had been making the "Dollar a Member" canvass for the College came to the front and finished the task, $178 ready to be sent in. With good leadership it is not so hard to do things. This group is very fortunate in having Mrs. W. G. Myers as their leader.

At the evening service the President, Rev. S. W. Taylor, brought us a splendid message on "The Church at Its Best," from Ephesians 5:27. May we all strive for this mark and be satisfied with nothing less than our church at its best. We were very glad to have Rev. Mr. Taylor and hope he will pass our way again soon.

We are planning to celebrate the 100th anniversary of our church the fourth Sunday in April.

We are glad to note that our superintendent's daughter, Mary Alma Teague, who has been sick, is improving. She was absent from her Sunday School class last Sunday. She had not missed a Sunday in nearly two years.

Lexington, State Street.—All the services last Sunday were somewhat diversified. The opening exercises for Sunday school were conducted a little differently from the program we have followed for several Sundays. At the 11 o'clock hour there was a roll call of the church membership, and also honorable mention of all who have made a perfect attendance for the conference year. A good many had made almost perfect attendance, and an encouraging number had been present at every service. At the 11 o'clock hour special music in the form of a duet was given by Mrs. D. C. Potts and Miss Ruth Vuncannon, which was very much enjoyed.

At the evening hour for worship, 7 o'clock, one pleasing feature was special music by the choir, every member being present, and every chair filled. The singers wore white robes, which added to the beauty and spirit of worship. We also had an instrumental music treat at this service given us by Messrs. Wall, Myers and Jolly, all of Lexington. Mr. Wall and Mr. Myers are violin artists and Mr. Jolly is an efficient teacher of the cornet and trumpet. He played on the trumpet Sunday evening for us. Mrs. Koonts rendered her usual fine music at the piano.

Our pastor's messages were of the most inspiring nature, and many pleasing comments and expressions of appreciation were heard from the large audience which almost filled the spacious auditorium.

Next Sunday evening the service will be principally for the young people. The choir will be made up of young people for the evening and we are expecting some fine singing.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—At the Sunday morning service Rev. H. L. Powell spoke on the text, "How short the time is." He impressed upon us very heavily that we should make use of time and its opportunitiees. He also made it very plain that we could not serve Christ and the worldly things of today also. Are our aims and tasks in life in obedience to God? Brother Powell delivered the sermon in such a way that even the children could understand it. At the next appointment the pastor will preach especially to the children for some ten or fifteen minutes, after which he will preach to the entire congregation. A large number of children are urged to be present and also grown-up people.

Mr. and Mrs. Elera Murphy laid a small daughter, of nine months old, to rest in the Mt. Pleasant cemetery the past week.

We regret very much to report that Mrs. Jos Ball has been kept away from church for a good while on account of ill health. We hope that she will be better soon, and be able to be back at church with us. May the readers of the Herald remember her in their prayers.

We also regret to say that Mr. Clay Hayworth is very sick. He has been in a bad condition for almost a year. He doesn't seem to improve any. We sure do wish he could get well. He has two motherless children, and they need him. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hayworth, members of the Mt. Pleasant church. They are among the most faithful members of the church. "May Mr. Hayworth be restored to health and strength again" is our prayer. He needs your prayers.

Yours for higher aims,

North Davidson Charge.—We are moving on in spite of bad weather and muddy roads. Congregations are good. I notice on bulletin boards that the Sunday school attendance is slightly better at all four churches than last year. All appointments have been filled to date. Some sickness among our membership. Hope these will soon be well and with us in worship again.

We are still receiving kind expressions of appreciation from this people. Brother R. E. Leonard was kept at home on account of sickness when Bethesda pounded their pastor, but he and Sister Leonard were determined not to be left out. So we found sausage and a 48-pound bag of flour in our auto. We thank them and pray God's blessings upon them.

We are enjoying the Master's work in the midst of this good people. We are not getting out among them as we wish to. Hope to make up lost time when weather and roads get good. One good brother said to me, "I would not try to visit during bad winter weather. You should take care of yourself."

H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Harmony. — Our Sunday school is doing nicely this winter. We wish to make our Sunday school in 1930 better than we did in 1929. If everyone will work together we can do so, but without the prayers and help of the community at large we can do nothing; so let's all do our best.

Our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. D. D. Broome, were with us the past weekend. While here Brother Broome delivered two instructive sermons to us. We are always glad to have Rev. and Mrs. Broome with us.

The Woman's Missionary socieety met at the home of Mrs. Henry Balentine on the past Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Our Christian Endeavor society held its regular meeting Sunday evening at 6:30. A very instructive program wae rendered. The people of the Christian Endeavor society will hold a business meeting at the church Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock in order to organize a contest between members of the society. We are planning to have a social on St. Valentine's night. We hope that the social committee will help make his social as attractive as possible.

Sunday was the day set aside at our church for communion. A large number communed, not only the members of our church but members from other churches as well.

The quarterly conference met at the church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Our church raised, or rather, pledged $95 Sunday to help cover the church, and we still hope to raise more. We thank everyone who donated money for this purpose. REPORTER.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—The work here is moving along nicely. We are having a splendid Sunday school under the leadership of our superintendent, Mr. R. H. Arrington.

Our pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, filled our appointment Sunday with a splendid sermon. It seems that each time he preaches his sermons are better. The Lord's Supper was administered at this time. We were very glad to have Mrs. Fogleman worsship with us.

We are busy now trying to raise the "Dollar a Member" and trying to get subscriptions for the Herald. I think every Methodist Protestant home should take the Herald. In fact, I don't think it is a real Methodist Protestant home unless the Herald is a member of the home.

The Woman's Auxiliary met with Mrs. J. L. Alston on Tuesday, January 14, 1930. Mrs. B. Hawkins conducted the devotional services. We were glad to have a number of visitors present, especially our pastor and wife. We were glad to have them join our auxiliary. We are hoping to raise the balance of our budget before the end of the missionary year.

Canaan, North Davidson Charge.—Brother Powell came to us Sunday afternoon with a very helpful sermon. At his next appointment, the fourth Sunday afternoon of February, he has planned to speak to the children. For his text he is to use an egg.

The Christian Endeavor society organized by our former passtor, Bro. T. J. Whitehead, has not met for the past two weeks on account of bad weather; however, we are planning to meet next Wednesday night.

Our new Sunday school officers are filling their places with success. We are very proud of them and feel sure that they are going to do their best during this new year.

A hearty invitation is extended to everyone to visit our services. We are always delighted to have visitors.

Pinnacle.—We had very good attendance at Sunday school and at preaching services last Sunday, considering the cool weather.

Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, filled his appointment at 11 o'clock. After the songs, "Rock of Ages" and "My Faith Looks up to Thee" were rendered by the choir, we were led in prayer by Mr. Levi Watson. The announcements (The Women's Auxiliary Society will hold their regular meeting Friday, January 31. The sacrament will be given here at the regular 11 o'clock service February 23.) were made by our pastor, who very forcefully rendered a useful and helpful sermon. He used as his subject "Laying Up Treasures." After reading the scripture lesson from the sixth chapter of Matthew, he took as his text Matthew 6:19-21. After pointing out the different kinds of treasures, he stressed the importance of laying up treasures in heaven, and of preventing earthly treasures from coming between us and God. The speaker called our attention to the fact that we are not in the world merely to build a reputation for ourselves, but to build a good character based upon the inward feeling of the heart - keeping in mind that the greatest of all treasures is a place in that eternal home. At the close of this interesting sermon, we were led in prayer by Mr. S. P. Jones.

First Church, High Point.—In spite of disagreeable weather, the attendance at the Wednesday Fellowship Supper meeting was 70. The third meeting will be held next Wednesday at 6.45 p.m. and a group of men with Mr. John C. Whitesell leader will be in charge of the supper. After supper an old-fashioned "sing" of favorite hymns will be held, followed by a devotional period of 30 minutes.

On last Sunday morning the pulpit was most acceptably filled by Dr. A. Norman Ward, president of Western Maryland College, who is well known and popular here. He delivered a very unusual sermon from two texts, the words of St. Paul in Acts 17:26, "And hath made of one blood all nations of men," and the words of Jesus in Matt. 28:19, "Go teach all nations." Dr. Ward said in part:

"I wish I could speak calmly and quietly, for the coming week will be a strenuous one for me, calling as it does for an address every day and two next Sunday; but, whenever I speak on this subject a mighty, rushing wind sweeps over my soul.

"I shall tell a story that you are not going to forget. A rich man, who was self-made, having been very poor, his father a drunkard, one brother had run away from home, his sisters were women of shame, had occasion to trace his ancestry, and for ten generations not one individual could be found who had contributed anything to the world. He went to a lawyer and stated his case, saying, 'I have money, and tell me what I can do to protect my child and his children for ten generations.' The lawyer smiled, and taking a sheet of paper, figured for several minutes and gave it to the man. Then the lawyer said, '1024 grandparents of this child now live in him.' The man exclaimed, 'Oh! my God, my God!' That means that every child inherits the evil tendencies and good traits of 1022 forebears, besides those of his own father and mother! I would come back to an important consideration. Jesus said, 'I have come to redeem the human race; go teach everybody and all nations.' I believe in the miraculous conception, and the blood of every human being flows through Jesus' veins. America is the land of opportunity.

"I want everybody to know about Christ. No college in America—and I have made a thorough study of all of them—has done as well as High Point College in five years of existence, and gotten along as well financially. It is my work to take care of my child; then my soul shall be shriven and my sins blotted out."

Dr. Ward is conducting an intensive campaign in this state in the interest of Christian education, with the objective of raising one billion dollars to be apportioned among the smaller colleges of the south, giving each an endowment of $2,000,000.

In the evening service Young People's Day and Christian Endeavor week were observed jointly, and members of the C. E. society had places on the program. Rev. E. L. Ballard was leader in the reesponsive prayer. William Vance read a scripture lesson, "How Jesus Shared," and Miss Marjorie Welborn read 'Jesus Reveals God's Plan for Sharing." The minister delivered the evening message on "Youth Sharing the Church." One of the pleasing features of C. E. Week will be a banquet on next Friday evening, to which all present and former Endeavorers are cordially invited.

On Monday evening the annual Y. W. C. A. supper was held in First Church, and was served by the girls of Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Auxiliary, Mrs. R. I. Farmer, chairman. More than 100 plates were served, and the neat sum of $26.00 was realized. These young girls shave done exceedingly well this year, and have succeeded in raising $106.00 to date. Miss Margaret Snipes is the efficient treasurer.

The Holy Communion will be observed next Sunday morning, and the church will be opened for the baptism of infants or adults, or admission to membership. The quarterly conference will follow on Wednesday, February 5.

In the ballot for repeated sermons the following received the highest number of votes and will be repated at an early date: "The Glory of the Commonplace," "Ships That Never Come In," "The Man With a Handicap," "The Power of Thought," and "What Is It to Be a Christian?"

Prof. Ernest B. Stimson is presenting beautiful organ recitals each Sunday evening at 7:15 i'clock, just prior to the hour of worship.

The Junior Mission Circle with Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, leader, held its regular monthly meeting Monday afternoon at the church.

While in the city, Dr. Ward was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. R. M. Andrews on West College drive. He went to Winston-Salem to conduct services Sunday evening, and expects to speak in Asheboro Wednesday evening.

Mrs. W. G. Fogo of Wellsville, Ohio, who has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. R. I. Farmer, for a month, and who expected to go to Florida for a visit to relatives and friends, received the sad news yesterday of the loss of their home by fire, and left at once for Wellsville. Her husband has been the guest of another daughter near Pittsburgh, Pa. Mr. and Mrs. Fogo spent the greater part of last winter with Mr. and Mrs. Farmer, and made many friends in High Point who will sympathize deeply with them in this loss.

We are greatly pleased to announce that Mes. E. L. Ballasd, who underwent a serious operation at High Point hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be moved to her home at 805 E. Lexington avenue, where she is regaining strength slowly.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Lest somebody gets it in his head that Calvary church has gone defunct, it's about time somebody else had something to say to the contrary. We elect a reporter every so often, but they don't seem to function; so it's up to the preacher to tell the world.

And, to be a bit personal, I'd like to start with telling of the visit of Santa Claus just before Christmas. He and a number of his helpers in the persons of some of the church members, came to the parsonage with a great pack of presents for the parsonage family, the members carrying a sizeable pounding. Santa Claus read a letter, which he claims we wrote him, setting forth our needs and our desires, many of which he seems to have satisfied. It's the first time Santa ever came to pay us a visit, so we were a bit beflustered, and didn't have very much to say in response to his speech. But his visit, and the things he brought, were gratefully received. We are trying to show our gratitude by a better service to the folks.

We had an extra good pageant—"the best yet," the folks said. But the slippery streets put most of the congregation on the wrong side of the footlights—most of those present were in the play. Thanks to one of our members, the lighting and staging effects were greatly improved.

All departments of the church work are making good progress; but the banner belongs to the Missionary Auxiliary. Ten months ago the auxiliary adopted a budget of $750. The women folks have raised to date $800, and have two months to go before the year is out.

We were delighted to have Prof. P. E. Lindley address the Men's Brotherhood at the last meeting. The men enjoyed the message. During the pastor's absence on a recent Sunday, Dr. S. K. Spahr preached at the morning service, much to the edification of those who heard him.

The Anna Starr Class held an old-fashioned costume party at the home of the teacher, Miss Velna McCulloch, last Friday night. It's remarkable how ridiculous the wearing apparel of ten or fifteen years ago looks when it is worn today. The proceeds have been given to the piano fund.

Last night the boys in Brother T. F. McCulloch's class had a "stag party" at the church hut. The preacher, the teacher, and enough of the women folks to serve the refreshments were there; otherwise the boys had it to themselves, the girls being taboo. And they had a time of it.

The city-wide "Home Visitation Evangelism Campaign" conducted in Greensboro last week is going to mean a good deal to Calvary church, I think. We have six to be received into membership next Sunday, with the prospect of more from time to time. The "Loyalty Campaign" conducted in connection with it has enrolled at least 90 per cent of the membership in a pledge to attend at least one worship service each Sunday for the next three months.

This pastor would be glad to be informed of any sick folks from the charges round about who may be in the hospitals of the city at any time, that he might bring them a word of cheer and comfort. And the church will be delighted to have any of the folks from the charges round about who happen to be in the city on Sunday to worship with us.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

Pleasant Hill Church.—Our pastor, Rev. W. H. Neese, preached a wonderful sermon the first Sunday in January at 2 p.m., taking his text from Matt. 16:24. Our attendance is good and we are trying to go good work. We hope our work will keep on improving.

II

(A young girl acts as leader in the following exercise, and gives the first recitation, receives the offerings, responds, and greets each speaker in turn.)

The Angel's Search.

An angel looked down upon earth one day,
with earnest inquiring face;
She was looking for fruit she could not see,
The precious fruit of the Gratitude Tree
Which grows in the field of Grace.

"This is the country, I'm sure," she said,
"My Master with loving care
Strewed here the choicest, rarest seed;
Gave sun and rain as the soil had need,
And dews with the cool night air.
"And He thought the trees of Gratitude
Would spring forth by and by;
That sweet Thank-off'ring fruits would grow
On the laden boughs that bend so low
And on the branches high.

"And this—His share from the Fields of Grace,
On His wand'rers He'd bestow;
The Happy Ones would gather in,
And over the sea to the Fields of Sin
The fruit of these trees should go.

"But there's not enough;—for the Happy Ones,
Who live in the Fields of Grace,
Forget, as the years go by, to bring
This fruit,—their glad Thank-offering—
To the sacred treasure-place.
"So the Master's children, far away,
Are hungry and thirsty yet;
They lift their hands—they know not why;
For the gift of Life they moan and cry,
Till their eyes with tears are wet."

And the angel looks and watches still;
But I wonder if today
We cannot bring to her tender eyes
A look of glad and sweet surprise.
Perhaps, perhaps we may!

For I've heard that from the lowest boughs
Of the tall Thank-offering trees,
The children golden fruit have brought,
To freely give—as the Master taught—
For His lost ones over the seas.

(Six children enter, singing as they come.)

Tune—"I am so glad," etc.)

Gladly we come with our off-ring today,
Gathered for children in lands far away;
Bright dimes and pennies,—O send them along!
That they might quickly unite in our song.

Chorus.

I am so glad that Jesus loves me, etc.
We would not be selfish when we are so blest,
For Jesus who loves us, can love all the rest;
And when heathen children with us pray and sing,
Around the wide earth our glad chorus will ring,
Cho.—I am so glad that Jesus loves me, etc.

The leader greets them.—So you are some of the children who have found a Gratitude Tree? Tell me why you have brought its fruit to me.

I've heard that 'way across the waves,
Poor little girls are sold for slaves;
In this land that cannot be done:
Our flag protects us. So I'm one
Who's grateful for a country free,
Where children may have liberty.

I bring my offering because
I want all lands to have good laws.
(Drops money into basket at table.)

Leader.—Few of us stop to think that in Africa a girl can be bought for a dozen strings of beads or yards of cloth, and in China for a price hardly greater. It is only in Christian lands that children have their rights protected by laws. (Turns to Second Child.) And why do you bring a Thank-offering?

Second Child.—

I saw a picture of a house—so small;
There were no chimneys nor windows at all,
And the doors was only high as that.
(Measures 2 1-2 feet from floor)
The floor was the ground, just pounded flat,
No beds nor tables, nor soft easy chairs,
No pictures nor music, and no "up-stairs."
The darkest, dreariest, dirtiest place,
Such as I never saw in the Fields of Grace.
'Twas the home of a heathen child, they said.
"Why hasn't he one like mine, instead?"
I asked. And when they explained to me,
I very soon found a gratitude Tree,
And gathered some fruit as quick as I could,
Which I hope may do a little good.

Leader.—This is a true description of thousands of heathen homes. A day or night spent in one of them would make any of us bring Thank-offerings for our "Home, sweet home." Have you, too, brought fruit to gladden the angel's heart?"

Third Child.—

Do you know about people in China,
And the dreadful things they do?
Well, they drown the poor little baby girls;
Now I know that this is true.

It scared me at first when I heard 'twas so,
But my mother said to me,
"If they loved our Jesus and kept His word,
So cruel they could not be."

Then I said, "I'm glad you're not a Chinese,
And I'm glad you love me true;
What can I do to thank the dear Lord
For sending me down to you?"

"The way to say 'Thank you' to God," she said,
"Is to send, the wide world through,
His Gospel to parents and little folks,
That they may worship Him too."

So I hurried to bring my offering,—
And I wish you would not wait,
But send it to save those poor little girls,
Right over to China—straight!

Leader.—A missionary in China says: "The very cheapest thing in this great empire is the life of a little child." May this gift go "straight" to its destination, and teach some hard hearts to "love God and little children." And what do you bring from the blessed Tree?

I bring a Thank-offering for our public schools, open to girls as well as boys. I love to study, and mean sometime to go to college. Then I want to help make the world better by working for Temperance, Missions, and everything that is good. This is my outlook, and it is that of thousands in our land. But in most heathen countries there are no schools for girls. More than that, men say that women and girls have no minds, and so souls. Such dense ignorance and utter helplessness makes my heart ache, and I cannot be grateful enough that my lot is not like theirs. It took but a night—after I heard a missionary tell three things—for me to find a Gratitude Tree, where I never saw one before, and here is my offering.

Leader.—Truly, the mind of a heathen girl is dark. From the cradle to the grave she is the victim of terror and superstition. India, China, or Africa. And for what are you most grateful?

Fifth Child. -

I, too, love books, but there is one,
The Book of books, dearest of all,
Our Bible—precious word of Life!
(Holds up her Bible)
Without it we should faint and fall.

Our Bible and our Sabbath! These
Are our foundations—strong and sure;
These to the heathen we must give—
A Gospel and a worship pure.

Because I've known God's love to me—
Because I strive to do His will—
I'd like to pray, and give, and go;
That His free grace the world may fill.

Leader.—Our Bible is the foundation of our laws, the light in our homes, the guide of Christian parents, the inspiration of our best schools, and God's only revelation of Himself to the world. Already this book is translated into 354 languages and dialects. It goes with every missionary to foreign lands, and it is the "good seed" which grows in every soil. Realizing what it has been to us, it is not strange that we have not, before this, sent it to every soul?

Sixth Child.—

Do you ask, "Where is the Gratitude Tree?"
If you've not found it before,
Just look,—if you live in the fields of Grace
It is planted beside your door.

And if it is stunted, and almost dead,
A miracle you may see,
O number the blessings you have,
And watch the growth of your tree.

Each blessing an added branch will be,
And then the fruit will grow;
And the fruit—why that's Thank-offerings!
It must be so, you know.

O what a harvest if every one
Would gather and give today;
O what a song of joy would rise,
In the lands so far away!

METEOR KILLS MAN

Thousands of meteors fall upon the earth every year, but it very rarely happens that a human being is struck by one of them. Recently a man in a wedding party at Zvezvan, Jugoslavia, was killed by a meteor as the party approached the church. Another wedding guest was seriously burned by the meteor. There is only one other record of a person being killed by a falling meteor—a peasant in India many years ago.—The Pathfinder.

FOUR GENERATIONS OF COINERS

Resignation of Jacob Eckfeldt as assayer of the U. S. mint at Philadelphia brings to a close the service of four generations of minters. From its establishment in 1794—135 years ago, the mint has had an Eckfeldt as assayer. President Hoover has nominated Chester W. Zeigler, of East Lansdowne, to succeed the last Eckfeldt.

John Jacob Eckfeldt, great grandfather of Jacob B., and descended from a line of metal workers, came to this country from Nuremburg, Bavaria, in 1764 and went into business as a blacksmith. John Jacob manufactured guns for the colonists during the Revolution, besides fighting in the Battle of Germantown. His first coining was done for Robert Morris and in this work he was succeeded by his son, Adam.

George Washington appointed Adam to the newly created mint, and Adam aided in striking the first U. S. coins. In 1796 he was given charge of striking all the mint's coins and in 1814 President Madison appointed him as chief coiner. Adam was noted as an inventor and designed a coining press, which was exhibited at the Sesqui-Centennial Exposition.

His son, Jacob Reese, was appointed assayer by President Jackson in 1832, and lastly, Jacob B., just retired, entered the mint in 1865, the day Lincoln died. He became assayer in 1881, under President Arthur. Mr. Eckfeldt, who lives at Ambler, Pa., is 84. None of his three sons chose to follow in the career of their forefathers and carry on the tradition.—Pathfinder.

SOMEBODY CARES

Somebody knows when your heart aches,
And everything seems to go wrong;
Somebody knows when the shadows
Need chasing away with a song;
Somebody knows when you're lonely,
Tired, discouraged, and blue;
Somebody wants you to know Him,
And know that He dearly loves you.

Somebody cares when you're tempted,
And your mind grows dizzy and dim;
Somebody cares when you're weakest,
And farthest away from Him;
Somebody grives when you're fallen,
You are not lost from His sight;
Somebody waits for your coming,
And He'll drive the gloom from your night.

Somebody loves you when weary;
Somebody loves you when strong;
Always is waiting to help you,
He watches ou, one of the throng
Needing His friendship so holy,
Needing His watchcare so true;
His name? We call His name Jesus;
He loves everyone, He loves you.

A CLEMENCEAU INCIDENT

Georges Clemenceau always treated death with indifference. One of the stories told in the wake of his demise concerns the would-be assassin, Emil Cotin, who, after being sentenced to death for trying to kill the "old debutant" (Clemenceau's words) premier, was imprisoned instead at the Tiger's recommendation.

"Give him about 10 years," said the old statesman. "I'll be head and gone before he comes out in case he should like to use me for a target again."—The Pathfinder.

SECURITY

I built a castle in the air,
It seemed so very real to me;
Until one day a monsoon came
And blew my castle out to sea.

I built a bungalow on sand,
Of charm and beauty fair to tell;
Floods came, wild winds blew,
Beat upon it and it fell.

I built a house upon a rock,
Built it so to long endure;
Let rains descend and tempests smite,
I know my house will stand secure.

—For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.—John 3:16.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY

In speaking of a person's faults,
Pray don't forget your own;
Remember those in houses glass
Should never throw a stone.
If you have nothing else to do
But talk about those who sin,
'Tis better to commence at home,
And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man
Until he's fairly tried;
Should we not like his company
We know the world is wide.
Some may have faults—and who has not?
The old as well as young;
We may, perhaps, for aught we know
Have fifty to their one.

I'll tell you of a better plan,
And find it works full well;
To try our own defects to cure
Before we of others tell;
And though I sometimes hope to be
No worse than some I know,
My own shortcomings bid me let
The faults of others go.

Then let us all, when we commence
To slander friend or foe,
Think of the harm one word may do
To those we little know;
Remember curses sometimes, like
Our chickens, "roost at home;"
And don't speak of others' faults until
We have none of our own.

The above poem is one I clipped from a paper over 50 years ago, and pasted in a scrapbook.—D. C. Aldridge.)

Preaching Day

A very great day is preaching day;
No other day is quite so great:
On this great day the man of God
Is here to speak and message state.

He's been with God and learned of Him
The truths that God would have us know;
He comes and makes quite plain to us
The things that God would have us do.

'Tis joy to us to hear him tell
How wondrous well God loves us all.
'Tis sweet to think God sends to us
A loving word for great and small.

The preacher makes it clear to us
That God loves us despite our sins.
The loving God enraptures us,
Our deep affection surely wins.

Our preaching day's enlistment day:
We join the army of the Lord.
We'll fight all sin and every wrong
And make our wills with God's accord.

Reflections of Methuselah

Methuselah lived to be 969 years old. He would be regarded a very old man in these times. It is not supposed that he was able to do much work in his last days. He probably spent his time sitting in his rocking chair and meditating. He had a vast field of recollection behind him and before him a great future that held in reserve many things that have since been revealed. Truly he had enough to think about. And things were happening to provoke thought. The way the young people were doing was scandalous. Married at 75 and divorced before they were 80! Why, Methuselah waited until he was 187 before he got married. It is true that his father Enoch married at the early age of 65, but he forsook his evil ways and became a very good boy. God thought so much of him that He took him at the early age of 365. Methuselah's grandson Noah had some sense of propriety. He waited until he was 500 years old before he got married. But the way the world is going now, it would not be surprising if the end should come at any time. Noah did well in preparing an ark: he was likely to need it. Methuselah thought much on the question whether life is worth living. He at length settled down in the conviction that it depends altogether on the kind of life you live.

Dr. Ward's Generous Effort

Dr. A. Norman Ward, President of Western Maryland College, has gone through a great campaign, involving much thought and labor, to provide endowment for that institution and has succeeded admirably. The total has been advanced from less than three hundred thousand to more than eight hundred thousand dollars. You might imagine that he would now settle down to the routine duties of his presidency. But you perhaps do not know Dr. Ward. He is one of those men who are always trying to help somebody. He has caught a vision of a larger task. His heart goes out to every small college, and he has come to feel that good educational policy requires that all of them be adequately endowed. At an expense of time and money he is giving himself to the effort to convince the American people that they ought to contribute at least a billion dollars for the endowment of the properly located small colleges. The task is great but not impossible. Dr. Ward is the kind of man to put it across, if it can be done. Who can tell but that he has come to the throne for such a time as this? Success to him!

The World's Beatitudes

Blessed are people of wealth, for they shall be filled with earthly good.

Blessed are they that laugh, for they shall forget the sorrows of others.

Blessed are the proud, for they shall find no fault in themselves.

Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after popular favor, for they shall have their reward.

Blessed are the unkind, for they shall not be disturbed by the sight of poverty and suffering.

Blessed are they whose hearts are corrupt, for their consciences will not trouble them.

Blessed are they who are rewarded for unrighteousness, for they shall heap up goods.

Blessed are they that are praised for opposing the cause of righteousness, for they shall receive great prizes in the day of distribution.

Compare these with Jesus' beatitudes in the fifth chapter of Matthew.

—When Jesus saw the thronging Samaritans he said: "Behold, the fields are already white unto the harvest." What is his judgment now as he beholds the multitudes of Europe, Asia, Africa, America, and the islands of the sea?

CREEDS CO-OPERATING FOR DEEDS

The faith of men in the supreme spiritual reality may express itself in many differing formulae, in many varying rituals, in many sorts of organization, but inspite of these diversities it has an underlying unity which more and more we recognize, and which tends increasinlgy to bring us into co-operative relationship for the service of humanity.

Within the Protestant group of sects the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America represents the most comprehensive and most effective instrument for promoting this co-operation. Recently its executive committee held its annual meeting in Chicago, and surveyed the work which had been done, and the field in which need and opportunity challenges further effort.

There has been a good deal of misunderstanding concerning the aims and methods which characterize the council. Much of this misunderstanding has been created by deliberate misrepresentation on the part of those who are antagonistic to the spread of Christian principles in the world's life. There is a pagan spirit in America which resists the message of Jesus. It has its organizations, its newspapers, its magazines, its methods of propaganda and obstruction. There can be no greater tribute to the work of an agency of Christian faith, such as the Federal council, than the active opposition of this pagan spirit. The more bitter and vindictive it is in its attacks, the more sure can we be that the cause of faith is making headway, is gaining ground. If faith were asleep, complacent, concerned merely with the singing of hymns and the reciting of prayers, the pagan forces would ignore it. Only in so far as it is seeking to translate its ideals into terms of life, into terms of human relations in society, in business, in industry, into terms of citizenship and international policy does it find itself the target of attack.

The Federal Council of Churches has been a vigorous exponent of the spirit of international good will and peace. In this role it has spoken with united voice for millions of American men and women who believe that war is not in accord with God's thought for the world, and that the way of Jesus is the way of understanding and conciliation, of good faith among peoples and the brotherhood which reaches across barriers of race and nationality. And because it has spoken thus loyally and earnestly it has aroused the hatred of those who cling to the pagan view of life and find in war a necessary and apt expression of that view.

At its executive meeting the council invited the fullest investigation of its organization and methods, and took occasion to make clear the fact that it maintains no lobby at Washington or anywhere else. In a statement issued during its Chicago session it declared it has carefully refrained from employing "any lobbyist or legislative representative, and from using any form of political or personal pressure or partisan alignment, but has relied wholly upon the moral power of its statements to influence public opinion."

The council has a Washington office, just as it has a New York office and a Chicago office, but the annual budget of its Washington office is only $11,000, and the executive secretary who directs it is paid the princely salary of $1,500. Three-fourths of the Washington office budget are expended on assisting the army and navy in the work of chaplains and in aiding disabled veterans.

Statements of the council from time to time have supported the Kellogg treaty, the world court, the work of the League of Nations, the movement for reduction of armaments. In all of these statements it has voiced the sentiment of the enlightened Christian conscience of America. The paganism which opposes these agencies and movements for a better world order resents the fact that the Christian conscience of America can find such effective and influential expression —that is what lies behind the attacks on the council in this particular field.

Among other activities of the council, which are largely those of research and education, are its efforts to promote in the churches the spirit of social service, and in business and industry the spirit of good will, of better human relations, of stronger emphasis upon the human values. Obviously if the church is true to the ideals of Jesus it cannot neglect this sphere. It must be willing to encounter opposition, to be misunderstood, to be regarded as a meddler, to sacrifice and to suffer in order that the way of life which its Master taught may become the way of life in every realm of human experience. And here, as in the international field, the pagan spirit shows its resentment of the influence which a united Christian conscience can exercise. Again that resentment is a tribute to the work of the council, and a challenge to all men of honest faith to stand by the council in brave and loyal support.

The promotion of good will between Jews and Christians is a recent endeavor of the Federal council which illustrates the breadth of its vision and aims. This indeavor is chiefly directed toward eradicating those prejudices which still exist in Christian circles. It is an educational work which may have the most happy results. The common faith of Jew and Christian in the supreme importance of spiritual values constitutes a ground of sympathetic understanding and co-operation which, happily, is being cultivated by both sides as never before.

These are but a few of the many interests which engage the council. It should be an occasion for rejoicing that its work advances. There is, we think, no more hopeful augury for spiritual progress in American life than the fact that the churches have found in the Federal council a means whereby creeds may unite for service, and the voice of faith in God may utter itself with intelligence and persuasive power.—Chicago Post.

FROM THE DOG'S POINT OF VIEW

This would be a better world if man could come to recognize the significance of the dog's good opinion of him. Very likely if every man could be a dog for one day he might be a better man thereafter; because he would for that one day have caught a new glimpse of the human race, and he might have seen in man what the dog sees in him, and what he rarely sees in himself from the main point of view.

Not that man needs new flattery; nor would this capture of the dog's view of him flatter him, even though it raised the human race in his estimation. As nearly as mankind can grasp the dog viewpoint, it comes to this: The dog is the only created thing that looks on man as a god. We get this thought subconsciously, but twist it into a pleasant flattery. We are prone to like dogs because they like us. They "appreciate" us. So we feel very comfortable in their presence. We like to be liked. As human beings we encounter or observe so much duplicity, so much hypocrisy, so much insincerity, that the plain loyalty and devotion of the dog soothes us. We find in the dog a nobility which we exalt, partly because of its essential worth, but partly because it is in contrast to much of human experience.

But all this is not the explanation of the dog psychology. His devotion to mankind is something more than friendship. He catches in man the savor of immortality. He sees in man godlike qualities—more, he sees the summit of all things.

If mankind recognized in himself this touch of godliness, would it dizzy him with self-worship? It should not; for what it means is simply that man has a soul, has contact with eternal things, has a prospect of immortal life. It is this non-material quality that the dog sees in man. It is this sense of man's touch with immortality that gives the dog his worship of the human race. If in our human experiences and conduct we kept ever in mind this thought of man's possibilities we might go more steadily towards the goal of life.

When the unfortunate king of Poland, Stanislaus, wrote from his days of misery to his daughter, he ended his letters always thus: "'Tristan,' my companion in misfortune, licks your feet."

Now, man sees noble faithfulness in these anecdotes, which attest the unwavering devotion of a dog to his friend and master; he sees in this the thought that the dog regards his friend the same, whether in prosperity or in adversity. It is a noble thought—that the fall of material fortunes does not drag away the friendship of the dog. The late Senator Vest in an address to a jury once paid a notable tribute to this quality in the dog, and that tribute is often reprinted, as it should be. Few more beautiful tributes have been written, to man or beast.

Yet we have always felt that mankind is somehow lacking in a complete understanding or interpretation of this dog-devotion. What the dog loves in man is not his material possessions; not always even his good qualities, for there are innumerable instances of what is called "blind" devotion of a dog for a master who illtreats him. That devotion is not blind; it is all-seeing. The dog has a sense of the immortal of man. There is a flavor of worship in his love.

We marvel at the keen sense of scent in the dog. We marvel at his instinctive dislike for the enemy of his master. We find many things in the dog at which to wonder, these attributes of the dog being beyond and outside of man's possibilities. It is not incredible, then, that the dog sees behind the surface of man, and by his psychic comprehension scents the soul of mankind, and worships it.

So, perhaps there is something peculiarly fitting, beyond the intent, in the fact that in Lambeth church, in old England, one of the church windows holds the picture of a man—and his dog. The tradition, which we may accept as history, is that many years ago a bit of ground measuring something more than an acre near Westminster bridge was left to the parish by a peddler on condition that his picture with that of his dog should be forever preserved in stained glass in one of the windows of the church. That was back in 1504. The reason for this gift and for its conditions by the pedler was that, in his days of poverty he was passing through that part of the country when the dog stopped and scratched at a place in the field, and would not leave it. This pedler believed in his dog, and he investigated. He found gold buried where the dog was scratching. With a part of the gold he bought the piece of land, lived in the parish for the remainder of his life, and at his death made the bequest in which he remembered his dog.

We think of dogs as children's pets; that children are better for the example of loyalty in the dog. That is good; but there comes a time long past childhood when mankind turns to the dog with a deeper understanding. Richard Nicolaus Roland Holst, an authority in art, of Holland, in a notable essay on the dog and his relations to man, says: "When, advancing in years, you are getting more self-contained and apt to turn away from the world; when the autumnal silence, though by no means wintry decay, within you makes you incline to a peace too easily gained; then the moment has come for you to have a dog."

Most men before they have come to this autumnal silence have stored away in their minds and hearts memories of dogs they knew as children; most of them have read something of the rich literature of dogs and their fidelity to man, and so there is in the yearning for a dog then something of man's rather forlorn reaching into unrecallable youth, some effort to recapture an early faith.

There is no dumb animal from which man cannot learn something; we call them "dumb" because they cannot speak our language, but there is a thought in the fact that they can convey ideas and arouse understanding without the use of words. You may see in a dog's eyes things which are beyond the poor power of words. It may be, in the larger scheme of things, that our human use of language is an evidence of mental dumbness, that we resort to words because we cannot otherwise express our emotions and desires. We boast that of all created things mankind is the only one which year by year, century by century, has improved himself and made progress. Perhaps we are mistaken.

The dog sees in man the essential possession—the chance for immortality—and worships it. This attribute of humanity has not changed with the years.

The fundamental things of life do not change. The fidelity of the dog is fundamental. There is a reason for all facts. There is a reason for the faith of dogs in man. When man wins a complete realization of the responsibility which that faith suggests, he will be more worthy of it, and more worthy of his own life.—Edward E. Whiting in Our Dumb Animals.

RESERVES OF POWER

Fully realize that worry, resentment, resistance and nervousness are destructive and disintegrating influences, and you will wish to eliminate them from your life. To accumulate great reserves of physical vitality, it is necessary to avoid all undue nervous strain, tension and excitement. Hurry, worry, and anxiety tend to defeat the object in view. The best results are secured by a uniform attitude of poise, calmness, and self-control. Several times a day consciously relax your mind and body. Then give yourself a silent or audible treatment of positive affirmations. Confidently assert your right to health, harmony, and happiness. Resolve that under all circumstances you will maintain a mental attitude of poise. Ordinary abilities, coupled with application and perserverance, often achieve extraordinary results. Fortune favors the forearmed. It is wonderful how the most serious problems and difficulties are solved through earnest and painstaking industry. The lives of the world's great men are records of incessant and intelligent effort. The power of perseverance is incalculable. It is an obvious truth that you do not know what you can do until you try. It is equally true that you can not adequately estimate the great fields open to you until you have ascended the heights for advantageous observation. The capacity for hard work is an element of genius. There is really nothing too great for a highly courageous mind.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

AT HOME

Sunday, February 2.—The day was spent at home, for reasons given elsewhere in this letter. For our morning worship, we went, with part of our family, to Moriah, expecting to enjoy hearing Brother Chambliss, and fellowshiping with his people in worship. But Brother Chambliss would not have it that way. He immediately commandeered me, and there was no plea that I could make that he would accept. I must preach; so I did, or at least tried. This is one of our oldest churches—a Centenarian. There has always been numbered in our membership there some of the most dependable and progressive people of the community. He is having a promising beginning. In the evening we worshiped with the Grace congregation, in the five o'clock service.

We enjoyed the day at home with the family, and with these churches.

"Dollar a Member"

O, yes, more good news this week! Director W. T. Hanner reports Julian on the honor roll, with full payment of $67. Pastor Neese reports Seagrove paying in full, with $22. This is a plus for this place, as they do not have that many members. Word from Winston-Salem informs us that only $36 is lacking there of the full membership quota, and that is expected in a few days. A phone message from Brother Suits Sunday, informed us that Lebanon subscribed in full at the morning service, and did it enthusiastically. "Easy money to raise," so Brother Suits says. Grace congregation contributed to "Dollar a Member" last Sunday. We are giving here, in full, the appeal sent out for this purpose.

Grace Church

January 31, 1930

Dear Parishioner:

The Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina is doing a splendid thing for High Point College. It is raising the sum of $20,000 to meet the necessray annual deficit in operating expenses, and put the college on a firm financial footing, thus guaranteeing its future. High Point College has the finest equipment of any institution in our church. Its faculty is composed of young, brilliant, and capable teachers. It stands as an educational project to which every Methodist Protestant may "point with pride." Next Sunday morning Grace Church will seek to gather from its members the sum of $411.00, its proportion of the $20,000 fund. Please use the enclosed envelope and contribute the largest possible amount you can afford. Yours very sincerely

(Signed) RONALD J. TAMBLYN.

Word comes also from Brother Braxton, telling us that Vance is after "Dollar a Member," with hopeful prospects.

All of this adds strength to faith and zeal to efforts. Let us have other good reports by next week. Thank you! Thank you!

"Dollar a Member"—easy to say;
"Dollar a Member"—not much to pay;
"Dollar a Member"—give and pray;
"Dollar a Member"—it's on the way.

"S. W. J."

We do not know who he is, but we wish to express appreciation of his appeal for the HERALD, appearing in last week's issue. It is timely and forceful. The HERALD is one of our indispensable conference means of giving to our people "vision" of our conference accomplishments, problems, and opportunities. Information begets interest; interest begets action; action begets results. The HERALD is an invaluable agency to us in imparting information, and is a potent factor, therefore, in what we accomplish as a conference. An intelligent member of another church, who reads the HERALD along with his own church paper, spoke to me recently in highest commendation of the HERALD as a church organ. We have been pleased, also, with comments of reporters. This, for instance: "We were pleased to see one of the members give the pastor her subscription for the HERALD. We think it is the best paper at all." Again: "I think that every Methodist Protestant home should take the HERALD. In fact, I don't think that it is a real Methodist Protestant home unless the HERALD is a member of the home." All of this is pleasing; and it is not saying too much for so excellent a paper. There has been no report of the Committee since the ninth of January. The number of new and renewed subscriptions up to that time is nearly 250. We trust that this total may be greatly increased by the next report.

The Country Church Contest

We are asking the judges to send in their reports on this contest, and award the prizes. Three capable persons, living in different parts of the conference, have been asked to pass on these papers. The judges do not know the names of any persons writing in this contest, as all articles published were designated by numbers. We shall likely be able to give names of winners next week.

Assigned

On February 1 Rev. T. E. Pierce was assigned to the Weaverville charge. He will move to the parsonage in Weaverville and enter promptly upon his work. This is the last charge in the conference to be supplied. We shall hope and pray for Brother Pierche and the people that he goes to serve, happiness and prosperity in the work.

Reports for First Quarter

Pastors are returning them very promptly, and we are examining them with care and interest. They are providing accurate information regarding "Dollar a Member." This will be very valuable to the committee appointed to carry out the order of the conference in this undertaking. We trust that all reports may be in this week.

Conference Committee on Evangelism

This committee will hold a meeting Thursday of this week for the purpose of outlining our Easter—Pentecost program of evangelism. It is our desire to co-operate in every possible way with this inter-church evangelistic effort. The spiritual regeneration of the individual is the first mission of the church, and surely God will give his blessings to a united effort for this purpose. We anticipate the desire of the committee to report through the HERALD next week.

Pageland Charge

Because of weather conditions and distance, it seemed advisable to cancel our appointment at New Hope church last Sunday, as much as we dislike to fail in keeping an engagement. However, there appears to be justification for this. One brother has just told us that he was tempted to call us up and tell us to stay at home because of the weather, of course. In lieu of our failure to get to the charge last Sunday, we have called a business meeting of the officials, to be held in Monroe, Friday, February 7. Hour, 1:30 p. m. The officials have been notified, and it is hoped that all churches may be represented in order that we may properly attend to the business for which the meeting is appointed.

How?

How keep the church close to God? This is important. This is imperative. This is that without which the church loses its influence, and is little more than a social institution. How, then, is the church to be kept close to God? The answer in part, though not totally, is with the ministry. "Like priest, like people." A high spiritual standard insisted upon by the ministry will do much to bring the church to necessary spiritual plains. The fact is, nothing else will do it. If the church goes upward, the ministry must lead the way. To do this will require much personal consecration, much study of the Word, much prayer, much belief in the fundamentals of the Gospel, much love and boldness in preaching the truth. The ministry must magnify the purposes of the church, as they are clearly taught in the scriptures, and insist that the church is in harmony with its divinely given mission only when it is helping to realize these blessed purposes in the hearts and lives of the people. May God bless his ministers, and so clarify for them his truth, and so fill them with his spirit that they may be examples to the flock in all that is necessary to keep the church close to God.

THE CAT AND THE BLIND DOG

The president of the Palm Beach Animal Rescue League told the following story to a friend of ours and vouched for its truthfulness:

During the hurricane that swept over Palm Beach some time ago the shelter was wrecked. The only animal really lost, however, was a canary. The caretaker at the League, having noticed a cat every day making three or four trips to what appeared to be a little island, always with something in her mouth, finally followed her. Imagine his surprise when he discovered that she was carrying food to a poor old blind dog which the League had taken in before the storm. If thine enemy hunger, feed him. Perhaps the cat would not have obeyed that injunction but she did not forget her friend in need.—Our Dumb Animals.

WHAT IS THE OBJECTIVE OF THE MISSIONARY SOCIETY?

What do the words "Missionary Society" bring to your mind first of all? A monthly meeting? A lawn festival? A bazaar?—money collections? In other words, what is it that looms largest in the missionary society to which you belong or to which you should belong?

The missionary society is the result of an urgent appeal which began to be heard by a few scattered women over 50 years ago, an appeal for other women in other lands who were in dire need of a great uplifting force which should liberate them from the customs of ages and give them freedom in Jesus Christ. The appeal came with an urgecny which has never been fully pressed in upon us of this generatoin. Out of this challenge there grew a fellowship binding those who responded to it, in prayer for guidance and strength and in real sacrificial giving. Perhaps many of us have lost the glow of those early days because we feel less keenly our own need of God and the common need of all women.

Through the growth of our society and the multiplicity of things that press in upon us from every side the first things have been lost and new objectives have come to the fore in our minds. The question is, is there an urgency at the very center of our work which is sufficient to lift the society and center it in Jesus Christ? If the collection of money, as urgent as is its need, is taking first place in our minds, then we are not meeting the real purpose of our society.

We can find the center of our life only in a deepened spiritual life, expressing itself in service and gifts. The gifts should be a result—a part of our worship and service.—Missionary Voice.

SOUTH AFRICAN OSTRICHES

These noble birds, once cultivated for the sake of their feathers, are no longer of much value commercially, because their feathers have, to a great extent, ceased to be fashionable. In Namaqualand they run wild, and have lately been the object of man's baleful attentions. During the past few months millions of dollars' worth of diamonds of the first water have been discovered a few yards from the beach and the Government has appropriated a considerable area as a State diggings, which is barred to prospectors. It has been found, however, that the wild ostriches, with their well-known fondness for bright objects, frequently swallow the precious stones. These birds are, therefore, now hunted for the contents of their gizzards. A well-known big-game hunter not long ago killed two ostriches and obtained from one 53, and from another 17, pure white stones, of great value. The influx of population to the Namaqualand diamond fields has frightened away many of the ostriches into the adjoining deserts of the Kalahari and Ovamboland, and the native tribes of these parts quickly found out that the ostriches, in addition to their value as provisions, offered another and more profitable return, as Europeans were only too anxious to buy the stones which were found in the gizzards.

Man's lust for wealth once again turns to the disadvantage of God's dumb creatures.—A. Durston in Our Dumb Animals.

OUR STORY PAGE

HOW JOHNNY WAS CURED

Johnny was a great boaster. If he heard a playmate tell of something he had done, no matter what it was, Johnny would give a snort and exclaim:

"Pooh! That's nothing! Who couldn't do that?"

One evening the family sat around the fire in the sitting room. Father was reading, grandma and mother were sewing, Alice and Joe were studying their lessons, when Johnny came strutting in. He took a chair by the table and began reading "Robinson Crusoe."

Presently Joe, who was younger than Johnny, went up to his brother, saying: "Look at my drawing, I did it today in school. Isn't it good?"

"Pooh! Call that good! You ought to see the one I drew! It beats yours all hollow!"

Joe was rather crestfallen, and little Alice, who had a sympathetic heart, pitied her brother, and going to Joe, asked him to let her have his drawing.

"I wish I could do as well as you do, Joe," she said, hoping to revive her brother's spirits.

"Pooh!" sneered Johnny, "you needn't try to draw; for girls can't make even a straight line."

It was not long before Mr. Boaster left the room for a few moments. When he came back, everything seemed to be going on as when he left. Father was reading, grandma and mother were sewing, and Joe and Alice were busy with their lessons.

"At last I have finished my hem," remarked grandma, folding the napkin she had been hemming so industriously.

"Pooh!" said mother, contemptuously, "that is nothing. I have done two while you are doing one!"

The children looked up quickly; for who would have believed she would have spoken so? It was not like her to do so.

Grandma picked up another napkin and began hemming it, but said nothing.

"Father, look at my examples, please. I have done every one of them and have not made a single mistake," said Alice, crossing the room to where her father was sitting before the open grate fire.

"Pooh, that's nothing," replied her father, not even to look at it. "You ought to see the way I used to do examples when I was your age!"

Poor little Alice was greatly astonished to hear such a discouraging and boastful remark from her generally kind father, and she was about to turn away when he drew her near to him and whispered something in her ear which brought the smiles to her face.

For a few minutes no one said anything and work went on as before. Johnny was greatly engrossed in the history of Crusoe's adventure, and the other children continued their studies.

"My flowers look so well! I believe that the geraniums are going to bloom again," remarked mother.

"Pooh! They are not half as thrifty as those I used to raise. Why, I had flowers all winter long, and you have had only a few blossoms in the whole winter," said grandma, contemptuously.

"What is the matter with everybody?" thought Johnny. He had never known them to be in such a humor as they were that evening.

When father remarked presently that he had stepped into the grocer's and been weighed that afternoon, and weighed 160 pounds, and that was doing "pretty well" for him, mother said crossly:

"Pooh! You call that doing pretty well? Old Mr. Benson weighs 225 pounds, and no one ever heard him bragging of it."

Everybody laughed. Father shouted. It was such a surprise, and grandma got up and left the room to keep from choking with laughter.

"Father," said Johnny, "what are you all laughing about? Is it at me?"

"Well, we are not exactly laughing at you. We thought we would try your way of boasting of our accomplishments and see how you thought it sounded; but mother spoiled the game before we had finished it."

Johnny looked rather sheepish the rest of the evening. He wondered if he was as disagreeable as the older folks that evening when he boasted of what he could do or had done, and he resolved to break himself of the habit.—Our Morning Globe.

JUMPER, THE GRASSHOPPER, TELLS HIS LIFE STORY

Here I am, Jumper, the Grasshopper. All day long I frolic in the meadow. July and August are my favorite months. I love hot weather when the mercury goes up to 90 degrees, or over. I am a day singer, and you may hear my "gip-gip-ze-ee" on any one of the long sunny days in midsummer. You may not consider my song very musical, but I believe you would miss me if I did not do my share of the meadow singing during the summer months. Perhaps some of you boys and girls have never heard me sing. This is because you are not tuned to the music of nature, or that your attention has never been turned towards my family.

I wonder if you would recognize me if you should see me? If you met me in your meadow my coat would be a grass green. If you met me near rocks and sand I would be gray or brown. By the roadside my color is a dull green or brownish red. My color is always adapted to my surroundigns. This is called protective coloration. It is one way that mother Nature gives me to protect myself from my enemies.

We grasshoppers have many enemies. Every living thing has to struggle to live. We are preyed upon by larger creatures, as a means of their livelihood, and also to keep our species down. Our enemies are birds, fowls, snakes, toads, turtles, and skunks. Wasps often sting us and carry us up to their nests as food for their young. Our species must be checked by these larger creatures or the earth would be overrun with grasshoppers.

In Yellowstone Park there is a glacier called Grasshopper Glacier. Myriads of grasshoppers are imbedded in the ice. This ice stretches for a mile or more. It lies in a great circle, or amphitheatre, on the north flank of Mt. Wise and Iceberg Peak, at an altitude of about 10,000 feet. Some time in the world's history there were members of my family that were not checked by larger creatures, as this great mass of ice shows.

In Hebrew history one reads of a plague of locust that same over the land in order to discipline an Egyptian Pharaoh.

"They covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees which the hail had left: and theer remained not any green thing in the trees, or in the herbs of the field, through all the land of Egypt."

Such an occurrence now would make my family dreadful pests, as indeed we sometimes are. Farmers often have to spend money and time to exterminate us when we are not checked enough by the larger creatures. Sometimes the United States government has to take a hand in our extermination. One of my family, called the Rocky Mountain locust, is very destructive and causes great damage from increased numbers.

Do you know my relatives? They are the locust, the cricket, and the katydid. We are all umsical. The common locust, or harvest fly, sings on the hottest days of midsummer. Crickets and katydids sing in the early evening. It is always the males of my family that give the music to the world. The females do not sing.

I have four wings. When I jump I use the upper wings. They are strong and leathery, and they protect the delicate ones underneath. These under wings act as a sounding-board when I rub the wing covers on the sharp edges of my hind legs. I am the member of my family that "fiddles." I really think that I am very wonderfully made. Considering that I am such a tiny creature I feel that I am one of the marvels of nature.

Even my mouth parts are quite wonderful. I can both bite and chew, for I have two pairs of jaws. At the end of my throat is my gizzard which is fitted out with teeth for grinding my food.

I am named "The Jumper" because I can perform that feat to perfection. I possess long and slender legs, and one set has great power. The thighs of my hinder legs are large and adapted to leaping. Just watch me some day, and you will marvel at my performance.

My mate lays her eggs in midsummer in holes in fields or on roadsides. About thirty are laid at one time, over one hundred being deposited during the season. They are covered with a kind of glue or varnish that hardens and keeps the eggs dry until they hatch out in the spring.

Our children look like us, except that they have no wings. They change their clothes about four or five times before reaching maturity.

Now I have told you my life history, and I hope you will be interested to go afield and study me at close range. I will leap for you or "fiddle" as you walk along the country road, or go across the fields on hot sunny days in late summer. I shall be on the lookout for you, so be sure to visit me in some of my haunts.—M. Louise C. Hastings, in Christian Advocate.

TOMMY CICADA'S CAST-OFF SUIT

It was Saturday in late summer. Molly did like Saturday. Not because she was not fond of school. She was. But because her big brother always took her for a walk on Saturday and told her stories.

They were not ordinary stories either. They were really, truly things he told. And this Saturday in early September, Molly ran and got her hat as soon as the small hand of the clock pointed at three. For Ben always started sharp on time. That was why they called him Big Ben, just as if he were a clock.

"Where shall it be today, Little Sister?" asked Big Ben, as he clasped the little hand.

"Down by Grasshopper Mound," answered Molly, promptly. For Ben had told her so much about the grasshoppers that she wanted to hear more.

So down toward Grasshopper Mound they started to walk, Molly and her big brother, on that late summer afternoon.

"Oh," cried Molly suddenly, when about half way to the Mound, "Whatever can this be?" And stooping she picked up what looked something like a big brown beetle, nearly two inches long.

"Oh, ho!" said Big Ben, taking it from Molly. "This has a story. Let's sit right down here and have it."

That was really what made these Saturdays of Molly's so interesting. The first thing she picked up always seemed to have some story about it that Big Ben knew.

"This belongs to one of Mr. Grasshopper's relations, so perhaps we shall not need to go so far as the Mound today at all. Let's stutter a little and call this story 'Tommy Cicada's Cast-Off Suit.' "

"Make it true," coaxed Molly.

"Every word shall be the truth," solemnly declared Big Ben.

"Tommy," he began, "was always an industrious lad. The very day that he was born, up in that tree, he dropped to the ground and at once began to use this shovel that he always carried. He dug and dug with it, using all his strength, until he reached a rootlet of that tree. You never saw a boy work half so fast, for his size, of course, I mean. The fact was he had left his home and had to find another one as soon as possibible, for he was getting hungry, and his mother was not there to feed him.

" 'This should do', " said Tommy when he saw the rootlet, and he pushed his sharp beak into the rootlet and began to drink?"

"What did he drink?" asked Molly eagerly.

"The sap, of course. All trees have sap, you know."

"And was it good to drink?" asked Molly.

"It was so good that he spent his childhood there."

"Oh, Ben!" said Molly, for she began to think her big brother was making up his story now.

"True," said Ben. "That was his only childhood home. Let's see if we can't find the driveway leading to it." And Ben and Molly looked all about the tree to find the driveway.

"Here's a hole!" cried Molly.

"That's the driveway," said Ben. "After Tommy had drunk sap and grown into a big Cicada perhaps three years old, he started with his shovel to dig a passageway."

"Why did he want a passageway?" asked Molly.

"Because," said Ben, "he had been invited to sing at a concert, and there was no other way to get there. So he dug and dug with his little spade for no one knows how long, perhaps for weeks and perhaps longer. But he built it well. So that the sand would not fall in on him, he plastered the walls of the passage as he went along. This was all a foot under ground, you know, so the little fellow had a good deal of work to do with that small shovel. When he came near the concert hall where he was to sing, he rested for awhile."

"Why was that, Ben? Was he tired?"

"No, but he always waits until the footlights are on before he appears on the stage. So he waited until the hall was lighted and everything was blazing bright, and then broke through the door of his passage, and soon was in the dressing room.''

Molly was a little mystified. ''What are the lights, Ben?''

''Surely you can guess that. The door of his passage was the last layer of earth that kept him from the daylight. He waits for a hot sunny day before he comes out of the ground.''

''And then did he die?'' asked Molly, looking puzzled at the lifeless body of the beetle.

''No, he just took off his working clothes, and put on his dress suit. He couldn't sing in an old brown suit like this, you know, for all his grown-up days were to be spent upon the stage as a singer.''

''Oh, Ben, what is his dress suit like?''

''It is lighter than this, and has wings just like a fairy's. And the story of his music is a story by itself.''

And with that Molly knew she had to be contented. So she handled lovingly wee Tommy's cast-off suit, and carried it home gently to add to her ''collection.''—Alice Wetherell, in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

But,—well, well, ''Dollar a Member'' is growing. And it will, too. High Point College is too full of promise not to be supported by the lovers of a liberal Methodism. THE TIME OF THE SUMMER CONFERENCE

The Summer Conference will meet June 16, 1930, and will continue for four days. Please do not make other engagements for this time. It is hoped that we may have the best conference ever. Three Questions

Has It Occurred to You that the success of High Point College is measured by the understanding that the Methodist Protestants of the State have of the needs and purposes of the institution?

Did You Know that the Children's Home will broaden its scope for good in proportion to the regularity and effectiveness with which its needs are presented?

Can There Be

a better way to inform the Methodist Protestants of the State concerning these institutions and the other enterprises of the denomination than by the weekly visits of the Methodist Protestant Herald to all the Methodist Protestant homes of the State?

FEB. 9: WAYS OF STUDYING THE BIBLE

II Tim. 3:14-17; 2:15

Bible Readings

Monday—Study biography. Jas 5:10, 11.
Tuesday—Study a topic. Matt. 6:5-15.
Wednesday—Study regularly. Ps. 1:1-16.
Thursday—Study prophecy. Rev. 1:12-20.
Friday—Study Bible books. John 20:30, 31.
Saturday—Study to find Christ. John 5:39.

To the Leader

Through public announcement or individual request ask each member to bring questions concerning Bible study or some method of study already tried, to the meeting. This will aid in more general participation. The leader should have a number of the best tried and accepted methods of Bible-study ready to propose. The minister should be present to answer some of these questions.

After the devotional period use any of these hymns: "Since Jesus Came Into My Teart," "Wonderful Words of Life," "The Word of God Shall Stand," "Break Thou the Bread of Life," "Take Time to Be Holy."

Leader's Lines

There are a great many different ways by which a careful and somewhat comprehensive study of the Bible may be made. Possibly no two people will find the same method a successful one, so that it is necessary to discuss several means of Bible study. One could not expect the non-Christian seeking a knowledge of the Bible to go about it in the same way as would the person who has already made a study of the Bible through the church or Sunday school.

To begin with, one must of course read the Bible and then re-read it. One must become familiar with a passage before he can get the most out of that particular passage. We must realize that the hasty reading of a few verses each day is usually not Bible study. We are not working for scraps found here and there, but as full an understanding of the whole as we can get through carefully-planned and systematic study. Study carefully, prayerfully, "to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth."

Ways of Bible Study

1. Chronologically.
2. By books.
3. As history.
4. As literature.
5. Through the Sunday schools.

To Be Answered

1. What are some of the main things we gain from Bible study?

2. In what ways may the church aid you in the study of the Bible?

3. How is the Bible different from all other books?

4. Why should the truths learned be put into practice?

5. What about marking the pages of your Bible?

6. Should we not be ashamed of ignorance of the Bible?

Give some of these out, in order to vary your program somewhat, for if your society is very large you will find the methods and questions may need to be stopped; also you will want to bring in other topics in regard to Bible study.

Quotations

The Scripture is profitable for teaching, for reproof, for correction, and for discipline in righteousness. It is useful for teaching—as a medium for communicating instruction, that we may know and believe what is necessary to salvation. It is useful for reproof—for the refutation of error, for convincing a man of his error. It is useful in correction—helping to change from that which is wrong to that which is right. It is useful for discipline in righteousness—righteousness being the element in which this discipline is to take effect, through the agency of Scripture.—T. Croskery.

O Thou great Friend to all the sons of men,
Who once appeared in humblest guise below
Sin to rebuke, to break the captive chain,
And call Thy brethren forth from want and woe,

We look to Thee! Thy truth is still the light
Which guides the nations, groping on their way,
Stumbling and falling in disastrous night,
Yet hoping ever for the perfect day.
Yes, Thou art still the life, Thou are the way
The holiest know; light, life, the way of heaven!
And they who dearest hope and deepest pray,
Toil by the light, life, way which Thou hast given.

Woman's Missionary Department

NOTICE TO YOUNG PEOPLE AND CHURCH LEADERS

Only two more months before the Branch meeting, but there is time yet to organize the young people into missionary circles or societies. I am taking this opportunity to ask all the pastors that do not have their young people organized into missionary work to please try and organize them before the Branch meeting. The district chairmen in the different districts have a great opportunity in helping the churches in organizing the young people and children. She can be a great help to the pastor in her district if she will help him put over our denominational program. If it is not advisable to have more organizations then study our own missionary programs once a month in the Christion Endeavor Societies.

I trust all our young people will have an opportunity in their churches in helping put over the Young People's Day program. February is the month that the N. C. Branch has asked us to hold our thank-offering service. This service can be held separatetly or in co-operation with the Woman's Auxiliary.

Please report to me all new societies and all missionary work being done in the C. E. Societties. If any church needs help in organizing the young people, if you will let me know I will be glad to get someone to help you. I have Precious Jewel certificates for any Auxiliary that needs them.

CHRISTIANITY SUPPRESSED

Soviet Russia is pushing her anti-religionist campaign to the extreme. In Gorlovka a crowd of 15,000 persons gathered to watch local miners who had joined the Society of Militant Atheists bring out their ikons—nearly 1,000 of them—and pile them up in the street, where they were set on fire. The only church in the town was closed. About two weeks before Christmas the Moscow authorities issued a decree forbidding the observance of Christmas with any outward manifestations whatever. Shop-keepers were fined for displaying Christmas toys and articles, and persons having Christmas trees were prosecuted. The bells of the churches in Moscow are being taken down and the metal melted and used for industrial purposes. All the people have not submitted docilely to these harsh decrees. The religious element of Moscow issued handbills calling upon the people to observe Christmas by attending church services.—The Pathfinder.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS FIELD SERVICE

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

AMERICAN ROSETTA STONE

Everybody has heard how the famous Rosetta stone gave the world a key to the written mysteries of ancient Egypt. Scientists working under the auspices of the National Geographic Society have found an equally remarkable key to the dates of pre-Columbian setlements in the Southwest. For years efforts have been made to determine the age of the Pueblo Bonito ruins in Chaco Canyon, New Mexico. This vast apartment house or communal dwelling was the metropolis of aboriginal America centuries before Columbus set out for the Indies. The secret was finally found in the rings in dead timbers and in living trees. Dr. A. E. Douglass carefully compared more than 5,000 cross sections of living trees and timbers found in scores of major Indian settlements in the Southwest. This piecing together of fragmentary clues of timbers and trees has given us a clear chronology of these Indians. The tree calender consisting of an unbroken series of rings is evidence as conclusive as fingerprints. In a general way these Indian settlements of the Southwest date back to 700 A. D. Pueblo Bonito reached its golden age in 1067 A. D. and was still occupied in 1927. Archeologists say that this is undoubtedly the most important scientific find of the year.—The Pathfinder.

THE BRIDGE YOU'LL NEVER CROSS

It's what you think that makes the world
Seem dull or bright to you;
Your mind may color all things gray
Or make them radiant hue.
Be glad today, be true and wise,
Seek Truth amid the dross;
Waste neither time nor thought about
The bridge you'll never cross.

There's useful work for you to do
With hand and brain and heart;
There's urgent human service, too,
In which to take your part!
Make every opportunity
Worth while and not a loss;
The best is yours, so do not fear
The bridge you'll never cross.

If life seems drab and difficult,
Just fact it with a will;
You do not have to walk alone
Since God is with you still.
Press on with courage toward the goal,
With Love your shield emboss;
Be strong, look up and just ignore
The bridge you'll never cross.

CHILD MARRIAGES IN INDIA

Thousands of infant brides are being rushed to the altar in India in order to have the marriages solemnized before the law prohibiting child marriages becomes effective next April. Many marriages between babies have been arranged, and brides and bridegrooms between five and 10 years of age are common.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West Forsyth.—Appointments at three churches have been met since our last report. We are at Harmony Grove on the Fourth Sunday morning, where a fairly good attendance was had and the interest in this service was good. The Sunday school at this church is holding up well during the winter months. Last Sunday we were at Baltimoroe at 11 a. m. and Stony Knoll at 2:30 p. m. Owing to the extremely bad condition of the roads our congregation at Baltimore was not as large as usual, but the interest and attention of those present were just as good. After the service the pastor enjoyed a brief visit in the home of Bro. T. J. Phillips, who is the choir leader at Baltimore church. At Stony Knoll we found only a few people, those among the faithful, at the service. Some of them walked through the mud to the church. It was almost impossible for those living off the main country roads to get out from their homes.

Pleasant Hill Sunday school made a fine showing last Sunday, despite the muddy roads. The attendance was only about ten or fifteen below the average. Some of the people could not get out from their homes to the main road, and consequently were absent. The superintendent, Bro. W. B. Speas, is very popular, and has proven his fine ability as a good leader. He has been re-elected for another year.

The pastor and family have been remembered by some of the people of Pleasant Hill church and our neighbors with gifts for our dining table since our last report. We thank the following for these gifts: Mrs. W. A. Long, Mrs. Florence Whitman, Mrs. Pearson Sprinkle, Mrs. E. G. Long, Mrs. C. G. Hunter and Mrs. Arthur Long. The pastor appreciates a gift of money from Bro. Anderson Shore, member of the Baptist church, who lives near Baltimore church and who has been attending our services there.

Next Sunday our appointments will be with Tabernacle church at 11 a. m. and Union Hill church at 3 p. m. We hope the roads will be much better and expect a large attendance at both services.

Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Thomas, parents of Mrs. Way, and their little granddaughter, Lyndell May Ferguson, of Burlington, spent last week the guests of the pastor and his family. Mr. Thomas, whose health is impaired, is a retired farmer and merchant.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Spencer.—At this late date we want to thank Conference for sending us Rev. P. S. Kennett. All are highly pleased with his messages, he preaches the Gospel so plainly that even the children can understand. We hope much good can be accomplished this year. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely under the leadership of our superintendent, Mr. N. A. Lynch. We regretted to have to give up our former pastor, Rev W. F. Asheburn, we will not forget him nor his helpful sermons.

Our prayer meetings Friday nights, our young people leading. Our aim is training our children for Christian leadership, and they take part readily in readings, prayer, and song. Our children are the hope of our church. Let us think prayerfully of them before the evil day cometh.

MRS. A. L. MOORE.

Concord, Saxapahaw.—We have not made our report for some time, but things have been moving along as usual. Bro. Whitehead filled his appointment Sunday morning. The mud and snow did not hinder the attendance, for a good sized congregation was present for Sunday school and church services. The Lord's Supper was observed at this service.

The Woman's Missionary society is making plans to try and raise the budget assigned them. At a call meeting after Sunday school they raised the $2.00 assigned them for the college. We have not decided what plan we will use to raise our budget, but hope to raise it in some way.

The attendance at Sunday school has been very good all winter, but not what it should be as there are others who should attend.

A store has recently been purchased for the Happy Helpers class.

The Baraca class is planning have a fish fry at the home of J. C. Guthrie next Saturday night.

The Philathea class and women of the community have recently got together and made three quilts for the Children's Home.

Next third Sunday p. m. the pastor plans to present the "Dallar a Member" campaign. The first Sunday a. m. he plans holding a Young People's service.

MRS. J. C. GUTHRIE, Reporter.

Mizpah Church, Haw River Charge.—I suppose our last report went to the scrap basket as it never was printed. But the joke is all on me of course.

Our quarterly meeting of the stewards was held with George Diamond, January 21. Several stewards were present. The most important business was the college campaign. Our pastor, Rev. J. H. Trollinger, explained fully the "Dollar per Member" idea. Mrs. Diamond served delicious home made candy and fruit.

The first quarterly conference for the charge was held at Mizpah church last Wednesday afternoon. The attendance was fair. All the business was transacted harmoniously.

Our pastor preached another one of his good sermons this morning, his subject being "Conscience".

Plans are being made for our protracted meeting to start the last of April.

REPORTER.

◆

Enfield.—Since the installation of our new heating system we have been having a very comfortable church.

Mr. Auman has been giving us very good sermons lately. In spite of the sickness in his home, his messages have shown deep thought and careful preparation, and we appreciate them.

The various organizations in our church are alive and active, although somewhat lessened in attendance due to the bad weather, and some sickness. We are very sorry to report that there is diptheria in the family of Mr. H. M. Whitaker.

Although we have not quite reached our goal, the "Dollar a Member" campaign has been progressing steadily.

Glen Raven.—Two weeks ago the Glen Raven M. P. Sunday school was very much pleased to report a record attendance of 159; but last Sunday they were delighted to report their record attendance of 178, showing a gain of 19. For last Sunday the report of the secretary was as follows: Number on roll, 193; attendance for the day, 178; offering, $8.52; with the record attendance of 178.

The chart system of giving each member a gold star for each new member which they bring to Sunday school is proving to be very successful. New members are coming in every Sunday. "Once you get started to Glen Raven M. P. church you can't leave."

The Ladies' Auxiliary is doing a great work in the community for the benefit of the church and parsonage. Last Saturday night they gave a very enjoyable supper consisting of chicken pie, oyster soup, hot coffee, custards, candies, etc. This supper was quite a success and they donated the bigger portion of the money for remodeling and enlarging the choir space.

Rev. O. C. Loy filled his regular appointment at Haw River last Sunday, but will be back with us next Sunday and everybody is invited to be present at both the Sunday morning and evening services.

Sunday school, 9:45; preaching, 11:00; Christian Endeavor (Junior and Senior) 6:30; preaching, 7:30; mid-week prayer meeting, Thursday night, 7:30.

Midland.—We will give a little sketch of what we are doing. We are trying to put on the college drive; it is a close time for money in this country, but we will do ourbest. We have put new seats in the new church at Love Grove which we are proud of.

There have been several deaths in our church since conference. Bro. Jacob S. Little, aged 85 years; John Love, aged 67 years; Israel B. Litle, aged 90 years; Barris Burnett, aged 37 years; John A. Wadkins, aged 22 years, shot himself accidentally.

We have received four new members since conference; they have come from the M. E. Church.

The Love Grove church is getting along fine. We hope to do more for the kingdom this year than we did last year. What we need in this country more than anything else is a revival of religion that would get other things right. Let us work for that.

J. W. HULIN.

Forsyth Charge.—Our progress for the year is beginning to show results. Our financial plans were put into operation immediately after conference. The Annual Conference apportionments were slow coming out, so we proceeded on the basis of last year's apportionment, which is practically the same for this charge. We hope some plan may be found whereby the Annual Conference apportionments may be given out earlier so that the charges may not be late in making out their budgets and laying assessments.

The "Dollar a Member" sentiment is growing and we have no doubt but that this charge will pay its part. The first dollar given on this charge was given by Mrs. Mary Cox, aged 89 years. She was a student at the Methodist Protestant Female College at Jamestown when it was destroyed by fire.

The Mount Carmel congregation stood by us in testing out a revival in mid-winter for rural churches. It proved more satisfactory than any mid-summer revivals we have had. Rev. J. M. Morgan was our most splendid help. His sermons and work seemed to please all who came—and they came through rain, snow and all kinds of weather. There were about 25 conversions and reclamations. Twelve united with the church. We are planning for two other revivals in the early spring.

We are adopting a bulletin board for our churches like the one seen on the walls of Calvory church, Greensboro, for the purpose of posting the annual program of the church, honor rolls of different kinds and anything else that is good. We give Bro. Bates credit for the idea, nad whether he is guility or not, it is a good plan. R. C. STUBBINS.

Fair Grove, Why Not Circuit.—Our pastor, Wm. H. Neese, preached Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. He gave us a very impressive message. His subject was "What Is Life?" A fairly good attendance, despite the muddy roads. Mr. Neese is preaching some splendid sermons and our people are very much pleased with him. Mrs. Neese and Sarah Marie are endearing themselves to us all, too.

Our Sunday school and Christian Endeavor are coming along nicely; also increasing in members.

A Ladies' Aid has been organized with 16 active members and eight honorary ones. Officers are: President, Mrs. L. E. Cagle; secretary, Mrs. L. A. King; treasurer, Miss Della Mae Graves; membership committee, Mrs. J. E. King; program committee, Mrs. W. H. Neese; social committee, Mrs. E. W. Auman.

We hope to make our church in 1930 better than in 1929. By all working together we can. REPORTER.

Albemarle.—On last Sunday morning all departments of the Sunday school met together for the opening services, which were conducted entirely by the children and led by their superintendent, Mrs. C. S. Moton, assisted by their song-leader, Miss Ruth Green, and the Junior pianist, Doris Hatley. The program carried out was their usual opening service, and proves that they are receiving some very instructive training in religious worship. We were very glad of the opportunity of seeing and hearing just what the children were learning, as they meet separately from the older people.

Our pastor brought us two very interesting sermons on last Sunday. As is our custom on the first Sunday in each month, the doors of the church were opened for new members, but no one signified their intention of joining at this time.

We were favored with a solo by Miss Virginia Hornbuckle, "I'm a Pilgrim," at the Sunday morning service. This was beautifully rendered and very much appreciated. At the night service, our pianist, Mrs. John Johnson, and assistant, Mrs. Onnie Hathcock, rendered a beautiful duet, "Shepherd's Evening Song," which was used as a prelude to the service, and also another as a postlude entitled "Processional March." These special musical numbers are a great inspiration and make the services much more enjoyable. May we have more of them.

The Workers' Council will hold their monthly meeting on Tuesday night at the church. All officers and teachers are urged to be present and help solve the problems of church management.

First Church, High Point—A delightful communion service was observed Sunday morning, and a large number of the congregation joined in this holy sacrament.

At the evening service, in observance of the founding of Christian Endeavor in 1881 by Dr. Francis E. Clark, of blessed memory, a dramatized message, "Unto All Nations," was given by members of the local society, as follows: The Spirit, Miss Ina McAdams; the Crusader, Rev. E. L. Ballard; pages, Masters Joseph Gray and Harold Bass; Europe, Miss Dorothy Rankin; Asia, William Vance; Africa, Miss Margaret Poole; Australia, James Montgomery; South America, Miss Selma Clapp; Germany, Kent Douglas; bugler, James Hinkle. Mr. Arnold J. Koonce and Miss Myrtle Davis delivered short addresses. Rev. R. I. Farmer spoke on "The Enlarging Life," and Mrs. J. H. Allred rendered a pretty solo.

The Wednesday evening supper meetings are proving popular and in spite of the snow there were 40 present last Wednesday evening. At this week's meeting, Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Auxiliary, of which Mrs. E. L. Douglas is chairman, will have charge of the supper, and Mr. Farmer's subject will be "At the Beautiful Gate." Quarterly conference will be held immediately following the devotional period.

On Wednesday evening, February 12th, a cantata, "The Courtship of Miles Standish," will be presented in the Assembly Room by members of the Junior church choir, some of whom belong to the High School Glee Club and the Orchestra.

The Annual Thank-Offering Service of the Woman's Auxiliary is announced for Sunday morning, February 16th, and the message for the occasion will be delivered by Rev. Mr. Farmer. Members of our Auxiliary, especially those who have been interested in foreign missions, are pained to learn of the death on January 17th of Miss Alice L. Coates, at Mayo Brothers' Hospital, Rochester, Minn. She had been a missionary to Japan for more than 30 years. Her most effective work was done as a kindergarten teacher, first at Nagoya, which was very successful, and she was transferred later to Hamamatsu. She herself said that 2,000 children had come under her training. This is a most remarkable record, and her influence will grow and expand for generations to come.

We are pleased to announce that Sara Elizabeth Snipes, little daugher of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Snipes, of Steele street, who has been suffering with diphtheria, is improving.

The names of Misses Louise Jennings and Dorothy Rankin and Vernon W. Idol, Jr., appear on the Semester Honor Roll of High Piint College; this means an average grade of 90 on all courses. Only 31 students of the four classes atained this high average of scholarship.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Cox upon the arrival of a son, Fletcher, Jr., in their home Monday morning. This baby is a great grand-son of Mrs. W. P. Pickett.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Yesterday was a great day for us. Bro. Suits gave us an excellent sermon on the Builder's Building and the Test, taking as his text I Cor. 3:11: "For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ." He stressed character-building and in part told us that our works must all be tried by fire and that many people's work will be burned up and they will be saved as if by fire. A solid foundation is most essential.

We have just finished our "Dollar a Member" drive for the college, having the amount pledged in full, so you can give Lebanon church number nine, with $266 pledged. In this campaign we greatly appreciate the help given us by the Missionary Society, Ladies' Aid, C. E. Society, Baracas, Rainbow, Willing Workers and others classes of the Sunday school. May the Lord bless each and every one who has helped and reward them an hundred fold.

The last Sunday in January being young people's day, the C. E. Society had charge of the services at 7:30; the program was entertaining and inspiring. We are proud of this band of young people. They are always doing something for someone else.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. J. W. Reavis is sick.

The Missionary Society will meet with Mrs. W. M. Crouch on the Winston road Wednesday at 2:30 p. m. All members are urged to be present. REPORTER.

Fountain Place Church, Burlington.—For some time our church has been saying nothing through these columns and perhaps we havn't done so much to tell about. However, with the leadership of our capable pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, we hope to do great things. We are glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Bethea and their family with us and may God help us to support them in their undertakings.

January 26, Young People's Day was observed. The program issued by the Board of Christian Education was followed and our pastor brought us many good thoughts in his message, "How Young People May Share With Adults in the Life and Work of Our Church." It has not been the custom at our church to observe many special days, but as it is a great help to the local church to keep in touch with the work of our denomination I hope we will celebrate all such occasions in the future.

Our Sunday school is growing under the leadership of our new superintendent, G. L. Amick. For several Sundays the attendance has numbered in the nineties in spite of unfavorable weather on some occasions.

Early in this Conference year the Ladies' Aid Society united with the Woman's Auxiliary, the missionary sicieties having formed the auxiliary last year. At the last meeting of the auxiliary the two circles decided to dissolve and work together for a year. Rainy day bags were distributed at the January meeting of the auxiliary and it seems that the Weather Man is interested in helping us put our pennies in them, for he has sent us many rainy days since the meeting. Also, vegetable soup is being sold by the ladies during this month. The soup is made in the parsonage and church kitchens and delivered to the buyers each Friday morning. Plans are being made for a Thank-Offering Service soon.

We have one preacching service each Sunday now instead of two every other Sunday, as was the plan at the first of the year. This gives us a chance to hear a sermon on the second and fourth Sunday mornings and the first and third Sunday evenings. Mr. Bethea is bringing us many helpful and inspiring services and we feel a great loss if we miss a single service.

MRS. AUBREY V. AMICK.

Asheboro.—We are having an unusually good attendance at Sunday school. On January 26 there were 260 present and last Sunday, due to bad weather, there were only 223. Mr. Joe Ross, our new superintendent, is doing splendid work, and the school is progressing nicely.

Our pastor was called to Mount Pleasant M. P. Church in the western part of the county to conduct the funeral of Mr. S. W. Hughes, which was held at 11 o'clock. Mr. R. T. Lloyd substituted for him. Mr. Lloyd delivered an interesting and inspiring sermon, his subject being "The Wages of Sin vs. the Gift of God." Mr. Lloyd is a very valuable worker in the church.

The C. E. Societies met at 6:30 and held their usual meetings. The Intermediate and Junior societies are doing splendid work.

Our pastor delivered a beneficial sermon Sunday evening on "Crusaders for Christ."

B. LOWDERMILK, Reporter.

Mt. Carmel Church.—Our pastor, Rev. C. G. Isley, preached an interesting sermon Sunday on the text, "Wilt tho ube made whole?" A few points on his sermon follow: When Jesus saw this certain poor man his heart went out, and the power was left in the hands of the Master. Salvation depends on will. The resistant of will must be broken before a person can be saved. The stubborn will stands out; one must cry out, "Lord, what wilt thou have me do?" Often darkness comes to our homes, and the death angel visits our homes to change the will of people. God sees the need of sending this on people so that they will change. Christ has the power to change the will of people. We are not saved as a mass of people, but as individuals. Every person must master his own faults. "Wilt thou be made whole?" We are helpless without Christ; we must be willing to give up our sins and be made whole. "There is no other given in heaven by which we can be saved except Jesus Christ."

The Master didn't let the man go limping; He cured him. Jesus commanded him to take up his bed and walk. This was the duty of the man to listen when Jesus gave him a command. When Jesus commands us to do something it is our duty to listen to His commands. He was not to be carried around by his friends, but to walk. When we join the church it is our duty to walk and take up the works of our Master. "Let us bear the armor of Jesus Christ. It is Jesus who makes us whole." Let us tell others when Jesus helps us so that they may know how wonderful Jesus is to us.

The Sunday school is gradually increasing despite the bad weather.

The Missionary Society is indeed a working group. The members are at this time working on a quilt; all proceeds made will be used for improving the church. In the near future a play will be given by members of the society and other young people of the church.

Rehoboth, Granville Circuit.—On the first Sunday in February, Rev. C. L. Spencer filled his pulpit. There were few present on account of the bad weather. The sermon was very well presented. Mr. Spencer's text the third Sunday was "She hath done what she could." He seemed to stress the fact of our need of Jesus. We need Him more than He needs us. Let's put our emphasis on the right things, then we will prosper.

The Lord's Supper was administered. Quite a beautiful scene—so many around the altar.

The pastor and wife took dinner with Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Harris on this Sunday. We regret to write that Mr. Harris has been quite sick, but we hope he will soon be up again. He is missed so much from Sunday school and church. He is one of our best teachers and leaders. Mrs. Harris is also a good teacher.

Our Missionary Society met with Mrs. John Wienn. There were very few present, but the program was carried out.

Delicious candy and apples were served, which we enjoyed.

Miss Lucy Rogers is on the sick list. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. H. L. Wright has just returned from a visit to her daughter, Edith, at N. C. C. W. She reports a good time. REPORTER.

State Street, Lexington.—Sunday being the first Sunday in the month, Bro. Hendry filled his appointment at Elbaville, and the 11 o'clock hour was filled by a good program by the young people. Mrs. C. L. Koonts gave the principal address in her usual interesting way.

Our pastor was with us at the evening hour and brought us a stirring message. The address was primarily to the young people, but there was much of inspiration in it for all of us.

The music was splendid at all the services and was enjoyed by large congregations.

The men of the Men's Bible class, taught by Dr. Brannock, planned to give our pastor a watch for a Christmas present, and so in due time the watch was ordered from a firm in another city, but was delayed or misplaced, as packages so often are at Christmas time, and arrived at Lexington last week. It was presented to Bro. Hendry by Mr. F. J. Cox at the close of the evening service. Bro. Hendry's surprise and pleasure at receiving a beautiful white gold watch, chain and attractive small knife when it was not Christmas, a birthday or anniversary of any sort, can well be imagined. He thought probably the watch was a "suggestion," but was assured by the man that it was an "expression" instead—an expression of love and appreciation.

Miss Lila Aron, one of our girls from High Point College, spent Sunday with her parents here and was in the morning service.

We have set 200 as a goal for Sunday school attendance and are hoping and expecting to reach it in the next few months.

Mount Lebanon, Randleman. The following Sunday school officers have been elected and are already on their jobs: Superintendent, E. F. Jarrett; assistant superintendent, Clark Hinshaw; secretary, Miss Mildred Brookshire; treasurer, J. J. Lamb. Our superintendent and treasurer have been in office for a number of years and have done splendid work.

On account of unfavorable weather we have not held our mid-week prayer service for the past two weeks. We expect to hold these services regularly when the weather permits. Much interest is shown.

A. J. Daniel, a member of the visiting committee of the Randleman Township Sunday School Convention, was with us again Sunday. He has been visiting other Sunday schools for a number of weeks. C. W. Hilliard, of the local Baptist church, president of the Association, was also with us Sunday. He spoke briefly in the interest of the Sunday school work.

At the 11 o'clock hour our pastor spoke on the Parable of the Great Supper. His text: "And they all with one consent began to make excuses." It was a splendid sermon.

We expect to observe "Young People's Day" in our church sometime soon.

Lincolnton Station.—February 2, S. S. report: 102 present; $9.00 collection. We have one regret of our Sunday school. We had to give up a good teacher on account of her mother, who is getting old and she had to be right with her. She is very feeble. Mrs. Alexander Hoke has been one of our faithful teachers ever since the church has been built.

Rev. J. D. Morris preached for us today a good sermon. His subject was "A Good Foundation." Also had communion service.

We must say a word about our class meeting we held Sunday before last in the home of one of the members and discussed the spiritual condition of our church. We are living in such a fast age that we hardly take time to find out how our brother's spiritual standing is. It took the class meeting in the early days of our church; it will take it in this year of 1930. I venture to say there are plenty of people in our church who don't know what the class meetings are for. Not Sunday school classes, but classes of the members of the church.

1. It shall be the duty of each class leader to meet his class once a week, to instruct the members in the principles and duties of Christianity; to comfort them in affliction, to advise them in cases of difficulty and exhort them to diligence and perseverance in doing and suffering the will of God; and it shall be the duty of each member of the class to meet him at the stated time and place appointed for holding the class meeting.

2. Each leader shall have the names of all the members of his class entered in a book or paper kept by him for the purpose, in which he shall note, weekly, the presence or absence of each member.

3. It shall also be the duty of each leader to attend the monthly meetings, to represent the state of his class, and inform the pastor of any that are sick or need a pastoral visit.

4. It shall be the duty of each leader to visit the sick and those members who frequently absent themselves from the means of grace; and to promote the spiritual, temporal and eternal interests of those committed to his care.

5. It shall be the duty of each leader to report to the pastor all cases of neglect of duty or improper conduct on the part of the members of his class, which, in his opinion, require the exercise of discipline.

We need money in our church and conference to make it go. But what we need most of all is a spiritual revival, a real consecration to God; bringing back the family altars in our homes, taking time to be holy, speaking oft with our Lord, and feasting on His Word; and when such is carried out there will be money and to spare. The usual thing the most spiritual members of the church carry the financial burdens of the church.

Zoar, Mecklenburg Circuit.—The reports at Zoar are few, but the work is still moving along. The people at Zoar welcome their new pastor, Mr. Joyner, to the work. He has filled all of his appointments and has preached some wonderful sermons. Our Sunday school is very good in spite of sickness and bad weather. Glad to have Bro. Joyner and his wife in our home third Sunday in January.

Mrs. W. C. Hartis has been confined to her bed for several weeks but is improving.

Glen Raven, Haw River Charge.—Work is very encouraging. Our attendance is splendid considering the weather conditions. We have changed our Sunday school record attendance from 145 to 178 at Glen Raven. We are not able to attend Sunday school at Haw River very often, and therefore cannot tell much about the Sunday school attendance but the preaching atendance has been fine considering that we have had bad weather thus far every preaching day. We find the Haw River people to be a very loyal congregation of Methodist Protestants and a people who believe in supporting their denomination as well as their local church. Preaching attendance is splendid at Glen Raven. Our church has been nearly filled to its seating capacity a number of times and it is still on the pick-up. We have one of as good C. E. Societies at Glen Raven as I have attended anyhere. We have a large number of young people at this church and they are of a splendid type, and are doing their part to make their church as well as the C. E. Society count for the cause of good.

We are sorry that we have not yet got our young people organized into a C. E. Society at Haw River, but we are hoping to get them organized soon and we believe we can have a splendid society there because we have a very talented set of young people who even now play a big part in carrying out the program of their church.

The pastor and his companion are very grateful to both churches of this charge for a pounding received from each of them. Our grocery bill has been greatly reduced as a consequence of the many good things to eat that we received which are too numerous to itemize. We are very thankful for the good things to eat, but even more for the spirit we see behind them.

Our prayer is that God may bless and prosper us for the year.

O. C. LOY, Pastor.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—We had quite a good congregation present Sunday morning at church and Sunday school in spite of the weather. Many members of the Sunday school are now wearing the bronze pins as a reward for perfect attendance for a half year.

Our pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, brought to a close this morning the series of sermons which he has been preaching since the beginning of the Conference year on "The Church of My Dreams." These sermons have been very inspiring and helpful to the many people who have heard them. Mr. Carroll used Mr. John M. Moore's article, "The Church of My Dreams," which appeared in The Herald some time during the fall as a basis for his sermons. This is a bare outline of these sermons as Mr. Carroll presented them:

This is the church of my dreams:

1. The church adequate for the task. The church of a warm heart, of the open mind, of the adventurous spirit;
2. The careful church, that heals hurt lines, that comforts old people, that challenges youth;
3. The united church, that knows no division of culture or class, no frontiers, geographical or social;
4. The experimental church, that enquires as well as avers, that looks forward as well as backward;
5. The enthusiastic church, a worshipping church, a working church, a winsome church;
6. The inspiring church; courage for this life, hope for the life to come;
7. The church of the Master; a high church (high as the ideals of Jesus), a low church (low as the humblest human), a broad church (broad as the love of God).

We were sorry that "The Church of the Master" closed this series of splendid sermons, but we are very grateful for this type of sermon just as we are trying to start our building program. May we strive as time goes on to make our own church the church of our dreams.

The first vote taken for the proposed Sunday school building was very encouraging. Although a majority of the membership votes have not yet been cast for the building, no votes have opposed the undertaking. We hope that every member of the church will use his privilege to vote at the earliest opportunity.

We are glad to report that our Conference budget is paid up to and in advance of our apportionment to date. Let us strive to keep ahead during the remainder of the year.

It is with deep regret that we report the passing of one of our members, Mr. George W. Patterson, who died Friday, January 17, 1930, at the age of 76 years. He was laid to rest in the church cemetery on Sunday. We wish to extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family.

The first quarterly conference will meet next Saturday, February 8, at 2:30 in Mount Hermon church. All church officials are urged to attend this meeting.

The pastor announced the training schools for Sunday school workers to be held at the Methodist Protestant church at Graham in March and April. We hope a large number of our people will begin to plan now to avail themselves of the opportunity to attend these classes. Further announcements will be made later.

The college fund is growing weekly but we have not yet reached our goal. Those who haven't contributed to this work are urged to do so as soon as possible.

The C. E. meeting for Sunday evening was called off on account of bad weather, but the regular meeting will be held next Sunday evening.

A quartette of boys from High Point College will be with us on the second Sunday to give a program. We hope that we may have a large congregation present to hear these young men sing next Sunday at eleven o'clock.

We have had quite a number of visitors present to worship with us recently in our church services as well as at Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. We are glad to have you at all of our services, and invite you to come again and again.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—Owing to the bad roads only a small congregation was present at the preaching service Sunday morning, but I am sure that those present felt well rewarded for going after hearing the splendid sermon by the pastor. The pastor preached an impressive and helpful sermon from the text, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, to visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."

In his sermon Mr. Way pointed out the difference between a true and a false religion. He gave biblical reference to show that at the coming of Christ a great many people had a false idea of religion—they believed in an outward show in place of an inner righteousness. He went on to say that the text not only meant to visit the widows and fatherless and minister unto them, but it meant also to visit and minister unto those who did not have a heavenly Father, and to try to win them for the heavenly Father.

The usual Sunday morning offering amounted to $1.25, which was very good considering the small congregation.

The stewards paid the pastor some on his salary last Sunday, which reminds us that we should begin paying our church dues.

The Sunday school is running on through the winter with the old officers and teachers in charge. Since it was decided to wait until the first of April to reorganize as the first of April is the beginning of the Sunday school year.

Siler City Church.—Sunday was a good day for us. Our attendance at Sunday school was fine, with all the officers and teachers present but one.

At the 11 o'clock hour Dr. Williams brought us another of his wonderful messages, after which the Lord's Supper was administered to almost every one present. It was good to see so many partake of this sacred feast.

At the evening hour the Christian Endeavor Society gave ttheir Young People's program. This should have been given last Sunday night, but was postponed so that our pastor could be with us. The program consisted of songs, recitations, readings, and a talk on "Youth Sharing," by Dr. Williams. This was to the point and was especially interesting. Little Miss Verdie Shaw Fox sang very tenderly "Give of Your Best to the Master." This program had been well gotten up and might have been a credit to any church.

Mrs. L. L. Woody, one of our members, is seriously sick at this time. She is a Sunday school teacher and active in all church work. We miss her so much and are hoping and praying that she may soon be restored to her usual health and back with us again.

We were glad to see Mrs. O. E. Stone out again after being kept in so long with flu. Also Mrs. G. C. Fox is able to be out again. She also had flu.

With best wishes to all Herald readers.

Dulins, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school still grows as we approach spring days.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, filled his appointment yesterday afternoon. Brother Ferree delivered a wonderful message. He seemed to have been endued with power from above. Pastor Ferree has made a few pastoral visits among the members of this church. We are glad indeed to have Mr. Ferree and his family to visit us as often as they like.

In the song and worship service our thoughts go back to our former pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton. We hope for him much success.

Announcement was made yesterday for the communion of the Lord's Supper next third Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Pleasant Grove.—Our Sunday school is holding up fine during the winter months. We find our superintendent, I. A. Teague, is deeply interested in the work of the Sunday school, and we greatly appreciated the work our C. E. Societies are doing. With the material we have in the Pleasant Grove church, it seems to be a bright future for us, in spite of bootleggers and rum runners we are making some improvement. If we had the help of the officers we could make other improvements, but this seems to be no-man's-land when an officer is needed. On Saturday night, January 25, we had the Brotherhood meet with us in the parsonage, and when we thought they had all gone to their cars to leave they came back, bringing flour, sugar, coffee, canned goods, and chickens, for which we are very thankful.

BAKING SODA MOUTH WASH

Unhygienic conditions of the mouth and throat are among the most common causes of a heinous breath, better known as halitosis. A good mouth wash used frequently and regularly will not only correct the condition if it already exists, but will prevent it. Few people know it or have faith enough in it to use it because it is so cheap, but one of the best and most effective of mouth washes is a simple solution of baking soda (bicarbonate of soda) and water. Dissolve a half to one teaspoonful of the soda in a glass of water. Gargle the throat and mouth with this solution at regular intervals. Besides sweetening the breath it neutralizes the acids which secrete themselves around the teeth and prevents the decaying effect they have on the teeth.—The Pathfinder.

CHURCH MOVIES

Canon Reymond, a French churchman, in a speech at Angers strongly urged the church to adopt motion pictures as a means of spreading the Catholic faith. The church, he declared, should not look upon movies as an evil influence and advocate their suppression; on the contrary, it should organize and operate moving picture theaters the world over and show in them films made and directed by the church itself.—The Pathfinder.

A CANADIAN FLAG

Sentiment in Canada is growing in favor of a distinctive national flag other than the Union Jack. The Canadian red ensign, which is used on ships and which flies over the legations at Washington, Paris, Tokyo and London, has no parliamentary recognition. Many Canadians favor retaining the Union Jack but combining with it something distinctively Canadian. The Pathfinder.

—The census of 1920 reported that there were 4,931,905 illiterates in the United States. The national definition of an illiterate is anyone "ten years of age or over who cannot write in any language." These comprise only "those persons who have had no education whatever" and of these at least 3,000,000 desire to read the Bible and cannot.

—Campaigns against illiteracy are now being actively prosecuted in Louisiana, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, West Virginia and Virginia. Energetic efforts to provide education for adults, including illiterates, are being put forth by 21 states, the schools of which reported in 1927-28 an enrollment of 262,308 pupils.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Tribute of Love

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of Flat Rock M. P. Church, offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mr. S. H. Satterwhite, who died December 5, 1929.

1. That we submit to God's will as thus we pray, Thy will be done in earth as it is in heaven.

2. That we resolve to live in readiness unto death; then we will meet our loved ones gone before, and parting will be no more.

3. Whereas, we recognize God's mercy and we know that "He doeth all things well," therefore, be it Resolved, That we extend our sympathy to the members of his family, and that a copy be put on the minutes of our society, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald, and a copy thereof be presented to the family.

Routh

Hannah Sarah Julian Routh, daughter of Mary and Gaston Julian, was born October 4, 1844. On October 27, 1886, she was married to Joshua Marion Routh and lived a happy life in this union. But the angel of restful death must come finally to all, old or young, and consequently Mrs. Routh was called away last Saturday, January 25, 1930. She was more than 85 years of age. Eighty-five years, three months and twenty-one days, to be exact.

"Aunt Sallie," as she was lovingly known to her many friends, loved her church and was a faithful member of the Methodist Protestant Church for sixty years. She was unusually regular in attendance upon the services of the church as long as her health would permit. And her memory would carry us back to the good old days of the camp meetings at Gray's Chapel and Bethany.

When our church paper was begun, Mrs. Routh at once became a subscriber and continued so long as she could see to read. Even then she would find great joy in hearing the paper read by members of the family.

Mrs. Routh had for some time made her home with her son near Greensboro. The funeral procession started from the home on the Randleman road about 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon and led to Gray's Chapel, the church of Mrs. Routh's membership.

Services were conducted at the church by the writer, assisted by Rev. D. I. Garner. Interment was made in the church-yard.

The passing of this good, kind, faithful one in the ripe age of 85 suggests the truth of the saying that the hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness.

The River of Time

There is a stream whose name is Time,
A stream so broad and deep and strong,
It makes a view indeed sublime
And in its sweep bears all along.

We see great empires pass away
And all the works of human hands.
The highest mountains do not stay—
Their place is won by shifting sands.

A saddening sight it is to me,
The passing on of all that's dear,
Until at length I come to see
The passing form leaves substance here.

The forms of men all pass from sight:
We're prone to say that they are not;
But they still live in realms of light,
Not one of them is e'er forgot.

Superstition Still Survives

About twenty-five years ago we received for publication an absurd letter said to have been written by Jesus ''just after his crucifixion,'' and signed by the angel Gabriel 90 years after the Savior's birth. It was said to have been hidden under a stone at the foot of the cross and after a long time found by a child, although the stone bore on top the inscription, ''Blessed is he who shall turn me over.'' The letter inculcates a few vritues, but is chiefly notable for the promise of prosperity to those who read and treasure the letter or a copy of it and for the threat of calamity to those who refuse to publish it. This is the third time we have refused to publish it. We have had troubles enough, it is true, but we have had none that we can attribute to our refusal to publish this letter which really we think misrepresents the spirit of Christ. The Burlington reader who sent us this last copy will please pardon us for the decision that this letter ought to be allowed to perish. We have true reports of Jesus' teachings in the New Testament. This fake letter was probably written by some joker who sought to see how much superstition still remains in the minds of fairly intelligent people.

A Delusive Hope

A prominent Greensboro man is quoted as saying that he joined the Presbyterian church because he wanted to go to Heaven. There are probably numerous Methodists, Baptists, and others who could say the same thing regarding their reason for joining their church.

We believe in joining church, but not for the reason here given. We should join the church, not in the hope of getting to Heaven, but in the hope of helping other people to get to Heaven. In church membership we may find means of grace and growth, but preparation for residence in Heaven comes from a higher and mightier source than the church. The church that professes to confer saving grace is an imposter. Preparation for Heaven is a divine operation. ''No man cometh unto the Father but by me.'' ''I am the way, the truth, and the life.'' ''Except ye be born of the Spirit ye cannot see the kingdom of God.''

A man may make an acceptable member of any church on earth and yet be rejected from the society of Heaven when Christ says, ''I never knew you.'' It is a dangerous delusion that church membership prepares one for Heaven. A Christian church is a body of workers for the salvation of men by bringing them to Christ for His saving help. A church is not an ark of safety in which men may float to glory.

An Assyrian Speaks In Calvary Church

Last Sunday morning Rev. C. W. Bates gave up his pulpit to a young Assyrian who had a very pathetic story to tell. He belongs to the race that in Old Testament times proudly ruled a great empire. The Israelites feared them greatly and were attacked and conquered by them. This once proud race since the beginning of the World War has been almost exterminated by the Turkish Mohammedans because they would not give up Christianity. The young man is a son of an Assyrian missionary and is a graduate of Wake Forest College, this state. He tells a very interesting story, full of horrors, and excites no doubt as to the truthfulness of his report. He is trying to raise money to save the remnant of his people by moving them into a region over which Great Britain holds mandate.

"Live-At-Home-Week"

Governor Gardner is this week trying to teach the farmers of North Carolina a needed lesson. Many farmers might produce the grain, fruit, meat, and vegetables they need, but do not. They plant all their land in one thing, cotton it may be. Sometimes the season does not favor that crop, and then they have nothing to sell to buy food. Sometimes competition or monopoly brings the price down below the cost of production, and again there is distress. In order that farmers may gain the position of independence that was once theirs, they must learn to diversify crops, paying especial attention to crops for home consumption.

"MAKING PROVISION FOR THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS—THE SMALL COLLEGE"

This is the subject of an article being distributed to a group of educational leaders. It was written bby Rev. A. N. Ward, D. D., president of Western Maryland College. The following quotation from the preface states its purpose. "This paper is intended to be a slight contribution to the discussion going on concerning the small college and its place in higher education, and particularly with reference to the serious financial situation which the small college is facing in the United States at the present time." We are gleaning some pertinent ideas from this article, because of their direct bearing upon the problems the schools fostered by our church are facing.

The Small College

The idea is gaining ground that the small college can do efficient work. The larger institutions are overcrowded but they are trying to divide their program into smaller units. Harvard is pioneering in this matter. They are also curtailing enrolments. The burden of caring for the increasing numbers of college students must fall on the small liberal arts college. There are not too many of these. More in fact will soon be needed but they must have good teachers, ample buildings and equipment, and an adequate endowment. Given these it can do as good and many believe better work than the greater institutions.

The money necessary to endow every properly located college in America could be provided if the American people could be convinced of the need. One billion dollars is needed, one-half of which might be secured from alumni and friends while the other half might be secured from the great Foundations and people of large wealth. The college of liberal arts is threatened but it has earned its right to continue to live and is more necessary now than ever. Upon it rests largely the responsibility for the cultural element in education. "This element, which is the spiritual soul of education, is essentially important if education is to reach its true ends."

Per Student Endowment

There are approximately 792 colleges and universities in the United States but this study deals with only 400, not including the State universities. Ten of these 400 have average endowment of over $34,000,000 and an average student enrolment of 7,794. Ninety of the 400 have an average endowment in excess of $3,300,000 with an average enrolment of 2,005. The first ten have a per student endowment of $4,300 and the next 90 a per student endowment of $1,600.

The remaining 300 colleges have an average endowment of $500,000 with an average per student of $840.

The first ten schools have 43% of the endowments but care for only 17% of the students; the next 90 schools have 38% of the endowments and care for 42% of the students; the other 300 have 19% of the endowments and care for 41% of the students. The average number of students in the 300 schools is 605. It is easy to see where additional endowment founds can be applied to great advantage.

In Brief

1. The College of Liberal Arts has an important relation to higher education, and should be provided for in a manner commensurate with its importance.

2. The passing of the College of Liberal Arts would mean an irreparable loss.

3. The small college has borne the burden of college education from the early days.

4. The large share of college students is being cared for in the small colleges. The time has come when the public should be informed of the needs of the small colleges.

5. The larger institutions are limiting or reducing their enrolments. This means that the small colleges must prepare to take on an additional load.

6. The small colleges cannot be "scrapped," for if they are more must be provided to take care of the students who desire and are entitled to a college education. It will cost less to improve those we now have. There are not too many but too few.

7. Since they are needed an appeal for $2,000,000 endowment for each when properly located as justified.

8. By the co-operation of the great foundations, the men and women of wealth, by those of lesser means and all backed by a concerted movement on the part of the colleges themselves a miracle could be performed in behalf of the small colleges.

"The small colleges of America have a place to fill in education just as important and just as necessary as that now filled by the larger institutions. They have given to the nation many of its greatest men and women, and are still functioning in this capacity. Great scholars and great statesmen and great cittizens of all kinds come from the small colleges in as large a proportion as come from the larger colleges. To create "great" small colleges all over our country would be an adventure in education that would plase a well-endowed and a well-equipped college within the reach of every boy and girl in America who has the mental and moral right to an education."

Conclusion

There are many thousands of men and women who are not in college or university who ought to be. There are approximately 1,000,000 students in our colleges and universities, about 125,000 of them in institutions having one-half the total college and university endowment and 875,000 in those having the other half. Should three-fourths of the money given for endowments be spent on one-fourth of the students? No communistic scheme is proposed but common justice requires that the small colleges should have the resources with which to do their work.

This is a time of uncertainty and insecurity for some 500 liberal arts colleges. Such schools are needed as much now as ever before, perhaps more so, if education is to continue to have a soul. If they are needed, and if added resources are necessary to their highest efficiency, then something should be done about it. A convention of these colleges should be called, and the whole situation gone over.

"I suggest that such a convention shall be called as soon as practicable during the year 1930. If the representatives of five hundred colleges should meet in such a convention and give careful and comprehensive study to the subject from every angle possible, something vital and inspiring, I am confident, would come forth that would break down the barriers which impede the progress of the small colleges, and would rally to the support of these colleges such friends and such resources as would make possible a great forward advance for our American colleges, both large and small."

Just what may come of this proposal remains to be seen but Dr. Ward has given the educational world some facts deserving of more than passing consideration. It is to be hoped that the convention can be held and that the representatives of the smaller institutions of learning may discover some way to solve their common problems and to increase their power to carry on their work with fewer handicaps and with greater efficiency.

COUNTY HOME SYSTEM IS MOST INEFFICIENT PUBLIC BUSINESS

The most inefficiently conducted public business in the state is the county home system. And in spite of the tremendous cost of the county home to the taxpaying public, most of the people have the mistaken idea that the county home method is an inexpensive way to care for the lonely aged pauper.

This business annually costs the counties of the state half a million dollars. Around three millions are invested in county home property. From all this money we get appallingly meagre results.

In order to be absolutely accurate, the figures here presented are only those actually turned in by the counties. No attempt has been made to estimate the expenditures of the 23 counties not reporting. Twelve have no county homes; therefore only 65 are represented.

These sixty-five counties have $2,784,713.52 invested in county home plants. In addition the counties spent $440,182.25 for maintaining the homes!

Yet their inmates last year numbered only 1,674!

There were 65 superintendents employed to look after the 1,674 aged and infirm. Their salaries ranged from $37.50 a month to $166.66, usually such meagre amounts that in order to make a living the man cultivated a farm, usually the county home property.

County home populations ranged from 1 to 118 inmates. Thirty-six homes have twenty or fewer inmates. The value of the county home property now being used to care for only one inmate in one county is $10,000. The county commissioners have realized the wastefulness of this system and are now making an effort to dispose of the property.

The average per capita cost without considering the investment in property is $262.95 per year, or $21.9 per month. There are very few men and women in county homes in this state who could not be taken care of by some relative for this amount or less. If we add the interest on the investment at five per cent, we find that each inmate of the county homes of the present system is costing the taxpayers $346.12 per year. The poor could be maintained comfortably for a much smaller amount, if the expenditure of poor funds were properly supervised.

The amount of money now spent for every old man and woman who is a charge of the county should buy the best of care. But it doesn't. The poor could be maintained far more comfortably for less money, if the expenditure of funds were carefully supervised by someone trained in the administration of poor relief. The public is not getting its money's worth, and doesn't know it.

For instance, Mrs. W. B. Waddill, Superintendent of Public Welfare in Vance county, has taken eighteen inmates from the county home and placed them in private homes where they are much happier. They are well cared for under Mrs. Waddill's supervision, and yet they are each costing Vance county only $4.83 per month! The county home has been converted into a county hospital, subsidized by the Duke Endowment. Only five of the former inmates remain, all of these being in need of hospital care. A great saving has been effected in this county. Constructive health work is being done which in the future will reduce the number of people who become county charges.

The hospital home which has replaced the Vance poor house serves the whole community. In 1928, a total of 3,315 days of care were given to 166 in-patients. This means that 166 indigent sick persons were provided for in the county institution. Out-patients who made 375 visits to the hospital for various sorts of treatments numbered 102. In adidtion, the five bedridden aged poor were taken care of.

In a number of counties the size of Vance, $7,000 or more is spent merely for the maintenance of a county home. Yet the grand total cost of operating the institution in 1928 was only $7,220.03. The sources of this operating income are interesting: $4,800 was appropriated by the county, $700 by social and civic agencies, $150 by the town of Henderson ,and $2,508 by the Duke Endowment. In addition to a cash balance left over from the year before, the hospital had a surplus of nearly two thousand dollars when the year closed.

One of the handicaps in the administration of poor relief is that frequently in those counties having a trained social worker the welfare officer is given no jurisdiction over the applications for admission to the county home. Often the county commissioners pass upon the cases and do not call upon the superitnendent of public welfare for an investigation or report.

Investigation will often show that a poor old man or woman could be better cared for in the home of a relative with a little assistance from the county. Often it will be found that there are relatives who are able to give their indigent kin a home, if they are reminded of their responsibility. One case was accidentally discovered by an agent of the state board that proves this point. A blind woman of about sixty is now a miserable inmate in a county home in Eastern North Carolina. In the neighboring town her brother is a successful salesman, whose family consists of only a wife and daughter. The girl is a college graduate, now earning $100 a month as a school teacher.

Bigger and better buildings will make for greater comfort for the aged, but the old man and woman in need of help will be happier in the home of kinsman or friends. And vast amounts of money could be saved if carefully supervised relief giving to the aged were to replace our present system of county homes. However, the necessity for close supervision of this form of relief cannot be too much emphasized.—Public Welfare Progress.

MISPLACED SYMPATHY

By LUTHER K. LONG

In a country like ours—and, to a considerable extent, in all countries—government is quite largely influenced by public opinion.

Just laws may be on the statute books. That is good only so far. The opinions of the people concerning those laws, and their attitude towards those who violate them, have much to do with the effectiveness of legislation.

The effort is being persistently made to break down respect for the Eighteenth Amendment and every other form of legislation against the liquor business. Sympathy for these who are suffering punishment because of violation of the law is assiduously cultivated; and rivers of tears are being shed in behalf of those who have lost their lives while pursuing their criminal trade.

Clear thinking and straight-out speaking are in order when such a situation is under discussion. It strengthens the heart of every law-abiding citizen to read in the February number of the Review of Reviews, Editor Albert Shaw's vigorous words:

"For smugglers in coastal waters to defy the warnings of government vessels, manned by coast guards or revenue officers, is hardly less than a reckless invitation to mortal combat. The government's anti-smuggling craft would be ridiculous if unarmed. They would be still more ridiculous if, being armed, they were instructed that fast motor boats of smugglers should never be fired upon, lest some smuggler might be hurt. It is a pity that smugglers were killed on December 27, when coast guards fired upon a craft named the "Black Duck," off the coast near Newport, Rhode Island. When policemen are killed in combat with crooks, there are some of us who feel much keener regret than if the crooks had suffered and the policemen had escaped. When men undertake to play the game of lawbreaking for profit, they are aware of the risks they run. There are too many honest people needing help and sympathy, in a nation of 122,000,000 souls, for healthy-minded citizens to mourn the casualties that beset the criminal classes in their constant warfare against orderly society."

All that coast guards, police, or enforcement officers require is that the suspect submit to arrest, and allow the matter to be settled in court. Concerning this phase of the situation Editor Shaw concludes:

"The dignity of the United States Government, when it undertakes to break up smuggling as a form of piracy, is not to be trifled with. The smuggler may always save his skin by surrendering at discretion. If it is rum that he is importing, he will be safer with our typical juries than with the uniformed men of the coast guard. These bootleggers are bad sportsmen if they complain when they fight and lose. As for the people who have espoused their cause so ostentatiously, in Boston and elsewhere, tearing down coast guard signs and otherwise insulting the Government that they ought to uphold, they are no sportsmen at all."

MEETING OF ANNUAL CONFERENCE COMMITTEE ON EVANGELISM

At the call of President Taylor this committee above named met with the President, February 6. The request that the "Suggested Program of Evangelism for Pentecost Year in the Local Church" be published in the HERALD so that all the pastors would read and it be given wider publicity among our membership was the first action taken. This report was published in the METHODIST PROTESTANT RECORDER in the issue of December 3, but the republishing will help to keep it before our people.

The following objectives were adopted by your committee to be emphasized, with the addition of such others as are mentioned in the general report as any pastor may deem wise.

1. Making our preaching more evangelistic during this season.

2. Organizing of prayer bands in each church with the names of such being sent to the Secretary so as to encourage others by the number that are engaging in prayer with the same object in view, the Secretary reporting through the HERALD from time to time.

3. Securing the best possible church attendance.

4. The holding of evangelistic meetings at the most suitable time during this period to meet the needs of the local community.

5. The emphasizing of personal work and the distribution of such literature as will encourage in any of these objectives recommended.

Pastors are urged to co-operate in this inter-church movement, for as you work it is inspiring to know that the best people of all faiths are engaged in the same efforts to extend the Master's Kingdom.

The Committee through its Secretary offers assistance in any way that will help in this great movement.

Burlington, N. C. N. G. BETHEA, Secretary.

OPTIMISM EVANGELISM

The President's Letter

All Things Through Christ

February 7, Friday.—On the afternoon of this date we were in Monroe, in a conference with the brethren of that charge. The problem confronting us there may soon be solved, we trust, and the work set forward on a program of progress for the year. The people are interested, and we are anxious to co-operate with them in every possible way.

During this visit we were in the homes of Brothers Milloway and Hill, spending a night with each of these brethren. We found these brethren and their families in normal health, and active, happy, and hopeful in their work. We enjoyed the generous hospitality and the fine fellowship of these homes. We had a moment, also, with Brother Anderson and his family early Sunday morning. They, too, were full of zeal and happiness in their work. Brother Anderson assured me that the Albemarle Church is already busy preparing for the Conference, which is to meet there next November. The Conference will be happy in being the guest of this church. We stopped at the home of Brother Hulin on our way from Monroe, but found him out. Sorry to have missed him.

February 9, Sunday.—Our appointments on this charge were at Alleghaney, Pleasant Grove, and Lineberry. The congregations at the former place in the morning, and at Pleasant Grove in the afternoon, were not large, though the few who were present were worshipful and helpful in their attention.

At Pleasant Grove I found the tomb of a friend of former days, H. P. Surrat. My acquaintance with this young man began at Yadkin College, about forty years ago. I do not recall seeing him after he left the school there. My attachment for him, formed during our school days together, was very strong, and it persists still. I think of him as an honorable, high-toned, scholarly young man, and my recollections of him are a continuing benediction to my own life. Thirty-seven years after his departure, I am glad to bear this tribute to his memory.

The attendance at Lineberry Sunday night was large, the congregation filling the house. Brother and Sister Bingham and members of the Denton Church, worshipped in this service. A spirit of earnestness and worship on the part of the people characterized the service. The people of this charge seem to us to have an unusual opportunity for consolidation. The intersection of highways Nos. 62 and 109 is very close to at least three of the churches, and in easy reach of all of them. It also seems to us to be a splendid location for a church. We believe that the charge will do well to take this matter under careful and prayerful consideration. Brother Reed is interested in the progress of the charge, and is working earnestly and tactfully to that end. We were glad to hear the people speak well of the pastor. We expect a good year on this charge.

It will be distressing to our people to know that Sister Reed has had a stroke of paralysis. This happened a little more than a week ago. When we left her bedside last Monday morning she was comfortable and cheerful, and felt that she could get up. We trust that she may be able to do this very soon, and that her strength may be restored. The brethren throughout the conference will have her and the family much on their minds when they pray.

We are indebted to Brothers U. L. Fine and W. A. Frank for the entertainment while on the charge, and to all others who showed us courtesy and kindness. We enjoyed the day on Davidson.

En Route

On our way home Monday we had a brief visit with two of our pastor., Brothers Bingham and Powell. We are indebted to Brother and Sister Bingham for dinner and for a brief, though pleasant visit, in their home. We found Brother Powell located in a new home just south of Thomasville on Highway No. 109. He is pleased with his location. His farthest church can be reached in about thirty minutes. We were glad to have this brief visit with him and his family.

Abbreviated

Because of the absence from home Monday and Tuesday, and the necessity of getting our copy into the hands of the printer by 2 o'clock Wednesday, and because of the press of many matters that we are trying to handle for the HERALD this week, we must leave off some things that we would otherwise carry in this letter. The quarter's financial report is in the hands of printer, but we find that owing to time required for setting it up, it can not be run this week. Sorry, but it will appear next week.

We urge that many Rallies be held on the Fifth Sunday in March. By holding them thus early, we shall have the benefit of the new interest that they create for the remaining months of the conference year. NURSERY DEPARTMENT NOTES

The Nursery Department of the church school is composed of babies from birth to four years of age.

Its origin can be traced back to the day when Hannah and Elkanah took their boy, Samuel, to Eli to consecrate him to the service of the Lord.

The little Lord Jesus was taken to the tem[illegible] by his mother and Joseph when he was a very young ba[illegible]

Jesus says, "Suffer the little children to come to me, and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom o[illegible]en."

rn

1. The purpose of the Nursery Department is to show a friendly, helpful spirit toward the little ones, and to win and hold them for the church school, the church and the Kingdom.

2. It gives the child earliest impressions regarding spiritual things, things influencing for good its future life.

3. It is valuable to the home in that it helps to keep up the church attendance of a young couple at a time when attendance is likely to be out of the question on account of the baby. It is valuable to all three; it ties the child to the church school, gives the church a key for entrance into the home and helps to bind the home to the church.

4. It not only offers an opportunity for very early instruction in religious education, but it gives the church school a vital contact with the homes of the community. No other department is more important.

5. It affords the pastor one of his greatest opportunities for pastoral work. "A little child shall lead them." In a number of instances the little child has led the parents into Sunday School attendance and church membership.

6. It enables the child to start Sunday School attendance early and "when he is older he will not depart therefrom."

7. No church school, large or small, is complete without a Nursery Department.

8. No church school will decline so long as it has a successful nursery department.

9. The Nursery Department gives an entrance into homes that it would be difficult to reach otherwise and thus it is a vital force in the community.

10. The Nursery Department is the foundation of the church school. It is the most important "roll" and is indispensable to the church.

11. The Nursery Department glorifies and gladdens the home life of the mother and baby and unites them with the church school and the church.

12. Every church school should have a live, working Nursery Department with a capable and consecrated superintendent in charge, with as many helpers as are needed.

POSSESSIONS

We have not possessed our possessions. While the years of the Christian era have gone by, God has been waiting to be honored by the faith of a generation that would call upon Him for really large outpourings of His power. Our fault has been that we have limited God by the trifling dimensions of our undertakings, by our failure to appropriate more than a meager supply of the superhuman resources that are unlocked to the faith of human agents, and by our unreadiness to throw ourselves into the ministry of intercession in the world's behalf.

God has honored this generation as He has never honored a generation before. He has flung wide open for it the doors of access to all parts of His world and has laid at its feet every possible advantage and facility. Through the significant happenings of the recent years, through the break-up of the old civilizations, and even through the shock and the noise of the world's armed strife, His voice comes to us, "Remember ye not the former things, neither consider the things of old. Behold, I will do a new thing." "Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all the nations . . . . I am with you." In His unerring wisdom, He has chosen our generation of Christians to face the responsibility of this decisive hour in the development of His program for the world. Was ever a Christian generation trustee of an opportunity so great? The mystery of this confidence we can never understand. But we can and must act on it. We must prove worthy of it. And for this we must possess in fact what is ours by promise. We must supply the conditions whereby there may be communicated to us those living energies that are our only confidence for so overwhelming a task. If the Christian Church of this generation would by faith lay claim to those dynamic forces and by obedience open her life for their coming, nothing could resist the triumphant sweep of her campaign of love among the needy nations of the world."—"The Call of a World Task," by Montgomery.

MENTAL ATTITUDE

Your mental attitude is a great determining influence in your daily life. Begin the day with an expectant and energetic mental attitude toward your work, plans, and purposes, and it will elevate and enhance all your activities. The spirit in which you regard your fellow men and the world about you will be reflected back to you. When you are in the right mental attitude, many things will seem to conspire and cooperate to advance your work and interests. Primarily it is your mental attitude which makes the day happy and productive, or the contrary. You can demonstrate the truth of this today by resolving to look only for the best, to be intelligently optimistic, and to have confidence in the eternal supremacy of good. Make more positive resolutions regarding the things you ought to do. Bring every available reinforcement to bear upon such resolutions. Write down on a card the special things you resolve to do and read it several times a day. Repeat it aloud at frequent intervals. Assert in vigorous tones of voice the thoughts you wish to establish as unconscious habits of your life. The best means of impressing new resolutions upon your mind is by concentration, iteration, and vigorous assertion. At the close of every day review your thoughts, your actions, and know precisely what you have done with your new resolutions. It is a great thing to conceive a great idea, but it is still greater to put it into execution.

GRENVILLE KLEISER.

GOD'S PROMISE TO MOSES

"Now therefore go, and I will be with thy mouth, and teach thee what thou shalt say."—Exodus IV:12.

Many a true servant of the Lord is slow of speech, and when called upon to plead for his Lord, he is in great confusion lest he should spoil a good cause by his bad advocacy. In such a case it is well to remember that the Lord made the tongue which is so slow, and we must take care that we do not blame our Maker. It may be that a slow tongue is not so great an evil as a fast one, and fewness of words may be more of a blessing than floods of verbiage. It is also quite certain that real saving power does not lie in human rhetoric with its tropes, and pretty phrases, and grand displays. Lack of fluency is not so great a lack as it looks to be

If God be with our mouth, and with our mind, we shall have something better than the sounding brass of eloquence, or the tinkling cymbal of persuasion. God's teaching is wisdom; His presence is power. Pharaoh had more reason to be afraid of stammering Moses than of the most fluent talker in Egypt; for what he said had power in it; he spoke plagues and death. If the Lord be with us in our natural weakness, we shall be girt with supernatural power. Therefore, let us speak for Jesus boldly, as we ought to speak—Selected.

TWO CHUMS GO CANOEING

Well, it was some trip!

I want to tell you about it, because if you ever go canoeing yourself, you will know what to expect. Walt McKay was with me, and about half-way down the river, just before the water plunked over the bow of the canoe into his lap, he said:

''Nobody can say that I've been a grouch on this trip.''

Of course, he hadn't! There were a lot of things Walt didn't like and when he didn't like them he said so. But that doesn't make a fellow a grouch.

But after the canoe filled with water and left us sitting on the bottom with the river rushing by us, I thought sure he was going to say something mean, but he didn't even grumble.

Instead he admitted that it was his fault.

''We'll have to make camp right away,'' he said. ''All our things are wet and maybe some of them are lost.''

So we dragged our canoe ashore and made camp for the night, Walter said:

''No use losing our temper about it, is there? All our food is gone, so I'll go out on the rocks and fish while my clothes are drying. You cut some wood and build a big fire.''

By the time the sun went down we were pretty dry and comfortable again, and Walt had three big fish ready to fry. They smelt fine while in the pan and we were ready for them. But just as we sat down to eat them a man got out a rowboat and came over to where we sat.

''Sorry, boys,'' he said; ''but you are on private property and I'll have to ask you to move your camp to some other place.''

''You mean we can't stay here until morning?'' queried Walt.

''That's it,'' was the reply. ''I wish I could let you, boys, but those are orders and I must obey them.''

''But can't we stay until we've had supper?''

''Sure, if you hurry. Say—what are you eating, anyway?''

''Fish.''

''Yes, but what kind of fish?''

''I don't know,'' said Walt. ''I caught them in the river.''

''Well, they are what we call messkogs, and they are not good to eat. They will make you sick for weeks.''

''I'm certainly glad we found that out!'' said Walt, lifting up the frying pan and tossing the fish away. ''Well, c'mon, Sammy; let's load our canoe and get off this private land.''

Before we started to look for another camping site the sun had gone down and big heavy clouds coming from the east made the twilight shorter and darker than usual.

''I have never done any night canoeing down strange rivers before'' remarked Walt. ''I wonder if there are eel racks in this stretch.''

''I don't know,'' I said. ''I only know that I'm hungry.''

''Well, no sense in losing your temper,'' said Walt.

I wasn't losing my temper and I began to tell him so; but before I was finished I heard a sharp ripping sound coming from the bottom of our canoe, and I knew right away that we had struck the framework of an old eel rack.

''We're sinking!'' I cried.

''We've got a leak, sure enough,'' was the reply. ''Suppose you bail out while I paddle. I think we can keep the outfit afloat until we find a place to camp. Gee—this is a tough night; but no sense in getting mad.''

I agreed with him and began to bail out the boat. The leak wasn't very big but it was enough to keep me busy. And I could have kept the bottom of the boat pretty dry if the rain hadn't begun to fall.

At first it was only a drizzle, then the drops got larger and finally they were coming down in sheets. I knew that we'd sink pretty soon if we didn't make for shore, so I shouted to Walt to turn in toward the bank and get under the trees, where the water wouldn't pour in the canoe quite so rapidly. But Walt couldn't carry out my suggestion even if he wanted to; for at that moment, we entered one of the dangerous ''rifts,'' of which this river has many, and sped into the swift water with an almost sickening speed.

''Watch out for rocks, Walt!'' I shouted, bailing furiously at the same time. ''Gee—they are as sharp as knives in these rifts, and if we ever hit one we're finished!''

I knew there was nothing, but when a fellow is cold, hungry and wet and dashing in the rain through rapids in a leaky canoe, he gets excited quicker than he should.

Somehow we got below the rift without hitting any of the rocks, but instead we hit worse. We grounded on a mud flat and stuck so firmly that we couldn't work ourselves loose, no matter how hard we tried. Of course, hitting a rock would have torn a hole in the bottom of the canoe big enough to fall through, but we would have had the hard pebbly bottom to walk ashore on instead of the soft, oozy mud.

''This gets my goat,'' I said, as I climbed over the side of the canoe and sank into the mire up to my things.

''Well, you could sit in the canoe all night, if you wanted to,'' said Walt. ''But there wouldn't be any sense in that. No use growling, either.''

''Well, I wasn't growling, and I began to tell him so, but just then he saw a light on the shore.

''Let's make for it,'' he suggested. ''It's a house and maybe the people who live there will let us stay all night.''

We struggled ashore and walked toward the house, getting colder and hungrier every minute. We couldn't get any wetter. Just as we got inside the front gate a large dog came around the corner of the house and ran at us, barking fiercely.

''Run for the barn,'' cried Walt; and we did, the dog chasing us. We got up the ladder to the loft just in time to escape being bitten.

''That was a narrow one!'' I said, breathing hard. ''I forgot all about there being a dog! Now they'll think we are burglars!''

''No sense in getting—''

But Walt did not finish his statement because a man came into the barn with a shot gun.

''Whoever you are up in that hay loft, come down at once, or you'll be sorry.''

''We'll come down, mister,'' Walt told him; and we did.

''Why, you are only two boys!'' he exclaimed, in surprise. ''What are you doing around here at this time of the night?''

We told him our story and followed him into the house.

''Mary,'' he called out to somebody who was in the kitchen. ''Make some ham and eggs for two hungry boys and bring in some dry clothes.''

At the word clothes, both of us looked down at our cheap cotton trousers and shirts. Mine had shrunk so much that the cuffs of my pants were halfway up to my knees and the collar of my shirt was almost choking me.

Walt's clothes were the same way.

I tore my neck front open and began to laugh. Walt said: "This is terrible. Gee—I can stand lots of things, but look at my new trousers and shirt! Wait until I get back home and tell something to that fellow who sold them to me! Imagine clothes shrinking like this? Gee—what a life!"

"Dear me,' boy," said the lady, coming out of the kitchen. "You really shouldn't be so ill-natured!"

After all we had been through, that remark made me smile. I turned to Walt and said:

"Sure, Walt. What's the sense in being grouchy?"

And he agreed with me and laughed.—Selected.

PUTTING THE BEST FOREMOST

If one has a hideous deformed hand he might wear a glove on that hand and certainly should find no pleasure in exhibiting it before the public so as to humiliate himself and mortify and disgust others.

It was an inclement Sunday evening. The congregation was not as large as usual. The preacher was disappointed and fell victim to the "blues." In fact, this was his usual attitude. After the formal beginning of the service the pastor announced as the opening hymn:

"How tedious and tasteless the hours
When Jesus no longer I see;
Sweet prospect, sweet birds and sweet flowers
Have all lost their sweetness to me," etc.

In the pastoral prayer he seemed to think that the Lord should be told of the absence of the brethren, especially that most of the deacons were not present at the meeting, and said: "Lord thou knowest the hindering cause." The second hymn was:

"Broad is the road that leads to death,
And thousands walk together there,
While wisdom shows a narrow path,
With here and there a traveler," etc.

In the announcement the minister reminded the brethren that the wages to the janitor remained unprovided for, and that interest on a note at the bank for borrowed money to meet certain current expenses was past due and there were no funds in the church treasury to meet this with other pressing demands. He also stated that Sister Jones was very much worse, and little hope was entertained of her recovery. Special emphasis was given to an announcement that the ladies of the church would have a rummage sale and give a chicken dinner in the vacant store building on Broadway, on Friday of the coming week, the proceeds to be applied on a deficiency in the pastor's salary.

The text was: "How is it that we could not cast it out?" (Mark 9:28).

After suggesting many reasons for their impotency which might have occurred to the baffled disciples, and calling attention to the answer the Master made to their inquiry, the preacher gave it as his own deliberate opinion that the main reason for their failure to cast out the demon was the absence of Peter, James and John who were in the Mount of Transfiguration and like the absence of the Deacons and many of the brethren and sisters from the services of their own church, stood in the way of success under his ministry.

The closing hymn was:

"Some one will knock at the soul's bright home,
And hear the Lord saying, 'You cannot come';
With anguish he'll mourn o'er his sorrowful state,
Turned away from the beautiful gate."

A good Christian wife had prevailed upon her godless husband to attend the service with her on that inclement evening, and on their way home he said: "Wife, how do you endure sermons like that from Sunday to Sunday? That was about the most dismal, hope-destroying discourse I ever heard. Say, Wife, what really did you think of the service?" After a painful pause the wife responded: "Well, I suppose our pastor was not feeling well tonight."

While admitting that this is an imaginary report, it may suggest how not to "put the best foot foremost."—Word and Way.

CHRIST OF THE HUMAN ROAD

There must be, in our Christian appeal, some conscious knowledge that this Christ of ours is not a creature of the past. He must be the Christ of today. Great that he was in all those wonderful days of old; divine that he was in his impressive goings about Galilee; tender that he was in his marvelous ministry of loving kindness; firm that he was with his stinging whip-cords to drive out of the temple the false bargainers, yet this Christ must be the Christ of today, where divinity, and tenderness, and firmness are just as much needed and just as evident as they ever were before. Let us not be misled by these folks who, in self-satisfactory unrighteousness today, cry out because they may find their comfort dislodged in the actual presence among us of the living Christ. It is but the re-echoed groan of the Pharisees of old whom Jesus scourged. Christ today is the Christ of a rigid righteousness which is pounding at the foundations of every unrighteous thing on earth. He is not sealed up in the goneness of the past, there to be admired as the Christ of yesterday. Every today will become a yesterday fast enough, and consigned to that rapidly becoming past, no today must ever be bound up in those pages that fails to show clearly the impress of this living Christ upon it. This living Christ! This redeeming Christ! Alive now to every helpfulness divine interest can give to every needy thing. Alive now to every condemnation which must be felt by every evil thing. Christ of God, Christ of yesterday, Saviour of the world!—M. S. Rice, in a Discontented Optimist.

STRANGE METHOD OF JESUS

The four friends had great confidence in Jesus (verse 5). Whether they thought of the spiritual side is not said, but we imagine one or more did. Jesus was always pleased when people trusted Him. Nothing pained Him more than unbelief in Him. When the man was lying on his pallet before Jesus, He made a strange remark. It was kindly: "Son, thy sins are forgiven." Some friends of the sick man may have been disappointed. They wanted a physical cure, not a cleansed soul. Human nature is often that way now. Desiring the less, we scorn the greater. The scholars, scribes, were aroused to indignation (verses 6, 7). They spoke truly. No man could forgive sins then or now. They spoke untruly. Jesus did not blaspheme. He was God manifest in the flesh.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

FEB. 16: "LESSONS FROM JOHN'S FIRST EPISTLE"

I John 1:7-10, 3:1-3.

(Quiet Hour Sunday)

Bible Readings

Monday—A lesson on God. I John 1:5; 4:16.
Tuesday On sin. I John 1:8-10; 2:1, 2.
Wednesday—On love. I John 2:4-11.
Thursday—On assurance. I John 3:14, 21-24.
Friday—On kindness. I John 3:16-19.
Saturday On eternal life. I John 5:11-13.

To the Leader

If you like, you might make this meeting into a Valentine meeting, having quotations on Love and Truth written and placed in a large box. Try to show that divine love and divine truth cannot be separated.

However, if you want to put on a program, worshipful and constructive, observe this Sunday as "Quiet Hour" Sunday. All over the Northern District a special service will be held. Why not follow the plan of the Northern District? If your society has not received a copy of the program prepared, write Rev. Mr. C. N. Morrison, 1201 Lexington Avenue., Greensboro, N. C. We should especially like for your society to join us in prayer at 7:10 to 7:15 on Sunday night. The whole Northern District will be praying at this time. Won't you join us?

If you cannot get the material already prepared in full, possibly this sketch will help you:

Hymns: "Sweet Hour of Prayer," "Break Thou the Bread of Life," "A Charge to Keep I have," "I Nede Thee Every Hour," "Nearer, My God, to Thee."

Scripture: Psalms 1:1-16; Matt. 6:5-7; Matt. 26: 36-41; Eph. 1:15-23; Titus 2:11-15.

Suggested Topics for Short Talks

1. How may we improve our prayer life?
2. Do you know some people who pray at least 15 minutes a day? How does prayer affect their lives?
3. Have a comrade of the Quiet Hour tell of what such a covenant has meant to him.
4. Give instances when Jesus prayed. Why did He need to pray?
5. Show that Moses was a man of prayer.
6. What does Paul teach as to the necessity of prayer in I Thess. 5:17?

At the close of the service pass out pledge cards asking that all who intend to conscientiously keep the Quiet Hour Pledge to sign the blank.

If you do not feel that your society can do justice to a Quiet Hour Sunday on the 16th, plan it for some Sunday near at hand.

The Leader's Talk

Love is indeed the greatest motor power in the universe. It is truly said that "love makes the world go around." God lights the light in our lives and we should in turn share our light with someone else and thus it goes on and on. God is love, and the lofe which is a mark of the Christian shows the divinity of God.

John is, as he has been called, the poet of love but more than love—truth. John also stresses our relationship to God. We are God's children. But this is not enough. We need to look into our lives and see whether or not we in any measure reflect the characteristics of Christ.

Topics

Love begets love.
Love, the universal language.
Love and service.
Love—enduring.
Love and the loved.

Poetry Corner

Though love repine and reason chafe,
There comes a voice without reply:
" 'Tis man's perdition to be safe,
When for the truth he ought to die."
—Ralph Waldo Emerson.

I love thee, I love thee,
With a flame that shall not die,
Till the sun grows cold
And the stars are old,
And the leaves of the judgment-book unfold.
—Bayard Taylor.

Love is better than fame.—Bayard Taylor.

For life, with all it yields of joy and woe
And hope and fear
Is just our chance o' the prize of learning love—
How love might be, both been indeed, and is.
—Robert Browning.

—A long-distance telephone call from Winston-Salem to President Taylor announced the death of Rev. P. L. Kinnaman, who died in a Winston-Salem hospital at 12:30 a. m. today. Funeral services will be held from the home south of Winston-Salem tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. President Taylor will be assisted in conducting the service by Rev. R. C. Stubbins.

—Mrs. Sarah Glass, one of Calvary's best members, died suddenly yesterday. She was the mother of Mr. David M. Glass, also a member of Calvary church.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Friendship Station is not quite dead yet, although the roads and weather look discouraging. Some of the members live out on roads that at times are almost impassable, some of the members went through mud axle deep to Fords but they got well repaid their trouble by hearing the Gospel propounded last Sunday by our pastor, Bro. Hill, for he preached a wonderful sermon, but that is what we hear every time we hear him preach.

Although the weather is real bad our attendance is holding up fine in Sunday school which we are proud of.

Death visited our community last Sunday morning and took the life of Miss Minnie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Perry. She was a member of Salem M. E. church at which place the funeral service and burial took place, the service was held by her pastor, Rev. J. H. Green, assisted by our pastor, Bro. Hill. Minnie will be missed by her home and community and our sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

LOTTIE HATLEY, Reporter.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—We were glad to have President Taylor with us today. He preached an enjoyable sermon on "What it takes to make a good church".

We are glad that I. B. Cooke who has been in the hospital is at home and well. We are also glad Mrs. A. J. Smith who has been seriously ill is improving. There are several others sick, our pastor's wife is sick. We ask the prayers for our pastor and his wife and all of the rest of the sick. We like our pastor and wife and we hope that she will soon be restored to health, and that we may yet have a good year's work together.

While we have had sickness and trials, it may be for the best. Brother Reed will preach for us the fourth Sunday for the next three months, and the second also.

ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Union Church, Halifax Charge.—The soul of Mrs. T. A. Smith departed this life Wednesday evening January 22, 1930, she had been suffering with a cancer for the past two years. Having been a member of this church for many years, and a faithful Christian, we will surely miss her in the work of the church. There was never a more patient sufferer than she was, for she knew that her sufferings were a part of God's infinite plan and He would not leave her to bear her burdens alone. And with her faith thus firmly fixed in Jesus, she passed on at the age of forty years.

We know that our loss is Heaven's gain and she is now reaping thhe reward of her labors here on earth. She was a loving and a devoted wife, a gentle and understanding mother. There are left to grieve their loss her husband, Mr. T. A. Smith, one daughter, Miss Westry Harris, also three sisters and one brother, besides many other relatives and friends. She was laid to rest in the family cemetery on Friday afternoon, Jan. 24th., beneath a canopy of of lovely bowers.

We, the members of Union church, extend our heartfelt 'sympathy to the bereaved family. May God bless them and heal their bleeding heart. May the life she lived here even be to them a guiding star to Heaven.

LOUISE LEWIS, Reporter.

Mecklenburg Charge.—We arrived on this field December 1st, rather late in being located; found the people of this work eager and glad to wecolme the new pastor, as their former pastor died last June, leaving them without pastoral assistance, except the favor Bro. Harrison gave them on Sabbath evenings.

The work is moving along nicely, I judge, considering circumstances that affect all rural charges at this writing; nevertheless we are working and praying for a successful year. Santa Claus reports are not over yet, as he infaded our pantry and gladdened the hearts of the parsonage family with many generous gifts in the way of a pounding.

The writer was again showered by many appreciated articles on his birthday bf our live and efficient Ladies' Aid Society.

Our first quarterly conference was held at Antioch church January 5, attended by a large representation from each church. Dollar a Member was presented at this time, the following committees being appointed to represent each church:

Stallings—Bro. H. B. Furr, Mrs. Mary Stallings, Mrs. Perry Garmon.

Beulah—Mrs. Shell, Bro. Rolland Phifer, Miss Deese.

Antioch—Bro. A. B. Garmon, Bro. W. N. Keeter, Mrs. May Matthews.

Zoar—Bro. J. D. Atkins, Bro. Starnes, Bro. W. W. Osborne.

Bro. H. B. Furr, our efficient secretary, was elected as charge trustee for the ensuing year.

The hearts of many have been saddened by the death of our faithful friend and member of Antioch church, Bro. O. B. Helms. He was born in 1877 and departed this life January 19, 1930, aged 63 years. Our hearts go out in sympathy for the three children left who mourn his departure.

Little Agnes, daughter of Bro. Lonnie and Mrs. Ethel Morris, born January 25, 1928, died January 31, 1930. They will miss her, but their loss is Heaven's gain.

Q. L. JOYNER.

Asheville.—Our pastor gave us two wonderful sermons yesterday, as usual. The subject in the morning was "A Cloud of Witnesses;" in the evening, "Our Reasonable Service."

Since a number of churches are sponsoring "Church Night," our church is trying it out this week. We are looking forward with much pleasure to Wednesday. At 6:30 the supper will be held, immediately following will be a short prayer service, then the various sessions of business will be conducted.

I am glad to report our sick members are improving—Mrs. Y. D. Eller and Mrs. F. R. McIntire.

Mrs. C. C. McNeill was able to be with us Sunday. We were all glad.

Miss Stowe, from High Point, sister of Mrs. McNeill, worshiped with us Sunday; glad we are to have her for at least two months. She thinks of going in business here.

REPORTER.

◆

Hope, Chatham Charge.—There has been quite an epidemic of mumps in and around our community, but we hope that is about over now.

Sunday school is getting along very nicely now. Some new scholars are being added to our enrollment and we hope to see it continue to grow.

Both circles of the Woman's Auxiliary are planning an oyster supper some time in the near future to increase our funds.

Rev. A. O. Lindley filled his appointment at 11 o'clock Sunday and preached a splendid sermon on "temptations."

We are glad to have Mrs. M. H. Woody, from Sapling Ridge, Alamance Circuit, worship with us Sunday.

We missed Bro. J. J. Andrew from his place in the congregation. He was not able to attend on account of having fallen several days ago and received some injury, but we are glad to state he is improving now.

KARA ANDREW, Reporter.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Circuit.—Our new pastor, Rev. Mr. Joyner, has filled all his appointments at our church.

Our Sunday school has not been so successful since the winter weather has been quite rough, and the roads so bad. But we are striving to have a larger attendance when spring comes and the roads are better. A good Sunday school certainly is worth while to attend, and helps to build up any church in any community.

We have had quite a bit of sickness in our community this winter. Sorry to say that we have had a few deaths. The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Morris on January 31, and took their litle darling daughter, Agnes Miriam, two years and a few days old. She is greatly missed in her home. She was laid to rest at Antioch M. P. church.

MISS LULA DEESE, Reporter.

◆

Shoals, Pinnacle Charge.—Our Sunday school is still right good; hope it will be better in the spring.

Our pastor, Rev. A. L. Hunter, filled his appointment yesterday at 11 o'clock. He delivered a wonderful message; he seemed to have been endued with power from above.

We were glad indeed to have Mr. and Mrs. Ray Hauser and Mrs. C. V. Hauser, of Winston-Salem, with us yesterday, and also Mr. I. O. Hauser, of White Plains, and Mr. and Mrs. Odell Kiger and family, of High Point.

Brother Hunter announced that the second Sunday in March we will have the Lord's Supper at 11 o'clock.

One of our Sunday school teachers, Miss Mae Owen, was married to Mr. Roger Scott on February 1, 1930. The bride is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Owen, of Shoals, N. C. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Scott, of Pinnacle, N. C. We extend to them our best wishes for a long, happy life.

MRS. J. P. OWEN, Reporter.

Hebron, Orange Circuit.—The work is still moving, but not as fast as we would like to see, but owing to bad roads and inclement weather the attendance has dropped. We hope to gain attendance and move along faster as spring opens up.

Mr. H. A. Wilson, Sr., one of Hebron's older members, has been confined to his bed for quite a while, but we are glad to say he is able to be up some. We pray that his health may be restored and he can again worship with us soon.

This church has again lost one of its oldest members, Miss Eliza A. Jobe. She was born February 11, 1854, and died February 8, 1930. She had been a consistent member of Hebron church for some 55 years.

She was always at church as long as her health would permit. She was a good woman, a kind neighbor, and every one who knew her loved her. She suffered much but bore her afflictions patiently.

The funeral services were conducted in the church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock by her pastor, assisted by Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, after which her body was interred in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn. The large crowd that attended this service testified to the esteem in which she was held.

"Servant of God, well done,
Thy glorious warfare's past,
The race is run,
The crown is won,
And thou art crowned at last."

MRS. T. A. GILL.

Why Not Charge.—Since my last report I have organized two Ladies' Aid Societies on the charge—one at Seagrove and one at Fairgrove. One new member, Miss Euna Walker, was received at Seagrove on last appointment.

A large congregation was present at Love Joy yesterday for Sunday school and preaching services. This is a wide-awake church and is capable of doing a great work.

Macedonia was visited on the afternoon. The usual congregation was in attendance. Mrs. J. H. Saunders was absent, due to illness. We wish for her a speedy recovery.

This charge is too extensive fo. any pastor to do his best, but the outlook is very gratifying. Patience and persistence are necessary to accomplish satisfactory results.

WM. H. NEESE.

Seagrove, N. C., Feb. 10.

Davidson. President Taylor was with us yesterday and gave us a message that was so practical that we are sure that it will be abundantly fruitful. With each visit Dr. Taylor finds a larger place in the hearts of our people. We were glad to have Bro. Binyham's wife and people from Denton worship with us last night.

We are glad to know that Bro. J. B. Cook, of Alleghany church, is at home again after undergoing an operation for appedicitis. Sister Berry Smith, who has been seriously ill, is much improved. We are glad to say to our many friends who inquire of Mrs. Reed's condition that she is somewhat improved from the effects of a stroke of paralysis she had a week ago and we don't know how to express our appreciation for the many kindnesses shown us by our neighbors and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Frank have remembered us daily in a substantial way. Mrs. J. P. Elliott, Mrs. Virgie Laurie, and Mr. and Mrs. Van Wood have kept us in milk and butter. Bro. Mack Surratt and Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Harris have supplied us with potatoes and other good things. Bro. Hall and wife and many others have been mindful of us. Last, but not least, of our appreciation was a call by Mrs. Dr. Whitaker and two of the college girls, bringing beautiful flowers with their kind words of sympathy, and the climax came when our dear, good friends, Bro. J. D. McCollum and family, of Reidsville, drove 70 miles, accompanied by Mrs. J. H. Allen, to bring to us expressions of love and sympathy. It has been said of old: "Say it with flowers," but the McCollums say it with cash, putting a five-dollar bill in Mrs. Reed's palsied fingers. Our eyes grew dim when we remembered that two years ago when Mrs. Reed was in the hospital and the writer was laid up by a nervous breakdown with practically no income, each of them said it with a ten-dollar bill. Such kindness grips our souls and we thank God for the tie that binds.

W. D. REED.

First Church, High Point.—At the Sunday morning service Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for the subject of his message, "Believing Christ, or Believing in Christ," the text and references being from John 14:1, "Ye believe in God, believe also in me," which was a phrase from Christ's farewell message to His disciples, and John 11:26, "Whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die," the words of Jesus to Martha when her brother, Lazarus, died. Our faith is sometimes belief in the faith of somebody else. A great many people believe that Social Service is the greater part of religion. Although it is a fine work, we need something more. The devil gets a lot of fun out of the way we practice our religion. Christianity cannot flourish on a half belief. The greatest part of the pessimism of the world comes from a want of faith. Readers of Robert Browning find that his optimism comes from his definite belief. There is a sadness at the heart of an agnostic philosophy of life. God calls on us as pilgrim souls to belief in Him. God, and not chance, rules the world. The most practical thing about man is his belief. James says that faith without works is dead. One man believes there is a God; another puts his whole trust in Him. Oh, my people, I want you to take God as a living person. Believing in Christ is relying upon Him for salvation. If I never say another word to you, I want to say to you that Christianity did not arise from belief in Him, but it makes your life different. There is danger in substituting what somebody believes about Christ for faith in Christ. The glory of the Gospel is the lives which it redeems. Salvation is a deliverance from the power of sin anl the love of sin. "Ye believe in God, believe also in me," means to hate sin and love what is pure and holy.

At the evening service the minister delivered a very effective sermon on "The Glory of the Commonplace," which was one requested to be repeated by vote of a majority.

The Sunday school report for February 2 is as follows: Attendance, 360; offering, $23.18.

We are delighted to receive into our membership Prof. and Mrs. R. H. Gunn, of 1031 Sherrod Avenue. The former is a member of the College faculty, and they are heartily welcomed to our fellowship.

The annual thank offering service of the Woman's Auxiliary will be observed next Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service, and an inspiring message will be brought by Rev. R. I. Farmer, and the collection will be used for New Century Service.

A very interesting and enthusiastic session of the Woman's Auxiliary was held at the parsonage Monday afternoon upon invitation of Mrs. R. I. Farmer. A timely and splendid article on "American Homes" was read by Mrs. A. M. Rankin. In the business session following the program, the committee announced the names of officers for next year, as follows: President, Mrs. S. S. Coe; vice-president, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell; secretary, Mrs. J. H. Walker; assistant secretary, Mrs. Hobart Allred, and treasurer, Mrs. J. S. Pickett, in place of Mrs. R. T. Pickens, who asked not to be considered for re-election. The treasurer reported that the sum of $100 has been sent to Mrs. Taylor for a Pine Ridge scholarship, $115 to "Dollar a Member" campaign for High Point College, and our monthly pledge of $50.00, amounting to $600.00, has been paid in full to Mr. J. S. Picket, treasurer of the building fund. We have paid $633.35 to New Century Service and $165 to North Carolina work. A suffiient balance is in the treasury to meet our budget of $1,025. After the completion of business and brief sentence prayers, the hostess, Mrs. R. I. Farmer, served a delicious salad course, and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed.

The topic, "Ways to Study the Bible," was discussed at Christian Endeavor Monday evening, which was led by Miss Myrtle Davis and Mrs. George T. Stephens of the Presbyterian church.

At the Wednesday evening supper meeting this week Mrs. Ben Moore's Circle No. 7 will serve, and the subject of the minister's message will be "Ignorant Men, But Courageous." At 8:15 o'clock a cantata, "Courtship of Miles Standish," taken from the popular poem of Henry W. Longfellow, will be presented by members of the Junior church under the direction of Rev. E. Lester Ballard. The children will be dressed in Puritan costumes, and the music will be especially pleasing. A silver offering will be taken at the door.

At quarterly conference February 5th, an interesting feature was introduced when Rev. Mr. Farmer suggested the adoption of a short vesper service each Sabbath evening at 5 o'clock instead of the usual service at 8 o'clock. A committee was appointed to look into the advisability of this plan.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny left Friday morning by automobile for points in Florida, where they expect to spend several weeks.

Miss Helen Shields, formerly a student in the college, who has a position in Winston-Salem, spent the week-end with friends in the city.

Miss Inez Reynolds, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. G. L. Reynolds, who underwent an operation for appendicitis at Greensboro Clinic Hospital, has been moved to her home, where she is improving. She expects to resume her school work in two weeks.

Mrs. L. F. Honeycutt, of Woodrow Avenue, is suffering from influenza, her friends will be pained to learn.

West Forsyth.—Services at Tabernacle and Union Hill churches were well attended last Sunday. We were at Tabernacle for Sunday school at 10 o'clock, and a very interesting school was conducted. Mrs. J. W. Masoncup, the superintendent, who was re-elected at the election held last month, was present for the first time in several Sundays, she having been kept away on account of the illness of her husband. Only one teacher was absent, and the pastor taught the class. Prof. H. G. Easley, blind musician of Burlington, who is visiting the pastor and family this week, played the piano for the Sunday school and preaching service. In the preaching service we had a number of visitors from other churches and the congregation was very attentive to the message of the pastor.

At Union Hill the service was held at three o'clock in the afternoon. About the usual number was present. The ordinance of the Lord's Supper was observed. Some of the people of this church were absent on account of sickness. There are a number of sick members of Tabernacle church. The condition of Mrs. W. W. Whitman, of Tabernacle church, is reported slightly improved.

After the service at Union Hill last Sunday afternoon the pastor and family, accompanied by Prof. H. G. Easley, stopped at the splendid home of Bro. John Smitherman and sisters, Misses Nancy and Millie Smitherman, at East Bend for a brief visit. We were persuaded to remain for supper which was enjoyed very much. These good people are among the best people of the West Forsyth Charge and always make our visits pleasant and enjoyable. The music and sermons heard over the excellent radio of Mr. Smitherman were thoroughly enjoyed. The Smithermans are members of Baltimore church.

The pastor and family appreciated a gift of fresh meat and sausage from Bro. A. R. Long and family during the past week.

Bro. W. L. Doub, a long-time member of Baltimore church, who has been in feeble health for the past year or more, recently suffered an attack of severe illness, and has been confined to his bed for nearly two weeks. He and his wife have their son and family living with them and Bro. Doub is well cared for by his wife and their daughter-in-law. They seem to enjoy the visits of the pastor, since the elder Bro. Doub cannot attend church services. We wish for him a steady improvement and a permanent recovery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Warner, one of the oldest members of Harmony Grove church, who suffered a stroke of paralysis several weeks ago, had a second stroke over a week ago and was in a very serious condition for a few days. She had improved some when the pastor visited the home last Sunday night. Her many friends wish for her a complete recovery. Bro. Elwood Hunter, member of Pleasant Hill church, who is employed at the University of North Carolina, was operated on at the City Hospital in Winston-Salem last week and is reported to be recoving nicely.

Our appointment will be with Pleasant Hill church next Sunday at 11 a. m.

Greensville Circuit, Hobbs Chapel.—We are awake and advancing slowly. We are proud indeed to have Bro. Cowan as pastor again this year; he is preaching unusually good sermons. Our congregations have been fair considering the bad weather and terrible roads.

Pastor Cowan used Job 14:14 for his subject last Sunday: "If a man die, shall he live again?" He stated that this question had been asked him three times during the past week at burial services, and had prompted him to preach from the subject. He discussed the topic from four standpoints: according to science, philosophy, ethics, and according to the words of Christ himself. Sience says, "Man may live again." Philosophy says, "Man hopes to live again." Ethics says, "Man ought to live again; to right his wrongs and accomplish his desires." Christ says, "Man shall live again, for I have tasted death for every man." "Because I have paid the penalty for every one on the cross." "I am the resurrection of immortality and life." "If a man lose his life for my sake, he shall find it."

We are always glad to have Bro. Cowan and his good wife visit us, and it's a pleasure to visit them at the parsonage.

Harris Chapel, Vance.—For some time our church has been saying nothing through these columns, and perhaps we haven't done so much to tell about, but our work is moving on slowly. However with the leadership of our capable pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, we hope to do great things.

On Saturday night, February 8, Mr. Braxton called a meeting of the stewards at the home of Mr. H. G. Ellington to revise the class-book and attend to such matters as were deemed necessary. Those present were Mr. S. A. Burroughs, Mr. E. R. Boyd, Mr. J. B. Glover, and Mr. G. E. Nuckles. The following Sunday Mr. Braxton preached for us at the 11 o'clock hour. He gave us a fine sermon, the congregation was good, but hope to have a better throughout the year.

West End.—Sunday morning Dr. Lindley brought us another of his splendid messages, using as his subject "God's Wonderful Love". We are highly pleased with the services Dr. Lindley has been conducting, and while the attendance is fairly good, we are sorry that more of our people are not availing themselves of the opportunity to worship with us in these services.

We are very happy indeed that the North Carolina Conference Council of Religious Education has selected West End as one of the churches in which to conduct a Standard Leadership Training School, the dates being March 25, 31, April 1, 8, 9. We are ready to do anything we can to help make this the most successful school that our Council has ever conducted. To the other churches of the city and surrounding country we would say: if you have not already, start now to make plans to have a large delegation attend this Leadership Training School. Too high a value cannot be placed on the benefits received from such courses as those offered by our Standard Leadership Training Schools.

The women's Auxiliary will hold their annual thank-offering service next Sunday, February 16th, at 7:30 p. m. A very interesting program consisting of two one-act plays will be given.

At a recent business meeting of the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society it was decided, by these young people, to undertake the task of securing West End's quota of 29 subscriptions to the Herald—you will hear from us later regarding their success.

Enfield Charge. Recently there has been installed in the Enfield church a new furnace with an oil-burner. We feel that this will solve our heating problem. The good women of the church were the prime movers and financiers of this project. However, the men showed their colors when it came to the installation. Bros. Eli Bellamy and Jimmie Rives worked each night, without cost to the church, for more than a weke. Bros. George Parker and J. R. Powers also gave freely valuable assistance. Bro. Ralph Rives, our chairman of the board of trustees, has been faithful in seeking to keep the water out of the basement. These brethren have rendered invaluable assistance to our church in this faithful and efficient service. A true demonstration of their loyalty to the cause which the church represents.

Last Sunday two new members were received into the Enfield church in the names of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. McCutchin. They came to us from the Presbyterian church. Mrs. McCutchin was formerly a member of the Methodist Protestant Church. We welcome these friends into our fellowship and communion. We trust the church will seem like home to them and that they will find the fellowship of the church an inspiration as well; we are already assured they will be an inspiration to the church.

We are glad to report that Bro. Hubert Whitaker's family is improving.

Mrs. Cordelia Bustin has been ill but is improving.

Mr. John Davis is suffering from a broken bone in one of his feet. Accompanied by two other men, one day last week to attend court as jurors, at Halifax at a railroad crossing his car was wrecked and the two other men were seriouly injured. He sought to stop his car in time, but was unable to do so. However, he was fortunate to make an escape by a desperate jump for his life. He had just cleared the railroad when the speeding train struck his car. The church and community are rejoicing that he was spared. The last information is that the other two men will recover.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—Rev. C. Ivey Smith preached another good sermon Sunday morning from Luke 19:1-10. We find in verse 4 where Zacheus ran before and climbed up into a sycamore tree to see Jesus for he was to pass that way.

Listen, folks! It seems that we are getting pretty high, but wonder if we are looking for Jesus.

Mr. Smith will fill his other appointment the third Sunday at 7:30. We invite you to come.

Our C. E. Society is moving since Miss Bertha Woodruff became president.

Circle No. 1, Miss Susie Hawkins, leader, held a meeting Sunday afternoon.

Circle No. 2, Mr. Edward Hawkins, leader, will hold a meeting the fourth Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Hawkins welcomed us in their home Friday night for a social meeting.

Our dollar a member is not growing very rapidly, we are sorry to say.

Let's try to make our church in 1930 stand more for God than ever.

Mt. Moriah Church.—We haven't written to the Herald in a year. Our church has improved more this year than ever before. In the Sunday school we are progressing. We are all proud of our Sunday school rooms since we had them curtained off. We have raised something over $100 for the benefit of the church. We had a very nice crowd for Sunday school last Sunday; also a good many more for the 11 o'clock service. Brother Ridge delivered another one of those splendid sermons. His subject was "Love." He based his discussion on John 3:16. I think every one enjoyed the sermon.

MRS. ETHEL HUNT, Reporter.

Lexington, State Street.—We find that in all our church services the idea of a different and diversified program of worship such as our pastor is advocating and in which all are so heartily co-operating is proving a means of increasing attendance and interest.

The opening exercises for Sunday school are carried out along no set lines, but always with reverence and in a spirit of worship.

At the evening hour, 7 o'clock, the preaching is along envangelistic lines, bringing to Christians a deeper consecration and desire for service and to the careless ones a concern for their way of living and desire for something better.

In connection with this good preaching there is always a treat in the way of special music. Last Sunday night the choir was composed of a large chorus of some of the best male voices of the town. Almost every denomination in town was represented and were directed by Lexingtin's most efficient vocal instrumental music teacher, Mr. B. F. Sink. The singing was splendid and a large audience from the various denominations and almost all our own folks were delighted and helped by hearing it. Our pastor, Bro. Hendrey, was so uplifted and thrillel and enthused by the beautiful gospel songs, sung in such an impressive way, that he preached like an old-time "shouting Methodist," and his mood and message met a response in every heart.

Next Sunday evening the service will be an old-time "meeting house" one, with nothing modern in evidence. No electric lights and no instrumental music. The hymns will be the most ancient of the ancient favorites sung as our great-grandparents used to sing them. All are urged to bring any old and infirm ones who can attend church but seldom. This is going to be a great service. We are all looking forward to it with much interest.

The young people's meeting of C. E. gave an interesting program Sunday evening at six o'clock. The regular C. E. program was given in addition to a fine Missionary program. This is the custom of the young people once each month. Miss Helen Harkey is the president of the society and prepares the Missionary program each month in a most sensible and helpful way that would do cerdit to a person many years her senior.

Every member of Sunday school has set his or her face steadfastly toward the goal of 200 for Sunday attendance in the next few months. A meeting of the workers' council will be held after the regular mid-week meeting Wednesday night. At this meeting Bro. Hendry has promised to tell us how to go about reaching this goal quickly.

There is a cordial invitation to everybody who reads the Herald to attend the unique service next Sunday night. An urgent and special invition to Dr. and Mrs. Dixon.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The members of the Christian Endeavor Society met on February 2, for the purpose of reorganizing the society. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. A. L. Davis; vice-president, Ruth Long; corresponding secretary, Lena Hunter; recording secretary, Alice Saylor; treasurer, Martha Louise Speas. It was decided that the C. E. meetings would be held on the second and fourth Sunday mornings immediately after Sunday school, during the winter months.

The president had a business meeting of the society last Sunday. The different committees were selected by the president and each was informed as to what their duty would be. We hope the new secretary will have the literature ordered and distributed among the members by the next meeting. We are expecting the executive committee and helpers to get busy on their job and soon have the C. E. a prospering society.

The regular preaching service will be held at our church next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Our Sunday school attendance has been increasing somewhat since the first of the year. We have had Sunday school every Sunday this year and the attendance has been good considering the bad weather; yet we feel and know there are many that should, and could, be added to our roll. We have a Sunday school committee in our C. E. society, and we hope they will work and help to increase our Sunday school attendance, as we are far from the goal we would like to maintain.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

METHOD OF RECEIVING THE THANK-OFFERING

(Candle-Lighting Service)

The following is an effective method of receiving the Thanksgiving offering:

1. After having prepared the minds of the women for the giving of the Thank-offering, let each circle chairman see the individual members of her circle and receive their thank-offering.

2. As the closing feature of the Thank-offering service, the auxiliary treasurer stands behind an altar or table on which there are candles of at least three sizes. The tallest candles will be lighted for the ten-dollar gifts, the next size for the five-dollar gifts and the smallest for one-dollar gifts.

3. Each circle chairman brings to the altar, which may merely be a table covered with a sheet, the offering from her group. As she announces the amount, the treasurer will light candles accordingly. The candles are used as a symbol of the light which our offerings carry to neglected humanity.

4. After the circles have made their gifts, the president of the auxiliary will make her offering in the same way. Then people in the audience are given the opportunity to light a candle by giving a gift, large or small.

5. The offering plates are then passed to receive the loose offering from those who have not otherwise given.

6. Words of appreciation are then spoken and a prayer of thanksgiving offered.

LINEBERRY LADIES' AID SOCIETY

On the second Saturday afternoon the Ladies' Aid meets each month for the purpose of paying dues and making plans and, of course, some work, too.

The last meeting was at the home of Mrs. T. W. Hall, meeting called to order by Mrs. W. A. Frank, persident. Song, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus." The devotional part was led by Mrs. E. D. Lanier, after which thirteen members answered to the roll call, minutes were read of last meeting ,and approved.

$19.40 was collected through our apron plan. We want to thank everyone who made it possible for this amount to be raised.

Finances were discussed for helping the sick people of our community. After which $8.76 was donated as follows: $5.00 given to Rev. and Mrs. Reed; $1.00 given to Mrs. Homer Skeen for flower pot; $1.81 paid to Mrs. Van B. Wood to buy 11 1-2 yards dress prints for Mrs. Chas. Scarboro and daughters. 35c for basket of fruit for Mrs. Lindo Hill, after which left a total amount in treasury of $25.04.

We are very srory to report the sudden illness of our good pastor's wife, Mrs. W. D. Reed, also a member of our Aid Society. We pray for her recovery as we miss her smiling face in church and aid meetings, too.

After the business hour, well, you folks weren't there, and I can't tell you how well Mrs. Hall knows how to serve. But it was mighty good. Meeting adjourned to meet with Mrs. E. D. Lanier in March.

MARRIED

Johnson-Saunders

On Friday night, Jan. 31, 1930, I had gone to bed and had just closed my peepers for a long winter's nap when a car drove up to my house. I got up and opened the door, there was a young man come in the porch and there were some folks out there that had a job for me. I put on my clothes and told them to come in. Mr. Richard Roy Johnson of Asheboro, and Miss Etta Saunders of Giles' chapel community came in and I soon pronounced them husband and wife. I had never met Mr. Johnson before but I think he is a fine young man, I have known Miss Saunders from early childhood, she is a fine girl, they both work at Asheboro and will make their home there.

We wish for them a long and happy life. Come on next.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Harris

"His face has passed from the hearthstone
Like stars at the coming of dawn;
As echoes that drift into silence,
The sound of his foot falls is gone."

God has called our oldest and most loyal member, Mr. E. C. Harris, not only in church attendance but in Sunday School work as well. The work he dearly loved. His class was devoted to him, and his place will be hard to fill. We will miss his kindly advice and prayers, yet we know God was good to us in sparing him to the old age of 72.

Mr. Harris was buried at Rehoboth Methodist Church on Wednesday, services conducted by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Spencer.

He was held in high esteem in social and business circles, having at one time been vice-president of the First National Bank of Oxford, and for many years chairman of the Board of County Commissioners. He was active all his life in religious work.

Besides his widow, who was Miss Sue Barnes, of Vance County, he leaves the following children: Mrs. D. T. Perkins, secretary to the State Treasurer, Raleigh; T. D. Harris, of Bureau of Public Roads, Washington, D. C.; E. C. Harris, Jr., civil engineer, North Wilkesboro; Mrs. Bert Lassiter, Four Oaks; Mrs. William Floyd, Miss Sue Harris and R. W. Harris, of Oxford, and Miss Delphia Harris, of Meredith College.

May we all follow Jesus as Mr. Harris followed Him.

Jobe

Eliza Ann Jobe, born Feb. 11, 1854, died February 8, 1930.

In early life she joined Mt. Hermon M. P. Church, about 55 years ago. She transferred her membership to Hebron M. P. Church.

Funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. M. I. Crutchfield, February 9. After which the remains were placed to rest in Hebron cemetery.

The large congregation present shows the esteem in which the memory of this departed sister is held.

May God comfort the bereaved ones.

Grissom

Richard Otho Grissom departed this life January 29, 1930. Mr. Grissom was doing some work on the Rose Chain Store at Morganton when he was taken seriously ill, and was carried to the hospital where he died in a few hours. Mr. Grissom was a member of Mt. Carmel M. P. Church on Granville charge. He was reared almost in sight of this church, and united with it when a boy and has lived a faithful, consistent life.

Mr. Grissom had been married twice. He is survived by his last wife and four children, one daughter from his first union, Mrs. Myrtle Mishou, of Williamston, N. Grissom, of Kissimmee, Fla., and two sisters, Mrs. William Strickland, and Mrs. W. J. Abbott, of Henderson, N. C.

I DID NOT KNOW

I did not know the sky revealed
Such colors wondrous fair;
One day I gave an upward glance
And saw a rainbow there.

I did not know that man could be
So gentle and so kind;
I spent a peaceful afternoon
In company of the blind.

I did not know what flowers hid
iWthin their cloistered cell;
A friend brought heliotrope to me
And helped to make me well.

I did not know that common things
Were much approved of God;
I watched a man with saintly face
A-working in the sod.

I did not know a little child
Could show the way to live;
One taught me how to play aright
Another how to give.

I did not know a beggar man
Did anything worthwhile;
I gave to one a silver coin,
He gave to me a smile.

I did not know that any book
Could mean so much to me;
I read "And ye shall know the truth
And the truth shall make you free."

BLACK HILL MEMORIAL INSCRIPTION

Calvin Coolidge will write the history of the United States in less than 500 words for inscription on a huge granite tablet on Mount Rushmore, in the Black Hills mountains, near Keystone, S. Dak. Five-inch deep letters, which will stand erosion for 500,000 years, will be gilded so that, facing the west, they may be read miles away at the setting of the sun. The historical tablet, 80 feet high and 120 feet wide, will be beside 420 foot tall figures of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt, sculptured on the mountainside by the famous Gutzon Borglum.

THE GOLDEN SIDE

There is many a rose in the road of life,
If we would only stop to take it;
And many a tone from the better land
If the querulous heart heart would make it.

To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beutiful thrust ne'er faileth;
The grass is green, and the flowers are bright;
Though the wintry storm prevaileth.

Better to hope though the clouds hang low;
Than to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through
When the ominous clouds have shifted.

There was never a night without a day,
Nor an evening without a morning,
And the darkest hour, the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crowns
Or the miser's hounded treasure.

It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayer to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of cold water given.

Better to weave in the web of life
A brightand golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart
And hands that are swiftly willing,

Than to snap the delicate silver threads
Of curious lines asunder,
And then Heaven blame for the tangled ends
And sit and grieve and—wonder.

A selection from D. C. Aldridge's scrapbook, supposed to be 40 years old.

FRIENDSHIP

Friends may be false, they may be true,
But you want the kind that will stand by you
Through thick and thin, through darkness and light,
And make your life seem happy and bright.

No matter the number of friends that you love
That seem to be sent to you from above,
Just wait till some trouble comes to you,
And see how many of your friends are true.

A friendship is a lovely thing,
For, joy and happiness to all it will bring,
If it is firm, and good, and true,
And you love your friends as they love you.

A Letter to Our Leaders

A letter goes from our office this week to all our pastors and Sunday school superintendents. If one of these letters comes to you and you are not the present superintendent, please hand it to your superintendent. Thank you.

We hope all our people will find out what these letters say, and then respond liberally and heartily to our call.

We Thank You

Our hearty thanks go to all those who think of us, and pray for us, and help us in any way materially. God bless you every one.

Faithfully yours in His service,

A. G. DIXON.

—Our church in Siler City loses a valuable member in the death of Mrs. W. A. Teague. Hospital treatment in Richmond last summer seemed to give her a new lease on life, but pneumonia proved too much for her strength and she succumbed on Tuesday of this week. Rev. Mr. Garrick, her son-in-law, conducts the funeral service today.

—This is live-at-home week. Are you living at home?

—Mrs. Hattie Perkins writes these particulars of the illness of her father, Bro. E. C. Harris: "He had high blood pressure and hardening of the arteries, aggravated by about ten days in bed with pleurisy, though the doctor had discharged him." His friends were hoping for him years more of life and are grieved by his unexpected death. He was one of our very best men. We expect his pastor to furnish an obituary notice later.

—Rev. Lawrence Little addressed the Township S. S. Convention in Greensboro last Sunday afternoon and Prof. P. E. Lindley spoke on Monday night.

—Calvary's Male Quartette, composed of Bros. Booth, Coe, Cox, and Jackson, have calls to sing away from home. On Tuesday night they sang in Glenwood.

—Calvary's Brotherhood meeting on Tuesday night was one of unusual interest. Plans were projected looking to systematic personal work for the church and people of the community.

—J. A. Odell, aged 88 years, died of pneumonia last Monday evening. He was for years a prominent merchant here, head of the Odell Hardware Company. He was highly esteemed as a citizen and churchman. We believe he was a Methodist Protestant when he came to Greensboro, but we had no church here then and he joined the M. E. Church, South, of which he made a very useful member.

—Bro. Greer of Calvary church recently lost his mother by death. She was about 78 years old. He and his wife were at her bedside for days before the end came.

ANY CHURCH OR PASTOR desiring a musician to lead in revivals this spring or summer will please call on or write W. B. Blanton, Caroleen, N. C. 1-23-4t

The Bible School

The greatest school in all the world!
For maidens, matrons, men and boys,
For oldest folks that live on earth,
For little tots that play with toys.

The school that meets on God's good day,
"The day of all the week the best,"
The Holy Sabbath of the Lord
Which He has called a day of rest.

The school that has the noblest theme
And gives itself to loftiest thought,
Which learns aright the truth of God
And sees the wondrous things He wrought.

The school that meets in heavenly place,
The school that sits at Jesus' feet,
That hears the marvels of His grace
And sings its joy in music sweet.

Will you despise this school of God?
Will you play truant on this day?
Will you refuse all part or lot
And in the end have nought to say?

Erickson, Evangelist

Rev. R. L. Erickson, for 32 years an evangelist, has built a tabernacle seating two thousand people in Greensboro and is holding meetings every night except Monday night. We heard him last Sunday afternoon. All seats were full and standing room against the walls was taken. Perhaps the feature of greatest attraction is that of praying for divine healing. In a recent meeting at High Point numbers were reported healed of serious maladies in answer to Mr. Erickson's prayers. Some of them came to Greensboro to the first meeting and gave testimony to their cures. It was reported last Sunday that a blind man was restored to sight the night before.

Mr. Erickson is not a man of sanctimonious appearance, but a man of physical vigor and alertness. He has evidently been with other evangelists and learned of them. He knows that it takes money to run even a religious meeting and he knows how to frame appeals in such a way as to secure results. He has not grown rich at the business, according to his statement. He put all he had into the building of the tabernacle here, and he expects to go away with enough to build a tabernacle where next needed.

He announced as his subject Sunday afternoon, "The Age of Miracles not Ended." His arguments did not prove it unless it was his last argument, that God has wrought miracles in answer to his prayers. He said that some say the power to work miracles was limited to the apostles. He overthrew that statement by calling attention to the fact that Stephen and Philip who were not apostles, but deacons wrought miracles. He referred to the view that Jesus' object in working miracles was to prove His divinity. In opposition to that view he said that the Bible reports of Jesus' miracles represent Him as being moved with compassion for the afflicted. But this is not a complete rebuttal of the other view. Jesus may have been actuated by a two-fold motive; desire to prove His divinity and desire to relieve the suffering. If compassion was His only motive, why did He not by a wave of the hand sweep all sickness from our human world?

But Mr. Erickson reported a number of very remarkable cures in different parts of the country in answer to his prayers. The most skeptical would be aroused to wonder. And yet without more evidence than a mere verbal report the most skeptical will not be convinced.

Mr. Erickson is right in belief that all healing is of God. If you cut your finger, your physician may apply an antiseptic to keep hostile germs out, but he cannot heal the wound. God must do that, though men ordinarily say "Nature" does it.

There are two kinds of sickness: sickness unto death and sickness not unto death. If a sickness is not unto death it may be cured. Whether cured in answer to prayer or not, God is the healer. "I am the Lord that healeth thee." James taught that the elders of the church should pray for the sick and for the sinning, and declared that God would give health and pardon. Paul prayed that the thorn might be removed, but God did not remove it. God has a dseign in affliction. It must accomplish His purpose before it is removed.

Why should it seem a thing incredible that God should heal the sick? He has been healing them for thousands of years. Those who make health, freedom from pain, the greatest asset and despise morality are not likely to find health in answer to prayer. But if God choose to answer the prayer of His servant for healing in order to convince the thoughtless that He is and is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him, what a gracious thing it would be?

We wish for Brother Erickson good success in his efforts to lead men and women into the true way of life and salvation.

Progress in Inter-College Movement

We recently referred to the generous effort of President Ward of Western Maryland College, to instigate a movement in the interest of the liberal arts collegse. The American Association of Colleges considered the matter in its recent annual meeting and referred it to the committee on resolutions. The result was the call of a conference of representatives of the colleges of liberal arts in the United States to be held in Chicago March 18-20. Present indications are that 500 institutions will be represented. Dr. Ward, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, asks the prayers of Christian people for the success of the movement.

THE FIRST DECADE OF NATIONAL PROHIBITION

By DR. ERNEST H. CHERRINGTON

General Sec. of the World League Against Alcoholism

Prohibition is no longer an experiment in the United States of America. From whatever angle we view this question it has passed beyond the testing point and has demonstrated its value. This is attested equally in the fields of economics, of health, and of sociology. Assailed as no other public policy ever has been assailed, it has weathered storms which would have sufficed to overthrow a measure that was less strongly established or that did not have behind it a tremendous volume of public sentiment.

Because we are so close to the question many of us do not fully realize the tremendous achievements which are to the credit of national prohibition. Then, too, that easy forgetfulness which is so characteristic of humanity makes its difficult for us to compare the occasional violation of the law today with the chronic violations of the pre-prohibition era. We know that the prohibition law is violated. We forget too readily that the license or regulatory laws were violated so continuously that the popular assumption was that such violations were normal. The occasional sight of a public drunkard today rallies a crowd. Before the adoption of the eighteenth amendment drunken nuisance in the fact that the hip flask, places. There is significance in the fact that the hip flask, with its limited quantity of liquor, has taken the place of the quart and the decanter. We are dealing in fractions now when once we dealt in whole numbers with three figures. If it be true of the beverage-alcohol problem that "needs must that offenses come," it is none the less a great achievement to have made those offenses so closely approach the minimum.

In estimating the value of prohibition as an economic asset one must not ignore the fact that this national policy had its earlier years in a period when economic disaster would have been the normal expectation. Probably there is no better index to prosperity than the savings accounts of the nation. While these are only a part of the total savings, which include life insurance, permanent investments, home buying, etc., they probably mirror more accurately than any other single factor the better condition of the wage earners of the country.

In 1918, according to the figures in the report of the Comptroller of the Currency, the amounts of these savings were: Private-banks savings, $23,459,823; postal-savings banks, $148, 471,499; loan and trust companies, $1,286,650,369; State-banks savings, $1,071,636,806; mutual-savings banks, $4,442.096,393; stock-savings banks, $1,001,573,414; national banks saving departments, $1,398,358,000; total, $9,372,246,304.

In an analysis of the report of the United States Comptroller of the Currency, W. Espy Albig, deputy manager of the American Bankers' Association's savings bank division, says:

"The year ended June 30, 1928, registered over the previous year the largest gain in savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States ever recorded in the history of this country. On June 30, 1928, the volume of savings stood at $28,412,961,000, a gain of $2,327,059,000 over the previous year. * * * Since 1912, when adequate records first became available, the gain per inhabitant is 169.3 per cent. * * * The number of depositors, which, for 1917, was reported at 48,354,784, reaches a high mark this year with 53,188,348."

The American Banker recognizes the part played by the eighteenth amendment in developing our gains in savings deposits and finds that although it would be impossible to determine exactly "the influence of prohibition in building the savings-bank totals of the country; that it has had some bearing will be admitted even by those who do not particularly favor the prohibition amendment."

The life insurance data of the country is another index of the economic gains made under prohibition. Since the adoption of the eighteenth amendment our annual purchase of new life insurance has been multiplied three and one-half times. Over 65,000,000 people now carry life insurance amounting to $100,000,000,000.

The Insurance Field in September, 1929, commented at at great length upon the economic gains from prohibition. In the course of its article it said:

"What we particularly want to see discussed fairly is the relation of prohibition to the economic system of insurance as importantly incidental to and with the general welfare. How much of the evident savings from the annual alcoholic drink bill has gone into life insurance, building and loan associations, savings banks, and the many comforts of living? * * *

"Has prohibition advanced the general welfare, or has it merely dried out cocktail glasses? It is a business and not a moral, personal-liberty matter with insurance."

Prohibition gave a new emphasis to the home-building impulse. Many who during the saloon epoch were forced to live in slums or in unspeakable tenements because the major portion of their income went across the bar are today knowing a new comfort and a new ambition. The best authorities in reality and building circles recognize the part played by prohibition in developing the new market for homes. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, in its recent review of building operations in the first half of 1929, calls attention to the fact that in 85 cities in the United States having a population of 100,000 or over, building permits issued in the first half of 1929 call for an expenditure of $1,425,106,688 of which 64.1 per cent was for residential building.

There is a double significance in this stimulation of home building. Not only does it register the improvement in home conditions and the higher standards of living which have developed since prohibition but this increased volume of construction means labor and employment for a host of men engaged in the building trade.

The automobile industry has a very intimate relation to prohibition. Even before Henry Ford made his famous statement, "If booze ever comes back to the United States, I am through with manufacturing," and "gasoline and booze don't mix; that's all," thinking people realized that intoxicating beverages could not be safely permitted if we were to continue to use high-speed automobiles on our public highways. The auto death list is already too high. If the saloon should return or if under any system drink should be legalized once more, few of us would care to run the risks incident to traveling on a road infested with drinking drivers.

Since, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics in its August, 1929, study of Trend of Employment and Labor Turnover, the number on the August pay roll in 217 establishments, producing automobiles, was 437,202, while the amount of the weekly pay roll was $15,098,523, one is forced to realize that any national policy which threatens an industry of this caliber would be a positive disaster to the business structure of the country. If we add, however, to these figures the 58,240 engaged in production of automobile tires with the weekly pay roll of $1,685,032 and then add to these those employed in filling stations, garages, accessory manufacturers, and retailers, it is quite evident that anything which seriously disturbs the automobile industry would at the same time shake the very foundations of our industrial life. If prohibition had done nothing more than make possible the amazing development of the auto trade in the past ten years, it would have made an incalculable contribution to the economic life of the nation.

Prohibition has played an important part in reducing the criminality in the United States.

Dr. George W. Kirchwey, formerly dean of Columbia Law School and one of the leading authorities on criminology in the United States, denying that crime is increasing in this country, declares that:

"As between 1910 and 1923, the latter date being the high-water mark of reaction against national prohibition .there was a decrease of 37.7 per cent in general criminality in the United States in proportion to population. The cheif reductions were in public intoxication, 55.3 per cent; disorderly conduct, 51.5 per cent; vagrancy, 52.8 per cent; fornication and prostitution, 55.7 per cent; malicious mischief, etc., 68 per cent; larceny, 53.1 per cent; and burglary, 11.4 per cent."

Possibly no other single public policy ever played so large a part in striking at the causes of crime as did the adoption of national prohibition. It made intoxicating beverages difdicult to obtain instead of easily accessible; it made them costly instead of cheap; it eliminated the saloons and their back rooms, which were the rendezvous for criminals and the school of crime. Its effect may be measured not by the too fervid utterances of its friends or its foes but by the criminal data of almost any town or city in the country. Lawlessness is of course far too prevalent.

The effect of prohibition upon the public health has been as marked as its effect upon the economic life of the country. This can likewise be measured by statistics whose authenticity is beyond question. While there had been a slight yearly decrease in the national death rate in the preprohibition years, that decrease was so small that it was barely perceptible upon the ordinary chart. With the coming of prohibition, however, the death rate for the country dropped abruptly. It has not even remotely approached the ratio for the license period. According to the figures issued by the department of vital statistics in the United States Census Bureau, this decrease in the death rate has been equivalent to the saving of 100,000 to 200,000 lives per year. In other words, nearly 200,000 persons would have died annually during the past ten years had the conditions prevailing during the license period been continued.

Horatio M. Pollock, of the New York State Department of Mental Hygiene, and Frederick W. Brown, of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, have recently published some unusual statistics on recent alcoholic mental diseases. The following quotation from their survey is so significant that it is hardly necessary for one to point the moral which it contains:

"The nine States that were 'wet' before prohibition contributed more than 90 per cent of all cases of alcoholic insanity in 1922, 1925, and 1926. The percentage of alcoholic cases among all new admissions to these hospitals for the years 1922, 1925, and 1926 shows a steady increase. The percentage of alcoholic cases among all new admissions and readmissions to these hospitals in 1926 was less than one-half of that of 1910, but slightly greater than that of 1922 or of 1925. * * *"

Miss Cora Frances Stoddard, of the Scientific Temperance Federation, has carefully analyzed the alcoholism mortality statistics of the various states as furnished by the United States Census Bureau. She finds:

"There were about 16,000 fewer alcoholism deaths in the first seven prohibition years than there would have been had there prevailed the average preprohibition rate of the years, 1912-1917. In 1926, the latest year for which United States statistics are available, there were fewer actual deaths from alcoholism in a registration area of 105,000,000 people than there were in 1916 from 71,000,000 people."

Prohibition has proven its worth. That it is no longer an experiment does not need citation of authorities or the presentation of elaborate statistics. Even the most casual observer can see for himself the change which has been wrought in America by this national policy. It has so transformed conditions in our social life that it is difficult today for us to think ourselves back into the setting of the preprohibition era. We have in this brief space of less than a decade become accustomed to streets and public places free from drunkards. We take for granted now prosperity which is merely one of the by-products of prohibition. We assume as a normal condition the better health and the improved living conditions which have become general. We may not always recognize that behind these things and underlying them as well there is the Eighteenth Amendment. It is there none the less.

THE RELIGION OF LOVE

There is religion and religion, and today thoughtful men are not asking whether they shall have any religion, but what kind?

If Christianity is shown to be something so individually and socially worth while because of the otherwise hidden values it discloses, and the power it brings to believing men to help them realize those values in daily experience, it will be eagerly desired and earnestly sought by multitudes. And this in a day when selfishness is having its most glorious fling in a society chiefly devoted to materialism.

Nothing else, nothing less than the religion of love as lived and taught by Jesus Christ is worth proclaiming, worth orgainizing and supporting Churches and Sunday Schools to teach and apply to life.

For the religion of love is the religion of personal and social obligation. It is the religion which exalts an ethical code that condemns many of our smoothest and most successful practices in business and social life, in industry, in our dealings with persons of other races, in our methods of determining and measuring out justice, especially to those whose views we abhor. The love which is the essence of Christianity is not a weak sentiment that spends itself in emotional gush. It is the spiritual force that moved Jesus Christ to accept his cross. It cannot be experienced and obeyed by his followers on cheap, superficial terms. The cross is never far away. But it is this kind of religion that our world needs as it needs nothing else—D. D., in the Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE HEINOUSNESS OF SIN

The moral law has its seat in the nature of God, and sin is primarily sin against Him. There is no fine talk in the Bible about sin as a pardonable flaw, a little rift in the lute which does not seriously disturb the delicate tones of the instrument; nothing about sin as an unfortunate but easily corrected lapse.—Barbour.

COMMISSION ON EVANGELISM

November 27, 1929

A letter has gone out to all Conference Presidents calling attention to the program of co-operation with the Commission on Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, recently adopted by our own Commission on Evangelism. Conference Presidents are requested to call their Conference Commission on Evangelism at an early date and adopt such features of the suggested program as are practicable within their several conferences. The program in use in the Maryland Conference is suggested as a basis of co-operation in other conferences. Our Presidents are requested to give this letter their serious consideration to the end that our entire denomination shall be enflamed with an evangelistic passion. Items of interest will be published from week to week.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE

President R. M. Andrews, of High Point College, has been a leading figure in the efforts made by the North Carolina Conference to establish and build up a liberal arts senior college. As a pastor he held important charges and the need of a college in that area was to him increasingly apparent. As president of the conference during one of its most critical periods he became convinced that unless such an institution was soon established the conference and the Methodist Protestant Church had no future in North Carolina.

When the College was finally established and ready to open its doors in 1924, the Board of Trustees made a diligent search for a suitable president but finally concluded that no one was any better adapted to the position than Dr. Andrews. He accepted the responsibility keenly conscious of the problem facing him but glad to serve the Church and the Kingdom in that way if his brethren felt that was his duty. For six years now he has been carrying a load the equal of which few men anywhere in the Church have been required to carry.

This load has been extraordinarily heavy due to the manner in which the indebtedness of the College has mounted year after year. This has seemed unavoidable. Each year the college has been operated there has been a deficit and the funds collected for the obligations incurred in erecting the buildings were not sufficient to pay the interest. Additional equipment, repairs, campus improvements and other items meant further increases. These have resulted in an accumulation of obligations so large the very life of the school is at stake.

Imagine what anxieties such a condition must entail. The responsibilities of the president of the average church college are far more than those carried by the pastor. He has the educational work, standards and standing of the school to think about; the general administration of the school; the work and selection of the teachers; the conduct and discipline of the students; the supervision of the janitors; provision for the students without funds; thoughtless criticism from his ministerial brethren; baseless rumors flying about the church; unreasonable requirements set up by the standardizing agencies; an inadequate support from the church; impending deficits; insufficient endowments; depreciating buildings; impatient creditors; and the constant feeling that the Church does not seem to understand the situation. In fact the college president is passing through a long nightmare of unending worry. Add to these the distressing experience of seeing a debt increase at the rate of $40,000 a year and the situation becomes almost unbearable.

It is such a burden as this that Dr. Andrews has been carrying. The collapse in real estate values in North Carolina has added to his anxieties, for many who were once able to help him generously are without funds for the time being. He has sometimes felt, we surmise, that the denomination as a whole has not done its part, for the appropriations from the Board of Christian Education since the college opened have averaged only $2,360 a year. In the light of their needs and the service rendered this has doubtless seemed very small but it exceeds the contributions for education from that area by a large margin. The High Point area is not being asked to give anything for the support of the Seminary or the Board of Christian Education. This burden falls entirely upon the Adrian and Western Maryland areas.

High Point College has reached a critical moment. If it should fail and be forced to close, which are actual possibilities, the effect would be felt throughout the length and breadth of the Methodist Protestant Church. Such a misfortune must not be permitted. It can be prevented in two ways:

1. Let the entire denomination make a special effort the remaining weeks of our fiscal year, closing April 30, to raise their New Century Service apportionment in full. Dr. Straughn is sending out special literature to help in this effort. If our pastors, the Boards of Stewards in the local churches and the Women's Msisionary Auxiliaries will each take upon themselves the responsibility to see that their part in this effort is fully met the results will be as surprising as they are gratifying. It will mean that the Board of Christian Education can double its appropriation to High Point College.

2. High Point College is arranging to issue a block of bonds, the proceeds of which will be used to liquidate the present obligations which are not only embarrassing the college but giving fearful concern to some of the most valuable men in the denomination. These men have put their names on notes which are long over due. They have tied up personal credit, and credit very much needed in private business, for the sake of the college. They have actually faced personal financial ruin because of their interest in and loyalty to High Point College.

Two classes of bonds are in contemplation, but each are to be supported by equities nearly three times the face value of the bonds. The first class is to run for five years and is a prime investment security. The other class has its proportion of security behind it and runs for ten years. These will be sold to those whom it is hoped in time will be able to return them to the college as a gift. Those who purchase can make their own choice.

The time has come for the Methodist Protestant Church to help carry this burden. It is a family affair and every consideration of personal, denominational and Kingdom interest constrains us to do our part in this situation. It is not only a matter of saving High Point College, but of doing a generous, a brotherly and a Christian thing. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

FRANK W. STEPHENSON.

"A Refuge of Lies"

A little bunch of foolhardy young men have gathered themselves together in New York City and formed what they call the "American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, Inc." They call themselves the "militant foe of the church and the clergy." They have assembled a great array of weapons of warfare in the books of the skeptics and infidels of all ages and all countries. We do not know which they regard as their Big Bertha. They have the works of Paine, Voltaire, Renan, Ingersoll and many others of lesser note. They do not seem to know that all these great guns have been spiked. They still look formidable and that will answer the purpose of these sham fighters. When we hear of one of them laying down his life for the cause of atheism, we may come to believe in his earnestness and sincerity.

What are these unwise young men trying to do? Two things. First, they are trying to allay their own fears of a coming judgment before an all-wise and just God. Second, thye are trying to get material gain by selling to those of like spirit with themselves atheistic literature. They will find that their refuge is a refuge of lies and the sooner they find it out the better for them. Doubtless blameworthy, they are also pitiable. Pray for them.

◆

Even the most docile and undiscermiinating Christian feels instinctively that it somehow cannot be right to make money the first and supreme test of religious loyalty. He not only recalls the commission of the Twelve, who were specifically forbidden to make financial provision for their work, but he also notes the inevitable tendency to exalt the rich giver, irrespective of his personal zeal. The only "leading laymen" of whom we ever hear in the churches today are the wealthy men who are coddled for the sake of subscriptions. The Twelve Apostles could not qualify as "leading laymen" in any of our churches!—Wm. T. Ellis.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

DECEASED

We were surprised and distressed to receive the information last Thursday that Brother P. L. Kinnaman had passed from us. His death occurred about 1:00 o'clock last Thursday morning in a Winston-Salem hospital, and was the result of an injury that he received in a fall while scraping the road leading into his home. The funeral service was held on Friday at New Vernon church, near the home of the deceased, and where he had at one time served as pastor. We were assisted in this service by Brothers Stubbins, Whitaker, Hutton, and E. P. Stabbler, pastor of New Vernon church, and A. C. Peeler, pastor of First Reformed church, Winston-Salem. The beautiful floral tributes and the large number of people present, attest the high standing that Brother Kinnaman had in the community where he lived, and among the people that he was serving as pastor. A good man has gone from us, and we shall miss him in the activities on the conference field and in our conference sessions. But we are comforted in the assurance that his place is forever secure in the church above. Our personal sympathy, and the sympathy and prayers of the entire conference, are hereby extended to the bereaved family.

Shelby and Caroleen

February 17, Sunday.—At the morning hour we were with the Shelby church, in both Sunday School and preaching service. It was inspiring to see so many present. Eighty-five attended the Sunday School, and that many or more were present, we think, for the 11 o'clock hour. Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Shull worshiped with us in this service. Mrs. Shull was formerly a member of West End, Greensboro. The interest and enthusiasm that we found here was very pleasing. A brief appeal from the pastor, Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk, resulted very quickly in $26 being subscribed for repairs on the church roof. We were assured, also, that "Dollar a Member" would be paid by this church. The program Sunday night was given by the Junior C. E. Society,—one of the live organizations of the church. We could not be present for this, but reports indicate a good program. An Aid Society has been organized, which will be later merged into the Woman's Auxiliary. We predict that this organization will mean much to the church. The year is starting well with the work here, and we expect for this field steady and gratifying progress.

The night service was at Caroleen. Here again we found a gratifying congregation, and splendid interest. There is some talk of an ambition on the part of this church for a whole-time pastor next year. We are not sufficiently acquainted with the church to say whether or not this would be a wise undertaking; it is pleasing, however, to know that the life in the church is strong enough to prompt such a desire. Despite the money depression, the church is making progress with the finances. The pastor receives something at each appointment to keep the wolf away, and the officials assured us that "Dollar a Member" would receive their attention. We trust that a liberal amount may ultimately be paid by this church for this purpose. Brother and Sister Lowdermilk are fast winning their way into the hearts of the people here, as at Shelby, and they and the people are happy in the work. We believe that this is to be a growing year for Caroleen church. While we were talking to the officials, Brother Lowdermilk was busy getting subscriptions to the HERALD. Three more papers will go to this charge this week, and on, as the result of his good work. Our visit to these churches was greatly enjoyed by us, and we are grateful to pastor and people for unstinted kindnesses that we received at their hands.

It was a pleasure to see Brother Morris, while in Shelby, and to find him much improved in health.

Released—Assigned

At his request, and by the consent of the church, Brother W. M. Henderson has been released as pastor of Bessemer City church, and Brother J. D. Morris assigned as pastor for the remainder of the conference year. Brother Morris will enter upon his work next Sunday. He will be kindly received by the people, and we are sure that he will prove a blessing to the church. Our visits and our dealings with the church here have been pleasant, and we shall rejoice in all success that attends their labors. Brother Henderson will give his full time to Bess Chapel charge.

Pastor's Reports

Only 64 are in to date. We trust that others may reach us in time for a synopsis by the next issue of the HERALD. If these reports can be complete, they will furnish important information for the committee on "Dollar a Member," in addition to other information regarding the general condition of the conference. If pastors who have not returned their reports will do so at once, our work will be facilitated, and we shall be grateful to them for this help.

"Dollar a Member"

Shelby is the only church that we are able to add this week to our "paid in full" list. We are grateful to Shelby, and glad to add the name of this church to our roll. Quite a number of churches have something pledged to this cause to be paid later in the year; others will yet secure pledges and payments. The committee, charged with the responsibility of promoting this undertaking, will meet soon and make a survey of what has been done and what is yet to be done, and will doubtless then be ready to recommend plans for the completion of the effort. Until that time, pastors and district directors will please press the matter, and enlist each church for the full amount as rapidly as possible. Let us call attention again to this: Persons who have small pledges to the college may take credit on such pledges for what they pay on "Dollar a Member." All that is required to get this credit is to send a statement of the amount to Mr. J. Norman Wills, Greensboro, N. C. And let this be understood, also: Churches may pledge the full amount now, or any amount that can be secured, and payments may be made later, if that is necessary.

Let us not fail, brethren of the ministry and laity, to do our best to provide this maintenance fund for High Point College. The need is imperative and the means of meeting it is within our reach. If each one stands in his place and does his part, the day of victory will surely come.

Country Church Contest

The decision of all the judges is not in yet, so we can not announce the winners at this time, as we had hoped to do. Expect it in our report next week.

Children's Home

Brother Dixon is making an urgent appeal to our people for funds for this institution. We give it our hearty endorsement. Many of our Sunday Schools that are not contributing to the Home could help to relieve the strain there by making monthly contributions for this purpose. Such schools would not lose any money by this, and the Home would be helped. And schools that are giving, can probably increase their gifts. Every church in the conference should take regular contributions to this Home. Helpless childhood appeals to us through this institution. Surely our purse strings will loosen to meet a need like this. We urge every superintendent to see that his school makes a monthly offering to the Home, and we urge other schools that are giving to increase their offerings.

Easter—Pentecost

In commemoration of the 19th Centennial of the Christian Church, a concerted program of Evangelism will be waged in all the evangelical churches of this country, running through Easter and culminating at the Pentecost period fifty days later, or June 8. Helps are being sent to all pastors from our denominational headquarters, and in addition to this our own conference Committee on Evangelism will keep the matter before our people. Surely it will be pleasing to God for the church to turn its efforts in this direction. No observance of the Resurrection of our Lord and the birthday of His church could be more fitting than an earnest, united effort to bring sinners into a conscious knowledge of the saving grace of Jesus Christ. We urge every pastor to acquaint himself with this program, and to adopt such parts of it as may be usable on his charge. And let us all devoutly pray the great Head of the church to pour out His Spirit upon us and again, as on the day of Pentecost, that a new spiritual life may come to his people, and many thousands of redeemed souls be added unto his church.

Plan, brethren, to make much of this undertaking.

EPISCOPACY, OR METHODIST PROTESTANTISM WHICH?

It is not our purpose in this article to say something just to start a discussion, but we are anxious to understand some things more fully in regard to the powers of the Board of Education of the North Carolina Conference.

We note with interest what Dr. McCulloch says in the Herald of January 30, in regard to the Organization of this Board. If we properly understand it, the contributors to the Publishing House Building Fund elected themselves to life membership on this Board and also granted to themselves the power of electing their successors in office. This, then, forever eliminates the Annual Conference and the church people in general from having anything at all to do with it. Are we correct in this view? If so, the action thus taken may be legal so far as civil law is concerned, or even the laws of the M. E. Church, but how can we justify such action as legal according to the discipline of the Methodist Protestant Church?

All our lives we have preached and taught that all power in the Methodist Protestant Church had its origin with the people and went up, while the power in the M. E. Church began up and came down, the common laymen having only the power given them by their superiors.

If we understand correctly, this Board of Education now owns and controls both the College and Children's Home and the Conference and people back at home have absolutely no voice in the control of either institution. Of course these institutions have their usual Board of Trustees who manage their affairs, but these trustees must get their power from this Board of Education rather than from the Conference or people. Dr. Andrews said on the Conference floor at Greensboro that the college trustees had the college leased from the Board of Education and that they could not operate the college as an educational institution without the lease. Suppose this Board of Education some day should decide not to lease the college to the Methodist Protestant Church, then what would happen? We would then be in the same predicament as the M. E. Church, South, was 15 years ago, when they forever lost control of Vanderbilt University, all because they had a self-perpetualed board to handle that institution. Is it wise for us to imitate them when we could profit by their sad experience? Dr. McCulloch said in his paper of January 30, that the attorneys "scented danger in this arrangement." Shall we sleep on and let the next generation wake up and condemn us for the way we have handled these institutions?

The Remedy

The Conference and our Methodist Protestant people are powerless to remedy this condition, if we rightly understand it. According to the charter and the powers of this Board of Education, they own both institutions. Are we correct in this view? If we are not correct, then what is the effect of Article 1, Section 5, adopted at the last called meeting of the Annual Conference? This Board of Education can have both charters changed so that these institutions will be owned and controlled by boards of trustees elected by the Annual Conference. We have been told that the Board of Education must have its newly-elected members confirmed by the conference. If this be true that does not lift it out of an "Episcopal form" of government. In the M. E. Church the pastor nominates the officials of his church and the quarterly conference elects. The quarterly conference can not elect until the pastor nominates, so that way of doing gives the pastor exactly the ones he desires for his officials.

Nothing we have said in this paper shall be interpreted as a censure or even a criticism on any individual member of the Board of Education, but rather a thrust at the powers they have and the source of that power. It may be that our stupidity has kept us from fully understanding this matter. If so, we shall be delighted to change our views.

Geo. L. Reynolds.

THE WAY COMMUNISM DOES IT

Quite a lot of folks who live in the United States are looking toward Communism and its way of doing things. We suppose this is because they think there would be fraternity, equality, and freedom in the system. But most of us do not believe a single one of the items in this slogan of French Revolution exists in or can be made to exist in Russian Communism. You cannot trust any system of any kind that is based on atheism.

Carroll Binder writes to the Chicago Daily News in a copyrighted article that Russia is about to deprive 3,500,000 persons of home, work and food in order to carry out communistic ideals and nationalize the land. The rich peasants, known as Kulaks, who are poor themselves, yet considered rich because they hire help to gather in the harvest, are to be dispossessed. They are charged with having rented their horses to neighbors, some own mills, a thresher, or dairy apparatus from which profit is derived. So it comes to pass that in order to nationalize the land by 1932 seven hundred and fifty thousand families, comprising 3,500,000 persons, are faced with ruin, if not starvation—will be without homes, work or food—if the Soviet union puts into effect the policy of exterminating the Kulaks, or rich peasants, which is heralded in the Russian press.

Communism is a kind of madness, and atheism is vacuity of intellect and heart.—Christian-Evangelist.

IS RELIGIOUS EDUCATION FUTILE?

Here is an astonishing thing that may startle us. It is the result of a study of 3,316 children by Dr. Pleasant R. Hightower of Butler University, to determine, first, their proficiency in Bible-study, and, second, their mental attitude toward lying, cheating, disloyalty, and selfishness. Here is Dr. Hightower's conclusion.

"People have been saying for years that if you give children a knowledge of the Bible they'll walk the strait and narrow way. The result shows that they won't walk the strait and narrow way. It indicates very definitely that mere knowledge of the Bible is not sufficient to ensure proper character attitudes."

After all, is not this what some of us have been saying for years? The mere impartation of knowledge is not going to bite very deeply into the child mind so far as character and action are concerned. Knowledge of the Bible is good and necessary, but knowledge alone is not enough.

The full value of religious education comes from the impact of the teacher's personality upon the pupil. The child will imitate the teacher if he admires him. If a teacher is Christ-like in his life, we may be certain that his pupils will know it. (Youth has an uncanny faculty of discovering shams.) And youth will be influenced by the ideals it sees in a genuine Christian.

We are in danger today of trusting too much to curricula and material and programs. Back of all these lies the personality of the teacher. Religious education cannot be given by a phonograph record, however good it may be. After all, religion and education is necessary in religion, but religion is something personal and vital that comes as a rule through contact with Spirit-filled lives.—Robert P. Anderson in C. E. World.

SERVICE

"May those who pass my way
In life's mad rush, from day to day.
The rich, the poor, the blind and lame,
Of low degree or highest fame,
In haste or leisure as they pass,
It matters not what creed or class.
I pray some kindness I may show
To help them onward as they go,
To sympathize and lend a hand,
To help my needy fellowman,
And may I show calm and serene
Our Christ—The lowly Nazarene."

WHAT THE WORLD WANTS

"The secret of what we want is, I fancy, just this: a sort of new perception of what Jesus Christ would do if he walked down the streets of London or Paris or Berlin. Let us rescue him from the artists, from the plaster saints, from the people who have never understood him. Let us bring him out into the turmoil, shame, bitterness, vice, sordidness, brutality, and heart-burning passions of our great towns. And as we look at the shining glory of his stailness figure, let us say: 'Son of Man, Son of God, what are you going to do about this?' And then, before he can answer, let us kneel down and say: 'What do you want us to do about this?' If we should just happen to do that, we should become such mighty men that we could touch the issues of the new age with a living power."—Lynn Harold Hough, D.D., from Sermon Delivered in London.

—Mrs. Sarah Glass seemed to have a premonition of approaching death, though there were no bodily symptoms. She grew flowers each summer, but this last fall told her son David that she would never raise another crop of flowers, signifying to him that she felt that she was in her last months. She seemed as well as usual the morning she went to visit some relatives, but in the afternoon while walking across the yard fell and quickly expired. We regarded her as one of the few best women we have ever known.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE GREATEST GIFT OF ALL

There was to be a White Christmas service at the Methodist Church at Glendale. Dr. Stull, the beloved old white-haired pastor, had announced it and explained what it was all about. The gifts were to go to the Methodist Orphanage. "I wish," said Dr. Stull, "that on that sacred occasion, some one would decide to give to the Christ Child, who is so near and so dear to us at that time, the greatest gift of all, a heart full of love and a life of service."

The Clark twins, Ruth and June, sat between mother and daddy and listened, wide-eyed, to the solemn words of the good minister.

When the benediction was over, the twins walked home with big sister Sue, behind mother and daddy. They were very quiet.

"What are you going to take to the service, twins?" asked Sue.

"We are going to fill stockings with fruit and nuts," answered June, absently.

"We decided to put nickles in the toes of the stockings," added Ruth listlessly. "Our Sunday School teacher told us what to bring." Ruth's voice trailed almost to a whsiper.

"Why what's wrong with you, two?" asked Sue. "Are you sick?"

June started and flushed, "No, we are not sick. I'm not," answered she.

The next day June and Ruth went to see Dr. Stull. When they came home they were very serious and subdued. Mother wondered what could be the trouble, but wisely decided to wait until they got ready to tell her all about it. They always came to her, sooner or later, when anything troubled them.

The night of the lovely White Christmas service arrived. The church was beautiful, all white around the pulpit and altar railing. On one side was a crude littel stable, and in it a manger. Above the stable gleamed a star.

There were two or three Christmas hymns, the Bible story of the birth of Chrsit, and then a lady told the beautiful story of "The Other Wise Man."

Then the door of the primary department opened and the Beginners and Primaries marched up on the pulpit singing, "Away in a Manger, No Crib for His Bed." Each little one clutched a toy which he placed in the manger as he marched by.

Next came the Juniors bringing stockings filled with fruit and nuts. June and Ruth looked solemn as they marched.

One after another the classes and departments came bringing their gifts until the little manger overflowed.

"O, do look at the High School Boy's Class," whispered some one.

Down the aisle came fifteen boys, each carrying a pure white hen under his arm. The hens were placed in a coop which was concealed behind the stable. A soft ripple of laughter ran over the congregation.

"Look at the Men's Bible Class!"

In came twenty men, each carrying a sack of flour on his shoulder.

Last of all came Uncle Zeke, bending under the weight of a great white sack filled with sweet potatoes. Proudly he marched to the stable with his gift. Uncle Zeke had raised these very potatoes in his little patch behind his cabin, and how happy he was to have something to give.

Never had Glendale been so lavish in its giving. It was the first White Christmas service they had ever seen and they were deeply stirred by the beauty of it. When two junior girls and two junior boys passed through the audience with little white baskets, the money flowed freely until the little baskets were almost overflowing. There was a look of expectant waiting on Dr. Stull's face as he raised his hands over the gifts and begged God to bless them, and bless the givers.

Then everything grew very quiet. The star twinkled over the stable. The audience almost held its breath. There must be something more to follow.

"I wonder," said Dr. Stull, "if there is one here tonight who would like to give to Him the greatest gift of all."

There was a solemn hush, then a soft rustle as two little girls arose and made their way hand in hand down the aisle. Dr. Stull came forward to the altar railing and put his arms about them.

Without stopping to think, mother came down the aisle to her twins and daddy followed her.

"Let us pray," said Dr. Stull. June and Ruth knelt at the white altar and mother knelt and daddy on the other side of them.

"Almighty and everlasting God," began Dr. Stull, then he forgot all about the ritual. He just poured out his heart to God in thanksgiving that his prayers had been answered and that on this holy, happy night two precious souls were laid on the altar as a gift to the blessed Christ Child. "Do thou accept them, O Christ, for this is indeed the greatest gift of all."

After the beautiful service was over and the congregation had gone home, mother, daddy, Sue and the twins walked home in silence. Somehow they couldn't talk. It made them almost cry to try to talk, they were so happy.

When daddy had lighted up and gotten the fire going, they all gathered around the hearth to talk it over.

June and Ruth were seated in their little rockers, one on each side of mother and each held one of mother's hands.

"How did you come to do it, dears?" asked mother gently.

"Well, you see, mother," said Ruth, "when you had your operation, and were so ill, we could only kneel down by our bed and ask Jesus to help you to get well, and he did. Then he helped me to think of a way for us to go to the Halloween party, when we wanted to go so badly. Then there was our wonderful Thanksgiving dinner that he helped us to earn. And O, I can't think of all that he has done for us. And, then, mother, he died for us." Ruth's voice was almost a whisper.

"You see, mother, we have been thinking of it for a long time," June's voice took up the story, "ever since you were so ill, and when Dr. Stull was telling about the White Christmas service, and saying that our hearts and lives would be the greatest gift of all, why mother, what could we do, when he had done so much for us, but give him our hearts?"

Note.—The White Christmas Service described in the story took place in a church in Birmingham.—Mrs. B. M. Porter in Christian Advocate.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

HOW AN AUXILIARY WILL HELP YOUR CHURCH

The new constitution of our Women's Work in the Methodist Protestant Church tells us that it is "to promote the spiritual, social and financial interests of the church through enlisting every woman in the membership."

To many of the women in the North Carolina Conference this is nothing new about this program, since for a number of years we have been trying to do all that. We have been promoting the spiritual through tithers and intercessors leagues, the prayer calendar, and the worship services. The educational interests have been emphasized through mission study, the Question Box, the supporting of Young People's Conferences, the preparation of programs for the special days observed by our churches, contributing to scholarships and the student loan funds for High Point College. And while this has been done, the coming together of the women in circle and auxiliary meetings has contributed much to the social side of church life. The result has been that while the women have contributed financially to every phase of church work, at the same time their interest in world-wide missions has been increased, and they have become acquainted with the whole program of the church.

Too much cannot be said about the value of an auxiliary to the local church. The report in the Conference Journal speaks louder than anything I can say. But many of its benefits cannot be put down in dollars and cents. It is a fact that those churches which have live missionary auxiliaries are feeling the effects of the organization not only financially, but spiritually and socially. The church whose women are behind its program must succeed.

Let us understand that when we speak of the whole program we mean not only those things which we can help to do as we contribute of our time and money to promote the interests of the Annual Conference and of the General Conference—the work of maintaining the High Point College and the church extension enterprises here in North Carolina, as well as the carrying of the gospel message to the people in our mission fields. That program has much to do also with the work of the local church—helping in the Sunday school and in the various children's societies; attending church services, relieving distress, making calls that will bring people into contact with Christ and the church. All of this is involved in the activities of an auxiliary. And where the women of the church are engaging in it, splendid results are being obtained.

If you do not have a Woman's Auxiliary, I urge you to organize one at once, and watch your church grow. If I can help you in any way, I shall be glad to do so. Let us have "A Missionary Auxiliary in Every Church."

In the absence of Dr. Brown from his home, I have made out this quarterly report for him. There may be errors in it, though I have tried to avoid this. If any are found, we shall be very glad to make necessary corrections.

We hope to be able to make further comments on this report next week.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

FEB. 23: "THE VALUE OF THE BIBLE FOR NON-CHRISTIAN NATIONS"

Isa. 55:8 11; Luke 8-11-15

(Missionary Meeting)

Daily Bible Readings

Monday Value as a light. Ps. 119:105, 130.

Tuesday—As guide to conscience. Heb. 4: 12, 13.

Wednesday—As revelation of God. Heb. 1:14.

Thursday As moral leader. Tit. 2:11-15.

Friday—As revealer of Christ. II Cor. 4:1-6.

Saturday—As builder of brotherhood. Eph. 3:14-21.

To the Leader

If you have access to the Christian Endeavor World use it for this meeting. If you haven't you should subscribe for your society immediately.

Since this is a missionary meeting try to give as much of the atmosphere of the other nations as you can. Pictures on missionary subjects and pictures of some of the greatest missionaries should be used on the wall. If possible, secure a map of the world and place it in easy reach so that the leader may point to certain sections as various points in the discussion. Use anything that will lend this missionary spirit. If you use different speakers, one from the various countries, it would be interesting to have these dress in native costume. Let the leader very briefly tell from what country each comes and a few words about conditions there.

Use the following hymns: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," "Where He Leads Me," Break Thou the Bread of Life," and "Fling Out the Banner."

Leader's Lines

The topic, "The Value of the Bible for Non-Christian Nations," implies that there is no question as to the truthfulness of the statement, but just what is the value? If the Bible had no value for people of other lands, non-Christian, then it would be worthless to us. Since it does have such value it is then up to us to see that these nations are presented the truths and mighty principles of the Bible. We must remember that our nation and other so-called Christian nations have had the Christian influence brought to bear for centuries and centuries. The great need cannot be overlooked. In many of the nations of the world, or in parts of nations themselves we find that the principles as set forth by Christ are not in operation or even known. We find the moral and ethical standards low; we find attitudes vastly different. They need to be shown the love of God and to let this love get into their minds and hearts. The Bible is the guide leading us to God.

To Be Answered

1. Why would non-Christian peoples be worse off if they had not the Bible?

2. In what way do non-Christian nations need the Bible more than Christian nations?

3. In what ways does the Bible prove its value in our everyday life?

4. Tell something of the work of the American Bible Society in relations to this question.

5. How may we co-operate with this great movement?

6. Show why Christians only using the Bible would be selfish.

7. Explain the universality of the message of the New Testament.

Literary Bits

Four things a man must learn to do
If he would make his record true:
To think without confusion clearly;
To love his fellowmen sincerely;
To act from honest motives purely;
To trust in God and heaven securely.

—Henry Van Dyke.

The leson is one of humility, but also of consolation; for the depths of God's mind are depths of truth, of wisdom and love; and, therefore, we may be not only cast down, but also lifted up. —J. Caivens.

A Brahmin said: "You Christians are not as good as your Book. If you were, you would convert India is five years." —Revivalist.

The value of the Bible lies in its message. A Christian may spoil his testimony by a single mistake in living; the Bible mesage stands as it is written, and shines in its own light. —Shearer.

Without the Bible missionaries would be helpless. Hence, like Morrison in China, their first task is always to translate the Book. He who gives the Bible to a nation gives it more than he reckoned.—Marvin.

EVENING PRAYER

I lay me down
In peace and sleep,
For thou, Dear Lord,
My soul wilt keep.
And as I rest,
This prayer I make:
To do Thy will,
When I awake.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

English St. Church.—The Ladies' Aid Society met at the home of Mrs. R. F. Goolsby, on Grimes Street, February 11, with Mrs. M. L. Emerson as joint hostess.

The meeting was opened with devotional exercise, after which the president, Mrs. H. L. Swan, took charge. Seventeen members responded to roll call.

The chairman of hosiery committee reported $56.40 cleared on the sale of hose. The society voted to pay $72.00 balance of pledge on pastor's salary. The president presented a number of lucrative propositions for increasing the society's finances.

We are happy to report that the Aid is progressing under the efficient leadership of Mrs. Swan.

During the social hour delicious Valentine refreshments were served.

Oak Grove. The second Sunday I was privileged to hear Brother Kinnaman preach at our church. A late report comes that our pastor died last week—was killed. The tragedy makes a serious bereavement for many people. Brother Kinnaman has left us at a time of life when he was greatly needed. Last Sunday was the first time that I was privileged to hear him preach. He had such a srong, clear voice that I could hear every word that he said, I not being able to hear well. Since I heard the sad news I have been led to think of people who were so impulsed by bereavement that they really felt better by crying, and I now find relief by the same impulses.

I want to ask for interest in the prayers of the people of God. When I got home from Oak Grove I told our folks that the "new preacher" looked exactly like a preacher, and that he was well able to serve—but now we are made sad. It seems that Stephen was rather the best, the ablest Bible scholar, of his day, but, strangely, he was suffered to be killed. When in my youth a large family who were some of our neighbors were named Kinnaman, but near 65 years ago the family moved to Indiana.

W. F. GRADS.

P. S. The late occasion I felt glad of the lively hope of hearing Brother Kinnaman preach right often but a sad reaction has come in the way. However, some people do a lot of work in a short time. We read in history that John Summerfield was licensed to preach at 16 and then died at the age of 27. God knows more about the time for his workers, and the work, than we do.

The next Herald will come with serious things as is the case once a week.

Southside M. P. Church. The Loyal Sons and Daughters class met with Miss Alma Boblit for their monthly meeting February 4. Mr. P. L. Kinnaman called the meeting to order with a song and prayer. The devotionals were conducted by the president, Miss Etta Mae Speaks, with ten members and five visitors present.

All old and new business was brought before the meeting and the class decided to organize a Christian Endeavor beginning the first of next month.

After the report of the treasurer we found we had $73.00 in the treasury. The officers of our class are as follows: Teacher, Mr. J. E. Rich; president, Miss Etta Mae Speaks; vice-president, Mr. Albert Chrisler; secretary, Miss Hattie Lee Foster; treasurer, Miss Mabel Bowers; reporter, Miss Lucille New; sick committee chairman, Miss Frances New; helpers, Miss Edith Johnson, Mr. Paul Gough, Miss Edith Foster; welcome committee chairman, Miss Ruth Gough; helpers, Mr. Everett Johnson, Miss Mabel Gough, Mr. Henry Holland.

During the social hour tempting refreshments were served which were enjoyed very much by the members. The next meeting will be held with Mr. Gilbert Chrisler the first Tuesday night in March.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—The Ladies' Aid Society met February 6 at Rev. and Mrs. Joyner's. We had a very interesting program. Bible reading was by the society. Several good poems were read. Mrs. M. L. Stallings made a very interesting and helpful talk on "What Prayer Will Do." Mr. Joyner made a real good talk. There was a suggestion that we study the New Testament, starting with St. Matthew. Mrs. Carl Stallings and Mrs. J. E. Hartis sang a duet, "In the Garden." We then had roll call and the reading of the minutes, after which we had the reports from the different committees. After the regular business was attended to Mrs. Joyner invited us into the dining room where she served delicious refreshments. The occasion being Mr. Joyner's birthday, the centerpiece was a beautiful white cake holding lighted tapers. We gave Mr. and Mrs. Joyner a pounding. We adjourned with a closing prayer by Mrs. M. L. Stallings. The next meeting will be at Mrs. Arch McLeod's March 6.

Mr. Joyner preached last night. Every time we hear him we think it is the best sermon that he has preached. REPORTER.

Asheville.—The "Church Night" venture on Wednesday evening at 6:30 was quite successful. Everybody seemed to enjoy it. The musical program was a treat. Pupils of Miss McIntire, Betty Jane Pratt, Jane McIntire, ages 5 and 6, delighted the audience with piano solos; Milton Lord, violin; Miss McIntire at the piano; Josie McNeill and Miss McIntire a piano duet, and Mr. Alva McIntire, piano accompanist. After supper a short prayer service of the different group meetings of the church. I think our pastor plans this for every month.

Thursday evening Mrs. Paschall entertained with a banquet at the church for her class and the parents of the class pupils. Dinner was served at 6:30. Miss McIntire's class served.

The Girls' Auxiliary is to meet Monday evening at the home of Misses Mildred, Clarice and Janeth Younginer for their regular monthly business meeting.

Wednesday evening our prayer service, as usual, at the church.

Thursday afternoon at 8 o'clock the Woman's Auxiliary will meet at the church in the Sunday school auditorium. A full attendance is requested as this is the time to elect officers for the ensuing year.

Friday evening, 7:30, at the church in the Sunday school auditorium, the C. E. business meeting will be held. Miss Nancy Clouse is president and we are all with her to make this year a good one.

Miss Verda McIntire gave a Valentine party in the Sunday school auditorium Friday at 3 p. m. for the Sunday school youngsters. The children always enjoy their parties. Miss Verdi always gives them a good time.

Union Grove, Orange.—We are having very good attendance at our church considering the weather and rough roads. Our pastor has filled all appointments and is preaching some mighty good sermons. We hope our attendance will be better.

Last Sunday afternoon we held our thank-offering service. The offering at this service amounted to $17.00.

One good lady of our church who can not be with us often remembered us with a check, which we all greatly appreciate.

We are sorry to report that one of our good neighbors, Mr. R. H. Morgan, is seriously ill. We hope he will soon be better.

MRS. L. C. DAVIS, Reporter.

Laurel Hill, Fallston Charge.—We had a large crowd at the preaching service Sunday at 11 o'clock. Rev. Mr. Morgan preached a wonderful sermon at this time on "Family Relationship."

Our Sunday school attendance is not what we would like for it to be. We hope it is due to bad weather and now that spring is almost here our attendance will grow and that we will have perfect attendance in Sunday school.

Rev. J. M. Morgan was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sain Sunday.

One of our dear members, Mrs. J. W. Allran, has been seriously ill for the past few weeks. We are glad and thankful to say she is improving.

We have not been having our Sunday evening preaching services for the past winter months, but Rev. Mr. Morgan announced thar we would have our evening services beginning the third Sunday evening in February. So don't forget our preaching hours: Every second Sunday morning at 11:00 and each third Sunday evening at 7:00. We are always glad to have visitors. So if you don't want to miss a good message at these hours don't stay away from these services.

On the second Sunday morning in March the doors of the church will be open for those wishing to unite with the church. Nothing is more important than joining God's church after you have become a child of God.

Greensville Charge.—We have not been altogether idle during the winter months, and in spite of the bad weather and terrible roads have managed to fill all appointments and have been greeted by very appreciative and attentive as well as large congregations on most occasions. There were a few times when most of the roads were impassable and only a few were able to get out from home.

The work seems to be going well, and the interest is very good, prospects for the future are good. The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor at Matthews Chapel has run full time during the winter; Sunday school at both Matthews and Wesley's Chapel has run full time this winter; however, the school at Hobbs Chapel has not been able to make the grade all winter on account of the impassable roads, but they can be depended upon, as it was only the roads that held them back.

We have received very generous poundings from Wesley's Chapel, Matthews Chapel, and Hobbs Chapel, the latter taking place on last Sunday afternoon; when we came out to the car after service we found that someone had commandeered our car and turned it into a groceryteria. We thank each one that had any part in these gifts. I also want to take this opportunity to thank the members of Philadelphia church who have so kindly and so graciously remembered us with gifts and money since conference. May God richly bless all those that have contributed to our welfare and comfort, and may He enable us to repay them all in so far as we are able in greater service.

Miss Dora Pair was a week-end visitor at the parsonage recently. We were very glad indeed to have Brother John Dick Phillips with us for supper one evening during the past week; we appreciate these visits very much in our loneliness, since our youngest son has gone into Government service.

E. G. COWAN.

Albemarle.—The Ladies Aid Society held its regular meeting February 4 in the ladies' parlar of the church, with Mrs. C. W. Hatley and Mrs. D. L. Hatley acting as joint hostesses. The devotional period was opened by singing "My Faith Looks Up to Thee." The Scripture reading was by Mrs. J. E. Gantt, followed by prayer.

The regular routine of business was carried out. The most important transaction of the meeting was the division of the society into two circles. As our society has become such a large organization we feel that this will be for the betterment of the society as a whole, as each circle will, of course, strive to make a better showing than the other. Immediately following the division each circle met to elect its own officers. Mrs. C. S. Moton was elected as chairman of the Cam Snotherly circle, and Mrs. Ira Smart, chairman of the Lucy Hatley circle. The names so given are in honor of two charter members who are also two of the most beloved women in the history of the church. Mrs. Snotherly has passed to her reward several years ago, but Mrs. Hatley is still one of our most active members, and is the only woman living who was a charter member.

Each circle is making plans for an intensive working campaign, and everybody seems enthusiastic in their plans for the year. Joint meetings will be held each quarter with the president, Mrs. J. A. Furr, in charge. The business was concluded by repeating the Lord's Prayer in concert.

During the social hour delightful refreshments were served, carrying out the Valentine and George Washington birthday ideas. Decorations and favors were also used, appropriate to the season.

The condition of Mrs. Marshall Hatley, who has been confined to her room for several weeks, remains but very little improved. We earnestly request the prayers of all Christion people for her speedy recovery, as she is greatly needed in the activities of the church.

Mrs. Reece Smith has been quite ill for several days, but is now improving rapidly.

Sarah Frances, baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Drye, was baptized at the Sunday morning service in a sweetly solemn ceremony.

Rev. T. E. Martin, originally of the S. C. Conference, but recently moved to Monroe, N. C., was a welcome visitor at our Sunday night service. He is an old friend of Rev. Mr. Anderson, and we hope to have him with us again.

Our church is working on the "Dollar a Member" campaign. We don't know just how we will come out on it, but our people are always willing to do all they possibly can, although we have a big indebtedness ourselves to take care of. Albemarle will not be left out entirely.

MRS. JOHN U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Lexington.—Last Sunday was one of the best in many ways in the history of our church. The morning services were good and well attended. At the 11 o'clock hour the subject used by the pastor was the beautiful one stressing the supremacy of love, from Paul's famous words: "Now abideth these three, Faith, Hope, Charity, and the greatest of these is Charity."

The eternal truth that God is love and those who love mast are most like Him was impressed anew on the hearts of the audience and many expressions of graitude and appreciation were heard on every hand.

The evening service was one that will be long remembered by an audience that nearly filled our large auditorium. The sermon was preceded by a song service consisting of only the oldest hymns, sung to the oldest tunes and without instrumental music and with candle-light only for illumination.. Many were moved to tears as sacred memories surged in hearts made sad by memories of mother and father and in some cases, grandfather and grandmother who loved the old songs but sing them here no more.

The address was timely and most fitting, being an appeal to every parent to safeguard their children by giving them religious training in the home. No one ever strays so far that memories of a Christian home can be forgotten, and nothing is more touching than the old songs sung at home by mother.

The truth of the saying that "Variety is the spice of life" is being borne out in the great gain in church attendance since our pastor has thought out the various ways of making the evening services "different" and at the same time taking nothing from the spirit of reverence and worship.

All branches of the work are doing encouraging work, and goals are being attained, in some cases slowly, but nothing is standing still, and with spring just ahead of us and the hope of better conditions generally in the near future we feel encouraged.

REPORTER.

South Lexington Church.—Our work is going along very well, though our Sunday school was off somewhat today, owing to the very cold weather.

We are glad to report the good work the C. E. Society is doing at our church. On last Thursday evening in their business meeting they decided to help raise some money for our college fund. So on next Saturday evening, February 22, they will put on an oyster supper. We all wish them great success.

On next Sunday evening at 7:15 Bro. Byard Sink will be with us with his young people's chorus to render some special music and a large crowd is expected to be present.

We extend a cordial welcome to all, at any time, to worship with us.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Attendance at Sunday school is very good. Attendance at the 11 o'clock service is on the increase.

Our pastor and wife have returned from Weaverville where they went last week to visit Mr. Brittain's father and mother. We have had much sickness among our members. Mrs. Odell Oaks has been sick for some time, we trust that she may soon be well again. We also have missed Mr. Oaks at church and Sunday School since she has been so sick.

Mrs. R. C. Lineberry has been kept at home for the last two Sundays on account of sickness, but is much improved.

Our Ladies' Aid held their last meeting with Mrs. R. L. Yates. Our society has a quilt with twelve squares; one square has been given for a memorial square for the names of all former pastors that have served St. Paul, since the church has been built, and one square is to be used as a memorial square for names of any of our loved ones, that we wish to pay a dime and have their names put on it, the other ten squares have brought us fifty-four dollars in cash at ten cents a name. Mrs. G. H. May won the first prize for getting the most names, now we are going to put the quilt together and give it to the parsonage. Our Society has placed a fine section bookcase in the parsonage since our last report.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Shelby. Since our first report to the paper we have not been eating any idle bread. The folks who have been lucky enough to have our pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk, serve them will no doubt agree with me when I say that they can always find something to keep you busy.

Two of the trustees of the church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Lowdermilk, built a garage at the parsonage on January 16. We feel that no one can afford to let their car stand exposed to such severe weather as we have had this winter. Bro Lowdermilk seemed to appreciate the garage so much and did not fail to say so. Mr. A. O. Eaker was kind enough to paint the kitchen of the parsonage, which was badly needed. We are planning to make some much needed repairs on the church at an early date.

Our Sunday school is growing rapidly. At the beginning of the conference year we had only about thirty; last Sunday the attendance was eighty-eight—quite an increase in three months! Our aim is at least one hundred by the first Sunday in March. Pray that this good work may continue.

Our Ladies' Aid, which was recently organized, gives promise of doing great work this year. Miss Verda Ramsey was elected president; Mrs. M. G. Eaker, vice-president, and Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk, secretary and treasurer.

The Junior Christian Endeavor which was organized with only thirteen members, has outgrown our expectations. We have 54 on roll and an average attendance of 33 each Sunday. The Juniors are a wide-awake bunch and surely do keep the superintendent and her assistant busy planning something for them to do. They held their monthly business meeting last Tuesday afternoon at the parsonage. There were 47 present. After transacting the business they played games and enjoyed a half hour of fun. The hostess, Mrs. E. G. Lowdermilk, served heart-shaped cookies with funny faces. Favors were little baskets filled with candy hearts.

Dr. S. W. Taylor, president of the Conference, was with us on February 16, and preached for us at the 11 o'clock service. His subject was concerning Christ and the church. His message was inspiring and to the point, making each of us feel that we needed to do greater work for Christ. We always enjoy Dr. Taylor's visit and each time he has a greater message to gladden our hearts.

At the evening hour the Junior Christian Endeavor Society gave a public program. The children did exceedingly well, acquiting themselves with much honor. The audience was very attentive and expressed their surprise at the work that had been accomplished in such a short time. An offering was taken for New Century Service to be applied on budget.

Henderson.—The various programs of the different organizations of our church are being carried forward this year with much interest and effect. The Sunday school, in spite of the cold weather and much sickness, is keeping up the general attendance remarkably. The young people gave a special service on Sunday evening, January 26th. The theme of this program was "Youth Sharing." Miss Florence Faulkner, president of the C. E. Society, arranged the program and led the service. Rev. J. W. Braxton, pastor of the Vance circuit, delivered a splendid address on "How Young People May Share With Adults in the Life and Work of the church."

He paid tribute to the older members for their loyalty and faithfulness, and stressed the importance of the young people taking a more active part in the work. He pointed out to them the ways in which they might use their talents and energy in building up the greatest cause in the world. A very impressive part of the service was the unveiling of a picture of Christ, while the choir sang "The Hidden Years at Nazareth." Another feature was a beautiful solo rendered by Miss Maude Gibson, of Baltimore, Md., This service was well attended and greatly enjoyed Much credit is due our young people for their efforts and interest shown in carrying forward the kingdom of God.

On Sunday morning, February 2nd, Dr. A. N. Ward, president of Western Maryland College, delivered one of the most interesting and inspiring sermons to a well attentive and large congregation. His subject for this sermon was "Go Teach All Nations." By the means of a word picture he painted the love and desires of an earthly father to extend on to his future descendants and means of giving them an opportunity to rise and stand out as a real man. Dr. Ward gave another address on "Christian Education." This was well attended and equally as interesting. We enjoyed very much having this privilege and we recognize Dr. Ward as a speaker of unusual force and a man of the true Christian type.

On February 11th the Methodist Protestant Philathea class we delightfully entertained at the home of Mrs. J. M. Baity. Mrs. Joe Hayes and Miss Mae Harris were associate hostesses. The president, Miss Lucy Taylor, called the meeting to order. Mrs. H. A. Jordan conducted the devotionals. The secretary's report was read and approved. In the absence of the treasurer, Mrs. H. A. Jordan gave the report showing local bills paid: $10.56 for flowers, relief work, etc., pledge paid High Point College, $10; balance on hand, $6.75. Collections for the evening amounted to $2.35. Special committee reports showed flowers sent nine times; 16 trays carried; visits made, 22; Mrs. Claude Harris, chairman of the social service, reported a supper to be given the Baraeas on Thursday night, February 13, in the basement of the church. During the business period plans for raising funds were discussed, but no action taken. A committee to clean the class room was appointed by the president.

Mrs. N. C. Greenway, a guest of the evening, invited the president and the officers of the class to attend the Methodist Episcopal Philathea class meeting on February 17.

The program leaders, Miss Elizabeth Fox, then took charge of the meeting. Two heart contests were much enjoyed, Mrs. C. F. Tankersley, Jr., winning a box of candy hearts for one prize, and Mrs. Henry Bailey, winner of the other contest was presented a lovely Valentine. Little Miss Martha Baity, in conclusion of the program, gave a reading, "See'n' Things at Night," which was greatly enjoyed by all. During the social hour a lovely frozen salad was served, with each plate bearing a Valentine favor.

We regret to report much sickness among our membership at this writing.

Congratulations are extended to Rev. and Mrs. Hunter upon the arrival of a son, William, in their home January 18th.

Moriah.—Our attendance at Sunday school and church services has been very good this winter.

About $85, or nearly two-thirds of our quota, has been pledged on the college fund and most of it paid in. Hope we can soon raise the full amount. One dollar is such a little and yet counts so much when we are giving together. If we could each get a vision of what the college is going to mean to our denomination I'm sure we would not wait to be asked to give.

Haven't reached our goal in Herald subscriptions yet, but are still working.

Beginning with next Sunday we are going to give our Sunday school offering once each month to the Children's Home. We did this one time but had grown careless about it the last few years. Hope our members will remember these Sundays and give all they can and then a litle more.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is planning to hold the regular thank-offering service soon.

Our church and community were saddened last week by the sudden death of one of our oldest and most beloved members, Mrs. Sarah Glass. The bereaved family have our deepest sympathy. May the Heavenly Father comfort them in their sorrow.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—There was an unusually good attendance at Sunday school Sunday for this time of year, the number being 103.

Bro. Powell was present and delivered two interesting messages, one to the children, the other to the older people. His text for the children was an egg. He said if the egg is placed in the right temperature it will hatch out a biddie. If it does not come in contact with any evils, such as the hawk, snake or chicken-lice, it will grow to be a chicken. The same is true with a boy or girl. They are the beginning of a man or a woman. If the surrounding conditions are favorable the boy will grow to manhood, but if he comes in contact with evil forces all posibilities of the man are destroyed. The thought seemed to appeal to the children very much. His other text was taken from the first Psalm.

The Ladies' Aid will meet next Saturday evening with the president, Miss Bessie Swaim.

The teacher of the Junior class entertained her boys and girls Saturday afternoon with a Valentine party. Many games were enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. There were about 14 present and all seemed to enjoy themselves very much.

The second quarterly conference of North Davidson charge will meet on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in March.

The C. E. Society is still active and doing good work. An interesting program was given the 2nd Sunday with Clark Haynes as leader. Mr. Ray Collette will be leader next Sunday at 11 o'clock.

The wedding bills have been ringing in our community recently. Mr. Belvin Craven and Miss Gladys Jones were married in South Carolina February 8th, and Mr. Howly Hayworth and Miss Elva Moore at Danville, Va., the same day. All hope for them a long and happy life. REPORTER.

Clothing and Other Gifts

Mrs. Alice Jones, Warren, Ind., 6 tablets, 1 boy's shirt, 3 dresses, 10 handkerchiefs, 1 box crayons, 2 pair hose, 1 bunch safety pins, 13 pencils and 1 toy dog.

Our good friend, Mr. J. H. Speas, of East Bend, gave us a car load of good oak timber for fence posts. We hope to get out of it 700 or 800 posts, and this means so much to us since we have not the timber on the place here for the necessary fence posts. This timber is now at a nearby sawmill to be cut into the right size. "One good turn deserves another," so since Brother Speas made this good turn who will donate the money to pay for the wire fencing to meet our immediate needs? $75.00 will turn the trick.

That Team of Mules

Some very kind friends, who are always ready to do a favor for this Home, knew that we were in need of a good team of mules, so they set to work to find a man who was both able and willing to donate such a team to the Home. The Dear Father surely directed; for we were soon put in touch with a man, who is a stranger to us, but certainly not a stranger to the Lord since he loved His little ones enough, and appreciates the work of a Home like this sufficiently to open up his big heart and give us a good stocky team of mules, weighing about 1100 each. Just the kind of mules we needed.

The donor of this splendid and much needed gift, is Mr. Nello Teer, of Durham, N. C. Our larger boys, who do the farm work, are happy and they will ever love and appreciate Mr. Teer.

May the Lord bless him and continue to prosper him is our wish and prayer for him.

With a good tractor, two good mules and one good horse we are in good shape now to get our plowing done at the rigth time and our crops planted on time.

Our Needs

The following letter was mailed last week to pastors and Sunday School superintendents. We are incorporating it into our report this week that all readers of the HERALD may read and act accordingly. Thank you.

My Dear Fellow Worker:

Thanksgiving and Christmas have passed, and we are now looking toward our Spring plowing and planting. Many church and Sunday Schools and some indviiduals, sent us Thanksgiving offerings but many did not. Is is not too late yet.

The "Dollar Per Member" campaign for the college has had right-of-way since conference, and we hope it has been successfully completed on all charges. If not then be sure to do it. This with the present financial conditions, together with the needs of the Children's Home as we found them a year ago, has put the Home in very straightened conditions financially. We have cut our help and other expenses to a minimum, and yet we feel the pinch.

A year ago we borrowed $2,000 to help tide over with back bills for running expenses. We paid all back bills and reduced the note by just one half, and continued to run for the year. But to do this we had to cut to the bone on current expenses.

In 30 days after you receive this letter our note for the remaining $1,000 will be due, and our current bills are running behind at this time. We had to buy a tractor and a tractor plow, and other farming implements last year in order to make a crop, and the tractor is not fully paid for. We are also compelled to do a lot of fencing before we can plant our crops. We most earnestly appeal to you and your church and Sunday School to help us meet these obligations, so we may get on an absolutely cash basis. We can save many dollars per year by paying cash.

This is no "hard luck" story, nor is it a complaint. The prospects here are as bright as the promises of God; and we know that He will take care of us. But we also know that He would like to have you and your people help, and we believe you want to help, so we are giving you these facts that you may present them to your people, and thus get them to help you give us, during the next three weeks, the much needed relief.

The 102 children here are yours and ours. The privilege of caring for them is a joint one.

We thank you and pray God's richest blessings upon all who may respond to this our S. O. S. call.

Faithfully yors in His blessed service,

A. G. DIXON, Supt.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Harris

Mr. Edward C. Harris, a member of Rehoboth Church on the Granville Charge, departed this life February 4, 1930. He had passed the seventy-second mile post. He professed faith in Christ in early life and united with the Rehoboth Church where he was a faithful, consistent member for about 57 years. He was one of the oldest and most faithful members of this church. During this 57 years he has faithfully filled the different offices of his church. He has been a teacher in his Sunday School for more than 40 years. He was loved and highly esteemed by his class and he will be missed by the Sunday School as well as by the church. He was deeply interested and a liberal contributor to our Children's Home as well as to the local church.

He was held in high esteem in social and business circles, having at one time held the office of vice-president of the First National Bank of Oxford, N. C., and for many years chairman of the board of county commissioners of Granville County. His place in the church and community will be hard to fill, but as the faithful pass on to their reward, we who remain must like Elisha of old take up the mantle that falls from their shoulders and do our best to fill their places here on earth 'till God calls us home.

The deceased is survived by his wife who was before her marriage Miss Sue Bains, of Vance County, and the following children: Mrs. Hattie Perkins, secretary to the State Treasurer, Raleigh, N. C.; T. D. Harris, of Washington, D. C.; R. W. Harris, Route 3, Oxford, N. C.; Ed C. Harris, Jr., of North Wilkesboro, N. C.; Mrs. Lucy Jane Lassiter, of Four Oaks, N. C., Mrs. William Floyd, Miss Sue Harris, of Route 3, Oxford, N. C., and Miss Delphia Harris, of Meredith College.

The funeral services were held in the home on Wednesday, Feb. 5tr, by his pastor. The large congregation present shows the high esteem in which the memory of the departed brother is held. The remains were then laid to rest in the cemetery at Reholeth Church beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

GREAT SMOKIES

The Great Smoky Mountains lie between Tennessee and North Carolina, a primitive wilderness of virgin forests, fast-flowing streams, sky-tumbling peaks. Clingman Dome rises 6,619 rocky feet in the air. A hundred miles away is Mt. Mitchell (6,711 feet), highest peak east of the Rockies. Besides swarms of game, the woods shelter hundreds of mountaineer families, clannish, illiterate, strongly Anglo-Saxon, who preserve their tradition of armed feuds and moonshine.

Six years ago lowlanders who had enjoyed vacations in the Great Smokies formed the Great Smoky Mountains Conservation Association, asked the U. S. Department of the Interior to create a national park on the tract. Congress marked off 704,000 acres as suitable, promised to take over administration when North Carolina and Tenness had bought at least 427,000 acres and deeded it over to the U. S. The Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial and John Davison Rockefeller Jr., promised to match, dollar for dollar, any amount up to $5,000,000 raised by the two states for land purchase.

Last week Governor Henry Hollis Horton of Tennessee and Governor Oliver Max Gardner of North Carolina, journeyed to Washington, jointly presented Secretary of the Interior Wilbur with the beginnings of their park—deeds for 158,799 Great Smoky acres. Governor Gardner said the mountain forests in the park area were full grown when Columbus discovered America. Governor Horton described the race for land between the two states. Secretary Wilbur thanked North Carolina, Tennessee, the Rockefellers, marveled at "the largest real estate operation with which I have ever been associated."

Tennesseee Great Smoky Mountain Park Commission announced that it would need about a year more to collect its half of the required land. Land-rooted mountaineers refuse to sell their ancestral acres, have to be displaced by slow court condemnation proceedings.

The Great Smoky National Park, the only one like it east of Yellowstone, will be approached from Knoxville or Asheville. It will be about 50 by 25 miles in area. Without spoiling the landscape, the U. S. will build trunk roads and trails, camp shelters, telephone lines. Hunting will be prohibited, but 400 miles of trout-filled streams will be open to visiting fishermen.—Time.

The Call of Today

Yesterday has ceased to call,
Its voice has silent grown.
Loud enough were its demands
And earnest was its tone.
But they fell on ears quite deaf—
Reaction there was none.
Now we're filled with vain regrets
For things we left undone.

Toward the morrow we turn our eyes
And look with constant gaze,
Planning wondrous things to do
In all the coming days.
Action's not yet opportune,
It's time for more delays.
Planning, we procrastinate
And nothing do that pays.

Loudly calls the passing day—
It says, "Be up and doing!"
Pointing out the useful way,
The course for our pursuing.
Captain of our industry,
Today would keep us hewing,
Carving out the pattern set
Without the need of truing.

The Question of Chain Stores

This is one of the live questions of the day. The trouble is to find a handle to take hold of it with. They are so far as we know law-abiding institutions and therefore cannot be closed by the courts. The public must decide as to their merits and demerits. The question cannot be settled by a mere comparison of prices today. The chain stores might undersell until they have crowded out competition and gained a monopoly and then they might put up prices and win back all they have lost and a great deal more. It is a good rule to follow, when you find a man offering goods below a fair price, don't buy of him. He may have stolen the goods. In nine cases out of ten there is something wrong. The same rule holds in the case of the man who is trying to sell goods above a fair price. The public must also have an eye to the quantity and quality of the goods offered in packages. There are small variations in size that are not easily noticeable. The public, too, should consider the larger question of public policy. The stores that are patronized are the ones that are going to live. Would it be well for a town to have all its merchant citizens driven out of business, losing the taxes they pay, for the sake of what it might save by dealing with foreign merchants who pay the bulk of their taxes elsewhere?

We believe the mail-order houses and other chain stores have come into prominence largely because of their superior salesmanship. They know how to advertise and how to display their goods. People send to Chicago for articles they could buy more advantageously in their home town. The question is a complicated one and should be approached from many angles. Let the people be thinking about it. There is much involved.

Moriah Church Loses a Pillar

Brother Julius H. Sharp early Monday morning, before he had risen from his bed, passed silently into the unseen world, leaving his family and friends in grief and mourning. He leaves his wife, four sons, four daughters, and a number of grandchildren. And he leaves Moriah Church. All recent pastors know what he meant to that. He was one of its strong pillars. In the funeral service two of his pastors testified to his worth, Rev. H. C. Carmichael and Rev. M. P. Chambliss. Rev. R. J. Ramblyn and Rev. Mr. Millard also took part in the service. There were about a dozen ministers and a large congregation of people present. Floral tributes were many and beautiful. The choir of Grace Church assisted in the music. Brother Sharp has gone, but he will not soon be forgotten, and for a time he will be sadly missed. May others be moved by his example to devote themselves to the good work to which he gave his heart and his hands.

A Dangerous Liability

A man may have a large number of valuable assets in his character and then have one liability that more than balances all. We have a man in this city who is polite, kindly in disposition, making a pleasant neighbor, and for the most part a good citizen; but unfortunately he has fallen into the habit of drinking occasionally. How dangerous this is is indicated by a recent experience of his. Driving his car on a highway he killed a little girl and almost killed her little brother. He was arrested and spent two nights in jail. He is now out under bond, but he faces the trials of the courts and such penalties as they may finally impose. What an evil time it was when he took his first drink.

Opposition to Chief Justice Hughes

When the President nominated Mr. Hughes to succeed Chief Justice Taft, we ventured to predict that the appointment would give general satisfaction. But there proved to be considerable opposition among members of the Senate in both parties. One of the duties of the Supreme Court is to decide what will be a fair return to public service corporations from their investment. Those who opposed Mr. Hughes feared that his sympathies would be with the capitalists rather than with the public. His appointment was confirmed in the Senate by about a two-thirds vote. We have faith in Mr. Hughes' fair-mindedness and hope that he will not disappoint the country.

OUR CONFERENCE ORGAN

Editor Methodist Protestant Herald:

The purpose of this communication is to arouse those who are interested in the subject to a sense of their responsibility, and to create interest where it does not now exist.

A church paper is: 1 medium of communication between those interested in the work of the church; 2 medium for the dissemination of news about the work the church is doing; 3 medium through which the best religious thought may be conveyed to its readers.

Is there in the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina a need for such a paper? If the information concerning the support accorded the Methodist Protestant Herald is correct, evidently there are many in the conference who think not. But have they well considered the matter? Is it not desirable to have a printed forum through which the church's work may be discussed?

Perhaps if the reader were conducting the paper, he would do it differently. But would he give his time and thought to an enterprise that did not afford him a decent living? Has it occurred to you who read this that if you would meet your obligation to the Herald, the editor could more effectively meet his? And this refers not alone to financial support. Why do not those interested in High Point College give to the church through the Herald news of the college's affairs other than financial? Perhaps if the people had more than a hazy idea of the work being done by the college, and heard about this work oftener, their financial interest would be more easily aroused.

Why does no one discuss the great disarmament conference now being held in London? the most important matter before the world today.

Why has no one anything to offer concerning the industrial situation in North Carolina? It is certainly a matter of interest to religion and the church.

Why does no one offer contributions on dozens of subjects of vital interest to those who are trying to cope with life as they find it today?

Ask yourself if you have done your part for the Herald. It is certain that an enterprise that costs money cannot be conducted without loss when enough money is not available. It is a fact that the Herald would not continue another week but for the generosity of men who believe the church needs the paper. They have put into the periodical money which they need. Does not this fact command your attention?

The obvious and easy temporary solution of the financial problem is to be found in new subscriptions. With a large subscription list, an advertising medium of value would be created, and more advertising at profitable rates could be secured.

If lack of support should force the Herald to suspend, the inference would be that there is in the conference an absence of enterprise and an indifference towards an important factor in the development of the work of the church.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED AT LONDON?

Did we go to London to get permission to build a navy or to get the opportunity to reduce our navy and our taxes?

Edwin L. James in the New York Times of February 2 explains the present purpose of the United States delegation as "to get parity with England, by reduction if possible, by construction if necessary, but parity in any event. All the rest is detail."

The "detail" they have forgotten is the main object of the conference,—"the greatest reduction consistent with security."

Great Britain has proposed the abolition of battleships. The other three Powers have shown a willingness to consider this proposal, which is now definitely before the conference. Our delegation went to London pledged to the Hoover reduction policy, "IT CANNOT BE TOO LOW FOR US," yet instead of supporting Great Britain's proposal the American delegation actually put forward a program for the United States to build a super-battleship immediately.

Thus far naval experts have dominated the conference. All reports from London agree that a huge naval-building program now threatens us which Paul Scott Mowrer explains would cost the United States in the next five years $848,000,000. Parity by increase of our already excessive naval appropriations would be a betrayal of the high purposes of the conference and a repudiation of the Armistice Day pledge of President Hoover to the world.

But it is not too late for public opinion to express itself powerfully and constructively. No final decisions have been made at London. Just at present, owing to the fall of the Tardieu Government in France, a lull in proceedings gives our representives time for reflection.

Secretary Stimson in his radio address expressed the wish that he might hear from America. President Hoover has frequently asked for the public support for the purposes of the conference which is universally recognized as owing its origin to the pressure of the tax-burdened peoples of the world.

Don't be disturbed by suggestions that the peace forces must not "rock the boat." The boat has been rocked and our task is to steady it.

Let the President and the delegation hear your verdict. Ask what has happened in London. Ask why reduction is forgotten and the President's pledge ignored. Address The President, The White House, Washington, D. C. The cable address of our delegation in London is complete in two words, Amdelgat London. Ask your telegraph operator how cheap a night-letter cabled to London now is. From Washington, D. C., twenty-five words cost $1.25.

The conference can yet succeed.

WILL THE SUPREME COURT DETHRONE GOD?

Our country owes a debt of gratitude to Judge Warren B. Burrows of New Haven, for stating with accuracy and perfect clarity the issue that the recent denials of citizenship to conscientious objectors against war have raised.

Judge Burrows was ruling upon the application for citizenship of Douglas Clyde Macintosh, Dwight professor of Theology at Yale University who on June 24, 1929, stated to the U. S. District Court that his allegiance was first to the will of God and that he would bear arms only in a war which his conscience justified. The Federal examiner, John F. Davis, advised against granting citizenship as Federal Examiner E. J. Kennedy advised in the Graber and Webb cases. Judge Burrows on January 9, 1930, rendered a decision supporting the recommendations of John F. Davis and stating in unmistakable language that because Douglas Clyde Macintosh considers "his allegiance to be first to the will of God," he is "not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States" and can not become a citizen.

The memorandum of Judge Burrows was as follows:

Upon consideration of the petition of Douglas Clyde Macintosh, affidavits in support thereof, the findings and recommendations of John F. Davis, duly designated examiner of the Bureau of Naturalization, and the testimony of the petitioner and his witnesses in open court on said twenty-fourth day of June, 1929, it appearing that the said petitioner, considering his allegiance to be first to the will of God, would not promise in advance to bear arms in defense of the United States under all circumstances, but only if he believed the war to be morally justified, it is decided that the petitioner is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States, and further decreed that said petition for citizenship is denied.

Judge Burrows has formulated with legal precision the ground on which citizenship was denied Martha Jane Graber, the Mennonite, and Margaret Dorland Webb, the Quaker. It will be a historic decision, perhaps an epoch-making case. Doctor Macintosh has given notice of appeal, making certain the fact that the case will be tested in the U. S. Circuit Court in New York and, if necessary, in the Supreme Court of the United States.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, in a famous sermon (obtainable from our office) preached at the Park Avenue Baptist Church, New York, November 13, 1927, on "Christianity's Supreme Rival," sets forth how from ancient times the cult of nationalism has been the most dangerous rival of Christianity. Just as in the days of Diocletian believers who refused to sprinkle incense on the altar of Caesar were thrown to the lions, so today men and women who put conscience above country are being rejected by the United States as undesirable citizens. It is under Secretary of Labor James J. Davis that this ungodly policy has grown up. Secretary Davis is presumably responsible for making the crucial test of citizenship a question listed in the application blank as Question 22: "If, necessary, are you willing to take up arms in defense of this country?" Applicants for citizenship are not asked if they will maintain and defend the Eighteenth Amendment. They are not asked as to their loyalty to the Bill of Rights. They are not tested as to their attachment to our great American ideal of liberty under law. They are asked whether or not they have a conscience against killing in any war, just or unjust, aggressive or defensive, legal or illegal, which any conceivable United States Government may declare. If they say they have no conscience on this moral issue they are admitted. If they have a conscience they are denied.

We do not believe that Secretary Davis' method of selecting American citizenship is representative of the spirit of our country or of its institutions. The entire world will watch the progress of the Macintosh case clarified as it is by the decision of Judge Burrows until the Supreme Court has ruled whether a United States citizen may put the will of God first or no. Where God is not first, He is not God. Can it be that the United States Government will follow Russia in declaring for atheism?—Frederick J. Libby.

THEY ARE AMERICANS TOO

Little round-faced, bare-footed, brown-skinned, solemn-eyed, and talking a language the little children who live in the pleasant homes in the city do not understand, yet they too are Americans. And such names! Now, while the mother of the pale-faced child (They call you pale faces) loves her child sincerely, and thinks there is nothing on earth so sweet and fine, she would not think of naming her Laughing Waters, nor Sunny Sky, nor Moonbeams, or something like that. She gives her the name of Abigail, or Mary, or Jean, to which is attached the surname of the family which may be Smith or Jones.

But just the reverse is true of the family of the brown-skinned child. A poetic name is given her, which, coupled with her father's surname which is equally poetic, starts her in life with such a name as Smiling Deerfoot, or Moonlight Ox-Tail. The name does not sound odd in her home in a tipi, or wigwam, or hogan, for as you have guessed she is a little Indian, but when she starts off to school difficulties arise. She must go many miles to the government school, too far to come home at night, or even for week ends, or even for holidays, and when she enters she is renamed. Smiling Deerfoot becomes Jane Ferguson, and Moonlight Ox-Tail becomes Susie Martin. Is it any wonder her parents regard her going with sorrow! It has happened that when the children are grown, and have forgotten their parents, and their school days end, their parents cannot find them, for the grown girl under the strange name is not the round-faced child they knew by another name.

School is at first a terrifying experience for the cihld, for they do not speak the language there she knew in her primitive home. She came and went as she pleased when at home. At dark it was time to go to bed ,and when the sun rose it was time to get up. She ate when she was hungry (and she sometimes realized there might not be a next meal so she followed the custom of her tribe, and secreted about her person scraps for the next attack of hunger. She did not know the tyranny of a big case standing in the corner that gave out a mysterious sound of tick, tick, and which you know as time. She found in school that her life was measured off by it, sleeping, eating, working, playing, and she did not like it.

Her mother had gone to great pains to make her nice little clothing for this adventure so that she would not feel ashamed before other children. But other children admire her stockings, her dress, or her sweater, and she gives them away, for isn't this a law with her race? Her mother must supply more, and it is on record that one little Indian girl gave away seven sweaters in one year. The teachers try to prevent this, but there are many pupils and few teachers. The little girl at home bathed in a pool, she is put into a bathtub here. She slept on a bundle of furs on the tipi floor. Now sheets and a real bed grace her slumbers. These are only a few of the many upsetting changes that come into her life. In time she grows to like her new environment, studies and plays, a contented little girl. Reaching adult years she must leave school and become a wage-earner.

Her parents are very poor. If she goes home she becomes a burden since there is no way there for her to work and earn. Her father, not having enough for the extra mouth may marry her off to some man she does not know, and whom she may dislike very much when she does know him. So it is the lesser of the two evils to go to the city. In the city this girl, untrained for any vocation and entirely unprepared to face the temptations, and fears of the city in a homeless, friendless world, is a real problem. They pour into the city looking for work, and while they become ideal nurses, having the hereditary traits of patience, faithfulness, and endurance, there are not enough of such positions for them and they are untrained. Sometimes the better class of "pale faces" are prejudiced against them, and they must resort to the lower classes for friends and companions. This is unfortunate as everyone knows. Several agencies are engaged in seeking to help the Indian girl solve her problem of adjustment, chief among which is the Y. W. C. A., which goes with her from the school to the city, and opens information and room registry and employment bureaus for her there.

And she is an American, just as you are.

The Eleventh National Convention of the Young Woman's Christian Association of the United States of America wlil be held in the city of Detroit, Michigan, April 25 to May 1. This will attract delegates from every state in the Union, and from many foreign lands.

THE FIGHT FOR OUR COUNTRY

We congratulate the country on the success of prohibition, which is not only a beneficent policy, but is sound in principle. Under it we have achieved a prosperity and power never before enjoyed by any people. Adopted after decades of investigation, test and debate, and after trial of every other method for the solution of the liquor problem, it has amply proved its worth, and furnished a valid reason, in addition to the constitutional one, for the enactment of the bills introduced in Congress, which embody the President's recommendations.

No one should be deceived by the present flood of publicity and propaganda put forth by the wets and carried by the press. Since the enactment of the 18th Amendment those who favor liquor and oppose orderly government have each year seized upon the meeting of Congress as an occasion giving them good opportunity for propaganda. Many bills are introduced, for which their authors and friends entertain no hope or expectation of passage, but which are only intended to secure agitation. In confirmation of this charge, we cite the recent utterances of the chairman of an important committee of the House of Representatives, declaring that Congress "represents the only forum those favoring a change have to present their views in a national way." We make no comment on such declarations as an interpretation of the function and purpose of our national law-making body, whose members are under sacred oath to support the Constitution.

The assembling of the present Congress offered the wets an unusual opportunity for agitation and propaganda because the present administration came into office openly committed to whatever changes in the law might be thought necessary to secure better and more general enforcement and observance, which naturally brought the whole subject of prohibition to the fore, and which aroused the wets to a fight of desperation. Judged by their noise during the sessions of Congress the wets are a great host; judged by the number of their ballots either during the sessions of Congress or at the polls, they are a diminishing minority.

For the most part the present methods of the wets are disloyal and un-American. We cheerfully concur in the sentiment expressed by the President and others that every citizen has aperfect right to agitate and move for the repeal of any part of the Constitution in a frank and open manner. But to seek the repeal of laws enacted to make the Constitution operative, or to seek so to modify such laws that they would allow what the Constitution itself forbids, is nullification by indirection which no loyal American will tolerate.

To seek to withdraw states from support of the Federal Government in the enforcement of any law and the preservation of orderly processes is only a revival of the old doctrine of nullification which has never been tolerated by the American people. Extra legal and irresponsible state referenda are fruitless and abortive. They make a mockery of elections and of constitutional procedure. They are an invitation to the people to join in undermining the Constitution, an act repugnant, alike to every impulse of patriotism and of loyalty to orderly government. Referenda for the repeal of state enforcement codes which are legal and may become binding amount in essence to nullification.

The 18th Amendment was submitted and approved in the regular and orderly way prescribed by the Constitution of the United States and both it and its supporting legislation have been repeatedly upheld by the Supreme Court. It was submitted and adopted by a larger vote than any other Amendment to the Federal Constitution. To talk of a National Referendum on any part of the Constitution of the United States tends to undermine the confidence of the American people in established order and in the regular legal processes of the form of government which they have adopted and under which they live. Such procedure could not but bring chaos in our whole political and social order.

The friends of Prohibition submitted to the license system when it was law until they persuaded the country to abandon it. No conviction of our opponents that Prohibition is wrong in principle runs deeper than did ours that license to make and sell intoxicating drink violates the laws of God and offends the conscience of man. We submitted to the law which we believed to be unwise and wrong. Under similar circumstances the foes of Prohibition violate and seek to nullify the law of the land.

We warn those who seek the nullification of the 18th Amendment against the false assumption that friends of National Prohibition will receive supinely their onslaughts upon the Constitution. The friends of Prohibition have in no sense lost their fighting spirit, nor will they yield to the clamor of a lawless minority. In the words of John Paul Jones, "We have just begun to fight."

In the language of the President: "Our whole system of self-government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support. The worst evil of disregard for some law is that it destroys respect for all law. For our citizens to patronize the violation of a particular law on the ground that they are opposed to it, is destructive of the very basis of all that protection of life, homes and property which they rightly claim under other laws."

We respectfully and earnestly appeal to the American people to give united and wholehearted support to the President's program for better law enforcement and for better law observance. Thus will be secured to the American people in perpetuity the increasing benefits of the most wholesome piece of reform legislation ever enacted by a free and self-governing people.

CONSCIENCE AND CITIZENSHIP

A Statement by the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers)

We invite attention to the growing number of cases in which applicants for United States citizenship are being rejected because of their allegiance to conscience in the matter of war. The recent ruling in the case of Dr. Douglas C. Macintosh raises the issue pointedly. Dr. Macintosh, a professor in the Yale Divinity School, is obviously unusually qualified to become a citizen. He is rejected, however, for the reasons set forth by the District Judge as follows:

"It appearing that the said Petitioner, considering his allegiance to be first to the will of God, would not promise in advance to bear arms in defense of the United States under all circumstances but only if he believed the war to be morally justified, it is decreed, that the Petitioner is not attached to the principles of the Constitution of the United States and further decreed that said petition for citizenship is denied."

The Macintosh case is but one of an increasing number of applications of both men and women rejected for similar reasons. This policy seems so unjust to the individual and so detrimental to the public welfare that it is cause for grave concern.

Liberty of conscience is a cornerstone of all enlightened democratic governments today. Denial of it is recognized as oppression. It is something more. For to deny the rights of free conscience is to strike at the very heart of individual character and to undermine the foundations of democratic institutions. No modern government such as ours can afford to ignore this principle. America was long a haven of refuge for freedom loving men and women persecuted in other lands. We refuse to believe it is now to be the established policy of our government that we must obey man rather than God, and that those who give their first allegiance to God are disloyal to the United States.

Governments cannot always recognize the freedom of the individual conscience, but we submit that they should always do so except where it clearly violates the moral or religious sense of the community. In this day when a constantly increasing number believe that war and Christianity cannot be reconciled and when all of the leading nations of the world have solemnly renounced war as an instrument of national policy, it clearly cannot be said that a conscientious refusal to bear arms violates the moral or religious standards of our country.

At a time when the nations are striving for disarmament and the pacific settlement of disputes, the conscientious objector to war will be an asset rather than a liability. He will not be a mere negative protester. His love of country will be as deep and genuine, and his service as helpful as that of many other citizens. He may be counted upon more than most to support his country in its efforts to abolish war.

The policy of exclusion for conscientious conviction is grossly undiscriminating. It raises no barrier to the applicant who is unscrupulous, or unthinking, or morally and spiritually dull. It excludes such persons as Dr. Macintosh. It would have excluded William Penn and most of his associates in the founding of Pennsylvania. It would today exclude a Ramsay MacDonald.

We should be false to our forefathers, to the example of the early Christians, to our Master Himself were we to allow religious liberty and freedom of conscience to be violated without protest.

We ask our fellow citizens to join in service to our country by loyally supporting the ideals of civil and religious liberty upon which it was founded. We appeal to them actively to co-operate in establishng the principle that the refusal of a promise to bear arms, because of a supreme loyalty to God, shall not be a bar to citizenship in the United States.

AMERICAN FRIENDS SERVICE COMMITTEE.

AN INTELLIGENCE TEST

As the story was told to me: "When the prophet Mohammed was alive, those in the Near East prided themselves upon their horses.

"Intelligence was a leading requirement of their four-footed friends.

"For war purposes only the most intelligent horses were used, and they were all trained to follow the bugle.

"It chanced that the prophet himself had a need for some very intelligent horses, so he went to a famous breeding-farm to make personal selections.

"The horses he looked over were all pastured in a large field bordering on a river. The prophet gave orders that the horses should be fenced off from the river. He let them go unwatered until, after three days, their thirst became so great they could hardly stand.

"He then ordered the fence removed, and the horses rushed in a body for the river.

"When they were just about to dash into the river to quench their thirst, a bugle was blown.

"All but ten of the horses disregarded the bugle-call. The ten turned and answered the call of duty in spite of their great thirst.

"These ten horses were the start of the prophet breed," according to the story.

If, instead of horses, humans had been subsituated in that experiment, I wonder how many would have followed the bugle.

Would you have answered the call of duty or gone on to drink?

You don't have to try it to know.

If you procrastinate, you don't hear the bugle.

If you do a job just well enough to get by and not the best you can, you don't hear the bugle.

If you work with an eye to the clock, you would never hear the bugle.

If you start a hundred things and give up to discouragement a hundred times, then you would rather drink than answer duty's call.

It's the little things half done that have completely undone so many lives. You cannot rise to great emergencies if you fall before small ones.

A Lincoln can go long unnoticed because of small opportunities, but you will find no imperfections in his handling of the unimportant opportunities he has.

It's not what you do, but how you do it, that builds character.

Opportunity does not make the difference between your own man and being an owned man. The automobile did not make Henry Ford; Henry Ford made the automobile. Had he been born a thousand years ago, he would have been rich and great in that distant day just as he is today.

Ford was once a poor man, but never a poor workman. Others may have doubted him, but he did not doubt himself. It may sound ridiculous, but it is true that he became a 100-per-cent finisher before he became a 100-per-cent starter.

Mr. Ford not only heard the bugle, but he followed it as will all of the prophet breed. As long as they can stand they will strive to answer the bugle-call, and when they fall, it is always toward the bugle.—Chester H. Struble in Nautilus.

OPTIMISM The President's Letter EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

EASTER—PENTECOST EVANGELISM

Our Conference Committee on Evangelism is suggesting the following goals: Evangelistic Preaching, Prayer Bands in Each Church, Effort to Increase Church Attendance, Series of Evangelistic Meetings, Home Bible Reading, Distribution of Evangelistic Tracts, Personal Evangelism, and full co-operation in all other respects, as far as local conditions make this possible, with the program of Evangelism, as outlined by the Commission of Evangelism of the General Church.

This undertaking deals with the real business of the church, and surely we shall not be wanting in our interest and our efforts in this God-sent movement.

How Another Charge Does It

A definite financial allotment is given to every member—old, young, big, little, rich, poor—all alike are given a definite allotment,—covering salary and budgets. This apportionment is made by the stewards and the pastor. When this pastor went to this charge, he was told that the charge had the only system that they had ever been able to work, and that it was working well. But he insisted that it was not working well. For a number of years the pastor had not been paid in full, and but meager amounts on budgets. The pastor's ideas were finally accepted, and with splendid results. Every dollar of salary was paid last year, and more on budgets than had been paid in any one year for fifteen years. Of the 344 members last year, 322 contributed. Two churches on the charge pay their part of the salary monthly. The pastor is confident that this improvement in finances on this charge is due to a plan that gives a definite financial allotment to every member.

And more than that, the charge is establishing a financial system that can be passed on with credit to the rising generation, when they become responsible for managing the finances of the church.

District Rallies

We have notice that the first district is planning a rally for the Fifth Sunday in March, to be held on the Greensville Charge. Many other districts will hold rallies at this time, we trust. The good programs and the good fellowship in these rallies provided a sort of information and stimulation that is difficult to get in any other way. Brother F. L. Gibbs is to be in North Carolina for the next several weeks, and tenders his services for these rallies. His address is 993, Durham, N. C. We trust that district chairmen will go forward zealously with these rallies, and that we may have a number of them in March.

South Winston

February 20, Thursday.—The second quarterly conference for this charge was held on this date, at Oak Grove Church. The meeting was at night, and was attended by a goodly representation from each of the three churches. The charge feels most keenly the tragic passing of their beloved pastor, Brother P. L. Kinnaman. During his brief pastorate here, he greatly endeared himself to the people, and they will cherish, in fond remembrance, his good life and good works among them. In due time, we hope to have the charge supplied with a pastor to fill out Brother Kinnaman's unexpired term.

A memorial service will be held in his honor on next Sunday at Union Grove, on the South Winston Charge. The hour is 3 P. M. We are sure that the pastors who are in reach of the church, and the friends of this good man will be glad to attend this service.

In due time, we hope to have the charge supplied with a pastor to fill out Brother Kinnaman's unexpired term. The reports at the conference revealed a normal condition for the churches of the charge. Sunday Schools are in progress at each church, and one,—Union Grove—contributes regularly each month to the Children's Home. South Winston has just organized a C. E. Society, and this church has an Aid Society of about 20 members. There seems to be a promising field in South Winston, and our small band there is working heroically to establish a church. Their lot is paid for, and they have about $500 in hand on a building fund. We want to see them succeed, and shall watch their developments with responsive interest. The small unpaid balance on Brother Kinnaman's salary at each church will be paid in full. The conference passed a motion, recommending to each church on the charge, a financial system that will give to each member a definite financial allotment.

Country Church Contest

The decisions of the judges are now in, and we are prepared to announce results. Only seven of the promised papers were offered for publication. Paper No. 7, written by Rev. E. A. Bingham, was unanimously awarded first prize. The second prize goes to No. 6, written by Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk. The contest between this number and one other was so close that the judges could not be unanimous. The judges live in different parts of the conference district. Their decisions were made without conferring with each other, and without knowing the writers of the different papers. The prizes are cash, and are contributed by friends of the rural church. The first prize is $5.00 and the second prize is $2.50.

We are grateful to all who took part in the contest; to the friends who made the prizes possible; and to the judges for their willing service in awarding the prizes. We likewise congratulate the winners, and commend to them a continuation of their interest and good work on behalf of the country church.

Pastors' Reports

Total number of charges in the conference, 92. Number of pastors reporting, 72. These reports reveal the following facts: Twenty-eight charges report 92 additions to the church; forty-one charges report no additions. The largest number of additions reported by any one charge is 13. This is a rural charge. Sixty charges have paid pastors an average of $209 for the quarter. Twenty-seven charges report that no definite financial allotment is given to each member. Twenty charges report that this is done, and a few other charges report the same for some individual churches. Some charges make a membership apportionment of pastor's salary but not of the budgets. "Dollar a Member" has been presented on 61 charges; 117 churches have subscribed; 27 churches failed to subscribe. On a few charges it had not been presented up to the time the reports were sent in. The amount subscribed, and partly paid by 117 churches, is $5,878, with prospects, as indicated by the reports, sufficient to run the total to nearly $7,000. Encouraging phases of the work are: increasing congregations at preaching services, and well attended Sunday

Schools; growing activities on the part of the young people; better financing; and women's work. The phases of the work that need most emphasis include, organization, young people, church loyalty, denominational consciousness, attendance, church paper, knowledge of conference programs, loyalty to our institutions, worship, et cetera. The three greatest needs, however, as indicated by the reports, are spirituality, evangelism, and finance.

The complete answers given by many pastors to the questions contained in the report blank is very gratifying: Other reports were lacking in information because answers were not more complete. We are grateful to all pastors for their response to the call for this report of the first quarter.

"WHILE HE STONED ME"

"My faith grew while he stoned me," declares a young Christian student in Korea, in speaking of his own father who had driven him out of house and home because he had learned to believe in Christ while attending a Christian school. This young man, Yu Chung Chul, who is now studying for the ministry in our seminary in Seoul, Korea, shows not the faintest resentment at the persecution he was forced to endure at the hands of his father, but simply says: "If my father had not acted like that I don't know whether I would be here today. My faith grew while he stoned me."

Yu Chung Chul began life as the son of a farmer and a drunkard in the Yellow Sea Province. He was sent to the Christian school because there was no other school nearby, but when his father learned that he had accepted the Christian religion he demanded that he leave the school and go to a Japanese language academy. This the boy of twelve refused to do and ran off to the city of Pyeng Yang, where he found employment with a Japanese shoe merchant at four yen ($2) a month. He lived in the merchant's home and when he asked leave to go to church it was indignantly refused. Whereupon the young Christian offered to cut his salary exactly in half that he might have his Sundays free for the Lord, and to this the magnanimous employer finally agreed.

Chung Chul put himself through school by doing odd jobs of various kinds, though often he had to share his earnings with his drunken father, who came demanding them, and once he had to get the old man out of prison by turning over to his creditors all his money that he had earned. The father accepted this as an act of duty, but forbade the son the house and stoned him when he tried to enter.

"You may be God's son," he declared, "but you are not mine."

Imagine the joy of this young Christian when he found his mother ready to share his fate and become an outcast from her home so that she too might follow Christ!

"It was Sunday night in April when I first saw Yu Chung Chul," says the Rev. V. W. Peters. "We were gathered in a Korean house where one of our youngest churches in Seoul was meeting. All eyes were fixed intently upon this young preacher, and quite a handsome fellow he was—just twenty-two, with unusually sparkling eyes and a radiant smile. He preaches with such vigor and power that people are ever eager to have him come back to them. I looked on him and loved him."—Selected.

CRIME AT ITS SOURCE

One of the most weighty of Mr. Hoover's many wise utterances is the following, which was written to President Coolidge when Mr. Hoover was Secretary of Commerce. Mr. Hoover was writing about the welfare of our boys and girls and the future welfare of our country, and he said: "We in America are far behind what a national conscience should demand for the public protection of our children. There is no agency in the world that is so seriously affecting the health, efficiency, education, and character of boys and girls as the cigarette habit, yet very little attention is being paid to it. Nearly every delinquent boy is a cigarette smoker, which certainly has much to do with it. Cigarettes are a source of crime. To neglect crime at its source is a short-sighted policy, unworthy of a nation of our intelligence."

Those are strong words, doubly strong as coming from a man of so wide observation as Mr. Hoover, one of the world's leading economists. The habit which he so powerfully condemns is rapidly growing among boys and girls, men and women. Once formed, it is a habit almost impossible to shake off. All the forces of righteousness in the country should be united in a campaign against it. An attack against the cigarette is an attack on "crime as its source."—Amos R. Wells.

DANGER OFF THE LORD'S GROUND

It is when people wander away from the boundaries that the Heavenly Father has prescribed for them that they become involved in trouble. Sam Jones in addressing a body of convicts in a State penitentiary, held up before them a Bible and said, "None of you got in here by doing what this Book tells you to do; you got in here by doing what it told you not to do." A church journal illustrates this same truth in a somewhat different but not less emphatic way. It says: "The old shepherd who once offered a prayer in a Welsh revival meeting put it exactly right when he lamented his back-sliding in these words: 'Lord, I got among the thorns and briers, and was scratched and torn and bleeding. But, Lord, it is only fair to say that it was not Thy ground; I had wandered out of Thy pastures.' And there are many others whose scars were obtained in the devil's thickets, outside the field where duty called them."—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

EASTER VISITORS

It was Easter Eve and Mr. Appleby, who kept a pet shop, was closing up for the week-end. It was a good thing for him that he was not a prophet, because if he had known what was going to happen between dusk of Easter Eve and sunrise of Easter Morning, he would not have whistled quite so cheerfully.

There had been a very brisk business all week and Mr. Appleby had sold a vast number of furry little bunnies, yellow chicks and ducklings. But bunnies are noted for their large families and he still had a windowful of little and big ones hopping about nibbling at carrots and lettuce.

Just as Mr. Appleby was getting into bed that night, all innocent and ignorant of what was going on at his shop, a taxicab kissed a touring car right on its radiator. It was really more like a smack than a kiss. The touring car was surprised and peeved. It bounced away from the taxi, turned completely around and crashed backwards into the big windowful of bunnies belonging to poor happy Mr. Appleby.

Well, in a minute a very frightened taxi driver came limping out of the cab, and pulled two or three or four angry people out of the touring car. A cop who had heard the crash came running to the spot blowing his whistle as he ran. But, Gee, you're not interested in what they did after that.

The doings of the rabbits are far more worth your while. There were four large white rabbits, six middle-sized rabbits and fourteen little rabits. When the tournig car crashed into the window, the rabbits scattered in all directions, but they could not get into the pet shop as there was a wire partition. They dodged the flying glass and burrowed in the straw, but by the time the cop arrived, they had sniffed a good whiff of fresh spring air and all of them jumped out of the broken window.

Nobody in Pittsburgh, from the Mayor down, knew that there were twenty-four rabbits roaming the city streets.

In the excitement, the rabbits all got away from the corner where the accident had happened, and following Old Granddaddy Lopear they all went hippity-hop up the street.

Old Granddaddy Lopear wasn't exactly what you'd call a highbrow, in fact, he didn't have any more sense than he looked to have. He went solmenly up the street in the direction of a nice lawn around somebody's house, where the grass was pushing up. The other rabbits followed him because that was easier than thinking out where to go.

Now, it happened that the house on the nice lawn belonged to a family named Jones. Nancy Jones was eight and too old to believe in the Easter rabbit. Billy Jones was five and still believed. Nancy woke up thirsty that night, and being a sensible child, she got up and got herself a drink, not disturbing anybody else. There was a little balcony outside her window and after her drink, Nancy stepped out on her balcony.

First she looked up at the sky. Then she looked up and down the dim quiet street. There was a street light right opposite the house and something under it attracted her eyes. She leaned over the railing and stared. Lots and lots of white rabbits marching along the street! You should have heard that child gasp.

For a while she just stood and stared, then when Old Granddaddy Lopear turned into their lawn (of course, she didn't know it was Granddaddy Lopear), when she saw him turn in, she ran swiftly into her room.

Billy slept in a crib in the corner of the room and Nancy rushed over to him and grabbed him by the arm.

"Billy," she said, "quick! Wake up and see the Easter Rabbits!"

Billy was half asleep as he tumbled out of his crib and padded behind his sister to the balcony. My, how he rubbed his eyes when he saw the lawn dotted with white dots!

"Easter Rabbits!" said Nancy softly clapping her hands. "I saw 'em marching up the street!"

"Let's go down and catch some," said Billy.

"Oh, no," replied his sister anxiously. "We aren't even supposed to be seeing them. They'd go away without leaving any eggs."

The children watched in silence for awhile then crept happily to bed.

Next morning, of course, they told Mother, Dad and Big Sister Ann about what they had seen, but Nancy could see that they didn't believe her. They thought she had been dreaming only they didn't want to spoil it all for her by saying so right out.

"They was Ehundred of 'em!" said Billy.

Dad, Mother and Ann smiled at each other, then Mother looked a little anxious and changed the subject.

There were eggs hidden all over the house, but Nancy just had to open the front door and peep out. Well, what do you think! In the vestibule was a round white furry object. Nancy seized it in her arms. It was a little rabbit just too tired to walk another step.

Billy came rushing out and by the steps he found three more rabbits.

Ann came out and found a big old rabbit with wilted ears sitting under a forsythia bush. Mother and Dad came out and cried:

"Well, then it wasn't a dream at all!"

"More's the pity," muttered Dad, who was thinking of Billy's remark that there were e-hundred.

As the family stepped out on the lawn, rabbits hopped in every direction, and Nancy and Billy rushed next door yelling to their friends who lived there: "Hey, Bob and Tom, Easter Rabbits! Easter Rabbits!"

The cry brought out their neighbors and all the other children in the neighborhood. A grand rabbit hunt began. Each time a rabbit was caught, the one catching it would run home and put it into the house. So in every home on the block rabbits were shuffling about.

And the strangest part of all was that next day, all the rabbits went away, except one for each house, and those that passed Appleby's Pet Shop noticed that one of the windows was boarded up and straw stuck out between the boards. Bob put his eye to a crack and said he saw a lot of white rabbits inside, just like the Easter Rabbits who had visited them on Easter Day.—Selected.

THE REWARD OF FAITHFULNESS

"He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."—Luke 16:10.

When God wants a man to do important work for His kingdom, He does not call the idle, but He calls those who are already busily engaged in useful service.

Amos was busy with his herds when God called him.
Elisha was plowing in the field.
Joseph was on a mission for his father.
Moses was keeping the flocks in the desert.
Saul was hunting his father's lost asses.
David was tending his father's flocks.
Daniel was serving the king.
Peter and James and John were fishing.
Matthew was collecting the taxes.
Saul of Tarsus was zealously stamping out what he thought was heresy.

So it has always been. Those who are performing well the lowly tasks of life are those whom God calls to the greater tasks. They have been tried and have not been found wanting.

This truth is one that should bring new courage and inspiration to the one who is of necessity engaged in humble tasks. It is not the big task that counts in God's plan for us, but the doing of our task well, whatever it be, whether great or small. The doing well of the lowly task fits one for the accomplishment of the greater. "Thou hast been faithful over a few things; I will make thee ruler over many things."—Rev. William T. McElroy in Christian Advocate.

MORNING PRAYER

Now I wake me up to see
  The glories of the day;
In Thy keeping may I be,
  This do I humbly pray.

To the things of beauty
  Wide open be my eyes;
May I go about each duty
  Ready for any sacrifice.

About my Father's business,
  Master, let me ever be,
And my every effort bless
  To walk hand in hand with Thee.

SACRED SILENCE

(From the Clerical Library)

Time spent in quiet prostration of soul before the Lord is most invigorating. David "sat before the Lord." It is a great thing to hold these sacred sittings, the mind being receptive, like an open flower drinking in the sunbeams, or the sensitive photographic plate accepting the image before it. Quietude, which some men cannot abide because it reveals their inward poverty, is as a palace of cedar to the wise, for along its hallowed courts the King in His Beauty designs to walk.

"Sacred silence! That thou art—
Floodgate of the deeper heart,
Offspring of a heavenly kind,
Frost o' the mouth, and thaw o' the mind."

GREAT PROHIBITION BATTLE IN THE EMPIRE STATE

The fight is on! The battle waxes hotter every week! The bitter wets become more bitter each day. Those who are disloyal to the Constitution, who defy the 18th Amendment and are publicly advocating its nullification because it affects their personal appetites can hardly treat courteously loyal American citizens who stand for defense of the Constitution.

Under the leadership of Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin, New York State President of the W. C. T. U. the various divisions of the Prohibition army of this state are now fighting splendidly for a Prohibition enforcement law. Mrs. Colvin, by sheer force of her ability, has been pushed into leadership. Both friends and foes are amazed at her energy, ability, tact, and resourcefulness in rallying and inspiring the different divisions of the great Prohibition enforcement law. It would seem as though she has "come to the Kingdom for such a time as this," and all recognize her able leadership.

The New York State W. C. T. U. is backing up this work loyally and should have plenty of money with which to "carry on." We wish many of the New York Civic League contributors might send a contribution to the State W. C. T. U., at their headquarters, 156 Fifth Ave., New York City. We are sure every dollar thus contribtued will be wisely expended.—Reform Bulletin.

A BARBARIAN DISEASE

The tree is known by its fruits, and the fruits of betting and gambling are wholly bad. The gambler frequently defrauds his creditors, leaves his family ruined, and tries to repair by fraud what he has lost by chance. There are habitual gamblers who are as much slaves to their besetting sin as any opium-eater. The real seriousness of betting and gambling is realized only when we consider of what mental condition they are symptomatic. An utter lack of itelligent interests, a dreary boredom and discontent, an entire want of conscience about the getting and spending of money—these are the only states of mind that could drive any one to the gambling-table or the sporting columns of the newspapers. To the man who has found his vocation this gadfly of boredom monotony is unknown. When the educated man wants to unstring his bow, there are a dozen or more interested employments of his leisure hours waiting for him. Gambling is a disease of barbarians superficially civilized.—Dean Inge.

A Question

Is religion an inner experience or an outer practice?

It is both. Either separated from the other is only half of religion. The Christian must not only visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, but he must also attend to his inner experience and keep himself unspotted from the world. He must not only act the part of the Good Samaritan, but he must also spend time in his closet with God in prayer. There is a religion of feeling and there is a religion of action, and the two must be united in the same life. Relationship to God and relationship to men must both be recognized.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER
President C. E. Society, High Point College

MARCH 2: "FAITH, AND WHAT IT DOES"

(Consecration Meeting)

Leader's talk.
Special music.
Sentence prayers, closing with the Lord's Prayer.

Leader's Lines

Faith is a very much more important factor in our lives than we sometimes realize. Some people have entirely the wrong idea of faith. Thinking it is something to talk about, pray about when in reality it is something to work for ourselves and others. "Faith without works is dead." We may say that we have faith, but we do not know until this faith has been proved.

The people of different religions place their faith in various objects. We, as Christians, place our faith in Jesus Christ, who enriches and saves life. Our faith is worthless, then, unless it can be linked up with Christ with the purpose Christ has for our lives—unless our purpose can be converted into action. Throughout our discussion we must not fail to associate action with faith.

Acrostic

Someone has prepared this acrostic. Use it on your blackboard:

F-eeling one's way in the dark,
A-ppropriating what is intended for us,
I-nvading the land of "It Can't Be Done,"
T-aking God at His Word,
H ope turned into tangible substance.

You might use these also as topics for short talks.

To Be Answered

1. Differentiate between faith and hope—belief and faith.
2. Show the relationship of prayer and faith.
3. Name some ways by which we may prove our faith.
4. What does faith do for us?
5. Give some examples of faith in the nature world.
6. In whom must our faith be vested?

Quotations

Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen Thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we can not prove;

Thine are these orbs of light and shade;
Thou madest life in man and brute;
Thou madest death; and, lo, Thy foot
Is on the skull which Thou hast made.

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust;
Thou madest man, he knows not why,
He thinks he was not made to die;
And Thou hast made him: Thou art just.

Thou seemest human and divine,
The highest, holiest manhood, Thou.
Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours, to make them Thine.

Our little systems have their day;
They have their day and cease to be;
They are but broken lights of Thee,
And Thou, O Lord, art more than they.

We have but faith: we can not know,
For knowledge is of things we see;
And yet we trust it comes from Thee,
A beam in darkness: let it grow.
—Alfred Tennyson, "In Memoriam."

◆

That which is common to every great act of faith is that it lays hold upon some word of God and holds it against the world; through it, it transcends or overcomes the world, and inherits a promise of something above and beyond the world. The doer of such an act makes himself greater than the world, and though he lost it, in doing it he finds, or gains, or makes himself—W. P. DuBose.

◆

Any religion would be a calamity which quenched this sense of the great human adventure into the unknown. There is no certainty which could be other than dull, hard and materialistic, compared with the infinite hopes and possibilities of this spiritual quest. To have faith in the impossible is precisely the function of religion.—J. A. Spencer.

Sunday schools with enrollment of 101 to 200, $3.00.

Sunday schoosl with enrollment of 201 to 400, $5.00.

Sunday school with enrollment of 401 or more, $7.00.

C. E. Societies with membership under 10, $1.00.

C. E. Societies with membership of 10 or more, $3.00.

It would be greatly appreciated by the Young People's Board if all Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies would send in their assessment at the earliest possible date to F. R. Stout, Treasurer, 821 Rankin Street, Greensboro, N. C.

MARRIED

Craft-Long

Winburn Fletcher Craft, of Leaksville, and Miss Anita V. Long, of Route 1, Tobaccoville, were united in marriage by the writer Saturday evening, February 22, at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr and Mrs. Arthur F. Long. The living room of the home was decorated with jonquils and lighted with bright candles. As the bridal party descended the stairway Miss Lillian Craft, sister of the groom, played the wedding march. Mrs. Ray Lasley, sister of the groom, sang, "I Love You Truly." The ring ceremony of the Methodist Protestant church was used, and the ceremony was witnessed by the immediate relatives of the bride and groom.

The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Long, and received her education at N. C. C. W., Greensboro. She taught in the Lewisville public schools for the past three years. She possesses a charming personality and winsome manners. Mr. Craft was educated at the Lewisville high school and has since traveled extensively. He is now connected with a business concern in Winston-Salem. They have the sincere wishes of a host of friends for a happy and prosperous life. Mr. and Mrs. Craft are members of the M. E. Church.

—To the young lady who inquires why her obituary verses have not been published we would express regret that we cannot often find space for such matter.

—We would call the attention of our pastors and forward-looking laymen to the suggestion of Bro. E. S. Wills that they write more for the Herald on appropriate topics.

—Rev. E. G. Lowdermilk sends an interesting story of a man who prayed much and marked the place with a stone, piling up a monument beside a tree.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Grace Church.—The Woman's Missionary Society met in the chapel on Monday afternoon. Mrs. D. S. Coltrane presided. The devotional was led by Dr. S. K. Spahr. Mrs. H. E. Armstrong, of the First Baptist choir, sang for us. Rev. Milo S. Hinckle, of the Friends church, gave us a timely message on Temperance. He said in part that the problem of prohibition law enforcement can be met by having it written on the hearts of the American people, not merely on the statute books.

Rev. Mr. Hinckle said that the temperance movement should be a religious education problem and that when it became such then the observance of the prohibition law would become as second nature to people. He paid tribute to the sheriff of Guilford county in fearlessly doing his duty in respect to the prohibition law. REPORTER.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—Pastor Way Sunday at 11 o'clock delivered a splendid sermon. In connection with the fine sermon there was a treat in the way of special music. We were glad to have with us Prof. H. G. Easley, a blind musician of Burlington, and Mr. W. T. Way, brother of the pastor, also of Burlington, who rendered some beautiful selections on the piano and cornet.

We were proud of the attendance at Sunday school as well as for the preaching service. We were glad to have a number of visitors from other churches to engage in the church worship with us. Among the visitors were Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Shore and children, of Winston-Salem. We were also glad to have a number of relatives of the pastor with us for both Sunday school and preaching.

Mr. Easley rendered a musical program at our church last Tuesday night. He gave some splendid selections of sacred music and he also made a brief address concerning the blind institution at Raleigh. Mr. Easley has been in our church and community before and he is always welcome. Every one seems to heartily enjoy his fine music on the piano.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet Tuesday night of this week with Mrs. C. G. Hunter. It has been requested that as many members as possible go, as this is to be a very important meeting.

The C. E. Society will meet Sunday after Sunday school to hold its semi-monthly meeting. The leader for the meeting will be Miss Ruth Long. This will be the second meeting of the society since its reorganization. We hope a large number will be present so the secretary can revise the roll and get other business transacted that the president sees fit to bring before the society.

REPORTER.

Corinth, Littleton Circuit.—Our pastor gave us a splendid message Sunday night on "Neglect."

Our pastor's wife has returned from High Point where she has been for three weeks at the bedside of her father, who has been seriously ill. We are glad to report that he is improving. We missed Mrs. Smith at our services while she was away.

Mr. M. J. Morris was called to Norfolk, Va., last week on account of the serious illness of his brother.

The second Sunday night in March we are planning on giving a young people's program. Mrs. Hettie Carter and Mrs. B. F. Morris have charge of the program. The C. E. society is moving on nicely. Miss Virginia Inscoe was the leader Sunday night, and she gave us a good program.

On Monday, March 3, there will be held at Littleton church a pastor's federation meeting, all-day service and lunch. Hope it will be a good crowd there. We understand our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, will be there.

MRS. B. F. MORRIS, Reporter.

Burlington First Church.—Having recently been appointetd to the office of press reporter for this church, I will in my feeble manner endeavor to report the activities of this work from to time.

Attendance last Sunday in the Sunday school was 280 and today records showed we had 307 present, giving us an increase over the previous record. Offering today amounted to $22.38. Our Sunday school is moving onward very well under the leadership of Mr. Floy Rogers, and we are hoping during the spring and summer to build up a large attendance.

Rev. L. W. Gerringer ,our pastor, has been giving us a series of sermons on "Love" for the past few Sundays, and his subject at the morning hour today was "Man's Love for Man." Our pastor brought us a very impressive and helpful message on this theme. The subject at the evening service was "Forgetting Our Best Friend," which proved very interesting and inspiring to the congregation.

The Baraca class was taught by the regular teacher, Mr. C. C. Lindley, today. Attendance was very good and the interest gratifying. Next Sunday this class will have charge of the Sunday school and a full program is being arranged. Each member of the class and Sunday school is urged to be present.

A number of our folks are ill at this time and we are praying that they will soon be well and back at the services of the church.

The annual young people's banquet of the First church was held Friday evening, February 21, at 8:30 o'clock at the hut, with about 125 people present.

The Senior Christian Endeavor society had charge of the banquet. The hut was decorated in memory of George Washington's birthday. Ten tables were arranged in the form of C. E. Red cherries with green stems made of cardboard were the place cards. The walls were decorated with cardboard hatchets and on the front wall hatchets were tacked so as to form the letters C. E.

Tula Paul, president of the society, acted as toastmistress. The program was as follows:

Invocation, Rev. N. G. Bethea.
Songs, everyone.
Welcome, Tula Paul.
Quartet, Junior girls' quartet.
Toast to the visitors, Miss Elizabeth Rogers.
Response, James Robertson.
Reading, Miss Pauline Brown.
Toast to the girls, Rev. N. G. Bethea.
Toast to the boys, Miss Carlyne Crutchfield.
Prizes, presented by Miss Peggy Hinshaw.
Readings, Mrs. J. G. Tingen.
Stunts, Margaret Rogers, Francese Hinshaw, Sarah Thompson, and Tula Paul.
Address, Rev. J. E. Pritchard.
Farewell song, everyone.
Benediction, Rev. L. W. Gerringer.

The junior girls quartet was one of the main features of the evening. This quartet is made up of four girls of this church—Pauline and Christine Thomas, Ganelle Bennett and Margaret Hinshaw, assisted by Miss Lula Riddle at the piano.

Mrs. J. G. Tingen and Miss Pauline Brown kept everybody laughing. They gave several readings, all of which were very much enjoyed by those present.

Miss Elizabeth Rogers gave a wonderful toast to the visitors and Mr. Robertson responded so well that the society felt that the visitors were really glad to be there. The toast to the boys by Miss Carlyne Crutchfield and the toast to the girls by Rev N. G. Bethea were especially good.

The stunt given by Misses Margaret Rogers, Frances Hinshaw, Sarah Thompson and Tula Paul was quite amusing. It was made up of a song, "Go Tell Aunt Patsy" and each one telling jokes on different people in the audience. This also kept everybody laughing. The toastmistress also told jokes on each person on the program for their introduction.

The address delivered by Rev. J. E. Pritchard, of Asheboro, was an interesting one, yet a helpful one. He talked on the subject of "What Is There in Life for You?" Mrs. Pritchard was also present. Mr. Pritchard was a former pastor of the church and everyone was glad to see them and enjoyed having them. There was also another special guest, Miss Kathlyne Paschall, of Manson, N. C. L. A. BRAXTON, Reporter.

Antioch, Mecklenburg Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. Q. L. Joyner, filled his appointment yesterday afternoon with another good sermon. It seems that he gets better each time.

Our attendance is not very large, but we're hoping with the approach of spring that the people will take on new life and realize the mistake they are making in not attending.

There has been quite a bit of sickness in our community this winter which has affected our attendance.

We are very sorry to hear of the serious condition of Mrs. Reed, a former pastor's wife. Hope she is very much improved.

Best wishes to the Herald and its many readers. MRS. MAE MATTHEWS.

Siler City Church.—Our auxiliary met at the church Thursday, the 19th. A good crowd was present and we had a real interesting meeting. Miss Minnie Cooper had charge of the program and in the absence of our president, Mrs. L. L. Woody, who has been sick for some time but is much improved at this writing, Miss Sallie Smith conducted the business part of the meeting. We planned several things to raise some money, of which we are very much in need. Saturday, the 22nd, we had a cake, candy, and pie sale and did real well.

Tonight our Auxiliary and Philathea class will meet together in the Philathea room and have a joint business meeting, after which we will have a social. We are expecting plenty to eat and a good time for everyone.

Our Sunday school is holding up fine for the winter months. If you could see the crowd of smiling boys and girls crowding in the church each Sunday you would think it was summer-time all the year. We had 95 in school yesterday. Mr. Sharpe has already proved himself to be a real wide-awake superintendent.

Dr. Williams filled both morning and evening services the third Sunday. He never preached better than at this time. We feel so proud of our pastor and are so glad the Conference sent him this way.

Our Wednesday evening prayer services are all we could wish for. The attendance is very encouraging, but it could be improved, and we are hoping it will be in the near future.

Our church has been saddened by the death of one of our oldest and best beloved members. Mrs. W. A. Teague departed this life February 11, 1930. She had been sick for more than one year, but it was not thought seriously ill until about eight days prior to her death. We don't know how we can get along without her, as she was always ready to do her part and attended regularly when she was able. Surely, a good woman and neighbor has gone from among us. We know we shall miss her, for she was truly a friend to the unfortunate. She never let her right hand know what her left hand did. She was always in sympathy with her pastor and wanted her church to thrive under his leadership. It was indeed beautiful to see how devoted she was to her church. I have never seen anyone love their church more than she did. She talked so much about the activities of the church in her last days.

The funeral was conducted on February 13, 1930, by her son-in-law, Rev. J. L. Carrick, assisted by her pastor, Dr. Williams, which was her request. Her body was laid to rest in Oakwood Cemetery under the most beautiful profusion of flowers I have ever seen. We extend to the heart-broken husband, son, and daughter our heart-felt sympathy in this sad hour of bereavement.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

Orange Charge.—We expect to have communion services for the second quarter as follows: Union Grove, first Sunday in March; Chestnut Ridge and Hebron, second Sunday in March, and Efland, third Sunday in March.

Our plans for revival meetings are as follows: Union Grove, first Sunday in August, Rev. E. A. Bingham to help; second Sunday in August, Hebron, with Rev. Robert Short to help; fourth Sunday in August, Chestnut Ridge, with Rev. R. S. Troxler to assist.

The Efland meeting this year will begin the third Sunday in July. We are expecting Rev. F. W. Paschall to be with us in this meeting.

Hebron church contributed $6.25 towards Christmas radio for Archie Gray Williams; Efland church and community paid the balance.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

West Forsyth. The third Sunday we were at Pleasant Hill church at 11 a. m. and last Sunday our appointment was with Harmony Grove church at 11 a. m. The attendance at both churches was about as usual, and the interest in the services was good. At Pleasant Hill church we had special music rendered by H. G. Easley, blind musician, and W. T. Way, brother of the pastor, both of Burlington. The people seemed to enjoy the special instrumental music. After the service at Harmony Grove last Sunday we were invited to the home of Bro. J. E. Jarvis where we enjoyed a good dinner and spent a short while during the afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis and their daughter, Mrs. Lillie Vogler, who, with her son, Lindsay Vogler, live with them, are among the faithful members of Harmony Grove church.

Since our last report we have enjoyed visits in the homes of Bro. C. R. Watts and family, members of Tabernacle church, and Bro. R. P. Petree and family, members of Pleasant Hill church. Both families live at Tobaccoville. Bro. Petree is a "radio fan" and during our visit there we heard some splendid music over his radio. We thank Mrs. Petree for the gift of a dozen eggs, from which we hope to raise some young chickens to feed some of our pastors during the revival season next summer.

We regret to report that Mrs. Lou Long, one of the faithful attendants at Pleasant Hill church, is confined to her bed on account of illness. She has been sick for three weeks and her recovery seems to be slow. We hope she will soon be well again. The condition of Mrs. W. W. Whitman, of Tabernacle church, is reported much improved.

Last Saturday morning we conducted the funeral of Mrs. J. S. Speas, member of Pleasant Hill church, who passed to her heavenly reward on Thursday afternoon preceding. She was 82 years of age, and had been a member of Pleasant Hill church for the past 36 years. She was the mother of Prof. W. B. Speas, superintendent of Pleasant Hill Sunday school, and teacher in the high school department of Lewisville public school. Besides the husband, Bro. J. S. Speas, who is nearly 83 years old and in feeble health, only two sons, Walter H., and Wesley B. Speas, survive. Ten grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren; three sisters and three brothers also survive. Rev. S. M. Needham, pastor of the Davidson circuit of the M. E. Church, South, assisted in the funeral services.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with the Baltimore church at 11 a. m. and Stony Knoll church at 2:30 p. m. At Stony Knoll the Lord's Supper for the first quarter will be administered. We hope to have a good attendance at both services.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

First Church, High Point.—The subject of the message chosen by Rev. R. I. Farmer at 11 a. m. was "Christ for the World," and he selected the two texts, "Go ye into all the world and preach my gospel," and "Lo! I am with yo ualways, even unto the end of the world." The minister said in part: "In approaching a Thank-Offering service all texts are missionary, and I must sift out and select the most suitable. The world today is giving more attention to the child than ever before. The true patriot cries out, "Save the country!' The father or mother cries, 'Save the child!' The citizen cries 'Save the city,' but Christ says 'Save the world!' In spite of the colossal work of philanthropic and beneficent institutions through the ages the need is still staggering. There are 1,600,000,000 souls in the world, of whom 600,000,000 have been brought to Christ, leaving 1,000,000,000 in darkness and who have not heard of Christ. There is suffering right here in High Point; men and women wearily tramp the streets seeking working and employment; there are cold homes and hungry women and children. In spite of all this want, few of us know the crushing blight of poverty and ignorance. O, believers in Christ, one-half of the world lives in perpetual hunger. There is a great famine in China, and millions of people will starve if no other country comes to their aid. China's 500 millions have fewer medical doctors than Philadelphia's two millions! and Christ died for them just the same as for you and me. They live in ignorance, superstition, and under the influence of witchcraft and voodoo doctors. Only one-half of one percent of China is Christian, and only one per cent of India. Oh, Methodist Protestants, this second century of our existence challenges us with mighty insistence. Miss Alice Coates, who recently died in Mayo Bros. Clinic at Rochester, Minn., gave more than 30 years of her life to missionary and kindergarten work in Japan. Who will take her place? 'Go teach' because you have received. Dr. Stone called it a personal appeal. We cannot all go, but it is possible to help send somebody else. In the Southern States of America one-tenth of the men are negroes. About 60 years ago we began to preach to them; now they own property, have bank accounts, schools, churches, and are prosperous. The salvation of the world is not in more money, but with it needs is a knowledge of Jesus Christ. I am pleading today for 'Christ for the World' as a solution of our many problems, and He is depending on you and me to send the glad tidings to heathen nations."

This was an eloquent, earnest and impassioned plea for missions, and the annual Thank-Offering of Women's Auxiliary was collected after the sermon and amounted to $74.00.

The different circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held meetings at the following places Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock: No. 5, Mrs. A. M. Rankin, chairman, with Mrs. A. J. Koonce, on Lindsay street; No. 4, Mrs. E. L. Douglas, chairman, with Mrs. A. A. York on Montlieu avenue; No. 6, Mrs. Paul Kennett, chairman, with Mrs. C. C. Robbins, south of the city; No. 7, Mrs. Ben T. Moore, chairman, with Mrs. W. W. Cecil, West Farriss avenue, and No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, with the chairman on Steele street.

Circle No. 2, Miss Young, chairman, will meet Tuesday evening with Miss Mabel Williams at High Point College. No. 1, Miss Margaret Snipes, chairman, will meet Thursday evening with Miss Dorothy Rankin.

The Sabbath school report is as follows: Attendance, 343; collection, $12.90.

The topic for discussion at C. E. meeting last evening was "Lessons from John's First Epistle."

The Men's Brotherhood will have charge of the program at the Wednesday evening supper meeting this week, and Mrs. Snipes' Circle No. 8 will serve. These meetings are proving very popular, about 100 having been in attendance last week.

The February meeting of the local W. C. T. U. is being held this (Tuesday) afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. A. Davis on Woodrow avenue. Rev. R. I. Farmer will make an address.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. A. M. Rankin, Sr., who has been suffering with influenza, is improving.

Miss Claire Douglas, who is a student at the State University, spent the week-end at home with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas.

We regret very much to announce the illness of the little son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hammond, who has pneumonia. The numerous friends of the young parents join in earnest wishes for his early recovery.

Miss Daisy Lee York, who teaches kindergarten work in Aycock school, Greensboro, spent the past week-end with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. A. A. York, on Montlieu avenue.

Mrs. H. U .Oakes and daughters, Mrs. L. H. Harper, Misses Carmen and Elizabeth Oakes, and Mrs. Spencer Jackson and Mrs. L. R. Peacock went to Salisbury Sunday afternoon to attend funeral services for Mr. M. L. Jackson, father of Mr. Spencer Jackson, who died in Washington City on Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Montgomery have returned from a trip by automobile to Kansas City, Mo.

◆

Spring Church.—As I never see a report from this place, I dont' think they have a reporter, so I am taking the privilege of writing a few words. I do not know much about what they are doing, as I live quite a distance away and do not attend many of their services. I had the pleasure of worshiping with these good people last Sunday, and I just want to say that silence does not mean they are not doing anything, for they have a wide-awake Sunday school: one that I am sure they feel proud of. We certainly appreciate having Mr. Shelton with us again this year. He gave us a wonderful message Sunday, taking his text from Luke 22:31-32.

Among the members who were present who do not attend regularly were: Mrs. A. G. Sledge, of Weldon, N. C., and Miss Florence Moody, of Seaboard, N. C.

We are glad to say that Mrs. J. J. Massey, of Pleasant Hill, has recovered from her illness and we hope she will be with us soon.

With best wishes to the Herald and its readers. MRS. W. L. MOODY.

Asheboro.—Attendance at church and Sunday school have been unusuually good here this winter. Last Sunday morning we had more visitors in the congregation than usual. The attendance at Sunday school was 247 and we have set the goal for next Sunday morning at 275.

On one Sunday sometime ago we had 260. Two new industries will open in Asheboro within the next few months that will bring quite a goodly number of new families to town and we are hoping to get our share of them. In fact, our people are all the time on the lookout for the new folks that come to town.

Some time ago we reached our goal for the college; now we have reached it for the Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lutterloh and small son, who moved to Asheboro last fall, joined our church and have been so active, moved to East Green street, High Point, last week, where they will run a store. We are hoping they will not stay long in High Point, but soon come back to Asheboro.

Mrs. Hal W. Walker, our choir director, and Mrs. W. M. Ridge, our pianist, have both been real sick for the past week. Mrs. Walker is improving now and we trust Mrs. Ridge will soon be better. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who was spending a month in Florida, was called home last week on account of the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Walker. Mrs. J. N. Garrett, of Yadkin College, has been confined to her room for two or three weeks at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Holder, here.

Mount Pleasant, North Davidson.—Although the weather was disagreeable the past Sunday, there was a very good number present at Sunday school. Preaching at the 11 o'clock hour. Rev. H. L. Powell delivered a fine sermon. At the beginning of the service he talked about 15 minutes to the children. His text was an egg. He impressed upon them very deeply that a boy or girl must have a solid foundation, as well as an egg. And that the boy or girl is the beginning of a man or woman. The children enjoyed his talk very much.

We are very sad to report that one of our number passed away in the early Sunday morning, February 23rd, Kermit Hilton, aged 12 years, two months and 20 days, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kernie Hilton, of near Thomasville. He suffered only a short illness of three weeks. The entire week before he died he kept asking if he would be well enough to go to church on Sunday and hear Bro Powell's talk on the egg. But instead he had gone home to meet his Heavenly Father. Oh, how sad! He was a bright, obedient child; everyone loved him. He will be missed by his schoolmates, Sunday school mates, but most of all in the home. Impressive funeral services were conducted at Mount Pleasant M. P. church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. H. L. Powell, pastor of the church, assisted by Rev. Mr. Cox, a retired minister of the Reformed church.

Mrs. Minnie Rouse and son, Mr. Carl Burton and sister, were among the visitors who worshiped with us Sunday.

There is quite a bit of sickness among our church people at this time.

Clark's Chapel, Weaverville.—Our hearts were gladdened as we sat and watched the little boys and girls as well as the grown-up folks coming through the mud and rain to Sunday school. It made us feel that interest at heart brought them out, and trust they will always be eager to be taught. The school is moving on very nicely, everything taken into consideration. Sickness and inclement weather have held things back.

We were delighted to have our pastor, Bro. T. E. Pearce, fill the pulpit at the 11 o'clock service and begin his work in our midst. He preached a splendid and inspiring sermon from these words: "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Acts 26:19.

We were glad to have with us for the preaching service some of the folks from Salem church and also the Weaverville church.

The first quartely conference will convene in the Weaverville church Wednesday night, March 5, immediately after regular prayer service. The hour wasn't stated. Trusting all three churches will be well represented and any other person or persons that are interested in the work will be present, and that the spirit of co-operation will spread from heart to heart and that this will be the best year in many.

Mr. Pearce delivered the message to the church from Bro. Geo. L. Curry. We thank him for his interest and wish for him a splendid year's work.

Why Not Charge.—This charge has paid in cash to date on dollar per member $61; on A. C. B., $13. This statement is not given as an expression of pride, but to state what has been done so far.

On last night a group from Why Not church came over and presented the writer an elegant birthday cake. Not being expert guessers as to age, they illuminated the cake with 16 candles.

In last Sunday at Seagrove Mrs. Carl King of the M. E. church at Ellerbe joined by letter. WM. H. NEESE, Pastor.

Pleasant Grove.—We are very sorry to note our pastor is right sick and was not able to be with us Sunday. We are hoping and praying that he may be able to be out again soon. Since Brother Williams was not able to preach, Rev. P. S. Kennett, from High Point College, preached for us Sunday morning. He brought a very helpful message on the "Working Church Successful," from Revelation 3:2.

The Senior Christian Endeavor had a social Monday night with Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Payne. After playing several games, Mrs. Payne served delicious refreshments.

The Brotherhood met Saturday night with Mr. I. W. Burton. Mr. Homer Ragan, of Thomasville, made a short talk.

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Cecil have been on the sick list for some time and Mrs. Cecil is not much better. We are hoping they will soon be able to be out again.

The Ladies' Aid will hold their regular meeting next Wednesday with Mrs. O. W. Cecil. REPORTER.

Albemarle.—Our Sunday school is steadily growing. Last Sunday we had a total of 219 present. This is the largest number we have ever had present at one time. Rev. Mr. Anderson's class led the number with 54 men in the class.

Sunday marked the close of the contest which the Men's Bible clas has been having. Mr. Smith's team won the most points by a good majority; consequently Mr. Morgan's team will entertain them at a chicken stew, which will be served in the dining hall of the church on Friday night of this week. We are not sure whether the cooking will be done by the men or women, but at any rate, the eats will be worth coming for, if you have to walk. Every member of the class is urged to be present and enjoy the get-together.

The young people of the church had charge of the program at the 11 o'clock hour Sunday. The singing was especially good and we see no reason why they should not do this more often.

At the close of the morning service the opportunity was given for pledges and donations to the Dollar a Member campaign with very gratifying results. Those who can, and have not already done so, are asked to bring in their donation next Sunday.

Mrs. C. S. Moton met with 22 of the junior age boys and girls of the church Sunday evening at 6 o'clock and organized a Golden Links

Society. An organization of this kind has been needed in our church for several years and we feel that it will mean much to the hearts and lives of our boys and girls. Mrs. Moton will be their leader and she will make a good one, as she has filled this place before. Meetings will be held each Sunday evening a 6 o'clock.

Friends of Mrs. Alice Shoe, who is the mother of Mrs. D. J. Hatley are indeed glad to know that she is home again, after spending two weeks in a Charlotte hospital, where she had a cataract removed from her left eye. She is getting along nicely and her sight is much improved.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Hatley and young son, Joe Westley, spent the week-end in Rowland, visiting Mrs. Hatley's brother.

Mr. S. R. Green, who is teacher of the Women's class, is spending several weeks with his daughter, Mrs. Val Morgan, in Raleigh. The members of his class miss him very much, although we are hoping he has an enjoyable visit.

Shiloh.—You have heard little from the Shiloh writer this year. She has been kept at home right much by sickness in the family, and it's very hard to report the activities of your church when you are not in vital touch with them. The Lord being willing, we will try to report oftener.

Shiloh has enjoyed her two Sunday morning church services each month since January 1. We have long felt the great need for more preaching, to hear the "sweet story" oftener. So now Bro. R. S. Troxler, our beloved pastor, preaches each first and third Sunday morning at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. R. S. Troxler has been confined to her home by illness for a few weeks. We are glad to know that she is slowly improving, and sincerely hope she may soon be able to mingle with us again. She is a good worker and is greatly missed when forced to drop out for even a short time.

Our Sunday school roll has grown steadily since the first of the year, at which time we always make a new roll. We now have enrolled about 325, with an attendance on last Sunday of 290. We hope to continue to grow, and enlarge our field of service.

Mr. B. F. Sink and his chorus of young people came and gave us a rare treat of songs last Sunday. Welcome; come again.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Greer's Chapel.—We, the little church of God with all our aims to press forward to a higher kingdom, are as a whole progressing nicely, with the aid of our beloved pastor, Rev. R. S. Troxler.

Sunday, Februry 23, our pastor preached at 11 o'clock, which was enjoyed by a large crowd. He always brings us good messages.

Both our church and community were saddened by the death of one of our beloved members, Mrs. Lilia Byerly, who passed away February 21. She lived 71 years, four months and six days. We miss Grandma Byerly, as we called her; yes, we miss her, miss her presence, for to know her was to love her. But we all know God above knows best, and she is at the place of rest and the place we all long for in the sweet by and by.

Funeral services were conducted at Greer's Chapel Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, by Rev. R. S. Troxler, pastor, assisted by Rev. Mr. Myers, pastor of Yadkin Methodist church. Interment was at Greer's Chapel cemetery.

Enfield.—The Council of Religious Education of the First District met Saturday afternoon, February 15, at 1 o'clock at the parsonage at Brinkleyville. The meeting was presided over by Miss Ethel Garrison; Dr. Johnson conducted the devotionals. The board of the council consists of Miss Ethel Harrison, president; Miss Winnie Burt, vice-president; Mrs. E. I. Bellamy, secretary; Dr. Johnson, Rev. H. L. Fogleman and Rev. J. C. Auman, advisers, all of whom were present at this meeting.

Places, time and faculty for Leadership schools were discussed. It was decided to try to arrange for such schools at Aurelian Springs, Spring Church and Enfield, and all other churches send those wishing to take the courses to nearest of above places.

All church leaders, Sunday school teachers and officers and any others who desire to, who are 16 years old and over are eligible to take any of the courses; however, among other things certain educational requirements must be met to secure credits; you can take this matter up with the board of advisers if you wish specific information. The school will welcome students of any denomination.

There are already around eight leaders of first district qualifying themselves as instructors to help carry on the school and others will begin in a week or so.

The dates for each school were suggested, but for fear changes may be made we will withhold these until definitely decided upon

We trust all who are interested in the growth and progress of their church and Sunday school will seek information concerning this Leadership School of Religious Education and shall consider enrolling.

MRS. E. I. BELLAMY, Secretary.

Midway, Haw River Circuit—Our attendance at Sunday school and church services has been very good this winter, and we hope as spring opens up that we will still have better attendance.

The C. E. Society is still active and doing good work. An interesting program was given last night with Margarite Bartee as leader. There was a good crowd out. The meeting was held at the home of Bro. John Bartee, Next Sunday the meeting will be at the church just after Sunday school.

Bro. Trollinger was with us yesterday, and we had a very impressive service, it being communion day. We worshiped in singing several of the good old-time songs, prayers and Scripture reading, after which the Lord's Supper was administered, of which the most of the congregation partook. We were glad to have Mrs. Trollinger and children worship with us Sunday.

Enfield.—The men's adult Bible classes of the different churches of Enfield have the custom of assembling together on the third Sunday in each month in what is called the "Union Bible Class." In order to assure its continue and welfare it has a regular set of officers which are elected once each year. Recently Bro. H. M Whitaker, a former superintendent of our Sunday school and a member of the Enfield church, has been made the president of this class. The idea is very popular among the men of Enfield and is doing much to create the spirit of unity among our Christian laymen.

On Saturday of last week Mr. and Mrs. P. S. Bellamy returned from a two weeks' vacation to Florida. They stated ythey had good weather and a very enjoyable trip.

Mrs. Sam Pierson also has recently returned from a trip to Florida.

Last Sunday morning about 10 o'clock, unannounced, yet more or less expected because of her age and feeble health, Mrs. Mary A. Collins breathed her last and her sojourn on earth came to an end. Up to almost the very last she was not thought to be in a dying condition. Although she was not expected to live much longer, yet that the end was so near no one was able to realize. On Saturday she was up and greeted a number of her friends who came to see her. True are the words: "In the midst of life we are in death."

She was a life-long member of the Methodist Protestant Church and loved it dearly. While her age and health would not permit her to attend church regularly during her latter years, yet the fruit of her life, which she never ceased to bear, was an evidence of her Christian character and love for God. The host of relatives and friends who came to pay their last respect was a proof of the high esteem in which she was held by those who knew her.

Miss Mary B. Collins, the only surviving member of the family, has our deepest sympathy and sincere prayer in the adjustment which must follow in the absence of mother.

The funeral service was conducted by the writer, assisted by Dr. T. M. Johnson.

A REMARKABLE MAN

Mr. Gaither Kennedy, well known Rutherford county citizen who built a rock monument to show his belief in prayer, died Wednesday at his home in the Ferry section of Rutherford, three miles below Henrietta.

Funeral services were held yesterday at Floyd's Crek Baptist church.

An interesting sidelight in Mr. Kennedy's life was revealed by ministers on the day of his funeral. Mr. Kennedy was a strong believer in prayer and the carrying of his troubles to his Maker by prayer. When troubles and afflictions came into his home or those of his friends and neighbors he had a habit of going to a tree near his residence, away from everyone else, where he prayed alone. Years ago, it is said, he started placing a small stone at the foot of the tree each time he prayed there. As the years passed by the pile of stones gradually grew larger and at the time of his death this week it was said that there were scores and scores of stones piled about his prayer tree.

Mr. Kennedy, who was 80 years of age, married a sister of the late R. R. Haynes, textile magnate and one of Rutherford's outstanding citizens in his day.

The funeral services were conducted by Dr. Zeno Wall, of Shelby, and Rev. T. M. Hester and Rev. Z. D. Harrill.

(Died February 19th; buried next day. Attended meeting at Stephens Tabernacle almost up to time of death.—E. G. L.)

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Lewey

Mrs. Creasy Lewey passed from labor to reward January 17, 1930. Age 78 years, 9 months, 25 days.

Mrs. Lewey joined Frieden's Lutheran Church when but a girl and remained a faithful member of that church until called to her reward. While not a member of our church at Gibsonville, she lived near by and was a friend to us, being interested in all good things in her neighborhood. Then, too, she has one daughter, Mrs. P. B. Moore, who has been a member of Gibsonville Methodist Protestant Church for a number of years.

This good woman's husband, W. R. Lewey, preceded her to the spirit world many years ago and she was left to take care of several children, H. S., Malinda, Alice Lewey and Mrs. Moore. She did her duty by them and left them a rich heritage in the memory that she was a faithful mother. She had been in failing health for several years, when about ten days before her death she suffered severely before giving over to the grim monster, death.

The number of friends attending on a very unfavorable day and the many floral offerings gave evidence of the high esteem in which she was held as her body was laid to rest in the cemetery of the church of which she had so long been a faithful member.

To the bereaved children and only sister, Mrs. W. T. Baldwin, we offer our sympathy and prayers that the One "who knoweth our frame" may give comfort in this hour of sorrow.

Graves

John Seymour Graves passed away at his home in Southern Alamance County, near Mt. Hermon M. P. Church, February 13, at the age of 66 years, three months, and ten days.

Funeral services were conducted from Mt. Hermon church two days later. Rev. J. E. Carroll was in charge. Interment followed in the local cemetery.

Mr. Graves is survived by two daughters—Mrs. Isaac Hillard, Snow Samp, Route 3; and Mrs. Claud Moser, Graham, Route 1; two sisters—Mrs. Also Isley, Trollingwood; and Mrs. Monroe Payne, Burlington, Route 7; and by two brothers—Mr. Eli Graves, Saxapahaw, Route 1, and Mr. George Graves, Graham, Route 1. He is also survived by three grandchildren.

For several years Mr. Graves had been a member of Mt. Hermon Methodist Protestant Church.

McPherson

Bro. Gray McPherson passed away February 13, 1930, aged 78 years, six months, and 12 days.

His wife, Sarah McPherson, (nee Terry) had preceded him more than two years to the grave. There survive him two daughters and four sons, as follows: Mrs. Newsome Lindley, Mrs. Luther Foust, Dr. R. G. McPherson, Lou McPherson, Tully McPherson, and Enoch McPherson. There are several grandchildren.

He was a loving father, a faithful and loyal member of the church. He was a regular and punctual attendant at Sunday school, prayer meeting and all religious services at his church. He was absent only one Sunday in a year from Sunday school.

His life has been a great inspiration to both old and young, especially in prayer meeting, where he never failed to witness for Jesus, and encouraged others to do so.

He was a lover of music and would often suggest some of the old songs to be sung. In his home he always gave his friends warm welcome and often requested their prayers. He prayed much himself.

In summing up a long and useful career we would say he was not slothful in business, he was fervent in spirit and was dedicated fully to the service of his Lord. He was a farmer of a progressive type and had succeeded well. He gave cheerfully and liberally for all religious causes. His charities and benevolences were not limited by church assessments.

His benign influence will live on in his home, community and church.

A large concourse attended the last rites, showing the esteem in which he was held. Loving friends paid tribute with beautiful flowers.

The funeral was conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. A. Burgess. The remains were laid to rest in Bethel cemetery.

In Memory of Rev. P L. Kinnaman

Gone is now our pastor,
  Up to that land above,
Up to the land of sunshine,
  Into that land of love.

Early on Thursday morning
  His soul took the heavenly flight
When this world was wrapped in darkness,
  His soul was wrapped in light.

Oh, comfort us in our sorrow,
  For our pastor's in the grave;
Oh, comfort us, Thou who takest away,
  Thou who life unto him gave.

We could not help but cry,
  But God knew what was best;
And we know by the life he lived
  That our pastor is now at rest.

Yes, he will be missed by his flock;
  He was more to them than a friend,
Always advised them for the best,
  On up until the end.

How sad it is to think about!
  He has gone forevermore;
But heaven to us is sweeter,
  For he is on the other shore.

His preaching to us has ceased,
  He'll tell us of Christ no more,
For he today is waiting for us
  On that happy, golden shore.

In the home and in the church
  There is a vacant chair,
But a new one has been filled
  In Heaven so bright and fair.

MRS. ELLEN YOW.

Bethel church has sustained another heavy loss in the death of John Gray McPherson. As a farmer and churchman and community builder he was a leader. He was also one of the oldest men of the community. We are sorry to lose him. He was its pastor's friend.

A Tribute of Love

Death entered our midst for the first time since the Woman's Auxiliary of the M. P. church, Siler City, N. C., was organized, and has taken one of our oldest and most loyal members, Mrs. W. A. Teague, who was called to her reward on February 11, 1930.

We realize in her death we have lost a true friend, one who was always interested in all the activities of her church. She was always loyal to her society and attended every meeting when her health would permit. We know we shall miss her presence and general financial assistance, as she was always interested in that part of the work.

She was a faithful member of the Clyde Auman Circle and they had met with her in her home the day she was taken sick. That was the last active work she ever did in this world. She lived only eight days from that day.

We feel that our Auxiliary has suffered a great loss, but our loss is her eternal gain. Her death has brought sorrow to her family, her neighbors, and to her church.

Therefore, be it resolved: First, that we bow in humble submission to our blessed Master's divine will;

Second, that we extend our deepest heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved husband, son, and daughter, and commend them to the Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the broken-hearted family, a copy be placed upon the minutes of the Woman's Auxiliary of which she was a member and a copy be sent to the Missionary Record and the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. J. A. COOPER,
MRS. D. L. JOHNSON,
MRS. J. E. FOX.

Mr. I. F. Russell sent us his personal check for $50.00 at Thanksgiving. He and Mrs Russell and other friends came to see us last Sunday and took dinner with us and looked over the place, and when leaving he handed us another check for $25.00. If our laymen throughout the Conference would do as well our stringent conditions here would be changed and our burdens would be lightened.

The one who is listed as "A Friend" sent along his check for $10.00 in answer to our S. O. S. call of last week, and asked that his name be withheld. While we think it would do good to publish his name, out of deference to his wishes we withhold it. But we do wish you to know that about the biggest-hearted man among us sent us that ten dollars, and if anything likee all our people would open their purses half as wide as this good friend did our needs would be met for months to come.

We thank you for your help and may God richly bless each of you.

Our urgent call for immediate relief financially has gone to each pastor and to each Sunday school superintendent, and through the Herald last week to each of its readers. We are hoping and trusting and believing that the Lord through you will do great things for us the first and second Sundays in March. Tell the people of our needs, give them a chance and they will respond.

Faithfully yours in His service,

WEALTH UNTOLD

Seek your treasure and you'll find
It exists but in the mind,
Wealth is but the power that hires
Blessings that the heart desires;
And if these are mine to hold
Independently of gold,
And the gifts it can bestow,
I'm richer than I know.

Rich I am if, when I pass
'Mid the daisies in the grass,
Every daisy in my sight
Seems a jewel of delight!
Rich am I, if I can see
Treasure in the flower and tree,
And can hear 'mid forest leaves
Music in the summer eves;

If the lark that sings aloud,
On the fringes of the cloud,
Scatters melodies around
Fresh as raindrops on the ground;
And I bless the happy bird
For the joy it has conferred;
If the tides upon the shore
Chant me anthems evermore;

And I feel in every mood
That life is fair and God is good!
I am rich if I possess
Such a fund of happiness,
And can find where'er I stray
Humble blessings on the way,
And deserve them ere they're given
By my gratitude to heaven.

Russian Folly

In Russia land they try to do
What can't be done at all!
They might as well go butt their heads
Against a granite wall.

They try to rob the soul of man
Of noblest powers and parts;
To narrow range of human thought,
Reduce the size of hearts.

The soul is free and can't be bound:
In vain do men forbid
That thoughts shall rise or feelings flow—
They come and can't be hid.

The Two Ways of Philosophy

Philosophy seeks the explanation of all things. In its quest it has two ways, a downward way and an upward way. Its downward way leads to the mud and slime of materialism. It makes matter first and would derive all else, including the mind of man, from primeval material elements. Beginning with matter, it never finds any mind save the fleeting mind of man, a flashlight from a material battery composed of brain cells. It does not discover the infinite mind of God, but denies its existence. Materialism and atheism are linked together.

But philosophy's upward way leads to very different results. Instead of deriving mind from matter, it derives matter from mind, and finds in the existence of the Infinite Mind adequate cause for all that exists.

The first view is not satisfactory either logically or psychically. The second view is satisfactory both logcially and sentimentally. We feel that it ought to be true and is true. God is the first being, and matter is only a creature of His made to serve His purpose. Man is not a mere compound of material elements: he is the offspring of God, with power through Christ to become a son of God.

President Andrews' Resignation

The papers yesterday announced the resignation of Dr. R. M. Andrews as President of High Point College. He found the financial burdens too heavy to bear them longer. No doubt he has gone to bed many a night with an anxious heart if not an aching head. If he were not of sanguine temperament he could not have stood the strain so long. It is really harder to be president of an unendowed college than to be governor of a state or president of a nation. The state and the nation provide the means to carry out their programs. The unendowed college does not. We do not know the average length of the college president's term of office, but we suspect that it does not exceed the time Brother Andrews has served—six years. The preservation of his health probably demanded that he do what he has done. The trustees regretfully accepted his resignation, but asked him to carry on the work until August. They appointed a committee to find a new president and announced that the work of the college would go on uninterruptedly. Brother Andrews' devotion to the college for six years has helped much to bring the institution to its present place of prominence and to secure to it its goodly number of students. As he retires he will have the grateful appreciation of those who know his real worth to the enterprise in various ways. He has some of the martyr's spirit and you need not expect ever to hear from his lips words of bitterness toward others for their failure to lend support. His heart will be gladdened by the thought that he was able and willing to do as much for the college as he did. May he have equally good success in whatever field of service he may be called upon to enter.

Church Members and Hard Times

Hard times serve to reveal a difference between two classes of church members. Those of one class cut off their contributions to the church. They say to themselves, "I may not have enough for myself if I give anything to you. I will therefore withhold." They leave entirely to others the support of the church. Instead of growing in grace they shrink and shrivel. Members of the other class, if they cannot pay as much as before, still pay according to their ability, and they continue to grow in generosity and in every virtue.

Church people should remember that the church is not the cause of hard times. We would have hard times such as we never saw before if the light of the church were extinguished. Giving to the church and its institutions is one way of giving to God. When did a man ever impoverish himself by giving to God? When was a generous righteous man ever forsaken or his children found begging bread? You can safely give to God's work your bottom dollar.

—The ministers of the central division, about thirty of them, met in Gibsonville last Monday. Rev. H. W. Maier presided. Rev. R. I. Farmer led in the devotions. The theme of the day was Pentecost. The principal addresses were made by Dr. Dixon on "The First Pentecost" and Dr. J. D. Willimas on "Pentecost Today." Brother Dixon spoke of the coming of the Holy Spirit with demonstration of power; Brother Williams spoke of the continued presence and operation of the Holy Spirit in the world. There were many earnest short prayers and there was some discussion of practical problems in ministers' work. Dr. S. K. Spahr prayed a most earnest prayer for any perplexed or discouraged ministers. The meeting was one of good fellowship and inspiration. President Maier aims to make each meeting one of especial value. He suggested that the ministers' wives be invited to the next meeting three months hence which suggestion was adopted heartily. The church at Gibsonville had been remodeled and much improved since we saw it last.

WHY HIGH POINT COLLEGE

By J. F. McCulloch

(First of a series of articles provided by our Denominational Board of Education)

When I was a student in Adrian College I was called on in a mass meeting of faculty, students and citizens held in the College Chapel one night, to make an extemporaneous speech in the interest of Adrian College. I do not recall all the foolish things I said, but I do recall one. I said I thought it the true policy of the Methodist Protestant Church to concentrate its attention on Adrian College and not think of any other college. I was sincere in my statement and gave evidence of it by bringing five students from North Carolina to Adrian College.

But passing years brought to me more discretion. I reconsidered the educational policy of the denomination and reached the conclusion that several colleges are needed. Distance lends enchantment, but it also lends difficulties and obstacles. Colleges exist for the church and not the church for the colleges, and the colleges should be so placed that they wlil render the largest service to the church and the world.

When West Lafayette College was started in Ohio I had doubt of the propriety of the effort, because it was so near Adrian College. But the case of North Carolina was far different. There was a considerable body of Methodist Protestants here with no church college nearer than Western Maryland College. On my way to North Carolina to try to provoke our people to the good work of building a college of their own I stopped in Westminster, Maryland, and told Dr. T. H. Lewis, then president of the college there, the object of my going. He said: "Why can't we do your work?" My answer was: "Why haven't you done it?" The fact was that only a few—ten or twelve—North Carolina students had been finding their way to Western Maryland College each year. The church in North Carolina was not being served by the colleges of the denomination. Its young people were either going to the State University, to colleges of other denominations, or in many cases neglecting their collegiate education. We have a good state university and a number of good denominational colleges, but they do not consider it their business to develop in their students loyalty and devotion to the Methodist Protestant Church. It did not seem possible properly to care for our own young people without providing more convenient means of higher education. Nothing that could be thought of seemed to meet the demands of the case like a college of our own.

After a prolonged discussion of the matter the time came when conditions seemed to favor the undertaking. High Point offered a site of sixty acres and $100,000 in cash. A Greensboro brother made a munificent offer of $100,000 to be paid later for endowment fund. A canvass of the church in this state was made which has resulted in adding over $200,000 to the treasury.

We were encouraged in the undertaking by the fact that two denominations in the state with less numerical strength than ours have for years been conducting successful colleges. I refer to the Friends and the Christians.

The attendance of students in High Point College has been gratifyingly large since the first year. This is in part accounted for by the splendid buildings erected. They are of fire-proof structure as well as imposing in appaerance. We might have built cheaper buildings and thus avoided some of our present indebtedness, but in the long run I believe it will be seen to have been good policy to build as we have. It is better to have buildings that awaken respect than buildings that excite contempt. We do not feel that we have been extravagant in building. Methodist Protestants from a distance passing High Point College will not be ashamed to learn that this is a Methodist Protestant institution. We believe High Point College will bear good testimony for the Methodist Protestant Church.

You ask me to describe the movement for High Point College from its beginning. That is hard to do. In this scheme of things nothing seems to have either a beginning or an ending. Everything has its predecessor and its successor. Ideas are mightier than men or things. Ideas are cables that draw men along. The idea of a Methodist Protestant college in North Carolina led to the building of Yadkin College and Jamestown Female College. These institutions passed away but the idea persisted. A man came to the North Carolina Conference in 1892 offering land to serve as a site for a new college. The cable was drawing him. His proposition was printed and somebody sent me a copy of it. I was then in Adrian, Michigan, having severed my connection with Adrian College without a prospect. I received a telegram and a letter from North Carolina offering me school positions; I also rereceived an invitation into the ministry of another denomination. I felt that neither of these positions was for me. But the report from North Carolina arrested by attention. I do not know to this day who sent it, but it awoke in my mind a question as to my duty to my native state. I decided to go to North Carolina and investigate the possibilities. About the next day after arriving there I received a call to the pastorate of our church in Fairmont, W. Va. It seemed the thing to do and I accepted it. However, I tarried in North Carolina long enough to secure from a Presbyterian brother the offer of land in the city of Greensboro for a college site. This I held till our Annual Conference met in November. I came from Fairmont to present it and the general proposition that we embark on a new college enterprise. The proposition was received most favorably and every member of the Conference arose to indicate his purpose to co-operate in the movement. A committee of five leading ministers and laymen was appointed to manage the enterprise. Prospects looked fine. I went back to Fairmont and prepared some booklets for the use of pastors and others in securing pledges to the building fund. The committee on management notified me that they would meet in June. I came all the way from Fairmont to meet with them. I found that they had done some work; they had published a brief letter of appeal in the Methodist Protestant. To this they had not received a single response. I could make a little better report: one minister, Rev. W. C. Hammer, had obtained one pledge for the building fund. The committee informed me that they were ready to abandon the enterprise as impracticable. I replied: "Brethren, it takes men of faith to bring things to pass." They admitted that that that was true, and implied that they did not have the necessary faith. They informed the Presbyterian brother that his land could not be accepted, and thus ended the Annual Conference's first participation in the enterprise.

I saw that the undertaking was indeed impractical without some more ready means of communication with our people. We needed a conference church paper, and when I was invited by the President of the Annual Conference and others to undertake the publication, it did not take me long to gain the consent of mind to do it. At the close of my year with the good Fairmont people I came to North Carolina to publish Our Church Record, though they were kind and indulgent enough to ask me to continue with them. Uncle Max Fleming was the first subscriber of the new church paper.

The next step was to find a man who would pledge a large sum for the new college. Brother J. C. Roberts, one of the noblest laymen I have ever known, responded to my appeal with a bequest of $10,000. This served to inspire to a more earnest effort and fifty or sixty thousand dollars were subscribed. Now the trouble was that too many places wanted the college and there was a disastrous splitup over the question of location.

This necessitated delay and the coming on of the World War caused more delay, but finally enough of our people had gripped the cable and the college was launched. We do not know which is greater, the gratification with its work or the distress over its debt. Its debts are due the building fund and the current expense fund. We believe some way should be found to make the income meet the outlay and that more earnest efforts should be made to pay off the debts.

LOOSE-REIN PRACTICE OF COLLEGES

I have been thinking for some time of having something to say through the HERALD on the "loose-rein" practice of colleges in the management of male students. Dr. Smith's leaflet, "Turned Loose on Main Street," has just some into my hands, and it expresses so fully my sentiments on the matter, that I am letting him say it for me. Dr. Smith is an authority on this subject; I am not. But I am a father of two boys, and if I am fortunate enough to send them to college, I do not want them "turned loose" when they get there. They need the "pressure of the reins" then, as they have needed it at home, and to remove that pressure just at a time when they are ushered into a new world, with new environments, new associations, new opportunities, and new temptations, seems to me to be a dangerous and unjustifiable shifting of responsibility. It is my opinion that thousands of parents in North Carolina feel that way about it, and that they would like to send their boys to a college that hedges them about with reasonable and safe-guarding restrictions.

Dr. Smith's leaflet follows:

A Dangerous Gift

During my boyhood I once saw a safe, dependable family horse left alone on Main Street with no hand on the reins. He first began to walk, then to run, and in a few minutes had endangered many lives, torn the carriage to pieces, and so injured himself that he had to be shot. Liberty is like fire; under wise control an incalculable blessing, uncontrolled, an appalling agent of destruction. In this case sudden freedom from accustomed control, with no preparation for its proper use, brought a useful career to a speedy and disastrous close. Liberty to the unprepared is always intoxicating, often fatal.

Our Sucidal Folly

Every year a hundred thousand boys are suddenly "turned loose" on the swarming Main Street of American college life. Most of them have never taken a step without feeling the pressure of the reins. In the "well-managed" home the careful parents get the boy out of bed, see that he is properly dressed, send him to school on time, control his visits downtown or to the picture-show, make him study every night, and see to it that he doesn't omit church or Sunday School.

In the boarding-school, especially of the military type, the pressure of the reins is even more constant and compelling. Every waking hour is governed, every act under compulsion. The more nearly the individuals become passive cogs on the wheels of a resistless and smooth-running machine, the more perfect the "training" is supposed to be.

Meanwhile, to save trouble and protect themselves from criticism, the colleges insist on the fiction that these unprepared products of such a system are "college men" and in nine cases out of ten do not even profess to hold the reins.

The Slaughter of the Innocents

It is no wonder, therefore, that when these hundred thousand young colts find themselves next September "turned loose on Main Street," thousands of them will run wild, smash their college course to smithereens, and be "shot" by the college authorities or by the home folks before the first year of their great adventure is over.

Incredible as it may seem, some colleges seem proud of their failures, and point to their piles of corpses as evidence of their "high standards." That each represents a wrecked college career and a sorrowing home seems never to occur to them. It is very, very hard and very troublesome to train such raw colts to a proper use of freedom. It is so much easier and such an armor against criticism to lay the responsibility entirely on the colts, shoot the runaways by the score, and call the whole murderous process a useful, necessary, and providential elimination of the unfit.

So the slaughter of the innocents goes steadily on, the schools holding the reins tighter, and the colleges abandoning them more completely, with every passing year, with such disastrous effect that of the hundred thousand hopeful aspirants who begin their college training next September less than one in three will attain the desired college diploma.

To the Boy Preparing for College

You cannot reform these stupid methods, but you can, if you have enough brains and backbone, recognize the danger and keep yourself out of the college graveyard.

Let me give you here and now a four-question entrance examination, worth more, I assure you, in testing your fitness for success at college than a ream of entrance certificates or a hatful of "Carnegie units."

The Entrance Examination

Question 1. Are you man enough to get up promptly every morning, get to your meals and to school on time every day, and go to bed at a fixed hour every night, all of your own initiative, without a word of reminder from anybody?

Test your ability by making an arrangement with your parents that for a trial month you are to be left entirely to yourself in these matters, keeping a strict record of your "oversleep," "tardies," etc. If you stand the test, continue the arrangement indefinitely in the joy of real manhood. If you fail, stay away from college till you are more of a man. You are not yet "ready."

Question 2. Are you man enough to go off by yourself every day and study all your lessons till you know them, without having any one tell you to get to work?

At college nobody "makes" you study. If you haven't grit enough to do it of your own accord, you will soon be off Main Street in the college graveyard. Your excuses will seem flawless to you but, alas, not to your hard-hearted college executioners, who have a special thirst for the gore of brilliant excuse-makers. If you cannot "pass" this part of the entrance-exam, therefore, save yourself by staying away from college till you are better prepared.

Question 3. Are you man enough to carry loose change in your pocket without spending it?

Childish lack of self-control in handling money ruins more college careers than liquor and gambling combined. Overspending, buying on credit, borrowing, deceiving the home-folks—then the inevitable exposure and smash-up. It is an everyday tragedy on Main Street.

Test your ability by asking your father to give you a cash "salary" in a lump sum at the beginning of each month. Agree with him on a written list of personal expenses it is meant to cover. If, with this money in your pocket, you cannot help "running out" before the month is over, you are not old enough financially to be turned loose on Main Street.

Question 4. Are you man enough, when another fellow's answer is in easy reach, to fail on an examination rather than obtain unlawful aid? If the whirlwind rush of the college Main Street opportunities to lie and cheat are innumerable. If, when the temptation comes, you are too weak to resist, you are unfit for college, and will soon be kicked out by your fellow students and disgraced for life. Until you can safely be trusted with entire liberty in matters involving your truthfulness and honor, stay away from college. You are not yet "prepared," whatever your age, height, or "units."

* * * *

This is a short but searching entrance examination. If you cannot stand it, remember that for the weak-willed, short-sighted, and dishonest, the college graveyard is yawning and never full. If you can, rejoice that from the Main Street of college life all roads of success are wide open to the self-controlled and energetic.

LITERARY DIGEST STRAW VOTE AIDS WET PROPAGANDA

By Ernest H. Cherrington

General Secretary World League Against Alcoholism

The friends of the eighteenth amendment and the national prohibitory law should refuse to take any part in the Literary Digest poll, which, whatever its results, can in no sense assume to be the consensus of opinion of the people of the United States.

The minority opposed to prohibition, disregarding all rules of sportsmanship, has defied the law, advocated nullification, and is now determined by some process or other to compel the dry majority to accede to the demands and threats of the wet minority. It was first proposed, by the wet leaders ten years ago, to defeat dry congressmen and elect wet congressmen and thereby secure some modification of the Volstead Law. That failed. Repeal or modification of prohibition has been an issue in most most congressional and general elections since 1919, with the result that the drys in Congress have increased in number and the number of wets has decreased. What has happened in Congress in this respect, also happened in the state legislatures, taken as a whole.

Having failed in the first effort for repeal, the demand was made for a referendum to the voters of the nation, with the idea that the wet centers, the wet cities and the wet states could possibly muster a majority of the total votes cast, it being understood by those who were proposing a national referendum that New York State, for instance, in a general election, casts as many votes as are cast in the aggregate by more than twenty states that could be named. When it became apparent that this was an insidious move to deprive many smaller states of their part and voice in government and was the first step toward the elimination of real state representation, on national issues, this project failed.

The next move was to appeal to the states to have state referenda and in a few of the radically wet states there was some success, so far as the wet vote is concerned, the organized temperance forces advising those in favor of prohibition to have nothing to do with such appeals. But, the state legislatures and the state executives did not respond to the wet appeals, and the possibility of a referendum by states vanished.

The next move was to have some sort of unofficial referendum taken by some individual, group, newspaper or journal. Mr. DuPont started the proposition by furnishing the money and having ballots sent to all the voters in the entire state of Delaware. This vote sponsored by the Literary Digest will probably cost at the very minimum one million dollars. Of course this million dollars is being furnished by those who like Mr. Hoover, "wish prohibition to succeed." It can hardly, therefore, be suggested, that this attempted poll is "disinterested."

This sort of poll would be open to the same general objections if it were being conducted, for instance, by the American Issue at Westerville, Ohio. Moreover, it would be open to the same general objections if it were on any other question upon which there are radical differences of opinion among the American people.

Regardless of the good intentions of those back of such a poll as is attempted by the Literary Digest, the procedure is open to the following serious objections: First, there is no practical way of safeguarding any one of the ballots, any number of them, or all of them to insure proper voting and counting. Second, there is no possible way of checking up to find whether the person who marks any one of these ballots is an alien, a citizen, a voter, a repeater, a child under age, someone who has been disfranchised, or someone who exists in name only. Third, there is no way of checking up to ascertain whether any ballot which goes in was marked by the particular person to whom the ballot was sent, or whether it has been gathered, along with hundreds of other such ballots, marked by the same person and sent in with the same markings.

The questions asked are so worded that it would be almost impossible to tell what is the concensus of opinion in the United States. It will be noted that instead of there being two questions—one for and the other against prohibition—there are three questions, worded in such a way that it would be very difficult to determine what is the consensus of those who vote.

For instance, take those who vote for number two. If it were a proposition of the retention of the eighteenth amendment or the repeal of the eighteenth amendment some would vote one way and some another. How is it possible, therefore, to determine what proportion of those who vote in favor of No. 2, would be in favor of the eighteenth amendment or would be for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment, if those were the only alternatives? On the face of it, it would seem that these three propositions were devised so that the sponsors of this so-called vote could use the total of Nos. 2 and 3 as recorded against the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead Law, there being no way for persons who, for instance, are in favor of the eighteenth amendment but are desirous of certain changes in the Volstead Law to express that fact without being counted as both against the amendment and the law.

The significant thing about the organized efforts now being made against prohibition is that a comparatively few men with vast amounts of money are so determined to defeat prohibition either by securing its nullification, encouraging its violation, or securing its repeal, that they are willing to use their money to promote projects which in the end will tend to undermine not only the laws but the constitution itself and the very form of government under which we live. They are not willing to take constitutional methods. They are not willing that those methods of measuring public sentiment shall prevail. They are determined to get some method that in some way or other will indicate a public sentiment against prohibition, and if they cannot get it in one way they are bound to get it some other way, by means constitutional or otherwise, and by methods fair or foul.

Much has been made of the fact that the Literary Digest poll indicated the landslide received by Harding in 1920; was 99 per cent accurate in the 1924 forecast, and told with accuracy what states Hoover would carry in 1928. But the Digest poll in 1922, on the identical questions it is now submitting, went far wrong in the states of Ohio, California and Massachusetts, where legal referenda were held following the Digest straw vote.

RALLIES IN THE INTEREST OF THE STANDARD LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS AND RELIGIOUS EDUCATION

On Sunday, March 23, 3 P. M. three rallies will be held in the interest of Leadership Training and Christian Religious Education. There will be a short address upon the subject of the hour. Then will follow the registration, classification, lesson assignments, and text book distribution for those who are to attend the leadership training school which will begin the same week. The rallies will be held on the same date, at the hour. One will be in the West End Church, Greensboro, N. C., with Rev. C. W. Bates in charge; another in the Graham M. P. Church, Rev. N. G. Bethea in charge, the third in Asheboro, Rev. J. E. Pritchard, in charge. The speakers for the three meetings are: Dr. P. E. Lindley, West End; Rev. Lawrence Little, Graham; Rev. F. L. Gibbs, Asheboro. Be sure to come to the meeting nearest you and bring your friends.

PRAYER

Woe to them that are at ease in Zion. Amos 6-1. When Amos came up from the Southland and viewed the life of Jerusalem and Samaria, Amos saw social corruption, greed, justice abused, poverty, and suffering, and the church at ease. Today we can see some of the things Amos saw I am sure, obligation to church taken lightly, many think of the church as a place to receive help, without ever thinking they are to be helpers. So with such conditions staring the church square in the face, I feel that all see, and feel the need of prayer. Yes, earnest prayer, that God will revive his church and strengthen the feeble knees. And pray that those out of the fold may be brought in.

A prayerless church, and a prayerless nation may live in name, but it is sure to lose its power for the best things, and finally lose its soul.

Prayer is necessary to Christian growth. A tree does not grow without roots, neither does a soul grow without prayer. We will dry up and bear no fruit unless we pray. If we pray more we will mean more to God, to ourselves, to our families, and to the world.

We have 44 pledged for the prayer league at Pleasant Grove.

D. R. Williams.

A LIFE WITHOUT SIN

The Christian does not sin in word, thought, and deed every day, as many falsely teach. The Word of God says, "He that committeth sin is of the devil." I John 3:8. And the next verse says, "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin." Jesus came to save us from sin, here and now—in this life. The angel said, "Thou shall call his Name JESUS: for He shall save His people from their sins." Matt. 1:21.

You will live without sin if you are a child of God. There will be no secret sin, no covered-up sin, no sinful habits nor appetites in a redeemed soul. You will have victory over all sin through the Blood of Jesus.

The churches have done away with the old landmarks, the sacred mourners' bench, and the preaching of vital truths of salvation—justification by faith, an actual experience wrought out in the heart through the Blood of Jesus. They used to believe it; but today you can scarcely find a place of worship where the people are called to get on their knees and seek God. They have time for socials, but no time to pray for the sinner.—Selected.

OPTIMISM

The President's Letter

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Whitaker's and Enfield

March 2, Sunday.—We were at Whitakers for the Sunday School and the morning preaching service. The Sunday School, though not large in number, is run with encouraging faithfulness. Brother Mack Cutchin the superintendent, called attention to the fact that the offering on this day went to the Children's Home. He was desirous that it be as liberal as possible. We were heard in the 11 o'clock service by an attentive congregation that practically filled the house. The progressive spirit of this church is evidenced in the attractive, well-constructed brick veneered parsonage that has been built this year. Dr. Johnson has already written of it, so we shall not enlarge on it here, except to say that it is largely an achievement growing out of the faith and zeal of the women of the church. In addition to the Auxiliary, the church has a working C. E. Society and a Scout Troop. A church brotherhood is also contemplated. We are happy to report, too, that this church takes its place on "Dollar a Member" honor roll. Dr. Johnson is giving to the church a wise and zealous leadership, as is his custom. He has the full confidence of the people, and they have the full measure of his devotion to every interest of the church. The people here feel the force of the financial depression that is prevailing throughout the country, but worse, perhaps, in the eastern section of our work than in some other parst. However, Whitaker's will not be wanting in an earnest effort to promote the Kingdom along all lines, and will have a report worthy of such efforts when the work of the year ends.

We were very sorry to find Mrs. Mary Outerbridge, a faithful member of the church and a parishioner of our early ministry, confined to her bed with a protracted illness of months. She has our deep interest and prayers.

The night service was given to Enfield. The congregation was not large, but helpful in interest. Brother Auman, the pastor, announced his purpose to preach a series of evangelistic sermons, in keeping with the Easter-Pentecost program of evangelism. About half of "Dollar a Member" has been provided here, and we were assured that the balance would be raised later. The Sunday School and C. E. Society are functioning helpfully. A well supported Aid Society is also a valuable part of the church's organized activities. Plans are on for merging this into a Woman's Auxiliary, in harmony with the new order of women's work. This is being done throughout the conference, and the women are pleased with the new order. It is reasonable to expect, we believe that such results would follow here. Brother Auman is working steadily and wisely to promote the church in all of its local interests, and at the same time, to make it an integral part of whole program of the denomination. He is being encouraged in his work by the support of the people. We believe that Enfield will have a year of normal progress.

This church has just lost one of its oldest—perhaps the oldest—and most faithful members, in the passing of Mrs. Mary Collins. We extend sympathy to the church and to the bereaved loved ones.

We could not go to Whitaker's Chapel, the other church on this charge, at this time, but shall be glad of any opportunity to make a visit there later.

Eastern Pastor's Federation

March 3, Monday.—This meeting was held in the Littleton Church and it was our privilege to attend. Nine pastors were present, representing as many charges; and several charges were represented by lay-delegations. Two pastors of the eleven in the Federation district, were absent, and two charges of the district were not represented. An all-day program was carried out, with picnic lunch served at the church. The topic for the morning session was, "The Whole Program of the Church to all the People of the Church." This was something of a round-table discussion, and was participated in by a large number. The questions and discussions were interesting and helpful. In the afternoon session, Mrs. C. W. Bates discussed the women's work, explaining in detail the plans and purposes of the new order. The many questions asked indicated an encouraging interest. Dr. Johnson, the President of the Federation, adjourned the meeting late in the afternoon. In the mind of everyone must have been the impression, we think, that the day was well spent.

Raleigh

March 4, Tuesday.—We were in Raleigh on this date, attending with Brother Bates, as the official representatives of our conference, a meeting of the Commission on Inter-race Co-operation. Editor McCulloch and President Andrews were present. Also Mrs. Bates, Mrs. Sullivan, and Miss Velna McCulloch, of Calvary Church. The meeting was assured of the sympathetic attitude of our church toward the purposes of the commission, and of our readiness to co-operate as far as possible. Whatever discovers and fosters right understandings and right relations between the white and negro races promotes the best interests of each. And surely this is fit work for the church.

Denton

March 16, Sunday—Three churches of this charge were visited on this date, as follows: Canaan, 11 A. M.; Piney Grove, 3 P. M.; and Denton at night. A congregation, encouraging in size and responsive in interest, was found at each church, with perhaps the largest attendance at Denton. Pastor Bingham is going about the work with his accustomed patience and earnestness, and is meeting with normal interest and responsiveness on the part of the people. He was distributing evangelistic literature Sunday, and will do what he can in other ways to promote the Easter-Pentecost program on his charge. The Sunday Schools and C. E. work of the charge seem to be functioning normally, and the pastor is planning a week-day Bible school for the Denton Church to be put on later in the spring. He expects to follow this with a series of evangelistic meetings. "Dollar a Member" has been presented on the charge, and some amount has been paid. The effort will be continued, and we trust that considerably more may be raised. The work of the women seems not to have been well established here, and an adequate financial system is lacking, as is true on so many of our charges. More readers of the church papers, too, would be highly helpful. In due time these weak places will no doubt be strengthened. Denton charge is rendering good service for the Kingdom. We enjoyed our visit with these churches, and the pastor and his people have our grateful thanks for the kind manner in which we were received and entertained while among them.

Central Pastor's Federation

March 10, Monday.—We were in the afternoon session of this meeting, which was held in the Gibsonville Church on this date, with Rev. H. W. Maier, President of this Federation, presiding. A goodly number of pastors were present, and marked interest was evidenced in what was being done. The thought of the day hinged around the Easter-Pentecost program of Evangelism that is now engaging the attention of the evangelical churches of the country. Drs. Dixon and Williams were the principal speakers, with others taking part. The Pastors' Federation seems to be warranting its existence. Interesting and helpful meetings are being held in each of the three districts— Eastern, Central, and Western. The Central Federation will meet again in June at Midway Church, on Haw River Charge.

Easter

April 20 is the date. Easter supplies for distribution by the Board of Missions. We trust that pastors and superintendents will make full preparation for the proper celebration of this glorious festive season of the church. The resurrection of our Lord is the key that makes the arch of our faith secure. Let us celebrate the event joyously, and in the spirit of consecration to our risen Lord. The Easter program, provided by the Board of Missions, will help us to do this. If you have not already sent in your order, please do so at once. Supplies will be furnished by the Board of Missions, 516 North Charles Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Easter—Pentecost

We are concerned that our conference shall not fail in this great movement of the churches of this country. If a pronounced spirit of evangelism can be created in the church, many of the other problems that are confronting us now, will be easier of solution. The printed matter that has been sent to pastors will help in lining up with this undertaking. The suggestions of our own Conference Committee will help, also. Each pastor will, of course, have to link up with the movement somewhat according to local conditions. But the principal thing is to get linked up in some way—any way that will bring about an intensified spirit of evangelism in the local church, and that will lead to the salvation of souls. If we can think together, and pray together on this great matter, we shall soon be working together, and rejoicing together in the great things that God is doing for us.

The Conference Committee on Evangelism is maturing some plans that are to be announced soon.

"In As Much As"

One hundred and three children—innocent, dependent, promising children—to be fed, clothed, sheltered, and trained for life's duties and opportunities. They are the little happy innocent wards of our church, and we have them at our Children's Home to love and care for. It goes without saynig, that money is necessary in order to do this. The cost, many, many times multiplied, of maintaining a small family, will indicate to us something of the amount of money that is needed to take care of these children. Are we all doing our part? Many churches and Sunday Schools contribute regularly to the Home; many do not. In which of these lists is your church—your Sunday School? Dr. Dixon and his workers are doing their best for these priceless wards of the church; but their best is not sufficient without the best help of the church. The Home is now greatly in need of funds. We appeal again to every Sunday School to make a regular monthly offering for this purpose, and that schools that are now giving, increase their offerings, where this is possible.

"In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these—ye have done it unto me."

"Dollar a Member"

Moriah Church, Rev. M. P. Chambliss, pastor, pledges in full this week, $145. We are grateful to Moriah for this generous response. More than half of the amount—to be exact, $89—has been paid in on this pledge. The balance will be forthcoming in good time. We have in mind one other church—a station in the western part of the conference—no, not going to tell you any more now—that we expect to list with this goodly number in a short time. Just wait, and see if we don't do it. "Dollar a Member" is on the way.

STOP! LOOK! LISTEN! The Committee has extended the time to June first. Get the full amount pledged by that time. Get the full amount paid by that time, if possible. If not possible to get payments by that time, grant extension of time for payments. And once more: Persons who have pledges to the college may take credit on these pledges for amounts paid on "Dollar a Member."

"Dollar a Member" is making progress. We are gaining ground week by week. More push and more prayer, and we will "go over" one of these weeks.

OUR STORY PAGE

MOTHER WINS THE BATTLE

In a small cluttered bedroom lay Mom on a none-too-clean bed. On one side of her lay a year-old boy sucking his bottle. On the floor sat a grubby-faced little girl of two-and-a-half, hugging a ragged teddy bear. Two other children under school age were squabbling over a bag of popcorn.

''Well, here I am,'' Mom said piteously. She was a tiny woman of sixty-three with anxious eyes and a grim mouth. Mom had borne eleven children, six of whom were living. She had had two husbands, both of whom were dead. Without any great help from either of these men she had struggled to bring up her children. She had stood 16 hours a day over the washboard and ironing board. She had had neither good clothing nor good food nor a comfortable place to sleep. Rest, peace and pleasure knew her not. Nearly all of what she had earned went to help somebody out of a tight corner. Her family were always in tight corners. Now she lay in her daughter's room, dependent, helpless and despairing, with a wornout body and flagging breath and a heart that thumped and wiggled and threatened to stop. The doctor had been stern in his command that little old Mom, who had always taken care of everybody, should now be taken care of.

There was a council outside the house that afternoon. The children gathered in—the boys, Bill and Ed and Grif, and the girls, Allie and Liz and Conny. What was to be done? The doctor had been there again. This time he said the must be cleared out and Mom kept quiet—her life depended upon it.

Allie sat on the grass and wept. Liz clung to the clothes line and groaned. Connie sniffed. Ed smoked and Grif chewed gum. Only Bill seemed to be thinking constructively. Bill was a war cripple who drew a pension. He wasn't married. It was all he could do to take care of himself and then he often had to call in Mom to help him.

''Well, sir, it's up to us,'' Bill said. ''Mom's stuck by us folks through thick and thin. She's fed us and clothed us and got us up to be men and women. Now she's used up. We got to come across and help her to die comfortable, anyhow, if we can't do no more for her. It's no place for her here at Allie's with four kids sprawlin' over her the whole enduring time. It's no better where the rest of you live than it is here. As for me, I've only got a room, and I share that with another fellow. Folks, here's the long and short of it. Mom's got to go to Miss Clinton's.''

Astonished looks, gasps, stirrings of objection. Miss Clinton kept a swell private hospital where they had trained nurses and things.

''Yes, sir!'' said Bill, thumping the ground with his cane, ''If Mom's got to go she's going right. We'll pool together every last cent we can rake and scrape and send her to Miss Clinton's.''

Clearly it was the only thing to do under the circumtsances. The six children and their partners in matrimony scared up every last cent they had and it was just enuogh to keep Mom one week at Miss Clinton's. After that—but they were too grieved to look ahead.

Toward night the doctor came and they moved Mom round the corner to the big house that had been a private residence before it was a hospital. The boys carried Mom on a cot tenderly, solemnly. The other followed in a tearful procession. But Mom scarcely knew anything that was going on now. She was too far gone.

Mom was put to bed in a sunny room with pink and gold fixings. Under her were fine coil wire springs, a spring mattress. She lay between sheets of the finest, smoothest texture. She was highly covered with a fleecy blanket. An alcohol rub made her feel rested. She had a new nightie with sprigs of pink flowers on it. There were roses on the stand beside her bed. And outside the open window in the swaying boughs of a green tree a bird sang.

The food was delicious. Mom could eat anything. Her stomach had never been crowded with rich viands. She enjoyed her asparagus, chicken, hot broth, eggs and tea which had real cream in it. She had ices, too, colorful things in tall thin glasses. Too sick to feel selfish or to worry about anything, she lay and took was brought to her by the smiling, gentle-handed nurse. Peace, beauty, luxury enfolded her. She folded her thin hands and drew sighs of blissful comfort.

Nobody was allowed to see her. Her heart was much too weak. She did not speak, only she smiled faintly in apology of gratitude when anything was done for her.

The week passed. Again there was counsel. Where was more money coming from? Mom mustn't be moved. Mouths tightened, eyes grew stern with purpose. Ed went out and sold his fiddle. It was a good fiddle and he loved it. But if he hadn't fiddled so much at local dances he might have had a good job this long while. The price of the violin went toward Mom's fund. And Ed took his job, Lizzie decided to do some washings Mom had been obliged to give up. Conny got back some regular cleaning jobs that she had turned down. Allie put her home in order and took a roomer. Grif and Ed settled down to the first real work of their lives.

Money came, Mom's expenses were met the second week. The third week there was a good bit left over. The fourth week there was no question that Mom could stay at Miss Clinton's all summer if she had to. Truth was, Mom was picking up. The folks noticed the change in her every time they went to see her—color, added flesh, a new hopefulness. Mom wasn't going to conclude her existence after all.

There came a day when Mom was declared fit to leave the hospital and go about her business. Then it was Miss Clinton spoke right to the girls who had come to conduct Mom away.

''Can't let her go, can't spare her,'' smiled Miss Clinton. She patted Mom's tight little hand. ''She going to stay here with me and help round at easy jobs and earn good wages.''

Mom nodded joyously. ''Yes, I be,'' she said. ''And just as soon as ever I kin, girls, I'm going to pay you all back for what I've cost you.''

''Mom!'' cried Liz and Conny and Allie in one indignant breath. ''Don't you dare! After all you've done for us. No, sir! We are doing well enough, You keep every cent you earn for yourself.''

Mom stayed at Miss Clinton's. It was fun to work there. She might in time almost get strong again, though she could not last a week at the washtub, as Miss Clinton knew.

It was pleasant to go visiting the children. Some of them were buying homes and paying for them. They were all fixing up to beat the band. Everybody seemed to be getting a lot out of lviing these days. Mom wondered and wondered how it had all happened.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

MARCH 16: PETER A GREAT EVANGELIST

Matt. 4:18-20; 16:16.

To the Leader

Use the suggestion made by another of the Nine C's meeting—each C standing for words making a summary of Peter's life: Cephas, called (Matt. 4:18-20), confirmed (Luke 6:4), cowardly (John 18:27), commissioned (John 21: 15, 16), conspicuous (Acts 2), courageous (Acts 4:19), comprehending (Acts 10), crowned (John 21:18). Give these to nine members to be used as topics for brief talks.

Contrast the lives of Peter and Paul in relation to the work they did. Hymns suitable are: "Just As I Am," "Blessed Assurance," "The Way of the Cross Leads Home," "He Lifted Me."

Leader's Lines in Outline

I. PETER

A. Life: 1. Characterization; (a) rough, (b) impulsive, (c) unlearned, (d) sincere, (e) confession of faith. 2. Ministry: (a) scope of work, (b) vast number of souls converted in one day, (c) a "fisher of men."

II. EVANGELISM

A. Need: (1) many millions in so-called Christian lands untouched, (2) trust has been in materialism, (3) passive attitude to Christianity; B. Method: (1) outlaw undignified procedures, (2) tact, (3) correct motive, (4) influence of lives; C. Universality: (1) rock of foundation of the church, (2) Messiah promised the Jews, and (3) Saviour of men.

Answer These

1. Rank Peter as an evangelist in relation to other similar characters.
2. Discuss the term, "fishers of men."
3. What about Peter when he put his strength in himself? Apply this ot our lives.
4. Why is it better to try and fail than never to try?
5. Is it safe to wait for opportunities or shall we make them?
6. In what respect are we responsible for others?

Poetry Corner

If Christ the Lord should come today,
As Christ to Peter by the sea,
And bow and tenderly should say,
"O, my disciple, lovest thou me?"
To thee and me,
What would our answer be?
Just this: "We surely love Thee, Lord;
Our wills are weak, our hearts are poor,
But, clinging to Thee, in Thy Word
We trust, and we shall for age endure.

◆

I heard Him call,
"Come, follow"—that was all.
My heart grew dim,
My heart went out after Him.
I rose and followed—that was all.
Who would not follow
If he heard Him call?

To every man there openeth
A way and ways and a Way—
And the high souls climb the highway
And the low soul gropes tre low,
And in between, on misty flats,
The rest drift to and fro.
But to every man there openeth
The high way and the low,
And every man decideth
The way his soul shall go.

FROM HIGH POINT TO WEAVERVILLE

For four years it was our privilege to serve as pastor of Welch Memorial church, High Point. During those years we learned to love those people and regretted to separate from them; but we felt the time had come for a change. So we were assigned to the Richland Circuit and Bro. G. L. Curry succeeded me at Welch. I served the Richland Circuit only one year, it being inconvenient for me to serve this charge and live in High Point; so we did not propose to return for another year. We were located at High Point and decided not to take any pastoral work for this year, so requested to be left without an appointment. For the first two or three Sundays we felt somewhat relieved as we did not have to preach, but I soon became dissatisfied and longed to get back in the pastorate. One day I was talking with Bro. Curry and he told me that Weaverville was without a pastor, so I got in touch with Bro. Taylor, the president, and after a trip to Weaverville and several letters to and from Mr. George Edwards, who was the delegate from the Weaverville Charge, and an interview with the president, I was officially assigned to this charge. In a few days after my assignment Bro. Edwards went to High Point with two trucks and brought our household gods. On the following Thursday, which was February 20, Mrs. Pierce and Harry, our small son, accompanied me to the parsonage, where we found a goodly number of the good people who had come and prepared a hot supper. After our long drive through the country from High Point to Weaverville we were somewhat in a condition to enjoy the delicious supper. We feel that we have been cordially received on this work, and think we are going to like just fine. We have preached at each church and have visited in several homes of the people. We like all whom we have met.

We held our first quarterly conference March 5th. Had very good attendance and everybody seemed to have the interest of the church work at heart. We are hoping to have a good year. After the quarterly conference had adjourned and the pastor returned home, about the time we were thinking of retiring, someone came on the porch and then, opening the door, we were surprised to see such a crowd of people and all seemed to have something in hand, and all just marched through the hall to the dining room where they began to load the table until we thought we could hear it groan, it was so loaded. The people were too many for us to name them; each church on the charge was represented. I cannot begin to tell the number of articles which were brought. We know this: We will not have to buy much foodstuff for the next month.

T. E. PIERCE, Pastor.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

THOMASVILLE AUXILIARY

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First church met at the church March 3 with good attendance. The meeting was called to order by the retiring president, Mrs. Baity, while soft music was played by the pianist. The devotionals were led by Mrs. A. H. Ragan, the society singing "Draw Me Nearer" and "I Am Thine, O Lord." The minutes were read and approved. New officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. A. H. Ragan; first vice president, Mrs. J. W. Baity; second vice-president, Miss Juanita Dorsett; recording secretary, Mrs. M. A. Williams; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. R. Westmoreland; treasurer, Mrs. D. R. Connell. Envelopes were distributed for monthly offering. Thank-offering service discussed, deciding to hold fourth Sunday night of this month. Mrs. Brown wrote a letter asking our Auxiliary to send $2.00 for the college fund and the treasurer was instructed to send it at once. The meeting was adjourned by repeating the benediction in unison. The social hour which followed was much enjoyed. The hostesses were assisted by Misses London and Peeler in serving sandwiches, tea, cakes, and candy.

MRS. S. R. WESTMORELAND,
Cor. Sec'y.

BRANCH MEETING

The North Carolina Branch of the Woman's Missionary work will meet in Burlington April 22 and 23. Plan to have your Auxiliary represented and send your money promptly to the treasurer, that she may close her books on the 31st.

MRS. W. C. HAMMER, President.

HONOR ROLL

The treasurer has quite a long list of Auxiliaries that have paid out on N. C. budget and also quite a list that have paid their New Century Service budget in full, but the following is a list of those which have paid both budgets in full:

Asheboro, Asheville, Bethel (Alamance), Calvary, Fountain Place, Hope (Chatham), Liberty, Mount Hermon, Mount Lebanon (Randolph), Rock Creek, Shiloh (North Davidson), and Welch Memorial.

Several others are almost on and we hope to have a long list next week. Please get your money in as promptly as possible so that everything may be finished up and the treasurer's books audited before Branch Meeting.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treasurer.

—Grist, commissioner of labor, estimates the number of unemployed in North Carolina at 250,000, most of them seasonal workers. He thinks the number has reached its highest point. Winston and Charlotte seem to be worst off in this respect. President Hoover predicts that normal prosperity will return to the country in the spring.

HIGH POINT COLLEGE

ARTEMESIANS REPORT

In response to the article, "Our Conference Organ," by Mr. E. S. Wills in the February 27th issue of the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD, the Artemesian Literary Society, the oldest girls' society on the campus of High Point College, wishes to be allowed this opportunity of giving news of college affairs to the church through the HERALD as often as possible.

One of the most interesting and important events of the past week was the annual celebration of the Artemesian and Akrothinian Literary societies second annual society day. In the morning the societies put on a literary program in the auditorium of the college, and Hon. F. F. Myrick, of Greensboro, gave a literary address. Miss Leona Wood, president of the Artemesian Literary Society, gave the welcome. The societies wishing to give the college something beneficial gave the library about seventy of the latest and most popular books including fiction, history and reference books. These books were presented by Mr. Virgil Yow, president of the Akrothinian Literary Society, and accepted on behalf of the college by Dr. R. M. Andrews, president. The day was brought to a close on Saturday evening by a banquet in the dining room of the college. The Indian idea was carried out in the decorations, menu, programs, etc. The presidents of the two societies, Miss Leona Wood and Mr. Virgil Yow, acted as toastmasters.

For the fourth year High Point College has entered Intercollegiate debating, and has been successful in winning every year with the exception of one year. Our debaters have had a very successful week this week, in fact it was perfect. On Friday evening our affirmative composed of Fred Pegg and Clay Madison, defeated the negative team of Lenoir-Rhyne here. At the same time our negative team composed of Ralph Mulligan and Graham Madison, were defeating the affirmative team at Guilford College. On Saturday evening our affirmative team was again successful. It defeated the negative team of Wake Forest College. We have debates scheduled with Northwestern University and Furman for the early spring. We are proud of our debators and we are looking forward with high hopes for the coming debates.

The coming of Spring is much in evidence on the campus of High Point College. The trees and shrubs are beginning to put out new growth and with the plants the students and faculty seem to have new vigor and more pep. The track team is training for the Intercollegiate and "Little Six" track meets; the tennis team is practicing whenever the weather will permit. Many things tell us Spring is here, and we are glad of it.

MRS. WHITAKER WRITES

Since no one has taken the time to write from the college, I will undertake to tell you some things that are being done. So much is happening here all the time that I hardly know where to begin.

Our stage has had a complete overhauling. We have new scenery, curtains, and all that is needed to make up a neat looking stage. The cost of all work was paid by ads on curtain and wings. The I. T. K's, one of the fraternities, gave two one-act plays Friday night. We were very much entertained for about an hour. Between acts one of their pledges sang two tenor solos.

The health of our student body is fine. It seems to me this is just the best year the college has had. People have had an eye on our work and some say it is short of a miracle what our college has accomplished in less than six years. All small colleges are pressed hard by standardizing agencies and it seems to me we have been able to cope well with the situation. Church schools surely have a place in education where the emphasis is on Christian education. Surely it must mean something for students to come in contact with strong Christian teachers.

I wish I were a writer so that I could inspire more interest, more love for our institution.

We should feel proud of our college and boost it all the time. Pray without ceasing for its success.

MRS. C. L. WHITAKER.

OLD YADKIN IN THE TOWER

During last year a number of friends and former students of Yadkin College responded to an appeal to raise a sum sufficient to give the old bell which did service at Yadkin College for more than forty years, a proper place at High Point College. When the appeal was being made it was thought that the bell would be placed in the tower of one of the college buildings. But at the meeting of the Yadkin College students last October it was decided that a tower on the campus would be more of a distinctive monument to Yadkin College rather than to place the bell in a tower of one of the buildings where it would be largely hidden from the world. The instructions of the Yadkin College Alumni Association have been carried out and "Old Yadkin" is now mounted in a substantial steel tower which has been built on a prominent location on the campus. And now the same old bell that for so many years called the Yadkin students is each day calling the High Point students to classes and to meals. The student body at High Point have become very fond of "Old Yadkin." Now the next thing the friends and former students should do to honor the old school we so much love is to place a bronze tablet on this bell tower giving something of the history of the bell and the institution where it did service for so many years. Such a tablet would cost something like $25, or upward, depending upon size and composition. Now for those who are ready to make a contribution toward the cost of this tablet. The tablet should be installed and unveiled at the Alumni banquet which is to be held during the High Point College commencement. Who will be the first with a contribution? Come on, come on. Send contributions to the undersigned or to Mr. Z. V. Walser, High Point, N. C.

Yours for "Old Yadkin,"

GEO. L. CURRY.

FROM AN APPRECIATIVE READER

Dear Editor:

In response to the President's request in last week's Herald, I wish to say that our first subscription to the church paper (Church Record) was sent by Rev. H. S. B. Thompson, then pastor of Littleton Charge, in 1894. We have received it continually since. The longer we get the paper the more we appreciate it. We are quite anxious each week to get its helpful, inspiring and edifying news.

We are deeply interested in the President's messages, which are so instructive and helpful and stimulate our love for each other over the entire Conference.

We value the M. P. Herald as the best paper that ever entered our home. We appreciate the sacrificing service of the editor and his co-helpers in giving us this paper.

From henceforth by earnest prayer and cooperative effort, may the Herald hold on its way and grow stronger and stronger.

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Dr. S. W. Taylor has informed me that the giver of the $5.00 prize for the best article on "The Country Church" requests that his name be withheld. Therefore I am taking this privilege of saying thank you through the Herald. I also wish to express my appreciation to Dr. Taylor and others who made the contest possible. I enjoyed reading all the articles on "The Country Church."

—"Please publish this week." This is a frequent request. We are glad to comply when we can, but sometimes it is impossible. Sometimes the request is received after the paper is printed. Sometimes we have much matter that logically if not chronologically takes precedence. We ask our friends to believe that we will do our best to accommodate them.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS FIELD SERVICE

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

—Last Saturday ex-Chief Justice Taft died and also Associate Justice Sanford. Hardening of the arteries is given as the cause of Taft's death. Sanford died unexpectedly following the extraction of a tooth.

—Col. Al Fairbrother, for forty years a newspaper man who seemed to be equally at home in North Carolina and California, recently returned from the West to Greensboro. He was seized by pneumonia and died last Sunday in Clinic Hospital, aged 69.

—Mrs. Z. B. Mitchell, of Littleton, writes that she has been a subscriber to the Herald from near the beginning. There are perhaps hundreds of families into which the Herald has gone from its beginning. We appreciate their help and devotion to the church. It is such people that keep church enterprises going.

—Rev. C. W. Bates had an exciting experience last Wednesday. Driving along in Greensboro he discovered that his car was on fire. He stopped and lifted the hood and found under it a blazing furnace. He saw that he could not extinguish the flames and ran to a fire alarm box and called for the fire department, which promptly responded. In the meantime a man with a truck came along. He had a fire-extinguisher and succeeded in almost extinguishing the fire before the engines came. But for prompt action the car would probably have been reduced to junk, whereas now the injuries are slight. The cause of the fire was the breaking of a small tube that conveys the gasoline. The free gasoline ignited under the hood either from the exhaust or from an electric spark.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Littleton. -I have been requested to report from our Littleton church and hope to have something of interest from time to time.

Mrs. Smith, wife of our pastor, has recently organized a Christian Endeavor and there seems to be much interest by the young people and a good attendance of about fifteen members each Sunday afternoon. Mrs. Smith is an earnest worker and puts forth every effort to help the churches generally.

A young people's meeting was held here on Sunday evening, March 2. A helpful message was brought to them by Rev. H. S. B. Thompson.

On March 3rd, the Ministers' Federation met here and we had most interesting and instructive talks by President Taylor, Mrs. Bates and others. There was quite a good attendance. Lunch was served at the church and all seemed to enjoy it, each one having brought a basket. We hope to have them meet with us again.

REPORTER.

Bess Chapel.—Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, delivered a splendid sermon Sunday morning. We were also favored with some special music by Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Jenks. A large crowd was present.

Our Sunday school is growing and we hope it will continue to grow.

The Ladies' Aid will give a measuring party in the recreation department of the church Friday evening. The benefits will go to help furnish the new church.

We are very sorry that two of our aged members are seriously ill, Mrs. Mary Hull and Mrs. Charlie Brown, the latter of Lincolnton. If it be His will may they both be restored to health. REPORTER.

South Lexington. -Sunday was a record-breaking day for our church. Our Sunday school reached a new high mark, there being 227 present and 227 on roll. It does us good to see our Sunday school growing so rapidly. Our goal is 250 and we hope to reach that mark as soon as the weather opens up and people can get out better.

Our preaching services are making a steady gain also; the morning service was well attended. In the evening service we were very fortunate in having with us the Thomasville chorus, which rendered some good sacred music. The church was filled to its capacity and all present were well rewarded by some of the best singing we have heard lately. The pastor preached a very brief sermon on an "Every Member Church," and urged every member to take a part in the activities of the church and for one not to leave their work for someone else to do. At the close of the service the doors of the church were opened and four new members were taken into the church.

Our church has been growing steadily under the excellent leadership of Bro. C. G. Isley, who is always looking for something to promote more interest in the church work in the community and everyone who knows him and his mother loves them very deeply. We are hoping to add more members to our church as soon as the weather opens up to where they can get out to the services more regularly and get interested in the work of the church.

We ask the prayers of all Christian people that our church may continue to grow and help to advance His kingdom in this part of His vineyard.

Burlington, First Church—Today was a good day with us. Attendance in the Sunday school is still increasing. Attendance last Sunday was 336 and today we were greatly pleased to note that we had 361 present, giving us a gain of 25 over the previous Sunday's record. The Sunday school orchestra is an important addition to the work and we are delighted with the splendid music we are having each Sunday.

Rev. Lawrence C. Little, general secretary of the M. P. Board of Christian Education, was with us today and brought us a very powerful and inspiring discourse at the morning preaching hour, and also gave a helpful talk to the Sunday school. Mr. Little is well known in our denomination as a young people's worker and leader and we are always glad to have him speak to us.

Our pastor, Bro. Gerringer, brought us a splendid sermon on "Obedience to Christ" at the evening preaching service and the service was enjoyed by a large congregation.

One of our faithful members, Mrs. L. W. Holt, Tucker street, of this city, remains ill at the home of her son, Mr. F. G. Holt. We are praying that she will soon be well and back to the services of the church.

The Woman's Auxiliary observed the World Day of Prayer for Missions Friday, March 7, in the hut, beginning at 11 o'clock and closing at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The address in the forenoon was delivered by Miss Dorothy Russell, religious worker of this city, An address was given in the afternoon by Mrs. Ben Sellars, also of this city. Lunch was served at the noon hour and the services proved helpful and uplifting to the large number in attendance.

The business girls' circle of First church held its March meeting Monday evening, March 3, at 8 o'clock at the home of Miss Eula Wheeler with eight present. The meeting was called to order by the president. The scripture reading was followed by prayer. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Roll call and offering was taken up.

Last month the circle held a "white elephant sale" and all the members were delighted with the results.

There were five visits to the sick and trays were sent to five during the month of February.

A "country store" was planned for March 17 at the hut when all the circles come together.

The meeting adjourned with an invitation to meet with Miss Elizabeth Rogers next month.

After adjournment the hostess, Miss Eula Wheeler, assisted by Mrs. Frank Bevers, served cherry salad, sandwiches, cocoanut biscuits, coffee with whipped cream, and chocolate fudge.

Denton Charge.—We were delighted to have Dr. S. W. Taylor with us on Denton charge yesterday. He was with us at Canaan in the morning, Piney Grove in the afternoon, and Denton in the evening. Dr. Taylor brought us forceful gospel sermons at each place. He also gave information and encouragement to Conference programs. At the evening hour his message was evangelistic and stirred our hearts to do more for the salvation of the lost. We were also glad to have Dr. Taylor in our home. We were pleased to see several visitors in our congregations Sunday. Several from Pleasant Grove on Davidson charge were with us at Denton Sunday evening. Come again, one and all.

E. A. BINGHAM.

Porter.—Owing to bad weather and sickness for the past few months our Sunday school work has been hindered to some extent. However, our pastor has filled all of his appointments. There has been a considerable amount of sickness among our members. Little Wayne Mabry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dock Mabry, has been real sick for three weeks We are all hoping he will soon recover and be at church again.

Now that spring is well on the road we hope the attendance will increase and we can do more work.

Mrs. C. L. Fultz and Mrs. A. S. Whitson have been appointed to train the children for the Easter program and we feel sure it will be a success.

The church yard has been ploughed and sowed in grass. This will greatly improve the appearance of the church. We all enjoy seeing our church look well inside and out.

The second quarterly meeting will be held on Saturday before the fourth Sunday at 1 o'clock. Everyone that can is urged to attend.

We were glad to have little Coy Lee Fultz back at church yesterday after having been sick for several weeks. Our little folks are missed as much as the older ones and we regret to have them absent on account of sickness.

On the second Sunday in April our pastor will preach to the old folks. We know this will be interesting and hope all the elderly people of the entire community will attend.

Let's all remember to attend our Sunday school every Sunday at 10 a. m. and preaching every second and fourth Sundays at 11 o'clock.

MRS. W. T. BRASWELL, Reporter.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—The second Sunday in March our superintendent gave a nice talk. Bro. Foster Lofton is our superintendent, and a young man who loves the church and Sunday school. He needs the help of the people; give him your encouragement and pray for him and help him in any way that you can.

After Sunday school Brother Reed preached another good sermon on preparing to meet God. Let us all examine ourselves and see if we are prepared to meet God, for we know not when He will call us.

Brother Reed will preach the fourth Sunday to the young people. Come and hear what he has to say, both young and old. He will have something good to tell you.

ABIGAIL COGGIN.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Preaching services yesterday were well attended. Rev. J. C. Russell administered the Lord's Supper at the morning hour, and also received three new members into the church. Miss Lottie Harrison was baptized. Mrs. Glenn McClimon by letter, Mr. Albert Foster changed membership from Fairview M. P. church to Liberty Hill. We all welcome them. We were sorry Mrs. Ethel Smith was too sick to stay for preaching services Sunday morning. We hope she will be well and back to teach her class next Sunday. We are sorry Mrs. Will Compton still stays sick.

We were glad to have visitors help in the Christian Endeavor service Sunday evening.

We missed Mr. Joe Poole's family, as it is not often they are all absent.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON, Reporter.

◆

Laurel Hill.—A large crowd attended the preaching service at Laurel Hill Sunday. All of our pastor's sermons are good, but this one was better. His text was "Wake Up." If we would only wake up from our sleeping we would see our awful condition.

We were very glad to have some visiting members with us. Among them were Mr. Andy Sain, of Morganton; Mrs. Maggie Willis, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Willis, of Maiden, and Mr. Stanley Williams.

There will be a Sunday school rally at Bess Chapel the fifth Sunday in March. This will include several circuits. The services will begin on Saturday afternoon and continue throughout the following Sunday night. Don't miss a single service. If we miss a service we will miss a good lecture or something, as there is something good in store for each one at each service.

Our Sunday school attendance is improving, we are glad to say, since spring days are approaching. We are hoping that we will improve more in attendance and more in spirit.

Rev. J. M. Morgan was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Sain Sunday.

We are very glad that one of our members, Mrs. J. W. Allran, who has been sick, is able to attend church again.

One of our Sunday school boys, Mr. Efferd Sain, underwent an operation of the head, but he is improving rapidly.

Don't forget our third Sunday evening services. We hear just as good a message at these times as we do each second Sunday morning.

REPORTER.

Roberta Station.—Our Sunday school is still progressing nicely. Attendance for March 9 was 225; offering was $14.20. Mr. Short preacred a fine sermon, which was greatly enjoyed by all present.

We are having some fine prayer services. We have three a week. On Friday and Saturday nights prayer services are conducted in the homes, and Sunday night services are conducted at the church. Souls are being saved at every service.

On Sunday, March 2, the S. C. Quartet, consisting of our former pastor, Rev. Mr. Sisk, of Gaffney, S. C., J. W., Clyde and Arthur Parham, of Greenville, C. S., and George Horne, the pianist, motored to Roberta and did some fine singing. ELMA MILLER, Reporter.

◆

Eden, Halifax Charge.—We are glad to say that our Sunday school is taking on new life. We have on an attendance contest which is proving very successful. Our new pastor and his bride have established themselves in our hearts and we appreciate them and feel fortunate in having them.

We had Bro. T. M. Johnson with us last third Sunday. When he announced that he would talk about money some of us skin-flints settled ourselves to suffer in silence, but when he had finished our response was fairly satisfactory, considering the hard times. Someone remarked to the writer that Dr. Johnson had a remarkably painless method of extracting money. His sermon was beautiful in sentiment and expression and was very inspiring, and we hope to have him with us again soon.

Our Ladies' Aid Society met on February 27 and organized an Auxiliary. We had been considering the merger for several months. Mrs. Z. A. Hardee was elected president, Mrs. W. C. Moon, recording secretary, Miss Blanche Hardee, treasurer, and Mrs. L. A. Williams, secretary of literature. Miss Winnie Burt was elected leader of the Junior Auxiliary. We were glad to have Mrs. C. W. Bates with us last Sunday. Her talk on the Auxiliary was quite helpful, as we are quite inexperienced in this branch.

Our cemetery fence has been shipped and we hope to have it in place soon.

Our church attendance has been fairly good this winter, but we hope for improvement along this line as the weather becomes more favorable. We have no serious sickness in our community at present. We regret that Miss Lassie Neville has been indisposed for two weeks. We are also sorry that Mrs. A. C. Willey has not been very well recently. We hope they will soon be well.

Why Not Charge.—On the first Sunday night in March a missionary thank-offering program was given at Fairgrove. Miss Esther Ross, of Asheboro, made an address, and three young ladies who accompanied her gave a thank-offering play. The attendance was goon considering the high wind and cold. The service was enjoyed by all.

Fairgrove members are doing considerable work on the church grounds, sowing grass seed and planting shrubbery.

One night last week we organized a C. E. Society at Seagrove. This society will meet on Thursday nights so as to not conflict with other services.

On last Sunday a big crowd greeted us at Lovejoy. A good showing was made on the A. C. B.

The usual crowd was present at Macedonia in the afternoon.

◆

Albemarle.—The supper Friday night, February 28th, by the Men's Bible class proved to be a complete success. The eats were most excellently prepared by several women of the church, to whom the men are very grateful. Mrs. D. F. Helms and Mrs. J. P. Green donated a dozen delicious lemon pies, which was an enjoyable surprise. Rev. J. R. Anderson, teacher of the class, made an interesting talk following the supper, which put new enthusiasm into the men for their next contest, which is to begin right away.

Our pastor preached a special sermon Sunday morning, March 2, to mothers, and especially to the old-fashioned mother. This was a real spiritual treat, not only to the old-fashioned mothers, but to the younger ones as well.

We are sure none enjoyed this service more than Mrs. Marshall Hatley, who was able to be present after an absence of many weeks on account of illness. It seemed that a missing link was back in the chain that binds us into one big family. We feel that it was through the prayers of Christian people that she was sent back to the church she loves so well. She was also present at the Ladies' Aid meeting.

The Ladies' Aid Society met on Tuesday, February 4th. The Lucy Hatley Circle met with Mrs. J. E. Gantt, and the Cam Snotherly Circle with Mrs. C. S. Moton and Mrs. J. R. Anderson. This was the first meeting since the division into circles, and it proved a complete success. Each circle had a dollar social and about $35 was realized from this and the traveling basket donations. The Lucy Hatley Circle had the best percentage present, there being only one member absent, and that was on account of illness. After the business hour, social conversation was engaged in, while the hostesses served tempting refreshments. We hope to have each circle meeting reported separately in the future, as the reporter could be at only one meeting.

The Young People's Class, taught by Mr. C. S. Moton, terminated the contest which they have been conducting for some time, with a delicious three-course dinner, held in the church dining room Thursday night of last week. The meal was prepared by members of the Ladies' Aid Society. Tables were arranged banquet style and vases of cut flowers placed on each. Mr. Moton acted as toastmaster in his usual congenial manner. About 50 young people were present to enjoy the occasion.

The baby son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Lowden is now improving after an illness of several weeks. The baby was taken to a specialist before the real cause of the trouble was found to be in its head.

Rev. J. R. Anderson left Monday for Lincolnton, where he is assisting in a revival meeting this week. Our prayers go with him for great success.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Moton spent the week-end in High Point with Mr. Moton's mother.

Mrs. Arthur Furr is spending the week in Charlotte, visiting her sister.

Fountain Place Church.—The thank-offering service took place at our church February 23. "The First Thank-Offering Box Convention" was presented by a number of our young people. This convention is a short play in which several thank-offering boxes give their experiences in various homes during the year. Some of the boxes were fortunate and went to thankful homes, others were less fortunate, and one was so completely forgotten that it was returned just as it went, without even having been put together. In addition to the devotion and play, special music was rendered by the Central quartet. The service was a helpful one and a good collection was received.

Our pastor, Rev. N. G. Bethea, has been with us for each appointment during the year except one, and that was a week ago. He was visiting his brother in Florida and T. J. Whitehead, of High Point College, brought the message. We were glad to have Mr. Whitehead with us. It does us all good to come in direct contact with the college students in such a way.

The Ladies' Auxiliary elected new officers at its February meeting. They are as follows: Miss Swannie Coble, president; Mrs. N. G. Bethea, vice-president; Mrs. Porter

Scott, secretary; Mrs. R. G. Hornady, treasurer; and Mrs. Hubert Terrell, reporter. Our ladies are making prepaations to be joint hostesses with the ladies of First church to the Branch Meeting next month. Early in February they served an oyster supper at the church and in the near future they are planning a cake and candy sale.

We have only one Christian Endeavor Society, which is the Junior Society, with Mrs. J. W. Sharpe as superintendent. They are holding meetings only twice a month during the winter months, but hope to hold one each Sunday evening soon. Although they are undertaking no outside activities at present the interest in the prayer service is maintained.

Last Saturday evening Miss Juanita Ephland and Mr. Jack Steele were married at the parsonage by our pastor. Mr. and Mrs. Steele expect to make their home in Burlington.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Greeson have a new son, born February 28.

MRS. A. V. AMICK, Reporter.

Canaan, Denton Charge.—Dr. S. W. Taylor accompanied by Rev. E. A. Bingham, delivered a very eloquent sermon at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. His subject was "Christ and the Church." He defined the purpose of the church emphasized the function of the church, and outlined the program of the local church. He recalled his hearers to the urgent need of the church helping support High Point College, the Children's Home, and the Methodist Protestant Herald. At 2:30 Sunday evening Dr. Taylor filled an appointment at Piney Grove church.

The Sunday school has survived the winter months and much interest has been shown by the officials to keep it wide-awake. The attendance is increasing as the weather becomes more favorable, and with the roads getting in better condition for travel in the rural districts. A spirit of optimism prevails throughout the school.

The prayer meetings are moving steadily onward under the leadership of Mr. S. E. Martin. There has been organized a home daily Bible reading contest. A prize will be given to the person who read and explains the most chapters of the Bible in a definite period of time.

WESLEY SEXTON, Reporter.

First Church, Thomasville. Mr. Peeler, our pastor, has been giving us some fine sermons. He and his wife have taken an interest in us and our church and are doing all they can to help our church along.

On the third Monday night in February we held a union meeting of all the C. E. Societies in our city. A very interesting program was given. Special music was rendered by the Freeman brothers quartet. Mrs. H. W. Maier and her Juniors from Community church gave a splendid program. We also had speakers from High Point. Mr. Luther Medlin, president of High Point C. E. city union, helped us to organize a union. We feel sure that this is a great opportunity for the young people. We want to thank Mr. Medlin and his workers for helping us get this union started.

On Monday afternoon, March 3, the Junior Mission Band held its regular monthly meeting. Mrs. A. H. Ragan made a splendid talk. The Mission Band is small now, but they are hoping to enlarge it by putting on a contest.

On Monday night, March 3, the Auxiliary held its regular monthly meeting. At this meeting the new officers were elected. The society decided to hold a "Thank-Offering Service" the fourth Sunday night in this month at which time a trialogue will be given. After the business had been transacted, Mrs. E. O. Peeler and her mother-in-law served delicious sandwiches, tea and cake.

Lexington, State Street.—The communion service Sunday morning was one of the most beautiful and spiritual and a large number of our folks and a few visitors received the sacrament for the first time from the hand of our present pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry.

We were delighted to receive into church membership Sunday morning Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Sink, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Satterwhite, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Hoffman, Mrs. Frances Lambeth, Mrs. E. L. Walker and Mrs. Cora Weaver.

Some of these have attended our church for a long time and were virtually ours before Sunday morning, but we are very grateful for the coming in of all of them.

The evening service was a very touching and sacred one. The theme was the importance of and our love for the Bible. All who had very old Bibles or any Bible dear because of memories connected with it were asked to bring them. Many were brought, some a hundred and fifty years old. The Sunday night services are attracting large numbers of visitors. Much favorable comment is heard in regard to the pleasure these "different" and deeply spiritual services afford.

We are still striving for and climbing toward two hundred in Sunday school attendance.

REPORTER.

Kistlers Church, Cleveland Charge.—Since our last report our pastor, Rev. C. E. Ridge, has delivered two good sermons. His subject for the first Sunday in March was "Heaven," which we all enjoyed.

Our church work and Sunday school are moving along nicely, but we hope for a larger attendance as the spring opens up. A good number of our members are planning to attend the District Rally to be held at Bess Chapel the fifth Sunday in March.

Mr. Eddy Ivester, better known as "Uncle Ed," one of our oldest members, is very feeble at this writing. We hope he will soon be better and able to fill his place in the church again.

May God's richest blessings rest on the Herald and its many readers.

REPORTER.

First Church, High Point.—The Sunday school report for Sunday, March 2nd, was the following: Attendance, 348; offering, $26.58. The school is improving under the superintendency of Prof. C. R. Hinshaw of the College faculty, and with the coming of spring new enthusiasm and interest are being shown.

On last Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for his subject, "Ships That Never Come In," one of the sermons repeated by vote of the congregation as being helpful. His text was taken from II Kings 22:48: "Jehoshaphat made ships of Tharshish to go to Ophir for gold; but they went not; for the ships were broken at Ezeongeber." He said in part :"The sailor's life with its dangers and adventures gives a thrill to those who have never been to sea, a peculiar joy and halo of romance that does not come to the land-lubber. There is something about the sea that grips a man, something that makes us love it, and want to sleep in its bosom. As Mrs. Farmer and I returned from the London C. E. Convention a few years ago, an old salt was buried at sea at his own request and just at daybreak one morning his body properly weighted was gently lowered over the side of the steeamer to a watery grave after the ritual was read by Dr. Francis E. Clark, now of blessed memory. Golden dreams precede the breaking of ships. Who is there here this morning who has not dreamed that some happy day his ship would come into port laden with wealth, honor, and happiness? We have been soured and embittered by the failure of these dreams, but it all happened for the best. 'How much is wasted, wrecked, forgot on this side of Heaven!' A student was asked on an examination what caused the defeat of the famous Spanish Armada, and his answer was this: 'Poor seamanship, poor marksmanship, and poor leadership.' No ship of enterprise without the sanction of God can come back successful to its port. There are ships that sail by sunny isles, that scorn the locks, weather, chart, and compass, and heed not God's will. Human slavery, the liquor traffic, white slavery are reefs, and it all depends on us to see that they shall go. When we take Jesus for the pilot of our craft, we sail out with hope of success. Every enterprise that is not under direction and guidance of God will fail. Wealth, riches, power, pleasure, worldly renown, let them all go down, but Jesus will stand at the helm and calm the storm.

"I know not wrere his islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care," and this is enough for me."

In the Vesper service Sunday evening a large and attentive audience gave evidence of the success of this type of service. The minister spoke on the subject, "A Man's Ideal Woman." This was the second of the series of sermons upon Ideals.

Mr. Farmer assured the women present that if any thought he were too severe on them, he would even up the score next Sunday evening when he will speak on "A Woman's Ideal Man."

Using I Peter 3:3, 4, "Whose adorning . . . let it be the hidden man of the heart, in that which is not corruptible, even the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, which is in the sight of God of great price," as the text, Mr. Farmer said: "Women have said some of the finest things in the Bible and done some of the most startling things in the world. The woman problem is a puzzle, but a lot of interest would be removed from life were it solved. Men and women are by nature drawn to the society of each other, and to rob either of this rightful pleasure would be abnormal.

"It is Christ's truth we need in this series of sermons. He it is who delivered womankind from ancient thraldom and women owe to Him their chief allegiance. His church is not a hospital for sick saints, but an army to train men and women to fight for righteousness. Is it palatable preaching or profitable which people desire? A dentist may be painless, but the preacher of Christ's cross cannot be so. I am not expecting to sprinkle cologne water upon festering sores in High Point. I know the standard for a pure church, a holy religion, a regenerate heart, and the victory over sin. That I shall speak.

"There are various opinions about the women of today. The chief of the Women's division of the Washington, D. C., Police Department recently said,, 'Gay cabaret life and cheap literature are making the majority of girls unfit to become wives and mothers. Too many women want a career in business away from home. The only career in every girl's life is the development of a real home.' Over against this is the opinion of Mrs. Robert E. Speer, who said: Flapper! I don't like the term but I like the girl for whom it stands. She is more competent, self-reliant, more worthy than ever before.' It is an open problem—you can find the kind you look for—but the fact is that every thinking man looks for and needs the ideal woman."

The factors constituting the ideal woman named by the speaker were: (a) One not causing a loss of respect by pandering to the lower natures of men; (b) one who is friendly and popular but not too intimate; (c) One who inspires men to noble living by an unimpeachable life; (d) one who exercises the ministry of a noble, God-inspired affection; and (e) one who maintains a spiritual idealism. "Women are the moulders of life in a larger manner than they sometimes dream," he said. "The mother, the sister, the sweetheart, the wife or just the friend should know that a low ideal takes the heart out of any endeavor—that a high ideal gives hope and noble impulses.

"It is women who have stood by the crosses of life—they seem to have the faculty of meeting and conquering darkness and tragedy. When women cease to pray, there is less hope for men. Theirs is the high privilege even of getting men to church often enough to keep the spirit of Christ burning in their hearts. The religious faith and sanctity of life in womanhood make for an orderly, honorable race of men."

At this service Miss Margaret Neese and Mr. C. L. Gray, Jr., sang very beautifully "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," as a duet.

On Monday afternoon the general meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was delightfully entertained by Mrs. H. U. Oakes and Mrs. Lester R. Peacock at the attractive new home of Mrs. Peacock on West Farriss avenue. Devotionals were conducted by Mrs. R. M. Andrews, after which Mrs. Pickens gave the fourth chapter of the mission study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," and this book will be finished at the Circle meeting next Monday. Mrs. S. S. Coe, the president, then read her annual report, a very beautiful and comprehensive paper. She told in a brief way of the successful work of the year, and tendered thanks to every woman, girl, and child of the organization for her lovely spirit of loyalty and earnest, whole-hearted co-operation. Mrs. Coe has given unstintedly her time, talents and prayers to the exacting duties of this office when the work of merging three old societies into one new one was puzzling and intricate, but by her tact, Christian courage and splendid executive ability she has smoothed away all differences, and blended 250 women and girls into a fine Auxiliary, a working body which is one of the largest and best assets of First church. We accord all praise and honor to this capable, estimable young matron. Upon a vote of the Auxiliary, the membership of the Circles will remain the same as last year. Delegates to Branch Meeting at Burlington were elected as follows: Mrs. S. S. Coe and Mrs. J. H. Walker, by virtue of their office as president and secretary; Mrs. S. D. Shelton and Mrs. A. M. Rankin, alternates; Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, Mrs. Geo. T. Penny, and Miss Elizabeth Welch. After the conclusion of business the hostesses, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Oakes and Master Arnold Koonce, Jr., served delicious Russian tea, salad, and cakes. There was an attendance of 53.

At the Christian Endeavor meeting Monday evening, Miss Selma Clapp led the discussion on the topic, "Why and How to Win Others to Christ." At a one-day C. E. Institute, which will be held in the Reformed church here next Friday, March 14th, Dr. Ira Landrith, a nationally known speaker, will appear on the program. He will doubtless present an inspiring message, and our young people are co-operating in this institute, and are raising their part of the expenses.

The Wednesday supper meeting and devotional service will be held this week as usual.

On Wednesday evening, March 19, and the following Friday evening, March 21, an entertaining play called "Home Ties" will be presented under the auspices of the C. E. Society.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton L. Whitaker, of Gastonia, were week-end guests of their mother, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, at the college.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Penny have returned from a lengthy visit to points in Georgia and Florida.

Mrs. R. T. Pickens went to Greensboro last Friday to attend the State D. A. R. Conferference as a delegate from the Alexander Martin chapter, and after the delightful luncheon at the King Cotton Hotel, drove to Guilford College to witness the unveiling of a marker at the birthplace of Dolly Madison, daughter of Friends John Payne and Mary Coles, and wife of the fourth president of the United States, James Madison. This marker was erected jointly by Guilford Battle chapter, Greensboro, and Alexander Martin chapter, High Point. Little Miss Garnet Hinshaw, daughter of Prof. C. R. Hinshaw, assisted in the unveiling.

Asheville.- Due to bad weather our attendance has not been so good for a few Sundays, but today was about normal attendance. Pastor Paschall gave us his usual good sermons, his subject in the morning being, "Making the Home Christian." His text was "The father believed and his whole house." The three points particularly stressed were: (1) If the home develops law abiding citizens the nation will have law-abiding citizens. (2) Teach the children to properly evaluate things. (3) Make the home Christian by having the family altar. The concluding remark: "It is better to have a hungry body than a shrivelled soul." Brother and Sister members, you missed a treat.

Wednesday evening at 6:30 is to be our second church night, with supper and a musical program, and the various meetings follow a short prayer service.

Mrs. F. R. McIntire and Mrs. Y. D. Eller, who have been sick for some time, are much improved.

Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Williams returned Tuesday from a three weeks' sojourn in Florida. Mrs. Williams left Thursday for Greensboro as a delegate to the D. A. R. Convention in session there.

Mrs. F. W. Paschall is spending a few weeks in Whitakers with her parents.

Mr. Richard Paschall, brother of our pastor, spent a few days in Asheville last week.

Gillburg, Vance.—Our Sunday school is progressing fine now. There were about seventy present today, including the visitors. Our new superintendent, Mr. Tracie Grissom, is doing fine work and we feel like we are going to have a real Sunday school now.

We were very sorry that the pastor, Rev. J. W. Braxton, could not be with us today, but were very glad to have Mr. Walter Vaughn to talk to us. He gave a very interesting and helpful talk on the unrest that is raging in our country today. He stressed the need as of old for the Good Samaritan to come along and help the world to get back to peace and contentment.

We are very sorry to say that Mrs. Julian Hoyle, our reporter for Herald, is in the hospital, and could not be with us today. We hope that she will soon revore and be with us again. ALMA POYTHRESS.

Flat Rock, Vance. -As our reporter has had so much sickness in her home, I have been asked to report from Flat Rock.

Everything is moving onward. Sunday school was reorganized the fourth Sunday in February. We are very glad to have Mr. F. G. Hester back in our Sunday school and teacher of the Senior class.

Everyone seems delighted with the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Braxton. His sermons are certainly food for thought and right living.

We put on Dollar a Member canvass in February, but have not been able to raise our quota yet.

On last first Sunday afternoon we held New Century program, using the program furnished by the Board. Miss Maris Hester acted as leader. In addition, Miss Kathleen Paschall gave a splendid talk on "The Place of Youth in the Rural Church." Miss Elizabeth Fox sang a solo, "The Beautiful Land on High." All were much enjoyed. The offering amounted to over $3.00.

The Woman's Auxiliary meets monthly but the interest isn't what we would like it to be New officers will be elected at the March meeting, and it is hoped they may arouse new interest. The Auxiliary members and the Juniors are planning a public program of Missionary information and inspiration to be given the third Sunday evening. An offering will be taken for Mission work.

Hope all the sick may rapidly recover.

Our Four Graduates

We have three girls and one boy who will graduate the Jamestown High School this coming May. They must have their commencement outfits, like other boys and girls. Not so fine to be sure, but yet such that will not put them to shame. They must be neatly dressed. So if persons or S. S. classes would like to remember these young people it will be wise to send us the money and let a part of it go for their outfits and some for presents. In that way each one will be remembered about as the other.

We thank all of you, and we will keep pressing on with the work here just as long as we can stand the strain of it.

Faithfully yours in His service,

When He Comes

Will He find me clean in hands,
Holding nought that's not my own?
Will He find me true in aim,
Reaping only where I've sown?

Will He find me playing fair
Every game that life presents,
No accuser coming forth,
Charging me with ill intents?

Will He find me pure in heart,
All the dross and dirt removed,
Able then to see my God,
With the hope I'll be approved?

Will He find me up and doing,
Trying hard to smooth the way,
Warning men to be quite ready
For His coming that Great Day?

Why Be Out of Employment?

There are those who stand all the day idle because no man has hired them. For the most part they are people whose only motive for working is to secure to themselves the stipulated wages. They do not think of what they are to give to the world: only of what they are to receive from the world. Wouldn't it be better, instead of standing and waiting for a call, to go out seeking opportunities to serve, with little regard for the remuneration? If men realized with Jesus that it is more blessed to give than to receive, they would go about seeking to do good. The Good Samaritan did not stop and ask, What will I get out of this? before he helped the wounded man. The spirit of Jesus and the spirit of the Good Samaritan would make this a busy world in well-doing. There would be no lack of employment and there would be little want.

O. Henry Cleared

O. Henry, America's greatest short story writer, served a term in the federal prison at Columbus, Ohio. He was charged with embezzlement while employed in a bank in Texas. Could a man of thievish disposition write such stories as O. Henry produced? It is not easily believed. O. Henry grew up in Greensboro, and Dr. C. Alphonzo Smith, who also grew up in Greensboro about the same time and became a distinguished university professor of literature, has written a biography of O. Henry, making most plausible his innocence of the crime for which he suffered. O. Henry seems to have been a man with a keen sense of honor. His pride perhaps prevented his making proper effort to defend himself. It perhaps seemed to him impossible that he should be made to suffer severely and long for an offense of which he knew himself entirely innocent. He made the mistake of running away from trial, which he probably considered an outrage in itself. And on trial he took refuge in silence instead of speaking out in his own defense. The jury decided against him when all the facts were consistent with his innocence. His prison life no doubt helped to develop his power as a story writer, as prison life helped John Bunyan to write Pilgrim's Progress.

Hoover Moves for Economy

President Hoover, seeing the vast bulk of appropriations asked for in Congress, called about his breakfast table a number of leaders and protested against the proposed extravagance. It would increase taxes 40 per cent. Some Congressmen, unduly pressed by their constituencies for money from the federal government, had the grace to thank the President for his words of warning. Others thought it a laughing matter, saying there was no chance in the world for most of the proposals to win endorsement. But the President is not so unsophisticated as not to know the danger. Congressmen, hoping for re-election, may yield to the clamors of their people at home for appropriations which true economy would forbid.

Unexpected Kindnesses

I suppose we all receive them, at least occasionally. They bring to us a pleasant surprise. They may reveal to us a friendliness we did not suspect. They instantly raise our estimate of human goodness. We not only thank the friend that showed the kindness, but we have a kindlier feeling toward the next man we meet. These unexpected, disinterested acts of kindness are treasures for memory. They enrich our consciousness. We feel that life is worth more because of them. If such be the case with occasional and incidental kindnesses, what shall we say of kindnesses that come to us habitually? They have a value beyond calculation. Our occasional friends and our constant friends are both to be remembered and appreciated. Without them life would be empty.

The Church Business Meeting

Rev. Stanley C. Harrell has in the Christian Sun some words on this subject that are so pertinent to our Methodist Protestant churches that we quote them here:

"Does your Church have difficulty in reaching its membership with its business plans and programs? Who formulates and who approves the financial goals and objectives of the Church? It is not a question as to the method such matters follow as it is a question as to whether or not when the final action has been taken, that they represent the action of the entire Church membership.

"Is not the Church in danger of drifting into a sort of system of taxation without representation? Not because of any desire for such a condition, but because the members either cannot or will not take the trouble to attend the meet-

A BRIEF SKETCH OF THE FOUNDING OF HIGH POINT COLLEGE

By Dr. R. M. Andrews, President

(Second of a Series of Articles Provided by Our Denominatioal Board of Education.

To write a brief historical sketch giving the inside information about a college is very much like dealing with personalities,, since all colleges grow out of the personal hopes and ambitions of men and women. In this, High Point College has been no exception: for, many years ago before a brick was laid here there were those who dreamed of such an institution and the chief dreamer of such dreams was Rev. J. F. McCulloch. So much was he influenced by this desire that he gave up a position as teacher in a college in another state and came to North Carolina for the purpose of establishing a college where the Methodist Protestant young people might receive instruction under the auspices of their church. It took many years, much agitation, sacrifice, and prayers to bring the church in North Carolina into that state of mind when it was willing to attempt to establish the institution.

The first step towards building the college was the building of a business house in the city of Greensboro which was known as the Publishing House and which represented a total investment of more than $11,000. The property has recently been sold for more than $80,000; but during the years in which the building was rented there was a substantial income from it which aided very greatly in the publication of the Methodist Protestant Herald which became the voice or messenger of those who advocated the building of the college.

The first large donation made to the college, but which the college never received, was a gift of $10,000 from Mr. J. C. Roberts, which was made with a stipulation that the college be built by 1920. Failing of this, the gift was to be used as an invested fund for educating young men who were preparing for the ministry.

The next step towards the college was taken by the Annual Conference at Enfield, in 1920, when the conference was urged by the president, R. M. Andrews, to go forward at once in the erection of the college or to abandon the cherished hope of having an institution of our own in the North Carolina Conference. The conference at once appointed a committee composed of President Andrews, Revs. J. E. Pritchard, and L. W. Gerringer who were to visit the churches in the North Carolina district and to inaugurate a campaign to secure funds for the college.

$241,000 were subscribed by the members of the M. P. Church, $100,000 was pledged by the city of High Point and a college site of fifty-two acres was given by a group of High Point citizens.

The building committee consisted of Dr. F. R. Harris, Dr. J. F. McCulloch, Dr. R. M. Andrews, Mr. R. F. Williams, Mr. J. Norman Wills, Mr. R. H. Brooks, and Mr. John S. Pickett. Mr. Herbert B. Hunter was employed as architect for the building and Mr. Robert B. Cridland as landscape architect. Dr. Andrews, Mr. J. Norman Wills, and Mr. Hunter visited a number of colleges and universities in the interest of the proposed college and after further investigation recommended that the colonial style of architecture be chosen.

The corner stone of Roberts Hall, named after Mr. J. C. Roberts, was laid on the 29th day of June, 1922; the address was delivered by Dr. T. H. Lewis, president of the General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church. The first class matriculated September 15, 1924. It was composed of fifteen students who registered as sophomores with a class of one hundred and one freshmen and sixteen special students.

For the first two years High Point College, for this became its name, was run as a junior college; that is, it did two years of college work and two years of high school work. But at the commencement of 1926 all high school work was discontinued and High Point College became a four-year college of liberal arts.

The first graduating class was given a B rating by the State Department of Education; that is, they were required to attend a summer school in which they could secure six hours credit in order to be rated as A grade teachers. Since that time the college has been rated as A by the State Department of Education in North Carolina, University of North Carolina, and other educational institutions.

The college was organized with a faculty of sixteen members, president,a bursar, a librarian and athletic coach. The student enrollment has increasedfrom 132 to more than 300 of whom more than two-thirds have been members of the Methodist Protestant Church each year.

The college is operated without an endowment so there has been a deficit each year since its beginning. There are two dormitories beside the administration building, the power plant and site of fifty-two acres worth $625,000 including all the needed equipment for the teaching of science and other subjects of a college of liberal arts.

High Point College has graduated three classes, numbering ninety-nine students. Most of these are teaching in the public schools of North Carolina. Two are in the theological seminary, two at the University of North Carolina doing graduate work, three at Duke University in the graduate school and three in medical schools, and one is teaching in a college.

The debating teams sent out by the college have been unusually successful in winning a decision in a majority of the debates in which they have engaged, likewise in oratorical contests our contestants have been fortunate.

In athletics—football, basketball and baseball—the college has also been successful in its contests more often than it has failed to win.

As an evidence of the loyalty of the graduating classes, the first class of thirteen caused to be placed a memorial tablet in memory of Dr. C. L. Whitaker, the first and only member of the faculty to die since the school was opened. The second class erected a beautiful gate to the main driveway costing more than $1,000; the third class placed a beautiful fountain on the campus and the class of 1930 has already decided that their reminders on the campus will represent their love and devotion in a most substantial way.

The Hi-Po is the name of the college weekly published by the student body, and the Zenith is the name of the college annual. Of course a catalogue is issued by the college each spring and gladly sent to any interested person.

Jamestown Female College

In perpetuating the memory of this institution two of the literary societies of High Point College caused to be erected on the campus a granite block which was encased in brick taken from the old institution with a bronze tablet upon which are the following words: "This marker contains brick from the Jamestown Female College opened by the Methodist Protestant Church, January 5, 1859. Destroyed by fire 1861.

Nikanthian and Thalean Literary Societies, May 1, 1929.”

Some of Our Most Pressing Needs

First, our indebtedness must be taken care of and provisions should be made for the annual deficit which comes from operating the college without an endowment. While the North Carolina Conference gave substantially towards the payment of the deficit last year and is now undertaking to raise $20,000 from the members of the Methodist Protestant Church, this is only temporary.

We also are badly in need of a gymnasium. There is no building on the campus which can be used as a substitute for it. We also need a library building and a building to house the student activities such as the literary societies ,the religious activity groups and other student groups which meet steadily on the campus.

High Point College has a great opportunity for service. In the city alone there are about 40,000 people; Winston-Salem, 75,000; Greensboro, 60,000; Asheboro, Thomasville and Lexington are not far away. The college is in the very heart of the Piedmont section and should receive from this area alone more than students enough to fill its halls.

VACATION CHURCH SCHOOL

The North Carolina Conference Council of Religious Education realizes the worth and value of the Vacation Church School. Religious training is one of the greatest needs of childhood and youth. Our Conference Council is ready to aid the home and the church in every possible way in their program of religious education. During the summer months the Council will have two young ladies in the field as supervisors of Vacation Church Schools. These young ladies are capable, competent, Christ-like. One of them will be ready for work about the middle of May, the other about the second week in June.

Brother Pastor, are you planning to conduct a Vacation Church School in your church this summer? It is a splendid piece of work and every pastor, if at all possible, should conduct such a school. Your local Council is ready to help you in this work. Of course, we can not send a supervisor into every church, but we are ready to assist as many as time will permit. So let me know at your earliest convenience if you are planning to put on a school and if you want the assistance of one of our workers. I would like to know as early as possible so that I may work out a schedule for our supervisors. So let's have your letters. Address all communications to Fred W. Paschall, 165 Hillside Street, Asheville, N. C.

ings when such matters are under consideration. Nobody can feel as keen a responsibility for the plans which he has had no part in formulating as one should feel for the activities of the Church. This condition is doubtless responsible for the fact that many Church members speak of the affairs of their Church as “what they are doing.” What is the solution? So far, none has occurred to us, and we have not found any one who has a satisfactory answer to give. If you have been able to devise any system that is even partially satisfactory, you owe it to the cause to make it public.”

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Dr. Andrew's Resignation

After eight years of arduous labors in establishing and running High Point College, Dr. Andrews has felt justified in not assuming these burdens longer. His resignation, therefore, has been tendered the board of trustees, to take effect August 31—the end of the college year. In retiring from the college Dr. Andrews will do so in the consciousness of his unfailing devotion to the institution and his undiminished zeal to promote its every interest. He has contributed his full share in the development of the college, so far, and will continue to serve its interests in every possible way. We do not know his plans for the future, but as he goes out into other fields of labor he will have our esteem and confidence.

The trustees appointed the following committee to find a successor to Dr. Andrews: Mr. R. M. Cox, chairman of the board; Mr. J. Norman Wills, Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference; Dr. F. W. Stephenson, executive secretary of the Board of Christian Education; and the President of the Conference.

Charlotte

March 12.—We were with Brother Harrison and his people in their second quarterly conference. We found the church rating well in organization efficiency. The Sunday School is graded, graded lessons are used, and separate housing apartments are provided, except in two departments. The average attendance of the school is about 120. A monthly allotment of $10 is given to the Children's Home. The church has an active auxiliary, and the president, Mrs. Little, reported that the branch budget of $200 would be paid in full. She reported, also, that the new order of women's work had enabled them to enlist more of their women, and that they were getting more work done. Brother Harrison is scout master of a troop of 15 boys. He meets with them weekly. Plans for Easter-Pentecost Evangelism are being worked out. Decision Day is to be observed in the Sunday School, and a revival meeting will be held, culminating wtih Easter. We found the church confronted with one disturbing problem—finance. Their budget averages $21 per member, which is rather heavy for them. They built a very splendid parsonage last year, and this, of course, has added greatly to their obligations. Since we were with them in this conference we understand that they have adopted the plan of many other churches, and have eliminated every expense possible. An energetic and persisting board of stewards is the dependence of the church in the matter of finance. We think of this as one of our "honor roll" churches, and we most earnestly hope for the continuance of that good standard. Brother Harrison is giving himself unreservedly to his work, and we most earnestly hope and pray that he and his people may have the desires of their hearts in the spiritual and material progress of the charge.

Midland

March 16.—Our visit to this charge was limited to two churches—Pine Bluff and Love Grove. We found a well-attended Sunday School at each place, and splendid congregations at the preaching services. Owing to the necessity of a visit to Pageland Charge, we had to cancel the appointment at Mill Grove Church Sunday night. Sorry to have missed this appointment, but we shall hope to be with this church at another time. Since our visit to this charge last year opera chairs have been installed in the new Love Grove Church, at a cost of $1,200. The seating capacity is about 400. Only the painting remains now to give the church a completed appearance. The congregation has done well with this building; all debts are paid, and the plan is to dedicate the church this year. At each of these churches "Dollar a Member" has been presented, and some response made. We trust that the effort will be continued, and that much more may be received. An increase in subscriptions to our church papers would be highly helpful to this charge. If the total allotment of 61 subscribers could be secured this would hardly do more than put the paper in 50 per cent of the families on the charge. We shall hope for a marked increase of subscriptions from this field. Brother Hulin retains the confidence and esteem of his people, and he is giving himself to his work with his usual earnestness. We were sorry to find Sister Hulin in declining health. Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Hill gave us a pleasant surprise by their presence in the service at Love Grove.

Pageland

March 16-17.—On Sunday night we were at Rose Hill Church, and on Monday night with the New Hope congregation. Our visits to Rose Hill brings afresh to our memory Rev. J. H. Turner. For many years he was an honored member of the South Carolina Conference, and later of our own Conference. He lived near this church and served it as pastor. His memory is still honored by the church and the community. The remoteness of this charge from other churches, and limited finances, makes pastoral supply a problem. However, we are still working at this and are hopeful of a timely solution. It was our privilege while on this charge to see Brother T. E. Martin, and to be a guest in his home at supper. Brother Martin will be recalled as a former pastor in our conference.

We enjoyed our visit with each of those charges and we are grateful to pastors and people for their kindnesses to us. We were privileged to be a guest at the Charlotte parsonage Monday night, and to have brief visits with Brothers Short and Milloway on our return Tuesday.

427

This is the number of new and renewal subscriptions to the HERALD to date, according to report of last week. It will be noted in the report that one charge—Asheboro—is written in capitals, indicating that the full quota on this charge has been secured. Brother Pritchard and his people have set a good example for other charges. Two other charges—Calvary and Liberty-Siler—are getting comfortably near their goals. We shall look for each of them to appear in capitals by next report. It is greatly gratifying to see this list grow. Every new subscriber means a more interested church member. It means, also, added financial support for the HERALD. Enough subscribers would solve the problem of financing the paper.

Still Climbing

Brother Harrison says that we may list Charlotte Church with churches pledging "Dollar a Member" in full. We are doing that this week, with grateful thanks to Brother Harrison and the Charlotte congregation. And more: on our way to Midland last Saturday, we saw Brother C. G. Isley in Lexington, and received from him the assurance that South Lexington Church would pay in full to the college. We expect to receive orders from him very soon to put this church on the "honor roll." It's going—"Dollar a Member" is. We are mounting towards the top, round by round.

Salaries

Many of our pastors are totally dependent upon their salaries for their living. Grocery bills, clothing bills, fuel bills, gas bills, school bills, church dues, taxes, and what not—all must be paid out of salaries. We urge our churches not to forget their pastors in these times of financial stringency. They are not complaining, and are willing to share in the "pinch"; but let us not forget them, and permit them to share more than is their due. The best way to get out of this stringency is to "bring the tithe into the storehouse." We wish to express our appreciation to all charges for what they are doing to take care of their pastors, and our confidence, likewise, that they will not be unmindful of this obligation.

"Let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things."—Gal. 6:6.

This Is His Will

The deepening of spiritual life and the reviving of evangelism in the church. There may be questions about the will of the Lord in other matters; there can be none about this. It is his will that his church should abound in spiritual life, and that it should be deeply concerned with that which lies closest to his heart—the salvation of sinners. Pastors must lead the way in this. With the pulpit on fire for God, a flame of evangelism will sweep through the church. And surely with all of the evangelical churches of this country working toward this one good end, God will visit his people with a new outpouring of his Spirit, and thousands that are being saved will be added to his church. Whatever may be the cost, brethren, let us give God a chance in His church to magnify His saving Grace.

SATAN OFTEN ATTRACTIVE

The Devil should not be conceived of as always being invested with medieval grotesqueness—as a monster with horns and hoofs and a fiery breath. Christ characterized him as "the prince of this world." He is thus the prince of all that homes itself in agreeable, sensuous, material world conditions.—Selected.

CONSIDER IN THIS DAY

I have one superstition and it haunts me.

I am afraid of selfishness. I believe that the person who seeks only to acquire and hold, loses most things worth while. The man who shuts his heart, his mind and his purse in the face of human suffering will shrivel and decay. Happiness never visits those who have no thought for the happiness of others. Bitterness and heartaches are the logical conclusion of mental bigotry and social indifference.

If I had but one dollar I would be afraid to deny a portion of it for some cause outside myself. I would rather be an easy mark for those who beg than to be so logical and so wise that I lose my touch with human suffering and my sympathy for those who have found life's highway rough.

I never knew a man who was the richer for spending everything he got hold of upon himself. I wouldn't trade my peace of mind for his automobiles nor the smiles of my children for his luxurious apartments. He thinks he is clever and wise, but, in reality, he is narrow and dull. "What I have gotten, is mine," he says, and he smiles with self-satisfaction. What he has acquired may be his, but some day God is going to ask an accounting and that accounting will demand more than a bank balance.—From editorial in Church Management.

CULTURE

Culture is not a good per se (in itself). Learning is only good when in subjection to God. When not in subjection to the will of God it is a vain, proud, self-conceited, boastful, usurper of the Holy Spirit's place and has sent many a smart professor of religion to the flames of hell.

After all this modern strut over modern culture, what is it? It is a subtle worship of matter. The science of many religious schools is that of sun-waves, sand grains, and fish-scales far more than it is of God and the immortal soul. When boiled down, it is the science of dirt more than the science of Deity.—Selected.

IF I WERE A JEW

By GRENVILLE KLEISER

(Rabbi Stephen S. Wise spoke on "If I Were a Christian", in the Free Synagogue, New York, December 22nd, 1929)

If I were a Jew, what would I do?

I would strictly mind my own business.

I would seek to improve myself mentally, physically and spiritually from every available source

I would quench in myself any desire to go where I knew I was not wanted. My self-respect would prevent me from being knowingly intrusive.

I would diligently cultivate such desirable qualities as quietness, humility and refinement.

I would avoid every form of self-exploitation.

If I were a Jew—as I am a Christian—I would subordinate intellectualism to spiritually in my study or practice of religion.

I would frankly recognize in my own race any objectionable characteristics and would earnestly seek to remedy them—beginning with myself.

I woud eschew religious argument.

If I were a Jew—as I am a Christian—I would strictly avoid criticizing those of other religions, especially Christians.

I would correct in myself such personal faults as boastfulness, loquacity and disregard for the convenience and rights of others.

I would repress in myself any undue sensitiveness regarding my race and religion.

I would avoid trespassing upon any man's individual right of self-government.

I would give generously without any expectation of recognition or reward.

I would neither seek nor claim scholastic superiority.

I would avoid envy, strife and censoriousness.

I would seriously ponder these Bible passages:

Matthew: 2:2; 7:24, 25; 18:4; 22:37. Luke 23:37, 38. Romans 6:23; 10:1. I Corinthians 15:22. Galatians 3:29. Titus 3:9. Philippians 3:14. I John 5:11, 12.

"PERILOUS TIMES"

In penning his last epistle, Paul told his son in the faith, Timothy, of what would come to pass in the "last days." He described them as "perilous" times, the Holy Spirit through him using a word chalepoi, that He used it to describe how "fierce" the demoniac of Gadora was, exceeding "fierce" so that no man might pass that way. It would seem to indicate that the fierceness of the man and the perilousness of the last days were boht due to the same demon influences.

Read for yourself the description. He gives us of those perilous times and then compare them with what you see and read about in the newspapers of today—men, lovers of their own selves, money lovers, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God, "having a form of godliness but denying (in their lives) the power thereof."

Think a bit over each of these adjectives and descriptive phrases. Take one of two here as examples: "Without natural affection"—were there ever as many murders of parents by children or of children byb parents as there have been in the past two years? Were there ever as many broken homes? Were there ever over 5,000 suicides of children under 12 years of age?

Recently there came to light this fact—a woman (not in America) who had the reputation of loving orphan children so greatly that she was receiving all who were brought to her, in her large estate. But when some suspicion was aroused a large room was discovered in which were various-sized whips and a table with strap and buckle, and chairs for spectators. She had been binding these poor kiddies and whipping them to death for the delight of the spectators, who had been paying $50.00 a seat for the spectacle! "Without natural affection!"

"Disobedient to parents"—is any further word of comment necessary? "Unthankful"—it is hard sometimes to keep from losing faith in folks. "Lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God"—see the crowds in line at the movies, and their attendance on a religious service on Sunday evening, to say nothing of a week night service. "Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof"—yes, there are more church members, and more religious organizations, and more humanitarian activity; but when it come to real spiritual service—Bible study, prayer, personal effort to win souls to Christ, and an unworldly life (a life so different from that which the worldling lives that it really becomes a separated life), the numbers are relatively, if not actually, distressingly smaller than they were thirty, twenty, ten, even five years ago!

Perilous times—chalepoi—fierce times; times influenced by demons! These times! What shall we do about them?

No, this is not pessimistic; it is simply facing facts fearlessly! There is but one thing to be done—let each one examine his own heart; if anything that resembles anything in that list be found, confess it and forsake it; and look to the Spirit of the Living God to control henceforth, that no demon influence may manifest itself.—Atlanta, North Avenue News.

THE CHANGELESS CHRIST

Come, and abide with us, O Heavenly Guest!
Then shall our lives indeed be richly blest;
For with Thy presence darkness turns to light,
And at Thy coming all our life grows bright.

Lord, without Thee we faint and go astray;
Alone, we can not climb the heavenward way;
But, Master, if with Thee we journey on,
Our lives are joyous and our hearts are strong.

O Master, share with us Thy presence sweet;
Thy changeless love our every need can meet;
Oh, come, and ever in our hearts abide,
And be to us our "Light at Eventide."

Then, as for us earth's shadows flee away,
And on our vision breaks heaven's perfect day,
Thy presence, Master, still our joy shall be—
The changeless Christ—through all eternity.

NOT THE END

When I go down to my grave I can say, "I have finished my day's work," but I cannot say, "I have finished my life." My day's work will begin the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare; it closes with the twilight to open with the dawn.—Victor Hugo.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE GOLDEN SCARF

Jacintha Winston looked down at the armful of books that she was carrying and sighed. How relieved she would be when this week was over! She was so tired of tests. Geometry and history bothered her most. She glanced again at the heavy, dull-looking volumes. Both contained subjects that she disliked.

This was her second year at high school, and she was beginning to tire of it; at least, she told herself that that was the cause of her discontent that afternoon.

She would not own even to herself that the cause had nothing at all to do with her studies, because she had said to Phyllis, "I certainly shan't let it bother me," and she was doing her best to live up to her remark.

Phyllis Deane was Jacintha's cousin. They had lived in the same house for six years. Jacintha recalled how pleased she had been when Phyllis had come to live with them. She had always longed for a sister her own age, and this ten-year-old cousin had filled the place.

Together they had enjoyed every girlish pleasure, attended school and Sunday School, read books, and shared the same friends. But lately the friendship had changed somehow. Although they still lived together their interests were not exactly the same. Jacintha had a hard time with her school work. To Phyllis studies had always been accomplished very easily. She had taken up music, also and had made many new friends in high school. Often Jacintha felt that Phyllis was neglecting her for other girls, but this was their first real quarrel, and it seemed as if it would also be their last, for Jacintha and her cousin had hardly spoken to each other for five days.

Once Jacintha had tried to begin a conversation, but Phyllis had given no encouragement; so when Phyllis spoke to Jacintha that morning, Jacintha acted as if she were quite deaf.

"I shall never apoligize. That's final," said Jacintha, as she mounted the flight of stone steps that led up the high terrace on which their pretty green-and-white cottage stood. "If only mother were at home!"

She had spoken aloud just exactly as if there were some one there to hear her. Prince, the brown-and-white collie, had danced out from the back of the house to welcome her, but she hardly noticed him.

"It was entirely her fault. She admits that it was her evening to go to Aunt Jane's, and why should"—

Jacintha had stopped talking very suddenly. Prince felt that he was expected to say something in reply; so he gave a joyous bark, which went unnoticed.

A package between the screen door and the front door had caused Jacintha to break off in the middle of her sentence. Jacintha stooped to pick it up, and as she straightened again there was a different expression upon her face.

"Miss J. Winston," she read. "Hm! For me? I wonder what it is." Her curiosity was aroused and she shook the package by the side of her ear, but it made no sound. However, Jacintha smiled broadly, and there was a gleam in her eyes as she opened the front door and hurried to her room.

The heavy, uninteresting books were dropped on to the bed without another thought, and her fingers untied the knotted string that held the wrappings in place.

"Oh, how interesting it looks; I wonder what it can be," she said, as she took off the first layer of brown paper and found a box carefully wrapped in tissue paper and tied with pink ribbon. This she loosened, and found a pretty, rainbow-tinted box.

"It must be something nice," she murmured to herself. Her fingers were pulling off the lid and her eyes were wide with anticipation.

When the lid was off at last, more tissue concealed the contents, and then she saw the gleam of gold and yellow. In the paper lay the prettiest scarf that Jacintha had ever seen.

Her first thought was that it was just what she wanted to wear with the pretty dress her mother had made for her before she had gone away. Then she wondered who had sent the box, and search among the crumpled papers revealed a pretty card:

I've come to brighten up your day.
I hope I'll make you smile,
For if I do this thing for you
I'll know that I'm worth while.

Jacintha read the verse twice, and then looked again at the package wrapping to be sure that it had been addressed to her. She threw the pretty scarf over her shoulders and stood before the mirror in admiration.

"It is beautiful, and so is Phyllis. Of course, she bought it for me as a peace offering, but I shan't keep it. It wouldn't be fair. Phyl has spent entirely to much of her savings for this. She always does such extravagant things. No, I can't take it from her, but I love her for sending it, and I'll show her that I do."

Quickly she wrapped the package in its white tissue and ribbon, and then put on her gingham dress.

"I'm going to cook everything that Phyllis likes best for supper, and have it all ready, so that she won't have to help," Jacintha told her image in the mirror, and before she went toward the kitchen she carried the package into her cousin's room.

Everything was bright again. Jacintha sang as she beat eggs for the raisin gingerbread that was her cousin's favorite cake. Her feet danced from stove to refrigerator, to sink, to table.

What a pretty scarf that was! How she wished she could keep it, and could afford to buy Phyl one just like it in crimson! Phyl looked so pretty in that color.

But Jacintha knew that she should not spend her savings on such extravagances any more than Phyl should. Mother had told them before she went away for her long visit to grandmother that they must not only take care of themselves and of dad, but also that they must be sure to keep up their savings accounts.

Jacintha gave a little sigh as she though of her mother. She had been away almost six weeks. She knew this quarrel would never have occurred if mother had been there. Dad was not with them enough to know that they were speaking to each other only when they must, but mother would have known on the very first day.

Well, it was over now, and the gingerbread was in the oven with scalloped potatoes. What else was it that Phyl liked best? Oh, yes; mayonnaise. Jacintha consulted the cookbook quickly and collected the ingredients. Swish, swish went the egg beater, and so it was no wonder that Jacintha did not hear the front door open and close very quietly.

When Phyllis entered she smelled gingerbread, and she liked the spicy odor. She knew that her cousin was enjoying herself in the kitchen. She did not go toward the kitchen, however. She knew that Jac enjoyed cooking, and was glad that her cousin had chosen to make her favorite dessert, but she did not intend to speak to her again. She had done her part, and anyway the quarrel was not her fault. She supposed that it would last forever and ever. She had been telling herself such things as she walked home from her music lesson.

The trouble as she saw it was all with Jacintha. Lately Jac had been difficult to understand. "She's so slow with her school work, and seems to think that I should be slow with mine. She doesn't like to have me go with other girls. I suppose that she feels left out." Such thoughts had been running through Phyl's mind.

Phyllis acknowledged that it had been her night to stay wiht Aunt Jane. She and Jacintha had promised to take turns staying with her whenever she asked them, for Aunt Jane had not been well. She had telephone for one of the girls to come over that evening, and it was Phyl's time, but she had accepted an invitation to play the piano and attend a party. The guests were of a crowd that she had met recently at school, and she was eager to cultivate their acquaintance.

Jacintha had not been invited and could not have gone if she had been, for she had studying to do. Tests were coming thick and fast, and although she could study just as well at Aunt Jane's house, she did not want to go. It was not her turn, she said. But in the end she had gone, and Aunt Jane had not known that she did it unwillingly.

Phyllis had promised to make it up to Jac, but she never had. They had quareled. Phyl had not enjoyed the party, Jacintha had been cross because she had not been invited, and no one had been the least pleased except Aunt Jane. She believed that she had the two dearest girls for nieces that any aunt could wish to have.

As soon as Phyllis reached her room she shut the door.

"I suppose she is making gingerbread to taunt me. I like it, but I can't eat what she makes when we don't even speak."

As she finished her sentence she spied the pretty pink-and-white package on the table.

"That must be for me. I wonder what it is." She soon had the box open and the beautiful scarf spread out wide before her.

"What a gorgeous color!" She wound it about her shoulders, making a striking contract over her green dress. Her black eyes shone and the coloring of her skin seemed more vivid.

"I believe I like it as well as red." She read the little verse and her smile broadened.

"Indeed you are worth while, you pretty thing," she said, as she ran her fingers down the gleaming folds and her eyes danced with pleasure.

Of course, she suppsoed that Jac had given it to her. "A peace offering. What a dear she is! I shouldn't take it, though, for I was in the wrong. But I do want it."

At that moment the doorbell rang. Quickly Phyllis placed the golden scarf in the box and hurried to answer the ring. As she opened the bedroom door she almost ran into Jacintha. Both girls smiled as they walked into each other's arms. Then without a word they went together toward the insistent ringing of the bell.

The boy who stood outside was dressed in a gray uniform and held a bill in his hand.

"Is this where Miss Winston lives?" he asked. They nodded.

"I left a package here by mistake this morning. Had to come and get it. Did you find it?" he asked.

Jacintha Winston managed to choke out a reply as she hurried toward her cousin's room.

A moment later she was putting the pretty scarf into the wrappings, and then she took it to her own room, where she added the brown paper and string.

She read again the address. How could the boy have made such a foolish mistake? But was it so foolish after all? If Phyl had not bought the scarf for her, then why had she taken her into her arms in that understanding way?

The boy had taken the package and was hurrying away on his bicycle. Jacintha stood watching him and wondering. It was all such a puzzle. But there was a smell of scorching gingerbread and she ran toward the kitchen.

"Just in time," she said as she took the pan from the oven. Only one corner was scorched. 'I hope Phyl won't mind.'

But Phyllis didn't smell the burning cake at all. She was preoccupied with her own thoughts.

"Of all things! Of course I shouldn't have taken it, but if she didn't get it for me then why was it here on my table, and why did she put her arms about me? I can't understand her actions."

And just then the doorbell rang again. This time both girls ran toward it. Surely the boy had come to bring the scarf back again.

But no. Instead, Aunt Jane entered. A visit from her was so unexpected that no one spoke at first. Seldom a day passed without either one or both of the girls going to their aunt's house, but she rarely came to see them.

"This is my first day out," Aunt Jane hurried to explain, "and I wanted to see my willing nurses." She had been holding her gray-silk sewing bag in her hand, and as she sat down she opened it carefully.

"I came to bring two packages to the two best girls I know. I intended to come earlier, but the shop made a mistake in delivering my packages. First they sent me only one, although I had telephoned that I wanted two. It seems that they made some mistake on the address of the second package, and I had to wait until both came. I hope I have chosen something you both like."

Jacintha knew exactly what she would find in her package, for it was the same that she had given back to the gray-uniformed errand boy ten minutes before, but she did not spoil Aunt Jane's pleasure by telling her that. Phyllis was quite evidently delighted when she opened her package and took a crimson scarf from its tissue folds.

"I'm sure that we don't deserve them, Aunt Jane, but they add the final touch to a day that has turned out to be very happy," said Phyl. "We were so disagreeable to each other in the beginning that we really oughtn't to accept any presents even for good behavior in the past."

But Aunt Jane did not agree. She said they both deserved even more.

"We couldn't wish for more," said Jacintha, and the look that passed between the two girls said volumes.—Jane Trumbull in Queens Gardens.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

MARCH 23: "WHAT BARRIERS KEEP PEOPLE AWAY FROM CHRIST?"

Mark 10:17-22; Luke 14:16-20

To the Leader

Why not depart from the usual and ask all members to bring to the meeting some object that causes people to stumble or one that represents a stumbling-block. These will represent barriers keeping people away from Christ. (A false face might represent hypocrisy, etc.) Let each member explain what his object stands for and in what way it is a barrier.

These hymns might be used: "More Love to Thee," "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," "Help Somebody Today," "More Like the Master," "Only a Step," "Let Him In," "Whosoever Will."

Leader's Lines

Often a very small thing stands in the way of deciding for the Christian life. It is the duty of Christian people to try to do away with these barriers which prove to hinder, and to help to open up the way that the Way may be seen clearly. The purpose of this meeting is to help those who are trying to help others to come to Christ and also to help those who are waiting at the threshold to enter.

These barriers may be caused by several reasons. They may be caused by the individual himself, who refuses to accept Christ, or they may be caused by other people. In the case of the individual there may be either outward influences or intellectual difficulties. Many have been barred on account of creeds and doctrines. Much is known to depend on the manner in which the truth is presented. Tact is just as important a factor in religion as in any other field, if not more important. No one could have been more tactful than Jesus, and at the same time uncompromising. Paul helped the Jews over the stumbling-block of the cross but never did he remove the cross. He also helped the Greeks over the stumbling-block of faith, but did not remove it.

But there are other forms of stumbling-blocks—even stumbling-blocks in the lives of people who are supposed to be Christians. Many, seeing that there are those unfaithful, think that the faith is at fault when in reality it is not. Then we must be extremely careful in our own lives so that our lives will influence others for, rather than against, Christ.

Topics

Barriers:

1. Timidity about something new.
2. Putting-off habit.
3. Self-satisfaction.
4. Wrong conception of Christianity.
5. Desire to compromise.
6. Intellectual doubt.
7. Unable to forgive.
8. Bad influences, friends, books.
9. Sheer inertia.
10. The faults of church and its members.

Questions

1. Distinguish between excuses and hindrances.
2. How can we make failures lead to success?
3. What are some things in our way of living which may be barriers to others?
4. Do you think that our doctrines hinder or help people?
5. Which are the greatest barriers—those outside or inside?
6. Why is it so very important to practice what we preach?

Poet's Corner

OUTWITTED

He drew a circle that shut me out—
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout:
But Love and I had the will to win;
We drew a circle that took Him in!

—Edward Markham.

THE BUILDERS

All are architects of Fate,
Working in these walls of Time,
Some with massive deed and great,
Some with ornaments of rhyme.

Nothing useless is, or low;
Everything in its place is best;
And what seems but idle show
Strengthens and supports the rest.

For the structure that we raise,
Time is with materials filled.
Our todays and yesterdays
Are the blocks with which we build.

Truly shape and fashion these;
Leave no yawning gaps between;
Thing not, because no man sees,
Such things will remain unseen.

Let us do our work as well,
Both the unseen and the seen;
Make the house where gods may dwell
Beautiful, entire, and clean.

Else our lives are incomplete,
Standing in these walls of Time;
Broken stairways, where the feet
Stumble, as they seek to climb.

Build today, then, strong and sure,
With a firm and ample base,
And ascending and secure
Shall tomorrow find its place .

Thus alone can we attain
To those turrets, where the eye
Sees the world as one vast plain
And one boundless reach of sky.

—Henry W. Longfellow.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

ADDITIONS TO HONOR ROLL

Moriah, Whitakers, High Point, Spencer, and Grace are to be added to the list of those paying both budgets in full, making a total of 17.

It is interesting now just to see who will be the next to pay up. Quite a number of treasurers have written that they will send check for their balance before the 31st.

Will YOU be the next?

—The Ladies' Auxiliary of Calvary church met Monday evening with the president, Mrs. C. W. Bates, at her residence, 804 Brown street. This was the last meeting of the missionary year, the various circles giving their final reports, which were very interesting. Circle No. 3, Mrs. Greer, chairman, presented Mrs. Bates with a subscription quilt which was very pretty. Mrs. Otis Campbell was chairman of the quilt committee. The circles of the Auxiliary have been working during the past month to see how much money could be raised on the church debt, Circle No. 3 raising $110. Circles 1 and 2 were not ready to submit final reports at this time.

FROM PATHFINDER'S OPEN FORUM

The Rev. H. L. Powell, of Thomasville, N. C., thinks that "the best-thinking people won't bother with such straw votes, while wet forces will always register and make a big noise." Speaking from the experience of 62 years, he comments:

"Prohibition at its worst is better than the old saloon days at their best. The wrangle in Congress is nothing but politics. The 18th amendment is in the Constitution to stay and the howlers know it. The only thing they hope to do is to hinder the enforcement. All this newspaper publicity is simply hindering enforcement. The enforcement of the 18th amendment has been in the hands of its enemies. Put it into the hands of men who are dry and let the press get behind them. Let judges and jurors live up to their oath and in three years this country would be so dry a man would have to prime himself to spit."

Our Four High School Graduates

Mrs. O. O. Young, first contribution for commencement outfits for these four young people, $5.00.

We are sure many others will make special contributions for commencement outfits for our four high school graduates, one boy and three girls. We wish to clothe them so they will feel comfortable among their classmates at the various functions before and during commencement. Help us with it. We know you will, and we thank you for an early response.

The List Above

Examine the list above, and if you could just hear and read the expressions which accompany these gifts you would realize, as you cannot otherwise, the abiding interest many of our people have in the Home. It is a God-given privilege for real beautiful charity work.

Those giving the $100 this week do not wish thir names given, but this is their second contribution this year toward the full support of one child for the year. They have agreed to contribute $18.00 per month for 12 months, and that is just about the cost of keeping a child here. May the dear Father increase their number.

According to announced plans, any person, class, or other organization sending us $10.00 per month is given credit for feeding and clothing a child, or $5.00 per month either feeds or clothes a child. The Philathea class of Gibsonville sent five this week for feeding a child.

The C. E. Society of Shiloh church on Shiloh charge in sending its $10.00 to feed and clothe a child has this to say: "Last month ended the 12 months for which we promised to feed and clothe a child in the Home, but last night we decided to feed and cloth her for another 12 months. Our C. E. Society feels that it has been blessed in doing this little bit." We feel sure that God will bless any group of people, or any individual who will thus aid in caring for an orphan child.

Another, in sending a cash donation, said: "I take pleasure in contributing to the Home. Wish I could send more."

Many such expressions come to us with the contributions. These cheer our hearts. We wish we could quote more of them, but space forbids, and God knows about it and He, knowing how gladly His people are helping in this great work.

Some Good Help

Then, too, when we were so fearful that Mother Dixon would collapse, as she did last summer, the dear Lord sent along two of the very finest helpers that could come our way. Mr. Elkin, from Pine Ridge, who married Miss Edna Dexter, a faithful worker in the Pine Ridge community, entered High Point College last week. They were looking for an apartment in which to do light housekeeping. We visited them and talked with them and they came out to look over the Home, and as a result they are here helping us and we hope to be of help to them.

Octagon Coupons

Spring is almost here, and we have something over half enough Octagon coupons to install an electric refrigerator. Please gather them through your women's organizations and classes and let us have MANY of them during the next few days. Thank you.

Clothing and Other Gifts

During this last week we received two nice donations of clothing. Will report this next week. Mr. Joe Johnson, of High Point, gave us enough good oak flooring to floor one large room, and Mr. H. M. Waynick, of West End church, Greensboro, came up and laid the floor without charge. Thus the good work goes on, and will go on here through the generosity of God's big-hearted children.

May God bless and prosper all the friends of these precious children, who are gathered here because of their helplessness to help themselves.

Faithfully yours in His service.

A. G. DIXON.

ARTEMESIAN LETTER

Much to the surprise of the students and friends of High Point College was the resignation of Dr. R. M. Andrews, which was accepted by the Board of Trustees at a meeting held here at the college last week. Dr. Andrews was the leader who led the church to establish High Point College, and it has been he who has led the college through its trying years of infancy to success. The good wishes of all students and all who know Dr. Andrews go with him as he leaves High Point College at the end of the year.

On last Thursday evening the students and their friends of High Point College enjoyed a very delightful evening in the auditorium of the college. Several of the music students gave a recital. Miss Ann Robbins, Mrs. J. N. Walker and Mr. H. E. Jones rendered several vocal numbers and Miss Betsy Durland gave several piano selections. Everyone enjoyed this recital very much, and we hope that we may have another students' recital soon.

Friday morning it was our honor and much to our pleasure to have Dr. Ira Landrith, the great Christian Endeavor leader, at our chapel period, and again Friday evening at the Reformed Church in High Point. We enjoyed hearing Dr. Landrith very much and we believe everybody got something helpful from his lecture. We hope that Dr. Landrith will visit us again soon.

Sunday evening ten members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the college went to Glen Raven to have charge of the Christion Endeavor program there. The subject, "Peter, the Evangelist," was discussed by several of the members, and two of the students gave some special music. The Christian Endeavor Society of Glen Raven has only been organized a short time, and the College Society was glad to do what they could to help it along by giving this program.

EASTERN PREACHERS' FEDERATION

The Eastern Preachers Federation held its third meeting on March 3rd at the Littleton M. P. Church. President Taylor was with us and had charge of the morning session. He brought to the attention of the Federation the five-fold program of the church in a very interesting and helpful way. The members of the Federation and the visiting friends appreciated very much President Taylor's highly instructive discussion of the important problems of our church. He encouraged discussion. He stressed the importance of raising the money for High Point College. We are always glad to have the president with us. While each preacher and layman was asked to bring their own lunch, yet the lunch was largely furnished by our good folks in and around Littleton. We appreciate this fact that these people took into account this inclination on the part of the brethren and provided the Federation with a most bountiful and delicious dinner; otherwise this part of tre day's program might have been unsatisfactory.

Mrs. C. W. Bates was in charge of the afternoon session. And at the close of her very pleasing and inspiring address every one without a doubt was sold on the Auxiliar yidea as an organization quite in advance of the former organizations for women in our church. I am convinced that her presence in our midst will bear fruit in the future.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Sec'y.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

West End, Greensboro.—Sunday morning our pastor, Dr. Lindley, brought to us a very enlightening as well as inspirational message on the subject of "The Meaning of Lent." This was the first of a series of special services planned for West End during the period leading up to Easter. Topics for the meetings are:

March 16—Sacred Things of Life.
March 23—The Message of Suffering.
March 30—Love Misunderstood.
April 6—Golden Memories (Communion).
April 13—The Meaning of the Cross.
April 20—The Glories of Immortality.

Also during these 40 days of Lent Dr. Lindley is urging special Bible reading, meditation, and communion. A goal of 10,000 chapters of the Bible read, by the congregation, during this period has been set. Arrangements have been made for a check and, judging from the interest already shown, this goal will be reached.

A few days ago more than 30 men of our church assembled for a banquet and while there perfected organization of a Brotherhood. Mr. Ogburn Stafford was elected president; M. T. Waynick, vice-president, and Dale Marshall, secretary and treasurer. The next meeting of the Brotherhood is set for March 18.

It has just recently been announced that the West End church basketball team won the championship of the Greensboro Church League this year. We are very proud of these boys and hope they will keep up the good work. REPORTER.

Siler City Church.—We are glad to report we had 97 in Sunday school. Rev. F. L. Gibbs was with us and taught the Baraca class. Mr. Gibbs did his first and only pastoral work with us and we all love him and were so very glad to have him worship with us again. He was here in the interest of the Leadership Training School soon to be held at Asheboro, N. C. At the 11 o'clock hour Mr. Gibbs preached, using as his theme, "Young People's Work in the Church." We wish more could have heard this wonderful message. He is deeply interested in the youth of our land and has put his whole heart in this great work. We hope he can pay us another visit soon.

Dr. Williams filled the pulpit at the evening hour. He read the second chapter of Acts, using the first four verses as his text. His theme was "Pentecost Today." Well, we thought he had preached good sermons before, but this was the best ever. His whole soul was in his sermon and we feel sure good will come from this great message. At the close of the service a goodly number pledged themselves for the Prayer League.

Wednesday afternoon, the Woman's Auxiliary will meet at the church. We have been doing quite a little work to raise some money to pay our assessment and I am glad to report all assessments will be paid before the Branch Meeting. We have had two cake sales and realized a nice sum of money from both.

Mr. L. L. Wrenn has been sick for the past two weeks, but was able to be at church yesterday. We were glad to see him out again.

Fairview Church.—We have been having services the second Sunday in every month and the fourth Sunday night. Our pastor, Rev. O. B. Williams, has recently organized a Christian Endeavor Society. We hope to organize other societies later on.

Sunday, March 9th, Rev. F. L. Gibbs, of the Young People's Board of Education, delivered to us a very interesting sermon; a large number was present. We especially enjoyed having Mr. Gibbs with us, for he is one of our own. He was just coming back where he had spent Sunday after Sunday in Sunday school work when a boy and we are always glad to have him; always a hearty welcome awaits him.

Rev. O. B. Williams took charge of the evening service. REPORTER.

Kannapolis.—Our attendance has been good at Sunday school and also church services. Last Sunday we had one hundred and two. Our pastor is preaching some very interesting sermons. At the 11 o'clock service he opened the doors of the church. We were very glad to have ten new members join with us; nine by letter and one by profession of faith. They are as follows: Mrs. J. L. Love, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Coble, Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Cartner and their three children, Clarence, David, and Beatrice. We feel sure these good people will be a great help to the church.

We are looking forward to building a church in Kannapolis in the near future.

A George Washington birthday party was held February 22. After several good talks and recitations, the ladies served refreshments which all enjoyed. The sum of $18.00 was reealized by the Ladies' Aid Society.

We have a good pastor and by all working together we are sure we can keep going forward. REPORTER.

◆

English Street.—Our brotherhood met Monday night in the home of Bro. B. G. Stone on English street. The attendance was better than usual, although not what it ought to have been. It was decided to sow grass seed on the church lawn and Bro. J. A. Lee was appointed chairman of a committee to do this work. An order was also given on the treasurer for whatever amount is needed to buy the grass seed.

Mrs. J. A. Bowers on Pope street, has been suffering esveral days from a carbuncle. We hope soon to have her back at her usual place in the Sunday school and church as she is one of our most active workers. Mrs. Ridge, on English street, has been out because of sickness for several months, but glad to know she is recovering and we expect her soon to return to her place in the church. Mrs. I. L. Elliott, our popular and efficient Baraca teacher, is spending a while at the Guilford Sanitorium at Jamestown and we are anxiously looking forward to the time when she can return to our class.

Our Ladies' Aid held the March meeting in the home of Mrs. L. R. Gibson on Briggs avenue. As usual, the attendance was good. Mrs. H. L. Swan, the president, was absent because of sickness, and Mrs. Goebel, ex-president, presided. Since conference there has been approximately $250 paid on pastor's salary and the Ladies' Aid has paid $100 of that amount. So you can see from this that they have not been idle. The ladies decided at the last meeting to conduct a pie and cake sale on Saturday before the second Sunday in April. As soon as they make all they can with one thing, they take up something else and are never idle. These ladies are doing a splendid work for our church here at English Street.

Our Sunday school, with J. A. Robbins, superintendent, is also doing fine. Last Sunday a new class was organized in the Beginners' Department, and if we only had proper room, other classes would be organized and our attendance could be doubled. We hope and pray that some day in the not distant future, English Street's handicaps may be removed. As it now is it takes $50.00 per month to pay interest on the parsonage note and the note at the bank which was made four years ago to pay their pastor's salary. By November 1 this salary note will have been paid in full and I feel pretty sure that some disposition will be made of the parsonage before that time. So if we can manage somehow to pull through this year, by next year the church will be able to pay the pastor so he can live without so much financial embarrassment. With all back debts paid we feel that the church will take on new life.

◆

Union Grove, Orange.—Our pastor, Rev. B. M. Williams, filled his appointment Sunday evening. His sermon was one of the best.

We hope that our attendance will be better.

We are sorry to report that Mr. W. A. Davies had the misfortune of being kicked by a mule, and has not been able to carry the mail. Hope he will soon be well. We miss him so much at our church service.

Mrs. R. H. Morgan's condition remains about the same. A few of our members were kept at home on account of colds.

The regular meeting of our Missionary Society was held with our president, Mrs. J. M. Lloyd, Saturday afternoon. Only a few attended. Our next meeting will be with Mrs. H. N. Blackwood. We hope that every member that can will attend.

Miss Evvie Long, formerly of this community, who now lives in Raleigh, is in a very serious condition in a hospital in that place.

MRS. L. C .DAVIS, Reporter.

Gibsonville Church.—Gibsonville has not reported for some time, but we have not been asleep.

Our Sunday school has been on the increase in attendance since our last report. Last Sunday we had 209 members present; quite a difference since our last report. We are having good atendance in our primary Sunday school. Our primary superintendent, Mrs. F. G. Hammer, has been ill for some time. We hope that she will soon be well again and can come back to Sunday school. The children miss her very much as well as the other folks.

We were very glad to have Dr. A. G. Dixon from the Children's Home with us the first Sunday in March. He preached a splendid sermon and also told us of some of the necessities of the Home. Dr. Dixon filled the appointment in the absence of Rev. N. G. Bethea, who has been in Florida visiting relatives. Mr. Bethea reports a splendid trip.

The Piedmont Ministerial Association met at Gibsonville church Monday, March 10. Dinner was served by the Ladies' Aid.

Several of the Christian Endeavorers attended the "Breg and Landrith institute" which was held in Burlington March 12.

A goodly number of our young folk are taking the Leadership Training courses that are being given in Burlington this week.

◆

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The pastor filled his appointment here Sunday morning. He used as his text Romans 14:12: "So then every one of us must give account of himself to God." We were sorry more of the church members were not present to hear the splendid sermon. The congregation was small. Only about one-fourth of the members on the church roll were present. Where were the other three fourths? Some were justified, perhaps, in being absent, but others, we feel sure, could have been present that were not. We hope all that were absent heard of the good message Mr. Way delivered and more will be present for the next preaching service.

Our Sunday school is moving along very nicely. The attendance is gradually increasing and we hope it will continue.

Next Sunday at 11 a. m. a Thank-Offering Service will be rendered by the woman's Auxiliary. A pageant, "Girls at Their Best," will be given by a group of young girls.

The Woman's Auxiliary will meet at the home of Mrs. J. F. Hunter on Wednesday night of this week.

Philadelphia, Greensville Circuit.—Our regular preaching services are the first and third Sunday mornings at 11 o'clock. People who stay away at these hours will miss a great message. Rev. J. B. O'Briant, our faithful pastor, always brings us a good one. The last sermon we hear always seems the best. We are very glad to have Mrs. O'Briant and niece, Miss Fason, with us every other Sunday in Sunday school. The service yesterday was well attended and greatly enjoyed, I'm sure.

Most all of our regular attending members have given their dollar for High Point College, but we are still working on it. Hope to have our chart filled out by June.

The church is planning on getting an individual communion set soon, which, I think, all churches ought to have.

We are very sorry to report that one of our eldest members, Mr. High, is ill at this time. Hope he can be with us soon. Also, Mr. Johnnie Walton and Mr. Sidney Carpenter.

Our Sunday school, I'm thankful to say, is growing rapidly. The teachers and pupils seem more enthused than ever. The school bus brings a load from Triplet every Sunday. Isn't that fine? Our superintendent hasn't been with us for several Sundays because of sickness in his family. Glad they are well and he will be with us Sunday. Hope the teachers will all be present, and let's have a real school Sunday. However small our talents may seem, God can use us, if we will only let Him.

Quarterly meeting will be held at Ebenezer Saturday, the 22nd. Everybody come.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—Our pastor, Rev. C. I. Smith, filled his appointment Sunday night. He seems to have the attention of every one present because it was a message to touch the heart. Wonder if we take time to think whether our soul is anchored for Christ?

We had a right good report from our Sunday school Sunday morning. Sunday after Sunday school we as Christian Endeavorers suggested some new plans.

Mr. Smith and family, from Corinth, were with us last Sunday evening. There were also present other visitors from Corinth.

Circle No. 2 will render a program Sunday evening.

Our conference meeting will be held at Littleton Saturday before the third Sunday in April.

Mr. Smith was the guest of Mr. P. E. Hawkins Sunday before last.

We are glad to report Mr. Zeb Hawkins is getting along nicely from an operation for a skin cancer on his neck.

May the spring bring happiness to the Herald and its readers.

First Church, High Point.—The church school report for March 9th is as follows: Attendance, 375; offering, $14.98.

The Junior church, under the leadership of Rev. E. Lester Ballard, director of religious education, held services as usual last Sunday at 11 a. m. The adult congregation worshipped in the auditorium, and a beautiful quartette, "The Homeland," was sung by Mrs. Allred, Mrs. Whitesell, Misses Vera Idol and Elizabeth Welch, with organ accompaniment by Prof. Ernest B. Stimson. Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a strong sermon which he called "Looking Backward and Forward in Christ," from the text in Corinthians 15:10, "By the grace of God I am what I am." It would be a unique experience to be satisfied with one's present status. No one can truthfully say it until he or she can say with Paul that "by the grace of God I am what I am." You and I will have a long way to go before we can take delight in our condition in life. In order to get along with other folks, we must come to terms with ourselves. Nature has made no provision for medium ground; we are either progressing or retrograding. Inertia means inaction, which means stagnation, and that means death. The fact that there is a possibility of change means that there may be freedom. All creation changes; Christ alone never changes. Paul was reminiscing and reviewing his past. Who is there here this morning who cannot look back to days gone by, and not have cause for regret? It is a blessing for old age in the golden eve of life to look back upon well-spent years; but today young people do not want bondage, but freedom. Paul had presecuted the church enough to have been executed himself. If we had our just deserts, where would we be? A minister said to his congregation that if all in his hearing were to reap reward according to their deeds, some of them would be in the penitentiary. The true end and aim of men is to enjoy God, and money, success in business, or moral character will not bring satisfaction, nothing but the grace of God. There had been so many things in Paul's life of which to be ashamed, but he had been so surely converted that he had turned his back on sin. I am not satisfied with my past sins and not with my present state, but look forward with faith in the future. Victor Hugo said that in the twentieth century war will be dead, dogmas will be dead, and man will begin to live. This that Hugo prophesied is coming to pass. "I am appointed a preacher and an apostle; woe is me if I preach not Christ." Christ is the theme of the sweetest music of the world; He is the chief theme of the greatest libraries of the world, and the chief theme of all life is Christ and His redeeming grace.

At the Vesper service at 5 p. m. Sunday some of the grand old hymns were sung, "Saviour, Breathe an Evening Blessing," "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," and "Sun of My Soul, Thou Saviour Dear." Miss Annie Robbins and Mr. Stimson sang a lovely duet, "Nailed to the Cross," and Rev. Mr. Farmer spoke on a "Woman's Ideal Man" to a large and interested audience. He said: "To define an ideal is not an easy task, nor is it easy to live up to one after it has been defined. The ideal man means a vision of the ought-to-be man in Christ. It is a fact that the good people of all ages have had godly mothers. Mere man, men in general, have not measured up to idealism. Men have not lived up to the expectation and confidence that women haye place in them. Too long there has been a silence; we are going to speak about subjects that are taboo. Parents should talk plainly to their children about the facts of life, and not allow them to learn them in a sordid way from evil sources. I do not want to be sensational, but to present common sense, every-day facts. A mastery in life will given men buoyant strength. The greatest happiness that can come to a man is to be worthy of idealism from his mother, wife, sweetheart, daughter, or friend. Men, you are responsible to unborn children fro pure blood and their rightful legacy of a good nome, undefiled by taint or shame. The ideal man is the protector of womanhood; too many human vultures seek women to gratify their unholy desires. The coarseness or fineness of a man is determined by his attitude toward womanhood. The ideal man is the one who demands a single state of purity for men and women. If Caesar's wife must be above suspicion, Caesar himself must be pure. The world shows too great a difference between the prodigal son and the prodigal daughter. O friend, there is no difference with Christ. The ideal man is the one who has a spiritual attitude toward everything in life. Parents owe to their sons and daughters to see to it that those with whom they associate are pure and clean. God has a plan in your life and He demands your surrender to Him. Let us give ourselves to His control.

The topic discussed at the C. E. Society Monday evening was "Peter, a Great Evangelist," and was led by Misses Inez and Irene Reynolds. This was followed by an enjoyable St. Patrick's Day party. Our Christian Endeavorers will present a play entitled "Umbrellas to Mend" on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings of this week.

The five adult circles of the Woman's Auxiliary held meetings in the homes of different members Monday at 2:30 p. m., as follows: No. 4 with Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, No. 5 with Mrs. E. L. Ballard; No. 6 with Mrs. Ross Davis; No. 7 with Mrs. B. T. Moore; No. 8 with Mrs. H. U. Oakes. These meetings were well attended and the work of the year is being brought to a cussessful and gratifying close. The study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem," ham been finished, and new ones for adults, girls, and children are being ordered for the next half year. Circle chairmen and officers were elected yesterday. Mrs. Taylor, treasurer, says that the report of First Church Auxiliary at Branch Meeting in Burlington in April "will certainly be a full one." The executive board authorized the treasurer to send a check for $25.00 to Mrs. W. C. Hammond for public welfare work in the city. Our budget, amounting to $1,025 for New Century Service and North Carolina work, has been paid in full. The sum of $430.00 has been expended at the parsonage for furnishings; a scholarship of $100.00 in High Point College has been paid, and $115.00 to the "Dollar a Member" campaign for the college. A scholarship in Alvan Drew School, Pine Ridge, Ky., amounting to $100.00 has been sent, and $20.00 to Bethel Home, besides other local benevolences; $600 has meen paid to the treasurer of the building fund, Mr. J. S. Pickett.

The resignation of Dr. R. M. Andrews as president of High Point College is a cause for deep regret among First Church people as well as the denomination throughout North Carolina, and the circumstances leading to that resignation, a great financial burden and strain that was well-nigh overwhelming, are indeed regrettable in the extreme. No human being should be called on to endure such poignant suffering, but the fact remains that remains that High Point College will always be a living monument to the propretic eye and loyal devotion of those men of vision, Dr. J. F. McCulloch and the late Mr. J. C. Roberts, and the sacrificial love, indimitable energy, and Christian fortitude of its first president, Dr. R. M. Andrews. Future generations will rise up and bless these noble pioneers who have blazed the trail for high-grade, Christian education of the youth of the denomination in the South.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett and her sister, Miss Mary Eller, returned Friday from an extended visit to Mrs. Pickett's daughter, Mrs. H. S. Meredith, in Tampa, Fla.

In the high school operetta, "Pied Piper of Hamelin," presented last week, J. D. Koonce, Jr., and Jafes Hinkle played leading roles. This presentation in the American Theatre was very pleasing.

Garland McPherson, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. O. D. McPherson, finished his A. B. course at the State University with the winter quarter, but will return at commencement in June to receive his diploma.

Miss Claire Douglas, graduate student at the University, is spending a week's holiday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Douglas, on Montlieu avenue.

Miss Young's circle of the Auxiliary will meet Tuesday evening with Mrs. W. L. Albertson on Montlieu avenue, Miss Margaret Snipes' Circle No. 1 will hold its meeting with Mrs. R. I. Farmer Thursday evening, and Miss Nellie Martin's No. 3 with Miss Blanche Burgess Friday evening. These girls and young business women have done excellent work the past year. It shows how much organized effort will accomplish.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Snipes and children were called to Greensboro Monday by the death of the former's brother-in-law.

West Forsyth.—We presume that our efficient reporter for Pleasant Hill church will report the services held there last Sunday, so no comment is made here by this writer.

The pastor and family wish to acknowledge a very kindly deed done them by Bro. H. W. Doub, member of Stony Knoll church, last week. He brought us a truck load of wood for our cook stove and heater. Bro. Doub was the first member to remember us in that manner last year. We appreciate it very much. Some of our neighbors have shown kindness in supplying milk, among these being Mrs. Pearson Sprinkle and Mrs. Arthur Long. We thank Bro. C. R. Watts, of Tabernacle church, for a good supply of fertilizer for our garden, and Bro. S. M. Speas, member of Stony Knoll church, remembered us with a nice supply of sweet potatoes. For all of these things we are grateful to the givers.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Harmony Grove church on the fourth Sunday in April. There will be preaching at 11 a. m., that being the regular appointment. Dinner will be served by the Harmony Grove people and will be spread at the church. In the afternoon the business session of the conference will be held. One item of business which will be transacted is that of selecting nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference. This will remind us of the rapidly passing of the present Conference year.

We regret to report the serious illness of Mrs. S. M. Speas, of Stony Knoll church, who became ill about a week ago. W hope for her a speedy recovery. The condition of Mrs. Hobart Whitman, of Pleasant Hill church, is reported slightly improved. She is at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Douglass, of Union Hill church.

We will have our regular preaching service at Harmony Grove next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Calvary, Greensboro.—As the chairman sometimes say, We are glad to report progress. And here are some hints of it:

On the third Sunday night in last month, the Woman's Auxiliary held their Thank-Offering service with a large congregation present to enjoy the exercises. The West End Auxiliary put on two missionary plays, and did splendidly. The Thank-Offering amounted to a little over $44.00. It was received through a candle-lighting service.

Last night the Auxiliary held an enthusiastic meeting at the parsonage. In spite of the rain a goodly number of the members were present. Splendid reports of the year's work were submitted. The budget the Auxiliary set for itself last April was $750. The treasurer reported that to date $1,015 has been raised with more to be reported before the year ends. Hurrah for the women of Calvary church. (And hurrah for the new plan of women's work which is largely responsible for this wonderful showing). The chairman of activities reported almost a thousand visits made, besides trays and flowers for the sick, and any number of other things. One of the interesting features of the program was the presentation of a name quilt to the retiring president, who happens to be the preacher's wife. This is the gift of Circle No. 3. The quilt was presented by Mrs. Otis Campbell in the name of the Circle.

Sunday school attendance has gone beyond the 200 mark. The larger classes are taking turn about putting on the opening worship service. We have had some fine exercises. We are handicapped for space, but some improvements are contemplated that will relieve the situation, we hope, and that without very much expense.

Our official statistician tells me attendance at preaching services is much better than last year . Perhaps the greatest improvement is in the evening service. And the mid-week service is also being well attended.

We put on the canvass for the Insurance Certificate Plan last Sunday (This divides $1,200 into 240 shares at $5.00 each and is applied on the church debt.) One hundred and thirty-three shares were taken with a good many of the members absent from the service. Last night the Auxiliary voted to take the last 20 shares. The balance ought not to be hard to get. The note for $2,000 will with the next payment be reduced to $1,200. We hope to get this out of the way within another year. The Auxiliary is helping here, too, having voted to give all money raised after the missionary budget was secured—which has been done—until Branch Meeting to this account.

So far this year we have had only seven accessions to the membership, considerably less than we had in the similar period last year. But all indications are that when the Conference year is ended we will have had the largest increase in membership in the history of the church.

A fine meeting of the Men's Brotherhood was held last Tuesday night with 19 present. I do not have space in this report to go into detail; but plans were initiated that will mean much for the church. Perhaps I shall have something more to say about this in my next report.

We are glad to see a number of the West End folks at our evening services. And at every service a number of visitors. If you are intown on Sunday, drop in and worship with us. Not much style about these Calvary folks; just good folks with hearts of gold. You'll like them. C. W. BATES.

Reidsville.—We, this is a family "we" instead of an editorial we, may be a little late in acknowledging in a public way the special kindnesses shown us by our members and friends since Conference. "It is better late than never," someone said. We say that it is best never to be late; but we, like so many other preachers, do not always practice what we preach, and come rolling in on a belated train now and then.

Yes, our members gave us a good pounding, and we were kindly remembered by friends at home and abroad at Christmas tife. We were given things to eat and things to wear and things to make us look pretty. Even though it is hard to add to the beauty of a rose; we have been wondering all these months if there could possibly be anything suggestive in the last mentioned gift. It is altogether possible that our friend need to consult an oculist. We hope so.

We have observed all the special days so far, in addition to making a regular monthly offering to the Children's Home. The women have been constant in season and out of season in their endeavor to bring up the finances of the church. The Sunday school is hardly as large as it was at this time last year. Several things have caused this. Brother F. W. Easter, our superintendent, for busines reasons, moved him family to Rocky Mount, Va., much to our regret. We miss him and his family from the church; but we hope that business will bring them back again. Brother O. B. Gorman has been elected to take Brother Easter's place as superintendent. He is taking hold of the work in a splendid way, and will make us an efficient officer.

Realizing that they needed a vacation, the members of my church very kindly gave their permission for us to spend a few weeks in Florida. We had a delightful time in the land of sunshine; but we were glad to get back among our friends and well-wishers. During our absence Rev. W. F. Ashburn preached for us once each Sunday to the delight of all who heard him. We appreciate this kindness on the part of Brother Ashburn more than we can express in words.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

In Loving Remembrance

We, the members of the Woman's Missionary work of Tabernacle Methodist Protestant Church, desire to place on record the passing of one of our faithful and loyal members, Mrs. Harriett Harris.

In her death we have lost a true friend, one who was interested in all Christian activities and faithful in all the interests of her church. We will miss her in our association together, but her faithful and cheerful life will long remain in our memories.

We are grateful to our Heavenly Father even in this sad Providence, that we enjoyed her presence so long.

She has left behind her a good name and a Christian influence in the lives of all her friends.

Resolved, First, That we bow in humble submission to the will of God in whose hands we and all our comforts are "as the clay in the hand of the potter."

Second, That we extend this expression of sympathy to the family also our congratulation on having had such a mother, a priceless heritage to hold in store—we know consolation will be found in being able to look forward with hope and unfaltering trust and backward with pleasant memories.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, also they be recorded in the minutes and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication.

MRS. C. F. SIZEMORE,
MRS. E. T. COBLE.

Resolutions of Respect

Whereas God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved pastor, Rev. P. L. Kinnamon, we the members of South Winston Charge feel our loss so keenly yet we desire to humbly bow in submission to Him who does all things well. Knowing that our loss is heaven's gain. We feel assured that Brother Kinnamon has heard the Master's welcome approbation, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

He hath done what he could and only the Master he loved and served can measure the extent of his beneficent influence upon the lives of those he touched while here among us. As he passed to and fro the world took note that he had been with his Lord. Drinking deeply from the great source, he was ever able to give freely to hungry souls, words gracious and true and as that which goes from the fountain returns again so his own noble life was ever enriched and more abundant to the end.

Therefore be it resolved;

First, That the entire membership of our charge, extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and pray that God will sustain them in their great sorrow.

Second, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald for publication, and a copy be spread upon the minutes of our quarterly conference.

REV. R. L. VICKERY.

Stone

James Lee Stone, a member of Union Chapel Church, departed this life Monday night, February 10, 1930.

Mr. Stone professed faith in Christ, and united with Union Chapel Church early in life, and lived a faithful, consistent Christian life to the end.

Mr. Stone was one of the most faithful members of the Granville Charge. He was always faithful to attend his church services, and he was a liberal contributor to his pastor and church, and all worthy causes.

He faithfully performed the duties entrusted to his care. He was always the pastor's friend, and could be depended on at all times to do his part for the church.

Mr. Stone had been married twice. His first wife was Mrs. Ladie Powell who died in 1916. He is survived by his last wife, who was Mrs. Elizabeth Barnes, and five children by his first marriage as follows: Mrs. Lewis Barnes, Route 4 Henderson, N. C.; Mr. Therman A. Stone, of Henderson, N. C.; Mrs. J. M. Green, of Mt. Gilead, N. C.; and Mr. B. Frank Stone, of Leaminton, Ontario, Canada, and Mr. Harold A. Stone, of Henderson, N. C.

The funeral services were conducted at Union Chapel Church on Wednesday, February 12, by the writer assisted by Rev. H. F. Fogleman, pastor of Halifax Crarge. The funeral was attended by a large congregation which was an evidence of the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

The Masonic Lodge of which he was a member held a beautiful and impressive service at the grave.

The body was laid to rest in the church cemetery beneath a beautiful lovely mound of flowers to await the resurrection morning.

C. L. SPENCER.

Hatley

Raymon James, son of W. V. and Rosa Hatley, was born October 30, 1922, and on that cold night, February 10, 1930, near the midnight hour, he departed this life.

When fell upon the house a sudden gloom,
A shadow on those features fair and thin;
And softly from that hushed and darkened room
Two angels issued, where but one went in.

He left father, mother, one sister, a host of friends and relatives to mourn his going. One sister had preceded him to the Glory World. His suffering was great here. He often remarked that he would be better off after passing out of this life. Raymon had such a sweet disposition and he was loved by all that knew him.

On February 11, 1930, his funeral was held by the writer in Friendship Church, and his little body was laid to rest in the cemetery amid the sorrowing ones. His little schoolmates were the flower girls. When his mother saw so many beautiful flowers she said, "Look, Daddy, there are others that loved Raymon, too."

C. H. HILL.

Allred

William H. Allred was born December 22, 1854, died February 10, 1930. Mr. Allred was married twice, his first wife preceded him to the life beyond several years ago. To this union three children were born, two of whom died several years ago. Mr. Allred leaves a wife, a daughter, and two sisters and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Mr. Allred was a kind husband, a loving father, and a good neighbor. His funeral was conducted in Shiloh M. P. Church, Rev. W. F. Ashburn in charge, assisted by Rev. D. I. Garner. His body was laid to rest in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morning.

D. I. GARNER.

Sykes

Mrs. Fannie Neville Sykes was born March 19, 1898, and died December 9, 1929, being only 32 years old, in the prime of young womanhood. She had been in poor health for several years and at the time of her death was in Parkview hospital at Rocky Mount.

She is survived by her husband and three daughters, Gladys, age 9; Kathleen, age 5; and Winnifred, just a tiny infant. She also leaves a mother, Mrs. C. M. Neville and two brothers, Mr. Luther Neville, of Enfield ,and Mr. W. T. Neville, of Downington, Penn.

She joined Eden Methodist Protestant Church when only a girl and ever remained a faithful and loyal member. She will be missed in the church and community but most in her home where she was ever gentle, loving and kind. We can't understand why one that was seemingly needed so much in her home should be taken but God doeth all things well.

To her friends and neighbors she was known as a humble, sincere Christian.

Funeral services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman, and her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Enfield to await the resurrection forn.

WINNIE BURT.

Hilton

The Mount Pleasant community was made sad when the news was brought to us on last Sabbath morning as we gathered for worship that one of our fine Sunday School boys had just passed over into the eternal beyond.

Kermit Cox Hilton, the son of Kerney and Sophorona Hilton, born December 3, 1917, departed from this life February 23, 1930. Kermit leaves father, mother, three brothers, and two sisters and many relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

Kermit was a kind boy and loved by all his schoolmates. He was faithful to church and Sunday School. He seemed to love his pastor, during his brief sickness he talked much about the pastor, church, and Sunday School.

The funeral was conducted by the pastor assisted by Rev. Mr. Cox of the Reformed church. Worship was in the home, thence to Mt. Pleasant church. A large crowd there. More than could get into the church. After service hundreds of sad hearts reviewed the

"They that have done good to the resurrection life:
They that have done evil to the resurrection of condemnation."

We do not weep as those who have no hope. While Kermit, for some reason, had not joined the church, yet his life was lived as a Christian boy. He was clean in habit and pure in mind. He is now in the hands of the Great and Good Judge of all the earth, who will do right.

REV. H. L. POWELL, Pastor.

Almond

D. A. Almond departed this life February 18, 1930. Age 60 years, one month, and three days.

Of all sorrows and troubles, none so distracting and despairing as those caused by death. Would say to the heartbroken wife, sons, and daughter, grand children, friends, and relatives to have faith in God and Jesus Christ His Son is the solace for troubled hearts. We should thank God for the power to love and to mourn, it shows all the finer qualities of the soul. Jesus spoke of his special mission to heal the broken-hearted, and to comfort all that mourn. He comforts us with hopes of future life, and meeting our loved ones up there.

Brother Almond had been a faithful member of Friendship Metrodist Protestant Church since boyhood. His seat was occupied at all church services when his health would permit him to be there. He will be missed in church, but most of all in the home.

On February 19, 1930, his funeral was held in Friendship Church, conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. J. R. Anderson, of Albemarle. Then his body was laid to rest in the cemetery beneath a mound of lovely flowers.

Mr. Steele is a young man of sterling qualities and holds a responsible position with Duke Power Company.

After receiving the best wishes of a number of friends who had gathered to witness the ceremony, the happy couple left by automobile for Charlotte and other places of interest on their honeymoon. Unveiling a Soul

The Master goes toward Tyre and Sidon:
We wonder what He has in view.
The sequel shows us plain enough
The wondrous thing He went to do.

A woman comes with loud beseeching,
In deep distress because her daughter
Is held in power of evil spirit,
In constant danger of self-slaughter.

Disciples call her "heathen dog,"
And beg that she be sent away.
What right has she to thrust herself
Upon His notice and there to stay?

The Master's silence brings rebuke
To them and rising hope to her.
She falls and worships at His feet,—
His look inspires in her good cheer.

She cries in hope, O help me, Lord!
And then He spoke out words that seem Insulting, cold and harshly cruel:
Give bread to dogs! We would not dream!

Her earnest soul is not repulsed,
Her fervent spirit aids her wits;
As lightning flash is her reply:
To dogs we give the little bits!

Her faith and love quite overcome
Objections all, both false and true.
The Master had unveiled a soul:
From first He knew what He would do.

He wished to show to all the world
The matchless power of faithful souls.
Not all the force of earth and hell
Can stop them short of their true goals.

—We thank Rev. J. E. Pritchard for his good account of his way of getting subscriptions to the church paper. He has been so uniformly successful on different fields that we judge his method is a very good one. Several points in his method are to be noted. (1) He considers it his personal duty to solicit subscriptions. (2) He has the conviction that church members ought to take and read the church paper. (3) He appreciates the value of the church paper as a medium of communication. In order that people may work together they must think together and have a common conception of the work to be done. Brother Pritchard builds up the subscription list wherever he goes. Other pastors are making a similar record.

Paying God Rent

If you live on another man's farm, you pay him rent. If you fail he moves you off. You live in God's world. Everything you use and have is His. You may call yourself the owner of houses and lands, but really you are only a tenant. God is the owner. You use His property by His sufferance. He has never relinquished His title to any part of the world. All was His at the beginning and all is still His. Men may try to ignore God's rights, but that does not weaken His claim one particle. Using God's property you are under obligation to pay rent. And it is for God, not you, to say how much the rent shall be. Are you trying to keep square with God? You say that is impossible, that we can never repay God for His benefits to us. But what will God think of us if we do not make an honest effort to repay Him? When we have done our full duty, we have to admit that we are unprofitable servants to God. If we make no effort to pay our debt to God, our own consciences will condemn us. God is greater than our consciences: He is an infallible judge. What will He do with us? Recognition of His rights is due to God, not only in gratitude for His fatherly care, but also in the payment of our dues in the form of material things. We should do our best to keep square with God in our rent account.

What the Herald Ought to Be Made to Do

It ought to be made to enter enough homes to make it self-supporting. It ought to be made do more than that: it ought to be made enter enough homes to produce a surplus income to go to the superannuated ministers and their widows. We have enough Methodist Protestant homes in the North Carolina District to produce these results. The difficult problem is to put the paper into so many homes. We wonder if our pastors cannot put their heads together and solve this problem. Some things can be done by a concerted, systematic effort that cannot be done by individual, spasmodic efforts. We ask our pastors to give earnest consideration to ths problem.

Conference for Social Service

In the nature of the case social service requires co-operation. Hence there has been organized in our State the North Carolina Conference for Social Service. It holds its next annual meeting in Charlotte, April 13-15. This year the special subject will be the responsibility of the church in the life of our commonwealth. This is a compliment which the churches should appreciate. While some organizations try to ignore the church and others antagonize the church, the leaders in the organization for social service in our State have the good judgment to recognize the church as an indispensable factor in bringng about the best state of society. Distinguished speakers have been announced for the Charlotte conference,

OUR CONFERENCE PAPER

By J. E. Pritchard

I have been vitally concerned about an adequate support for the Methodist Protestant Herald, and for this reason I am offering a few suggestions as to the campaign for subscriptions. When everything else is said we must admit that the Herald has had a great deal to do with the development of the N. C. Conference. I have read this paper ever since I was a boy in my early teens and I confess it has meant a great deal to me. It has been the medium through which we have kept in touch with each other and with the problems of the church. To me it has always been as a letter from a dear friend. The letters from the churches and from the pastors whom I love have brought joy and gladness to my heart, and I take this method of expressing publicly to the Editor my hearty thanks for all the good the paper has done.

Now, not to support it is ingratitude and a failure on our part to show our appreciation to the editor, and even more than this, we are failing to put into the hands of our people that which will develop them and make them love the church more. Even before I entered the ministry I found pleasure in getting subscriptions for the paper, and since I have been in the pastorate I have always tried to put the Herald in the homes of our people and without boasting I will say that in a large measure I have succeeded. And in doing so I have rendered my people great service and have rendered my conference a service, for the people who read the Herald are the ones who are informed and the ones who are informed are the ones who give.

Without any desire on my part to hold up my own work as an example I would like to tell how I get subscriptions. In the first place I do it myself. There are a great many things I leave for my people to do, but when it comes to the Church paper I feel that the pastor is the logical one to do this. In the second place I know when the subscriptions on my charge expire. The editor furnishes me this information and I write it in my note book and carry it with me. Every once in a while I study that list and when I see that a subscription expires within a few days I make it a point to call at that home and get the renewal. But, perhaps, the thing that concerns us most now is the getting new ones. Well, when I am calling I very often say, "By the way, you do not take the Herald, do you?" Then I tell them what it would be worth to them in the matter of good reading, also I tell them they will enjoy reading the letters from their former pastors and that they can keep up with them in this way. When sufficient interest has been awakened to make them say they would like to take it, very often they say, "but we cannot take it just now because we do not have the money." Very often I say, "well, if it suits you I will just send in the subscription and then you can hand the money to me when it is convenient." Almost invariably they will say, "well, if you will do that we will pay you," and there goes the subscription. Some one might say, "Do they ever pay!" Sure they do. In my eighteen years in the ministry I do not think I have lost on more than two subscribers.

But some one may say, "O, you can do that in town, but if you were out in the country with five or six churches it would be different." Well, on a circuit was where I learned to put the paper in practically all the homes of the people and this was a circuit of five churches. Then when I moved to town I found the same thing could be done.

Now, brethren, let us do this thing. The paper is a good investment. They get far more than their money's worth. Let us concentrate and never stop until we do it.

THE IMPORTANCE OF HIGH POINT COLLEGE

By C. W. Bates

(Third of a Series of Articles Provided by Our Denominational Board of Education)

If you will take a map of North Carolina and draw a circle whose center is High Point and whose radius is fifty miles, you will discover several interesting things about the area within that circle; interesting economically, educationally and denominationally.

You will discover, for one thing, that this area contains more people than any other similar space in the State, for it contains not only three of the larger cities of the State, one of them the largest city, but it contains also a large number of smaller cities and towns. For this area is in what is called "The Piedmont," the most populous section of the State.

You will find, also, that this area contains a surprisingly small number of educational institutions. There are only six colleges in this territory. Five of these are denominational colleges; one is a state institution. Three are co-educational and three are for women. I do not know the educational field so very well, but as I see it, I doubt if there is a similar circle anywhere on the eastern seaboard from Maine to Florida.

I do not know the reason for it, unless the cities and towns of the Piedmont have grown lop-sided; they have expanded economically, with a consequent growth in population, at the expense of higher learning. And it may explain, why when we came to locate High Point College, there was such rivalry on the part of the towns and cities to secure it.

The third interesting thing about this area is that it contains at least 20,000 of the 30,000 Methodist Protestants in the North Carolina Conference. High Point College could not have been located more advantageously to our people. Nor could it have been placed better to supply the evident need for another college within this area.

Was another college needed in this area? The answer will depend on your attitude toward the small college. If you believe that the colleges within this territory could have been enlarged to take care of the students who wished to attend them, and that Methodist Protestants had as much right to enter the denominational colleges already established as did the students coming from the homes of those denominations, then perhaps, there was not room for another college. But we were faced with three alternatives, if there can be that many: the colleges already in existence would need to have their plants and enrollment doubled in size, or Methodist Episcopal and Quaker and Moravian and Christian students would be denied the privilege of attending their own institutions, to which their parents had contributed with the expectation that their sons and daughters could attend them, or we as a church would have to build a college of our own and make our fair contribution to the responsibility of educating our own children.

Let us bear in mind as we think of this problem the tremendous advance in public school education in North Carolina in the last ten years. In 1918 the number of high school graduates was 1,901; in 1923 there were 5,887; and in 1928 there were 12,512. Let us remember also that a very considerable proportion of these graduates came from this same area that I am talking about: Now not all high school graduates go to college. But it is safe to say that a larger ratio went to college in the period between 1923 and 1928 than went between 1918 and 1923. That is, let us say, there were, roughly 19,000 high school graduates in the first period, while there were 35,000 graduates in the second period. But in the first period not more than thirty per cent. went to college while in the second period sixty per cent. went. No wonder the colleges of this area were taxed far beyond their capacity. High Point College came into being and helped relieve an otherwise desperate situation. Perhaps you have wondered why this college could start off, and continue, with a student body that other colleges did not get until after twenty-five or fifty years of existence. This is the answer, or at least, part of the answer.

The other part of the answer comes from an increasing sense of the need of a college for our own people in North Carolina. It was too far to Western Maryland College, or at least many of our folks thought so; and results when our children were educated in the colleges of other denominations were not altogether satisfactory, even if we had not crowded out those who were entitled to attend such denominational schools. There was nothing wrong with the education obtained at these schools. It was and is as good as that to be obtained at High Point College. But there was a serious lack of denominational spirit in our young people when they had passed through four years of contact with other denominational groups.

I do not wish to be thought narrow, but so long as we have denominations, one of the things we must have if the churches are to do their work, is denominational loyalty. It may be over-done. But it's a rare student who goes through four years in the school of another denomination who can come back to his local church with very much enthusiasm for it. There may be no deliberate effort to estrange the student, but it results nevertheless. And we have felt it keenly in North Carolina.

The Conference has made great progress during the past five years. Who shall say that it is not in part at least due to the influence of High Point College, and to the splendid student body, largely Methodist Protestant and from the churches that compose the Conference? As these students take their places in their home churches still larger success will attend our efforts, and that success will be more and more as the number of students continues to grow and the churches from which they come enlarge.

High Point College, as I have tried to show, is doing a large part in the educational work that only the church school can do. It has a recognized place, and an honored place, among the educational institutions of the State. In some respects it is the marvel of the colleges in this section, and indeed in North Carolina. The only hindrance to its complete success is the financial situation in which it finds itself. Once that is cleared up High Point College will go on to do, unhindered, that for which it was founded and of which our fathers dreamed. All hail High Point College! May she find friends to help her in her time of need; friends who are looking for an unparalelled opportunity to do a bit of service for the State, the Church and the Kingdom!

METHODIST PROTESTANTS AND FORWARD MOVEMENTS

My Dear Editor:

Your gracious announcement a few weeks ago about my entry into the campaign for a trip to the World's Christian Endeavor Convention in Berlin, Germany, next August, has brought numerous responses and inquiries. The campaign goes merrily on toward the completion of the first lap of the race which ends April 30th. The leading candidate in each state at this time then becomes the sole state representative and competes in the group in which his state is placed.

It is through the courtesy of your columns that I am presuming to make a statement of my standing at present and to reach many interested friends to whom I will not have time to write. The report at the close of February showed that I was in the lead among the North Carolina candidates by a fair margin. A more recent report in the Christian Endeavor World said: "Roy Farmer, North Carolina Contestant, leads Group D by having to his credit just one more subscription than Monetta Hallam of the District of Columbia." These are encouraging reports—that is, the outlook for winning in the state campaign is fine and with proper co-operation in the campaign through May I shall succeed in Group D.

The important procedure now is secure every possible new or renewal subscription to the C. E. World (two dollars per year or 'three-for-five') and send them to me in time to report them to Boston before May first. A two-fold purpose will thereby be served—assure my becoming the winner in the state and thereby strengthening the campaign to follow in the group.

And while I am writing, Brother Editor, there occurs to me an interesting meditation relative to Methodist Protestants and Christian Endeavor. Again and again have I heard speakers from the International Society, or State Unions make references to the loyalty of our beloved church and young people to the movement. They say that they can depend upon Methodist Protestants to support the movement. I have heard speakers for the Anti-Saloon League and other welfare movements say the same thing. It is not vanity that prompts me to say these thingse—we have done little enough at the best—but I do feel that we should be encouraged thereby to do our best, even as "a little (?) denomination."

In the book, "The Evolution of An Endeavorer," (by Wm. Shaw), following the statement that lack of space forbids mentioning the many who have done much for Christian Endeavor, is this: "Mention must be made, however, of the lamented Charles H. Hubbell, the first State Field Secretary and leader of the Ohio Endeavorers, a Methodist Protestant pastor, whose enthusiastic advocacy of Christian Endeavor in its formative period was most helpful." In a public address, I heard Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union, give Dr. Hubbell the credit for finding him to the movement. Dr. Poling succeeded Dr. Hubbell in the Ohio secretaryship. The same volume refers to "Mr. Carroll M. Wright, field secretary for Maryland and Delaware, who gave up a fine position in a banking and brokerage office to take up Christian Endeavor Work." Mr. Wright is a Methodist Protestant who is now with the International Society and is highly efficient as Travel Superintendent.

Locally, our own young people are in responsible places of leadership. Mr. Luther Medlin, a fine type of Christian manhood, and a student at High Point College, is president of the High Point City Union. He is serving his second year in that capacity. Mr. Medlin is a member of the Welch Memorial Church and will graduate from High Point College this year. Another senior this year who is recognized as an efficient Endeavorer is Miss Elizabeth Hanner. This capable Methodist Protestant, from Julian, N. C., is president of the College Christian Endeavor Society and writes the Endeavor Topic comments which appear weekly in the METHODIST PROTESTANT HERALD. Another place of responsibility is ably filled this year by a member of High Point First Church. I refer to Mr. Arnold J. Koonce, who is president of the North Carolina State Christian Endeavor Union, and cares for the arduous duties connected therewith in addition to his business responsibilities.

This revery concerning Christian Endeavor and Methodist Protestants merely brings to me, as I trust it may to the readers of these lines, both the opportunities and responsibilities before us as a church. We need to be awake, efficient and progressive upon behalf of our young people who have been and are now recognized as worthy of places of responsibility in this great youth movement. Let our contributions as a church become larger with passing years.

In conclusion, brother editor, I want to thank both you and the friends who are interested in the effort to have a Methodist Protestant representative in the World's Convention in Berlin. Appreciating the support that makes it possible, and with the hope of being permitted to bring back to friends and soceities and churches something of the message and inspiration of this first great post-war gathering of young Christians, I am,

Sincerely yours, in Him,

R. I. FARMER.

EVERY WORKER A HELPER

A traveler, standing outside Cologne Cathedral, expressed his admiration of its beauty.

"Yes," said a laborer, who was near, "it's a fine looking building, and took us many a year to finish."

"Took you!" exclaimed the tourist. "Why, what had you to do with it?"

"I mixed the motar, sir," was the modest yet proud reply.

The laborer had a right to feel that he had a share in the grand work. In the same way, by his consecrated service, everyone can help in the work of building up human society as a holy temple in the Lord.—Doran's Minister's Manual.

Conference for Social Service

and we trust our people in reach, both ministers and laymen, will avail themselves of the privilege of attendance. Many ministers have agreed to preach on the Social Message of Jesus. The subject is pertinent in any church. In fact, no one can preach the full gospel without stressing the social bearings of the Christian life.

Mr. Frank Graham, of Chapel Hill, is president of the N. C. Conference for Social Service and is working earnestly to make the Charlotte meeting of practical value. Help him, if you can.

Any one who has dealt with conference tabulations knows the difficulty of being absolutely accurate. Nevertheless, what we have given in this comparison is sufficiently accurate to indicate notable progress during these ten years, and to encourage us to press on to larger service in the years ahead.

Leadership Training Schools

Three such schools, sponsored by the conference Council of Religious Education, and directed by Rev. F. L. Gibbs, assistant secretary of the department of Young People's Work of the Board of Christian Education of the General Church begins this week. These schools will be conducted at Asheboro, Graham, and Greensboro, as has been announced through the HERALD, and otherwise, for more than a month. The courses offered are well chosen and will be taught by capable instructors. We urge our pastors, Sunday School officers and teachers, C. E. Workers, and young people to attend.

By Order of the Conference

The last annual conference passed an order providing for the financing of the Conference Council of Religious Education (formerly the Board of Young People's Work) through offerings made by the Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies of the conference. Early in the year the Council met and appointed a committee to make apportionments for this purpose to the various Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies. This has been done and reported through the HERALD of February 27. We are running it again this week for fear that it may have been overlooked.

Our last conference reports show that we have 224 Sunday Schools, with a membership of 26,412; 124 C. E. Societies, with a membership of 2,880. The total membership in these two departments of our work is, 22,229. Just FIVE CENTS apiece from our Sunday School and C. E. enrollment would provide over $1,400 for our Young People's Work. But the apportionment made by the Committee is not nearly so pretentious as that. Please look up the apportionment, appearing in this edition of the HERALD, and see in what class your school and society comes, and then at a very early date send in your allotment. We trust that the editor can give us space in the HERALD so we can run an honor roll of all schools and societies that pay in full. We are curious (men are sometimes are, as well as women) to know who will head the list.

Easter

It is not too late yet to order the Easter programs and prepare for this service. We urge that every church do this. The local church will be helped by it, and the Board of Missions will be helped. Much of the money used by the Board in extending the gospel, comes from special day offerings. Send orders at once to Rev. G. W. Haddaway, D. D., 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

April

Our Annual Conference designated April as Stewardship, Sign-up and Pay-up month. Stewardship is also a part of the Easter-Pentecost evangelistic effort. We urge our pastors to co-operate as fully as possible with this program. Let us try to enlist many new tithers during this month. Sermons on Stewardship will help. Salaries of many pastors are much in arrears; it would be highly helpful to them if this could be brought up to date. "Dollar a Member" is also behind in numbers of churches; these churches could help this cause greatly by providing this deficit, either in pledges or cash or both. Our budgets are greatly in arrears, as it was expected they would be when we put on this special effort for the College. In fact, comparatively nothing has been paid on them. We trust that the Easter offering for New Century Service may be generous, and we are hereby asking pastors and Sunday School superintendents to see that Easter service is not held. Credit, of course, may be taken by the local church on the New Century Service budget. Let us do our best, brethren, in every way, for the April program.

Hickory Grove

March 18, Tuesday.—A business meeting of the congregation of this church was held on this date, at night. It will be recalled that their church was recently lost by fire, and the purpose of this meeting was to consider rebuilding. Several were present, both members and interested friends. The sentiment was strong for rebuilding. Official announcement will be given, and a meeting of the congregation will be held on the second Sunday in April to finally decide the matter. Those present were very hopeful of raising sufficient funds with which to build. The burned church was insured for $1,500. We are informed that the land on whch this church stood was deeded for a church site in 1808, and that the church that burned had been there about forty years. The congregation has our full sympathy, and we trust that all plans for the future may be wisely determined. Through the kindness of Brother Hassel, Sunday School is being held in a nearby dwelling house on his premises.

Meeting in Concord

The Conference Committee on Evangelism is arranging to hold an all-day meeting in Concord for conference and prayer on behalf of Easter-Pentecost Evangelism. The Pastors' Federation gave a day to this matter in the recent meeting at Gibsonville, and emphasis is to be put upon it in the rally to be held in the first district next Sunday. The Concord meeting is for pastors and laymen, south and west of Lexington. The date is April 10; hour, 10:30 A. M. We earnestly urge ministers and laymen in this district to attend this meeting.

Nothing in the church can be so important as a united effort in evangelism. See notice of this meeting elsewhere in this paper.

OUR STORY PAGE

LEMONADE LIONS 'N EVERYTHING

Trot Howard scorned the idea of a picnic and had a good deal to say about the air circus he had seen the day before. He proposed a real, down-on-the-ground circus with animals and stunts over in Jackie Bruce's barn, now by courtesy called a garage. Jackie being the younger one of the bunch and grateful to be one of the number, was agreeable to the idea.

"Red" Lewis, freckled-faced and with shiny, wavy, carrot-colored hair, remarked that the new boy had just moved with his family into the big red brick house on Walker Street, might have some ideas, and "Red" thought it would be a good plan to stroll along and see if Horace Hancock happened to be in sight.

And sure enough, Horace was right out on the lawn in front of his house. He had built a counter out of a couple of boxes and a board set between two trees. The board was covered with white paper. There was a pailful of yellowish liquid with a chunk of ice in it, and a shiny dipper and some glasses. On a nearby tree was tacked a white sign which invited the public to quench their thirst. The sign read:

LEMON AID
Step Right Up. Ice Kold. 3 sense a Glass.

Horace was behind the counter sampling a tumberful of his own wares. Skinny, Trot, Jackie and "Red" were speechless with admiration—that is, for just a minute, and then they all began to talk at once. The tenor of their remarks was about the same "Whattayou goin' to do with all the money?"

Horace, who hadn't been on the ground long enough to be favored with a nickname, hesitated, but upon the repetition of the question, he looked a little embarrassed as he replied casually:

"Oh, they's a kid round on the next street who hasn't got any Dad, an' her mother has to work awful hard jest to pay the rent an' things, an' Sally can't get out 'cause she's awful lame. I'm goin' to sell some lemonade—a lot of it an' give the money to her mother, an' maybe somebody else'll give her some an' she can buy a wheel-chair for Sally. They live right back of us."

The boys were thoughtful. Skinny and "Red" each had three cents with which they promptly ordered lemonade, offering to share with Trot and Jackie.

It was Jackie who burst out as soon as he had swallowed the last gulp of the sweet-sour mixtur,e "Say, let's have the circus just like we said, an' put on lots of acts, an' charge five cents admission. We'll make a big pile of money an' give it to Sally, too. I know her. Her mother does some sewing for my mother."

"Aw go on," sniffed Skinny. "They wouldn't be many who'd pay money to see our circus. If the admission was pins, it would be different, but pins won't buy a wheel chair."

"They would to —lots of folks would come," Trot differed. "I could bring my pony, and next to Jackie's barn is a vacant lot. I'll let any kid ride around that lot on Pinto twice for five cents.

"And I could bring my sister's Persian kitten. It's a beaut. I could put it in a bird cage that's up in the attic an' make a side show of it an' charge two cents for a peep at the catamost."

"Say," he offered, "I've got a clown suit—yellow with black and white spots on it. I wore it to a masquerade party, and they's a peaked white cap with a black top-not on it. I'll be the clown!"

"A fine clown you'll make," shrugged "Red," but Skinny didn't pay any attention.

The plans for the circus went forward swimmingly. Horace offered to move his lemonade business to the circus grounds if the boys would help him carry the boxes and the board for a counter.

"Red" had had little to say, but the boys were used to that. When he did speak, the rest always listened. He spoke now.

"Say you fellars," he interrupted at last. "The people who live next door to us have a big guy visitin' them. He has written a book, an' he gives lectures, an' my mother says he's a real lion. I know him because he comes over to our piazza an' talks to my dad. I'll ask him to come an' talk to us. He can say some of his poems for the people an' I bet lots of folks will come just to hear him. But we'll have to advertise to let 'em know about it."

"How'll we do that?" Skinny demanded.

"Red" shook his head.

"We can tell all our friends the circus is tomorrow at two o'clock, and that the famous lion, Arnold Wakefield, will be right there already to roar, and that the admission money is to buy a wheel chair for a little lame girl. Say, what's the matter, Horace Hancock, with you getting your father to put a free notice in the Turnbull Daily News? He's the new editor, isn't he?"

Horace nodded, but he didn't look very certain about the matter.

"I can ask him," he said, "but perhaps he'd be surer to do it 'Red,' if you asked him.

"All right," returned "Red." "I gotta dollar of my own, an' I'll give him that if he'll write it up for us an' ask everybody to come, an' put a border around it."

And that's how it came about that there was a crowd—all Jackie Bruce's barn would hold, at the circus. And sure enough, the "lion" roared good-naturedly, and everybody loved the poems and the stories he told. The lemonade sold amazingly well. The pony was kept as busy as a frog on a fish hook, and the catamost was a huge success, for everyone came laughing and wouldn't tell anyone else what it was all about. The poodle was fastened to a post with a tire chain, and although he looked very meek, the public was warned to keep at a distance. The clown did himself proud.

Then an old man interviewed "Red" and told him where he could get a good wheel chair for a little money.

Then the circus was over and the chair bargained for, there was still ten dollars left, for a lot of people had paid more than five cents admission, and the "lion" of the afternoon had slipped a gold piece into the fund. So with the wheel chair went an envelope with a lot of coins in it. On the envelope was written "For Sallie" in Horace's best hand-writing.

It was a good thing he had taken this precaution, for at the last moment the boys were strangely tongue-tied and wouldn't even wait to see Sally lifted into the chair. But they were happy just the same, and so was the little lame girl.—Selected.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

MARCH 30: "SUCCESSFUL EVANGELISM IN MISSION FIELDS

Acts 16:13-15, 25-33.

Bible Readings

Monday—A great home mission. Acts 2:29-36.

Tuesday—A medical mission. Acts 14:8-18.

Wednesday—Down in Smaria. Acts 8:5-12.

Thurusday—A Macedonian mission. Acts 16:8-15.

Friday—A Mission in Berea. Acts 17:10-15.

Saturday—A Mission in Thessalonica. I Thess. 1:1-10.

Suggestions

Try to get a copy of the topic as treated by the "Christian Endeavor World," and follow that plan. If there is someone in your community who is especially interested in missions or someone who has been a missionary or associated with one—have this person speak to your group.

If you would like to debate, this query is good: Resolved, That the evangelistic message is of greater importance than humanitarian service on the mission field. Have two of your best speakers on this debate.

The following hymns are appropriate: "The Son of God Goes Forth for Peace," "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," "Rescue the Perishing," "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," "Fling Out the Banner."

The leader might discuss the topic under the two main heads, "Home Misions" and "Foreign Missions," with emphasis on the Foreign as this topic seems to do. Just what should evangelism in foreign fields include? What beside preaching the Gospel? How great is the influence of the Christian who fails to meet the standards which the foreigners have? Take into consideration some of the oustanding work done in the mission fields today. How far have we gone in evangelism at home and abroad? Have we merely begun? Will we fulfill the command given by Christ in His great commission? How far are we willing to let ourselves as individuals go in this great missionary enterprise?

To Be Answered

1. Just how extensive can the program of Foreign Missions be?
2. What is our own individual responsibility concerning the non-Christian world?
3. Discuss medical missions in relation to evangelism.
4. What about education in regard to the evangelistic cause?
5. What is our denomination doing in the mission fields? (Find out all you can about this phase of the topic.)

Poetry Corner

Lord Jesus Christ, for love of Thee,
  And by Thy grace enduring,
They fought of old the goodly fight,
  Our larger life insuring;
For Thee, with soul of sacrifice
  Iniquity assailing,
They did Thy work, they wrought Thy will,
  And left Thy cross prevailing.

Lord Jesus Christ, for love of Thee,
  With that same grace inspiring,
We take Thy banner from their hands,
  To higher deeds aspiring;
For Thee we front the force of sin,
  With faith and hope unfailing;
Grant us our fathers' blessing still,
  To see Thy cross prevailing.

—Walter J. Mathams.

Do you wish the world were better?
  Let me tell you what to do:
Set a watch upon your actions,
  Keep them always straight and true,
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
  Let your thoughts be clean and high,
You can make a little Eden
  Of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wiser?
  Well, suppose you make a start
By accumulating wisdom
  In the scrapbook of your heart.
Do not waste one page on folly,
  Live to learn and learn to live;
If you want to give men knowledge
  You must get it ere you give.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

The Young People's Board was authorized to make assessments for the support of its work at the last annual conference, these assessments to be paid by the different Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor societies in our conference. The committee, composed of Dr. S. W. Taylor, Rev. L. W. Gerringer, and the writer, after careful consideration, have made the following assessments:

Sunday schools with enrollment of 100 or less, $1.50.

Sunday schools with enrollment of 101 to 200, $3.00.

Sunday schools with enrollment of 201 to 400, $5.00.

Sunday schools with enrollment of 401 or more, $7.00.

C. E. Societies with membership under 10, $1.00.

C. E. Societies with membersrip of 10 or more, $3.00.

It would be greatly appreciated by the Young People's Board if all Sunday schools and Christian Endeavor Societies would send in their assessment at the earliest possible date to F. R. Stout, Treasurer, 821 Rankin Street, Greensboro, N. C.

ARTEMESIAN REPORT

On last Tuesday afternoon the Association of University Women of High Point gave a tea at the High Point Country Club in honor of the girls of the Senior Class of High Point College. Miss Ann Robbins gave several vocal selections, and they presented an original skit which showed the various professions open to college women. The idea of St. Patrick was carried out in the refreshments.

Much to the surprise of everyone was the resignation of Miss Ruth Henly who has served as assistant in the Biology Department and this year has had charge of the girls' athletics and physical education. Much progress has been made in girls' athletics under the leader ship of Miss Henly. The students and facllty wish her much success in her new work.

In order to get funds to enter the Intercollegiate track meet in Greensboro in April, the track team held an interclass track meet Friday afternoon on the athletic field of the High Point high school. The freshman class won this meet. Track is not a major sport here, but we are glad that we have a track team, and wish it much success in the Intercollegiate meet. Mr. Ralph Mulligan, a senior from Uniontown, Pa., is coach of the track team.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

We hope that the names of new officers of the auxiliaries will be sent to this department for publication. But always give the correct mail addresses when you send them, as we are doing this for the convenience of the branch officers, that they may make up their mailing lists.

WATCH THE LIST GROW

Since last week the following Auxiliaries have paid both budgets in full: Lebanon, Mt. Carmel (Granville), Mt. Carmel (Forsyth), Siler City, Glen Raven, State Street, Reidsville, Union Chapel, Mt. Pleasant (Mt. Pleasant), Creswell, and Hollister, making a total of 26.

Prospects are that we will have a good report at Branch meeting. We hope that you may have a part in this good report.

MRS. S. W. TAYLOR, Treasurer.

ANNUAL BRANCH MEETING IN BURLINGTON APRIL 22-23

Reports Must Be in Before March 31

As March 31st, the close of our missionary year, approaches, we have cause for gratitude for the wonderful success which has crowned our efforts.

The annual Branch meeting will be held in Burlington April 22nd and 23rd. Each Auxiliary is entitled to four delegates, two of whom are president and corresponding secretary. Names should be sent to Mrs. M. A. Coble, 507 East Davis street, Burlington, chairman reception committee. Advise hour of arrival and length of stay.

In sending report to Mrs. George R. Brown, Reidsville, corresponding secretary, please see to it that all blanks are filled out (especially names of secretaries of causes).

Our aim has been to have an Auxiliary in every church this year. If possible assist your district chairman in organizing in nearby churches, and recommend sending representatives to Branch meetings (even in churches having no society) in order to get information and inspiration. Ask your pastor to help in this.

For convenience, below is published names of secretaries to whom Auxiliary secretaries should send their reports to those of corresponding office. As this is our first year of the new regime, each secretary is asked to make recommendations with her annual report. Our church has put on a big program and we in North Carolina have been almost 100 per cent in assisting in getting every woman behind the entire program of the church. By virtue of church membership all women are members of a Woman's Auxiliary. Line up and help with the great work.

Woman's Missionary Work.

BURLINGTON AUXILIARY

The annual thank-offering service of the Woman's Auxiliary of the First M. P. Church was held last evening. A large congregation was present to enjoy the splendid program given. The president, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, presided.

A triologue, "A Tale of Three Boxes," was given by three of the girls of the Mission Band, Misses Margarette Rogers, Katherine Dixon, and Sarah Thompson. The three boxes were a candy box, a flower box, and a thank-offering box. The amounts of money spent for the three were contrasted. This was well rendered, and was interesting and instructive.

Mrs. J. F. Minnis, a returned missionary from India, made the address of the evening. She wore an Indian costume and in addition had three girls dressed in the different Indian costumes. The address was both interesting and instructive.

During the service Mrs. Floy Rogers and Miss Elizabeth Rogers sang very effectively a duet entitled, "Shepherd of Love." Mrs. Harlan McPherson also added much to the service by singing a most beautiful solo, "I Will Not Go Without Thee."

BURLINGTON AUXILIARY REPORTS

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First M. P. Church, Burlington, held their March meeting at the Hut Monday evening, March 17, at 7:30 o'clock, with 41 members and one visitor present.

The Business Girls' Circle had charge of the meeting. The meeting opened with a quiet selection on the piano by Mrs. Harlan McPherson. Song, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," was then sung by the entire group of women. Scripture read by Miss Betty Thompson, followed by prayer led by Miss Susie Stafford.

Mrs. Harlan McPherson then read a chapter from the study-book entitled, "What the City Does for People," which was not only interesting but helpful.

This being the conclusion of the program, the Auxiliary then entered into the business part of the meeting, with the president, Mrs. L. W. Gerringer, presiding. Minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Reports from the different circles were then given by the secretaries; also the reports of the treasurers.

This being the last meeting for the year ending in March, reports for the year on how much money had been made during the year were given. The Auxiliary was delighted with the results of the work. Report of the nominating committee for the next year's officers was submitted. The work was so unusually successful that the officers for the past year were re-elected unanimously.

Mrs. Harlan McPherson presented Miss Ila Stafford a gift from tre Auxiliary, a token of appreciation of service as missionary treasurer for the last 25 years.

The Auxiliary paused for prayer led by Mrs. M. A. Coble in memory of four of the members who are dead. While they paused Miss Elizabeth Rogers sang, "Sweet Bye and Bye." Those dead are: Mrs. S. M. Hornady, Mrs. Mary Vincent Chrisco, Mrs. Elizabeth Bunton, and Mrs. C. W. Bradshaw.

As there was no more business, the meeting was dismissed by Mrs. L. W. Gerringer.

During the social hour the Business Girls' Circle held a "country store;" after which light refreshments were served.

—A fight at a funeral is a decided incongruity.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Shiloh.—Two weeks ago today, one of the first to greet us when we arrived at Shiloh was Mrs. John Warner with her bright, sunny smile and usual kind words. Great was the sprprise of every one when the news was flashed that she had been suddenly stricken on Monday evening and died in a short while. Funeral services were held at Shiloh on Wednesday afternoon. Our sympathy goes out to those loved ones left behind, and we feel that their loss is our loss, too.

A thank-offering service was held at Shiloh on the second Sunday night. The program was rendered by the C. E. Society on behalf of the W. F. M. S. This closed the year for the Missionary Society. The offering Sunday night was $37.87, which put our society over the top for the past year's work. The outlook for the coming year is encouraging.

Cliff, the oldest son of Mr. B. H. Leonard, took unto himself a wife last week. Shiloh wishes him and his bride many happy years together.

A good congregation heard another powerful sermon from Rev. R. S. Troxler today. It was also preparatory to the pentecostal service to which we are looking and for which we are praying. When will that be, do you ask? We can't say, only that God will send it the moment we are prepared to receive it. It may mean that we must drink of his cup and be baptized with His baptism, but even so, we earnestly pray for Christ to send His Spirit, the Comforter, about which Bro. Troxler told us today. MRS. W. L. SHOAF.

Kannapolis.—We rejoice in the fact that our church at Kannapolis continues to prosper. Our Sunday school attendance has increased almost double over a year ago. Number one year ago, 54; Sunday past, March 16, 102. The church attendance continues to increase considerably and members are being added to the church. This progress is encouraging to us all; the future outlook is very promising for a well established church.

We certainly have the material to work with, and by the help of our great leader, we expect to continue to go forward in the strength of the Lord. To Him be the glory, honor, and praise for the blessings we are receiving at His bountiful hand. May He richly reward each one who is contributing to the church's success.

J. L. LOVE, Pastor.

Liberty.—I have been asked to report from Liberty church and hope to have something of interest from time to time.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely; hope for better attendance soon. Our superintendent, Mr. Will Smith, is doing fine work. Last Sunday two of the girls' classes gave special music for Sunday school, which was very much enjoyed by all. Different classes will be in charge from time to time.

We are having prayer services Thursday night of each week with very good attendance.

We have been somewhat slow with our "Dollar a Member," but we are still hoping to do our part.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the church March 18 with very good attendance. The meeting was called to order by the retiring president, Mrs. T. L. Smith. Prayer and devotional by our beloved pastor, Dr. J. D. Williams. The minutes were read and approved. New officers for the ensuing year are as follows: President, Mrs. J. B. York; vice-president, Mrs. J. W .Curtis; secretary, Mrs. A. J. Brower; treasurer, Mrs. Clarence Highfill. Our Auxiliary is quite young yet, but we have been quite busy, and hope for better things this year.

Let's all remember to attend Sunday school every Sunday and preaching every second and fourth Sunday at our M. P. church, Liberty, N. C. Our pastor always has a wonderful message for us. REPORTER.

◆

Rockingham.—We are glad to say we are progressing and everything is working in harmony. Since we last wrote, we have had our church painted inside and out and a few other small improvements. At the first of this year we had a new piano placed in our church. It certainly is an improvement worth while. It aids us with our singing, which we believe to be improving each week.

During last year there were 33 members received into the church. There has only been one this year, but we hope and expect to go over the top this time.

Our church officials are very capable ones and with the co-operation of each and every member we expect to do greater things this year than ever before. At the end of the first quarter our pastor's salary was paid up to date and the church in general in fine condition.

We have an excellent Sunday school superintendent, Bro. W. F. Hudson. We have a fine Sunday school with great interest and attention, good attendance and good collections. Our good superintendent makes very interesting talks every Sunday morn. On each Sunday just after the class period a class gives a short program, either musical or recitations, or both combined. This has been very good and interesting.

Our pastor has been delivering some very fine sermons, the best, it seems, that he ever has. He gives us two sermons every Sunday. His text on last Sunday evening was: "And Enoch walked with God."

Bro. Hudson has started an organization with the children, the Happy Band. They seem to enjoy the meetings fine. Sometimes he takes them on special missions, such as visiting the sick and trying to make them happy. They have a date at the county home every fifth Sunday afternoon.

We have two classleaders this year, Mr. Will Brown and Mr. Jess Maness. We have the old form of class meeting. We have a class meeting on Wednesday night after the first Sunday in every month.

The mid-week prayer meetings are fine.

We will have a class meeting on every Wednesday night until Easter.

◆

Albemarle.—Rev. Mr. Anderson returned Saturday from Lincolnton, where he is assisting in a revival meeting, and preached for us at the Sunday morning service. He reports very encouraging progress being made in the meeting, which will continue for several days or a week. He returned to Lincolnton Sunday afternoon.

Fire of undetermined origin completely destroyed the home of J. Arthur Furr Sunday night about 7:30. Both Mr. and Mrs. Furr were at church when the fire occurred, and could not understand how it could have started, as they had been away from home and there had been no fire in the house all day. It is believed that it was caused by a short circuit in the wiring as it started above the ceiling. Part of the furniture was saved, but some of it was badly damaged. The building was partly covered by insurance.

Rev. Mr. Hill, of Friendship church, came to conduct our services Sunday night, but owing to the excitement caused by the fire, which occurred during the song service, thought it best to disband the congregation. We are sorry to have missed his message as we are sure he would have brought us something worth while.

Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Efird announce the birth of a boy, March 15th. We offer them congratulations. That's one more to play in the band.

Mr. D. F. Harkey is confined to his room with something like ptomaine poisoning. He has been suffering very acutely, but at present is thought to be improving. We missed him at church Sunday, as he is almost always there.

MRS. J. U. WHITLOCK, Reporter.

Mebane.—Sunday was a very profitable day for us, the day being given over entirely for the thank-offering service of the Woman's Auxiliary. At the morning hour the pastor talked on an appropriate subject, stating five reasons why we should support missions and the importance of giving of our service and our dollars. At the evening hour the women presented a very pleasing and instructive program, the five circles and William Nicholson Mission Band each taking part. A very beautiful quartet, "Must I Go Empty-Handed?" was rendered by Mr. T. O. Pender, Mrs. Carl Sykes, Miss Elizabeth Nicholson and Mr. C.C. King. The church auditorium was filled at this service.

Monday evening the Woman's Auxiliary met at the church for the last meeting of the year. Circle No. 4 was in charge of the program. The election of officers was held at this time. The following were chosen: President, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson; first vice-president, Mrs. Highfill Jobe; second vice-president, Mrs. George Wyatte; treasurer, Miss Mary Jobe; recording secretary, Mrs. J. E. Burnette; corresponding secreary, Mrs. J. E. Foust; Circle leaders: No. 1, Mrs. Jack Smith; No. 2, Mrs. Carl Sykes; No. 3, Mrs. P. N. Thompson; No. 4, Mrs. Albert Sykes; Ever-Ready Circle, Mrs. Tyson Smith; William Nicholson Mission Band, Mrs. George Dobson and Mrs. Fletcher Smith. Total collection turned in by the circles for the month, and the thank-offering amounted to $27.00.

The Ladies' Aid met the first Monday afternoon in March with Mrs. Highfill Jobe with good attendance.

All departments of the church are doing splendid work and we are expecting this year to be a very profitable one.

Mrs. J. S. Mauldin, one of our members who has been a patient at Rainey Hospital, has returned home and is improving rapidly.

Mrs. J. E. Burnette, one of our faithful workers, is a patient at Rainey Hospital, Burlington, having undergone a very serious operation a few weeks ago. She is improving nicely and hopes to be home soon.

Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, member of Eli Whitney School faculty, near Saxapahaw, was home a few days last week suffering from throat trouble. She was sufficiently recovered to return to her school work Monday morning. REPORTER.

◆

Draper.—Our reporter moved away months ago.

Brother Riddle last Sunday night closed a four weeks' meeting at a storehouse, which he had rented. I know of three converts and three reclamations. Four of these have given their names to us for membership. Another tonight said that he has repented and expects to join the church. This one is Brother Mark Howell. I suppose that Brother Howell was years ago the most active member we had here. We hope for many days of usefulness from him yet. We have gotten some members whom I value very highly.

The next thing is the baptizing. The most of the Draper people believe that there is but one way to baptize. They speak of sprinkling and baptizing. One of the Baptist members said that we might use their pool of warm water. That is very kind, but I never want to be a borrower, and some of our people want to be baptized in running water. If they cannot get to the Jordan, they want to go to that which looks as much like it as possible. The Dan often looks repulsively muddy. Then they want to be baptized as soon as possible, and they seldom think that it is too cold. They think if their faith is strong enough that the cold water will not make them sick. I tell them that I fear my faith is not strong enough to keep cold water from hurting me.

We have not had Sunday night preaching while Brother Riddle was holding his meeting. Neither did we have our Tuesday night prayer meeting.

Last Sunday at 11 our audience was a little larger than it had been for some time. Tonight we had our Tuesday night prayer meeting.

Our Sunday school is good. We have a Junior C. E. Society.

I hear that Brother Riddle will soon move to Martinsville, Va. W. T. TOTTEN.

◆

Winston.—Although our alibis are many sometiems, we're not exempt from giving part of what we have to the King. This was effectively brought out in a pageant given by the Woman's Auxiliary Sunday night. Mrs. I'm Indebt, Mrs. Constant Knitter, Mrs. Eileen Newshop, Mrs. Carrie Dresswell, Mrs. Marion Club and many other interesting characters brought their reasons to the board for exemption from giving their tithe to the King, who rightfully owns all one has. Several characters begged for help at the end, among these were Widow of India, Chinese Viceroy's Wife and Chinese Working Girl. After the plea had been put forth of these pitiful characters, the women refusing to give the tithe were more tender-hearted and liberal with their possessions.

Regular services were held Sunday and a goodly number were present.

Prayer services will be held Wednesday evening at the usual hour. A continuation of the study of "Spectrum of Love" will be the subject for the evening.

The Mission Band will hold its monthly meeting on Friday evening at the parsonage. The Mission Band is a lively group of youngsters with good leaders; they accomplish quite a lot in their little Band. The children, of course, are the future church. If they start young and successful, it is good judgment to think they will continue to do so.

The Lenten season is here again. We hope that it will be a season when a great many people may consider things that they have never considered before and really make up their minds to give themselves to Christ and unite with a church on the Sunday that we remember as the day Christ rose from the tomb and conquered the grave.

May we all pray that in our respective churches an abundant crop may be harvested when harvest is come.

A church never goes higher than its ideals. We have put our goal plenty high so that we will have to work harder and harder to accomplish it. It isn't impossible, we hope, to attain it by Easter. We have our aim for new members, New Century Service and tithers. Will it be accomplished? It is truly hoped so.

The workers' council held its monthly meeting at the church Thursday. Circle No. 2 of the Auxiliary served supper. An interesting program was enjoyed.

An address on "Prayer" was given at this time by Mr. Lindley, of High Point College. Everyone enjoyed this intensely and a great deal of good was received by all those who heard this wonderful address. Regular business was carried on during the business session, after which the Council adjourned.

PAULINE BRANSON, Reporter.

Glen Raven.—On Saturday night, March 1, a very successful oyster and chicken supper was given by the members of the Ladies' Aid and Auxiliary Society. The purpose of this supper was to raise money on the budget.

On Sunday night, March 2nd, the Christian Endeavor Society held its first consecration meeting. After the consecration meeting the Christian Endeavor Society had its regular program, followed by an inspiring sermon by the pastor, Rev. O. C. Loy. The male quartet with Mr. Easley, known as "Blind Henry," from Graham, N. C., assisted in the program by giving several favorite and beautiful songs.

Thursday night the regular mid-week prayer service was conducted by Rev. O. C. Loy at the home of Mrs. Huffine, for her aged mother, Mrs. Blackman. Mr. Loy gave a very interestng and helpful talk bringing out the point that we sometimes have misfortunes to draw us nearer to God.

Mr. P. E. Parker, superintendent of Sunday school, still reminds us that the groundhog days are not yet over, but the Sunday school is improving every Sunday in spite of this. The last report of the secretary was as follows: Number on roll, 237; attendance, 152; offering, $6.01; record attendance, 178.

Sunday night, March 9th, an unusually inspiring program was given in Christian Endeavor Society by visiting members of Christian Endeavor Society from Burlington First Christian Church. After the Christian Endeavor program, Rev. F. L. Gibbs conducted the Methodist Protestant Young People's Day Program. Subject, "Youth Sharing." This was not only helpful and interesting to the young people, but to the older people as well. At the close of the meeting Rev. Gibbs presented to the people the M. P. Training School which is to be held at Graham, N. C., March 26, April 2, 3, 10, 11. Special recognition will be given that church which sends the largest number the fartherest distance to Graham. Tabernacle, Tabernacle Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. H. L. Isley, brought us one of his best messages yesterday. His theme was "Drifting and Spiritual Shipwreck." He told us that drifting and spiritual shipwreck sometimes come from adversity, prosperity, ceasing to commune with God, discarding faith, disrespect for the Sabbath, and bad company.

Some of our young people are planning to take the Leadership Training courses given at West End Church, Greensboro.

"Dollar a Member" has been presented at this church and a good response has been made. We hope to raise our full amount.

Attendance at Sunday school yesterday was 110; offering, $2.37.

The Christian Endeavor Society is moving along nicely with Ralph Reynolds as president

First Church, High Point.—On last Tuesday and Wednesday evenings a delightful, entertaining play entitled "Umbrellas t' Mend?" was presented in a most admirable manner by members of the Senior Christian Endeavor Society, assisted by a few friends. The cast of characters was well chosen, the scene being laid in the living-room of the Winn homestead, near a village in the eastern part of the state of New York. The play might be termed a comedy, and abounds in humorous episodes, but underneath lies a touch of pathos and a splendid moral. The stage of the assembly room was transformed into a quaint old New England sitting-room with a ruddy fire, oil lamps, old-time rockers and furniture, gun above the mantel, beautiful hand-woven coverlets of our grandmothers, etc., which made a pleasing background. The cast of character was as follows: Martin Winn, with memories of the past, Rev. R. I. Farmer; Leonard Everett, a son of the soil, John C. Whitesell; Harold Vincent, from New York, Charles C. Robbins, Jr.; Josiah Tizzard, an umbrella-mender, Rev. E. Lester Ballard; Ruth Winn, Martin's daughter, Miss Ina McAdams; Miss Alma Wayne, her friend from the city, Miss Margaret Neese; Aunt Melissa, Martin's sister, Mrs. Mary Shepard Ballard; Mrs. Poplin, a widow with a pension, and "Symptoms," Miss Myrtle Davis; and Lindy Jane, colored girl who "helps around," Miss Dennyce McAdams. A large and most responsive audience greeted this splendid performance, which was thoroughly enjoyed. Suffice it to say that wonderful histrionic talent, though latent heretofore, has been discovered in the First Church congregation, and we are anticipating with interest and enthusiasm future presentations of this order.

On Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service, Rev. Mr. Farmer chose for the subject of his message, "The House by the Side of the Road," which has beeen immortalized by Sam Walter Foss in his inimitable poem of that name. The story which led the poet to open these beautiful verses, was given; once a traveler on a long journey, near the end of a warm, weary day, came upon a cottage by the roadside and a sign, "Come in and have a cool drink." Near the door sat a bench with a basket of red, juicy apples, and another sign, "Help yourself." In the cottage dwelt an old, horny-handed, feeble couple, who eked a scanty living from the barren soil. So full of love for their human kind were the hearts of these simple folk that they decided to cheer the wayworn travelers who passed their door in this kindly way. "Let me live in a house by the side of the road, and be a friend to man." The Scripture calls attention to the Shunamite woman who said to her husband, Let us make, I pray thee, a little chamber on the wall," neaning thereby to build a room, an addition to their house, for the prophet Elisha, and let it be his to occupy whenever he wished. That was keeping close to humanity. There is a tendency today to pull away from the obscure house by the side of the road, and go to Fifth Avenue, The Strand, Rue de Rivoli, the Prado, Riviera, and kindred famous streets. Jesus had His obscurity, and many of His contacts with His disciples were made in a house by the side of the road. Yonder in Asheville recently there died a Y. M. C. A. worker, Ed R. Brown, one whom everybody loved because he loved everybody. There are so often limitations of illness. I never go into the home of Mrs. J. A. Tussey or Mrs. Welborn, mother of Mrs. Charles Hayes, those shut-in saints, but I leave making a resolve to do more to serve mankind. Too few of us visit the invalids, these saints who daily served the Lord by just being cheerful and radiating sunshine although almost helpless. The humblest and poorest of God's children can give a cup of cold water in His name. Some noble soul has said in substance: "I shall pass this way but once. If I can do any kindness or ease one heart from breaking, let me not fail to act now, for I shall not come this way again." O, Christian friends, I want to say to you, the Christian life means service to humanity in the highways of life. Christ wants people to work while others play, He wants them to sit up by night with the sick and suffering while others sleep, and "to visit the fatherless and afflicted." In Kansas City in a C. E. convention, Dan Poling told of coming to a parting of the ways in his life, one way lay to economic independence, but he chose the better part, to serve the youth of the world. Today he is editor-in-chief of that most splendid magazine, Christian Herald, and his voice reaches millions every week over the radio.

At the vesper service the minister delivered the third of a series of sermons on Ideals, this having been "An Ideal Courtship." After reading a part of Genesis 29, containing an account of the famous courtship of Jacob and his service of seven years for his beloved Rachel, only to receive her sister, Leah, from Laban, followed by another seven years of service, "and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her." Following with the reading of Proverbs 31, the minister defined an ideal courtship as, 1st, one which promotes the highest self-respect for each other; 2nd, it increases the capacity for enjoyment of the truest pleasures of life; 3rd, it gives victory over self and sin; 4th, it results in the respect of all who know the pair; and, 5th, it brings the favor of God upon the union. As I grow older, I am coming to believe that the attraction of two people for each other among a million is an evidence of the touch of God. I am old-fashioned enough to think that the happy marriage comes from real falling in love, a period of joyful sweethearting, and a rollicking courtship. Young woman, you would better go through life alone than marry a young man who is a libertine, drunkard, blasphemer, or a gambler. The only solution is to follow the Man of Galilee. A man said to another: "I could make a lot better world myself," and his companion answered, "Let's do it; that is what God put us here for."

A Junior C. E. Society and a Missionary Club will be formed next Wednesday evening following the Fellowship Supper, when a free supper at a table to themselves will be provided for these boys and girls of Junior and Senior High School age.

The topic at the weekly meeting of the C. E. Society on Monday evening was discussed, "What Barriers Keep People Away From Christ?"

The minister is urging every one to read the booklet compiled by Clarence Hall Wilson and entitled, "The Fellowship of Prayer" for the Lenten season. He also urges all to pray earnestly during these days and work to bring one soul to Christ, thereby experiencing the richest, fullest joy at Easter.

Dr. R. M. Andrews returned from Chicago last Friday, where he attended a conference of college presidents who met to consider ways and means to increase the endowment of the smaller denomination colleges of this country. Three hundred and twenty five colleges were represented at this meeting. After talking with a large number of college heads, Dr. Andrews is convinced that each college must solve its own problems and raise its endowment from its own constituency.

Charlotte, First Church.—We are now making our mid-week prayer service in the interest of our coming revival just before Easter. Mrs. C. B. Bruton led last Wednesday evening. The attendance and interest are encouraging. Dr. S. W. Taylor was with us Wednesday evening, the 12th, and conducted the service. Immediately after prayer service quarterly meeting was held with Dr. Taylor presiding. We enjoyed having Dr. Taylor with us .

The Sunday school attendance is fairly good despite some sickness. Recently the Cradle Roll room was made attractive with paint and some storage space provided.

Mrs. Z. M. Rea is improving after an operation last week in Mercy Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Blake announce the birth of a daughter, Miriam Muse, March 10, at Presbyterian Hospital. They have another daughter, Carolyn Ramona. Mrs. Blake was formerly Miss Carrie Muse.

The Auxiliary met last week with Mrs. Harrison with a good meeting and good reports. The various secretaries were elected and the following chairmen appointed: Mrs. R. C. Millaway, chairman Circle No. 1; Mrs. G. W. Stegall, chairman Circle No. 2, and Mrs. R. E. Barrett, chairman of the Business Woman's Circle. Delegates to the Branch meeting are Mrs. R. S. On next Sunday we will observe the 14th anniversary of this church with morning and evening services. The former pastors are invited to come and take part, all former members are invited and it is hoped all the present membership can attend. We are looking forward to a good day. REPORTER.

Yarborough Charge.—The Sunday school at Yarborough Chapel is improving now since spring is here. The attendance has increased at least a third. We hope it will climb higher as the weeks pass, for we have quite a few who do not attend Sunday school.

On the first Sunday in March the collection averaged 25 cents per member, making over $5.00 in all. This was the day that the collection goes to the Children's Home. The Sunday school made the special effort to raise an extra large collection in response to Dr. Dixon's letter of pressing need.

The C. E. Society is doing splendidly. It has kept a good attendance of about an average of 45 all through the winter. It is quite a live wire in the church. It is putting on a new contest in the near future which we hope will mean quite a bit to the society. It will be a contest in participation. The society recently bought C. E. song-books. The young people of this society practice these new songs almost every night after the C. E. meeting, and enjoy the choir practice almost as much as the meetings themselves.

This church held the Young People's Day program and realized the sum of $12.00. Now it is working on the Easter program.

Mr. Gilmore Watson, Mrs. John Yarborough, and Mrs. J. A. Tinsley, who have been quite ill for some time, are all improving. Mrs. John Yarborough and Mrs. Tinsley are able to be out. Mr. Watson is able to sit up all the time now.

AtHarmony Church we find the people always moving along nicely with their church work. Sunday school attendance Sunday was fifty-two.

They have decided to cover the church. New pledges and cash continue to come in for this. A total of $120 has been pledged. The covering is to be done at once.

The C. E. Society at this church has on a contest in attendance. There were about 30 present Sunday night. We are glad to see the older members come to our meetings to listen to the programs. At both C. E. Societies they do much to inspire the young people.

The church services are well attended. At both morning and night services there were about 100 present.

Miss Grace Killingsworth, our church reporter, and her brother, Clarence, who have recently had their tonsils removed, are improving nicely.

Miss Sudie Medlock, one of the Sunday school teachers, who has been ill for some time, continues to improve.

Harmony expects to begin work on the Easter Program right away.

At both churches the people are looking forward to having Dr. Taylor preach the second Sunday in April. Since the churches are quite a little distance from other M. P. churches and we seldom have the privilege of having other M. P. ministers or even other M. P. members, it is quite a treat for us to be so well favored by Dr. Taylor's visit.

Both sermons were enjoyed.

They dedicated their new Salvation Army hall here on the afternoon of this same day.

Circle No. 4 of the Auxiliary met Thursday night with Mrs. D. T. Beckham at her home on Andrews avenue.

The circle decided to make a flower garden in the side yard at the church, and a committee was appointed to have charge of this work with Mrs. J. M. Baity as chairman and Miss Ileen Bowling and Mrs. J. B. Burchette as her associates.

Under the splendid executive ability and leadership of the president, and the responsive co-operation of all the Circle leaders and members, the reports showed a most successful year's work. One gratifying item of the reports was that the budget for the year would be paid in full. At this time Mrs. Clyde Finch in behalf of Circle No. 1 presented to Mrs. F. R. Harris a life membership certificate, for her faithful and loyal services as treasurer of the Auxiliary for many years. Miss Myra Hight also presented a life membership certificate to Mrs. H. A. Jordan, who is the efficient leader of Circle No. 4.

The program leader, Mrs. T. J. Evans, then took charge of the meeting. Miss Alice Faulkner gave a most interesting review of the third chapter of the study book, "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem."

A short play was enjoyed during the social hour. The characters were Mrs. D. D. Hocutt, Mrs. J. C. Mann and Mrs. C. E. Ellis.

REPORTER.

Lexington, State Street.—Last Sunday was a good day for us in many ways. Our pastor brought us two very strong and inspiring addresses. At the 11 o'clock hour the subject was "How to win others for Christ." This ever-interesting and important subject was very ably discussed by Mr. Hendry, and was highly inspiring to all who heard it.

At the evening hour the members of the Sunday school were requested to be present in as near a solid body as possible. All the classes were well represented, and there were also a number of visitors. The subject used for the evening worship was "Sowing and Reaping." The singing was unusually good at this service. Two special numbers were sung by a chorus of eight men in a splendid way that delighted all who heard.

All the Sunday night meetings are in many ways unusual and all are well attended and much enjoyed.

A week ago Sunday night was "Automobile Night." Mr. Hendry gave each driver present a gift in the form of a booklet entitled "Rules of the Road."

We were much pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Blanton, of Jacksonville, Fla., with us in the services Sunday. Mr. Blanton is a brother of Mrs. Hendry. He and Mrs. Blanton and their small son, Francis, are visiting a while at the parsonage. Mrs. Blanton is an accomplished musician and graciously consented to play for us at the opening exercises of Sunday school. Mrs. C. L. Koonts, our regular pianist, is also a teacher in the primary department and as the opening exercises for the children are held in their rooms we are very glad to have someone to play for us at the opening.

Two weeks ago Sunday we were very glad to have Mrs. Williams and Miss Edith Burrus, of Concord, worship with us at the morning hour. These ladies are helpful members of Concord M. P. Church, formerly served by Bro. Hendry.

Mrs. H. C. Rodgers and Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Potts motored to Burlington Sunday and attended Mr. Bethea's church there and enjoyed a short visit at the parsonage with Mr. Bethea and his family.

REPORTER.

Pleasant Grove.—The Sunday school is moving along nicely. The attendance Sunday was 144 with an offering of $6.47. The special meeting started Sunday. Brother Williams brought us two splendid messages. Rev. R. S. Troxler is to be the pulpit help. He is expected Monday afternoon and will have charge of the services. We are hoping these services may continue for at least ten days. Rev. Mr. Troxler has been with us before. We are looking forward to his coming with pleasure. May we all pray for a glorious revival.

The C. E. Society has had some repair work and painting done on the Sunday school rooms which helps the appearance very much.

We held our second quarterly conference Wednesday evening. 'Most all the officers were present and the reports were encouraging. The nominees for delegate to the Annual Conference were Mr. Z. B. Morris and Mr. Clyde Payne.

The death angel came in our midst last Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and claimed Mrs. Martha Wright Kennedy, 83 years of age. Mrs. Kennedy was the mother of one and the step-mother of three of our members. Our deepest sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

REPORTER.

Richland Circuit.—We are still living and doing things in a small way. But we are glad we can do little things for our Master, and he that fails to do the little things perhaps will never have the opportunity to do big things. What is that in thy hand? I feel that many of these people are using what they have. But there has come about a wonderful change on this work in the last ten years. So many of the good old people that worshipped with us here ten years ago are gone to their reward and we miss them so much. But their work was done, for they raised up others to take their places. We are very proud of the younger ones who are taking up the work where they left off. All our churches but one have evergreen Sunday schools. I feel sure they will start up now, as spring opens up. To be sure, too few attend the Sunday school and the superintendent often becomes discouraged, but God will reward the faithful, and to my mind the greatest heroes we have today are the men and women who are going on from week to week and year by year without any pay and often without a word of encouragement, but sometimes criticized, yet they are faithful. Verily, they shall have their reward. We are praying the Spirit of the Master may lead in the work and that pentecostal revival will be the experience of every heart.

Our second quarterly ocnference will meet at Giles church on Saturday before the second Sunday in April at 2 o'clock. Trust every official member will feel it his duty to be there and may they not be satisfied until they perform their duty.

JOEL B. TROGDON, Pastor.

Seagrove.—On last night a missionary thank-offering service was held at Seagrove. Mrs. W. C. Hammer, of Asheboro, delivered an interesting address in her usual pleasing way. Mrs. Hammer's address was followed by a play given by nine girls.

The offering amounted to nearly $20.00. Before leaving the church the amount asked for, $20.00, was raised in full. This amount covers the G. C. B. apportionment here. Following the missionary program, Miss Esther Ross, of Asheboro, spoke in behalf of the Leadership Training School to be held for this district in Asheboro. A full house was in attendance. Special singing was another attractive feature of the service.

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Hughes and Miss Mary Parsons, of Randleman, were guests at the parsonage yesterday. They attended services at Seagrove and New Zion.

Funeral services for Mrs. Carson Lowdermilk, aged 57 years, were held at Huldah church Saturday, the 22nd. The deceased was a good woman. Her membership was with Flag Springs M. P. Church. The writer conducted the service.

WM. H. NEESE.

West Forsyth.—Services at Harmony Grove church last Sunday were well attended, both in Sunday school and preaching service. We had a number of visitors in the service, and the congregation was very attentive to the message of the pastor. After the service the pastor enjoyed a visit and dinner with Mrs. W. S. Bodsford and wife. We also visited other home in the community during the afternoon.

Our next appointments will be at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches on the first Sunday in April. C. B. WAY, Pastor.

South Lexington Church.—We are still glad to report that our work is going along nicely. We had 211 present at Sunday school on March 23.

We were very fortunate in having with us in our evening service the Crescent Quartette of this city which rendered some splendid sacred music. The church was filled to its capacity and all present seemed to enjoy it very much.

We are planning on beginning our revival meeting the third Sunday in April and we ask the prayers of all Christian people that we may have a wonderful revival and help to make this community a better place in which to live.

We feel very fortunate in having the Ninth District Rally to meet in our church beginning Saturday, March 9th, at 7:30 o'clock, continuing through Sunday evening, and we hope to have a large crowd in attendance for the occasion.

On Saturday, March 23, our Ladies' Aid put on a supper, selling only hot dogs, sandwiches cold drinks and ice cream, of which each member furnished a part, and cleared something over $13.00, which will go on part of our church funds.

We ask the prayers of all Christians that our church may continue to grow and do work for our Master.

PHONSE BEAN, Reporter.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—We were delighted yesterday at the morning hour to have Mr. Tracy Burton preach to us. He is a young man who feels that he has been called to the service of God. We pray that he will make a successsful worker, and invite him to be with us every time he can. Our pastor filled his regular appointment at the evening hour with the best sermon he has preached to us yet. His subject was "The Cross of Christ." Christian Endeavor service last evening was led by Miss Romaine Poole. Miss Ruth Pearson will be the leader Sunday evening, March 30. We hope to see Mrs. R. T. Bennette out soon with her young son.

Miss Romaine Poole, Miss Ruth Pearson, Mrs. Harrison, Mrs. H. R. McClimon, Miss Kate Poole, Mr. Nick Smith and Mer. Herman Compton have charge of the Easter program which will be given out next Sunday evening.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON.

Asheboro.—Friday evening, March 21, the Father and Son Banquet was held in the social room of the church. Rev. C. W. Bates, pastor of Calvary Church, Greensboro, N. C., delivered a wonderful address. A banquet of this kind is held every year, and the men and boys thoroughly enjoy it. The attendance this year was the largest ever.

Our Sunday school is doing nicely. We had 257 present, and several new members are being added. Sunday being Children's Home day, we had an offering of $35.97. The individual classes have made pledges and pay them each fourth Sunday. We have found this a very fine way to help support our Children's Home.

Our pastor deilvered an interesting and inspiring sermon at the 11 o'clock hour. His subject was, "For We Are All Laborers Together With God."

William Ross, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Ross, united with the church at the morning service.

A rally was held Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock as a beginning of the Young People's Training School. The first session is to be held Monday evening. The school is under the supervision of Rev. F. L. Gibbs. We are expecting several out-of-town people as well as several people from other denominations in this town. REPORTER.

Mt. Pleasant, North Davidson Charge.—Our attendance has been good at Sunday school and also church services. Our pastor is preaching some very interesting sermons. At the 11 o'clock hour the past Sunday he delivered a splendid sermon. His theme was "Jesus Christ, the Best of Teachers." We were very glad to have with us Mrs. Birch Craven and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Green. These people seem like home-folks when they come to our church, and we are mighty glad to have them with us.

On last Saturday the second quarterly conference was held at our church. We are very glad for the conference to meet at Mt. Pleasant. At 11 o'clock Brother George Berrier delivered a fine talk on "The Foundation of the Church." It was a very interesting talk and we all enjoyed it very much. As the old saying goes, "I could sit and listen to Bro. Berrier the whole day long and not tire." In the afternoon the business part of the conference was taken up. There were many splendid reports from all the churches. There seem to be some improvements since the last meeting. The meeting adjourned until the third quarterly conference, which will be held at Spring Hill.

We are very sorry to report that Mr. Clay Hayworth isn't improving any. May the readers of the Herald remember our brother in their prayers.

We have a good pastor and by all working together we are sure we can keep pressing on. REPORTER.

First Church, Burlington.—Our work is going forward fairly well. The attendance at both Sunday school and preaching today was very good. Bro. Gerringer brought the sermon at the morning preaching service and we had special services in the evening at the time for the regular evening sermon.

A number of our members and others in the community are still sick and we trust that soon each one will be fully recovered, and back to church and Sunday school.

Our church is undergoing renovations and the interior of the auditorium is looking much improved with the new paper on the walls. REPORTER.

Rehoboth Church, Granville Circuit.—The Sunday school seems to be progressing since spring has come. We have some new members, also some new teachers. Mrs. H. L. Wright has taken charge of the Bible class. She is a very interesting teacher.

The Woman's Auxiliary met at the home of Mrs. Henry Greensway. Seventeen members were present. We had a very good program. The following officers were elected: President, Mrs. W. W. Grissom; vice-president, Miss Mariah Rogers; treasurer, Miss Sue Harris; secretary, Miss Annie Parrott. Our collection amounted to $7.50. Miss Ruth Wrenn and Miss Annie Parrott were elected to Branch Meeting. The hostess served cream and cake. This we enjoyed very much. Our next meeting will be held at Mrs. Willis Kittrell's.

Under the direction of Mrs. R. W. Harris a good thank-offering program was held the third Sunday. Collection, $20.35. Rev. C. L. Spencer gave us a good talk on "Giving." Possibly we wouldn't have received as much had he not made the Gospel so plain.

The church work seems to be moving along very nicely.

Mrs. R. W. Harris is visiting her sister at Statesville, N. C.

Miss Edith Wright is spending the weekend at home. REPORTER.

Tabernacle Charge.—All the organizations on this charge are functioning in a very encouraging manner. The C. E. Society at Tabernacle, with Mr. Ralph Reynolds president, is holding interesting and helpful meetings every Sunday afternoon. Last Sunday the attendance was large. A number of the C. E. members are planning to attend the Leadership Training School in Greensboro.

Young People's Day was observed at both churches on this charge on the first Sunday in February, Rev. F. L. Gibbs being the speaker. The people were pleased with his inspiring addresses. Attendance at the preaching services is good when the weather is favorable.

Several of our faithful members have been kept from church for some time because of sickness, among them Miss Annie Hardin, Mrs. Enos Smith, Mrs. Dora Neese, and Mrs. I. L. Trogdon. We are glad to report that they are all improving.

Mrs. Pittman, of Scotland Neck, mother of Mrs. E. L. Coble, is spending several months with her daughter. We are pleased to have her attend our services.

The members continue to remember the pastor with gifts for the pantry from time to time. The following have our thanks: Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Coble, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Jones, and Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Garrett.

Rev. T. F. McCulloch will preach at Tabernacle next Sunday morning

H. L. ISLEY.

Enfield.—Mr. Auman delivered two helpful sermons at the regular morning and evening hours yesterday. He clearly proves to us on the street as well as from the pulpit his deep concern relative to salvation of lost souls. May we who profess to be Christians be more zealous in our efforts to help him in this great work. Our Sunday school, also church attendance, has increased since our last report. Let us labor for a greater increase. The C. E. Society is increasing in membership rapidly. Our young people are wide-awake and their slogan is "Big, Better, Best." REPORTER.

◆

Bess Chapel.—We are glad to report a fine Sunday school under the leadership of Mr. D. P. Beam, also glad to report a large congregation for the worship period.

Our Ladies Aid having been so to much expense painting the church and buying carpet, the Christian Endeavor came in and lent them a helping hand by placing a new range in the parsonage which was greatly appreciated by the pastor and his family. We want to thank some of our good people for bringing supplies for the table.

We are looking forward to the 29th and 30th of this month when the Eleventh District Rally meets here. We are expecting all churches to be represented. We extend to all a hearty welcome. W also want to thank Rev. C. E. Ridge for the wonderful program that he worked out for the convention.

Pray for us that we may do more for the Master.

MARION C. HENDERSON, Pastor.

CAMPAIGN FOR CHESTNUT RIDGE CHURCH

The Home Circle of Chestnut Ridge M. P. church has decided to make a "Memory Quilt" made in brick form, to buy a new carpet, and ask everyone who is interested to keep us by buying a brick at 10c each, and that entitles your name to be embroidered on as many bricks as you buy.

We are sure each one who helps us in this way will receive great blessings, for "The Lord loveth a cheerful giver." We take this plan through the columns of our church paper to reach so many of our people at one time and especially our ex-pastors who are always ready to help "Old Chestnut Ridge."

After we have solicited all we can in this way the quilt will be sold to the highest bidder; bids will be accepted any time and placed on file. Who will be first? So you can be placed on the honor roll. Address all communications to Mrs. D. M. Pender, Secretary, Efland, N. C., Route 2.

AN EXPLANATION

The two programs of the Eleventh District Rallies appearing the Herald last week call for a word of explanation. Perhaps no one should be credited with this mistake. It happened this way. Last year the conference districts were numbered and published through the Herald. Connelly Springs, Cleveland, Bess Chapel, Bessemer City, Fallston, Lincolnton, Shelby and Caroleen, were listed in the Eleventh District. We held a Rally accordingly. To avoid a mistake I saved a clipping from the Herald and posted same in my pocket memorandum. It appears in the Journal this year that we have been promoted. However, our program was in the hands of the printer before we received our Journals.

We are perfectly willing for Brother Stubbins to call his the Eleventh District, and we are glad to be promoted to the Twelfth.

"The Truth Shall Make You Free"

Free to vacate solemn trusts?
Free to follow carnal lusts?
Free to counter hostile thrusts?
Free to rob the poor of crusts?

Free to foster selfish aims?
Free to play in unfair games?
Free to do a thing that shames?
Free to tarnish good men's names?

Free to be a rolling stone?
Free to use what I don't own?
Free to speak in angry tone?
Free to leave my friend alone?

Error, not truth, has these things done.
Truth would lead such things to shun.
Something new beneath the sun:
Through Christ's truth true freedom's won.

Read yourself what He has said:
"If ye continue in my word,
Then are ye my disciples indeed,
And ye shall know the truth,
And the truth shall make you free."
—John 8:31, 32.

Saint Gandhi

Forty years ago or thereabouts Gandhi was a college student in England and wore English dress, attracting no especial attention. Now he looks old and thin, his hair shorn off and dresses with only a loin cloth. He eclipses John the Baptist in his mode of living. But he is attracting the attention of his people and convincing them that he is their great friend and that he is laboring and suffering for their escape from English rule. He practices and advocates passive resistence. Yet the EnglLish had him in prison for a time, which probably ncreased his influence among India's millions. He is a troublesome sort of antagonist. If he fought with carnal weapon is suffering, how is he to be resisted? The English weapo nis suffering, how is he to be resisted? The English are afraid of him, but are more afraid to treat him with violence. It is impossible to predict the course of political events in India under his influence. But his voluntarily incurred hardships will probably end his career.

Moving Picture Producers Promise To Be Good

One of Dickens' characters said, "The world must be amused," and then proceeded to amuse as much of the world as he could reach in a way that was not very edifying. The moving picture producers have the conviction that the world needs entertainment, and have advanced to the degree of realizing that it does matter much how people are entertained, They know that some kinds of entertainment help and some kinds hurt. They claim credit also for the good resolution to eliminate the hurtful kind and present only the helpful kind. It will be a hard resolution to carry out, but we trust that they appreciate the difficulties and have counted the cost and that they are morally prepared to meet the obligation they have assumed in announcing their purpose. They ask the constructive help of church people in the realization of their high aim.

Great is the responsibility of those who control the moving picture industry. They cannot afford to proceed without due regard to the moral influence of the powerful agency in their hands. The money the industry yields is a small thing in comparison with the moral effects it produces.

CHRISTIAN GIVING

PERSONAL TESTIMONY OF A MINISTER

(The facts stated in this article are attested by the Editor, who has long known the writer, whose loans have saved many serious situations in Methodist mission fields.—Editor.)

I am a minister in a sister denomination. My testimony in part is of the nature of a confesson. I was born in a log house and had to work hard on a farm to help make a humble living. By teaching and doing other work, I paid my way through college and the theological seminary. I acquired, by necessity and by choice, the most economical habits. I hated waste. God must hate it, as He does not allow a particle of matter to be destroyed. Jesus commanded to gather up the fragments, and neither he nor the apostles were wasteful in their living. I became acquisitive, and to some extent worldly. No one can accumulate money without becoming somewhat worldly. Soon the question of giving a tenth of my income came to me. After a hard struggle, I consented.

I kept an account, and charged myself with one-tenth of all I received.

Soon another question arose: "Will you give the 'stolen' or unpaid tenth of former years?" "Will a man rob God?" "Wherein have we robbed thee?" "In tithes (tenths) and in offerings."—Mal. 3. 8. I saw that I was a thief, and had robbed God, my greatest Benefactor! After a second severe struggle, the Lord gained the victory again, and I decided to give the stolen tithe or tenth. I counted what money I had and added to it the probable expense of my family. I struck off a tenth. I was far behind. I had robbed my gracious Benefactor for many years and of hundreds of dollars. One year I gave $1,100 in a desperate effort to restore what I had stolen. I finally reached the goal, and gave evidence of repentance by restoring all. I can now sing:

"The dying thief rejoiced to see
That fountain in his day;
And there have I, as vile as he,
Washed all my sins away."

Like many others, I am in his class. If all in pulpit and pew would restore all tithes, God "would open the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it"!

About this time, a very precious Methodist Episcopal brother, Dr. J. W. Eicher, was bereaved of an only child, a little girl of six. At the funeral the minister spoke most beautifully of that land of children and of flowers and of song. He coined his heart into the words of that beautiful song, "Our Little Darling." Naturally his deep grief would give color to his dreams. So he dreamed that the Saviour appeared to him and said, "I will call for you in a few years." Just then, in his dream, he saw me standing near, deeply interested, and heard me say to Jesus, 'What shall I do with my money?" The Saviour replied, "What did I tell you while I was on earth?" I shook my head as if that were a hard test, and looked steadfastly to the ground. The dream made a deep impression on me. To be sure, he had told me and all others what to do with our money. We are to lay up treasure in heaven, not on earth, and to forsake all and follow Him.

Presently a third question pressed for an answer: "Will you consecrate the nine tenths and hold that subject to His call?" After another struggle, the Lord won again.

Soon a fourth and last question confronted me. "Will you not give all above an economical living?" The Lord won this battle also, and for many years I have been most happy in giving all above my necessities. No pleasure quite so joyous. I would not go back to the old plan of laying up treasures on earth. The Lord won each of the four battles, praise His name! Otherwise, I would have been ruined. His will was far better than mine. The same almighty Christ that saved the drunkard from his cups saved me from my money. I only wish that I had made my four decisions sooner. I would have saved much worry and worldliness and time and trouble. I recommend these decisions forthwith to all who would be happy in both worlds.

I have saved many thousands of dollars in taxes, inevitable losses, and expense in settling my estate. I have made and executed my will without expense, and given my money where I wanted it to go, and where it will do enormous good. Is it not unwise, even un-Christian, to leave the Lord's money for heirs to spend or squander? The apostles left none.

Next, the question arose, "How can I give my money to save the most souls, and to do the greatest good?" I have studied this subject as thoroughly as any science. I inherited nothing. My salary was $1,500 or less.

After considering many worthy objects, I was led to decide to give the bulk of my money to the Home and Foreign Missionary Boards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to be loaned to churches until the total loan funds of both boards are sufficient to meet all demands for loans. Then the interest on the money is to be used to preach the gospel in the secular newspapers and other publications of the world on the most economical terms. Every $1,000 so loaned to churches at five per cent. compound interest, in 300 years, will, together with the accrued interest, aid in building over 8,000,000 churches, by a loan of $1,000 each for five years, and the new principal at the end of 300 years will be over $2,273,000,000.

I receive no annuities, except on a very small part. Including interest, my total gifts to missions are over $150,000, and I hope to give many thousands more. After all needs for loans are supplied, there will be many millions left, to preach the gospel to countless millions through the press fo the world. Will not this lead to the conversion of a great multitude, and hasten the winning of the whole world to Christ? John Wesley gave all; the apostles gave all; Jesus Christ gave all; many of His followers give all; and it is the happy privilege of all Christians to give their all to Jesus, who gave His all to them.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

DIVORCING SALVATION ARMY FROM TOBACCO

WILL H. BROWN

The tobacco people are still making a fuss over the attitude of the Salvation Army on the tobacco question. A reader of Tobacco Leaf writes to the editor, quoting from a book by Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Army in the United States, in which the statement is made that the Salvation Army, during the great war, did not sell or give away tobacco or cigarettes, as a part of its own equipment, and under no other circumstances, when it could be avoided; that in a few cases where tobacco was sent to the Army for distribution they handed it to the doctors who were treating wounded soldiers, and also to Red Cross workers, for wounded men who were fretting for tobacco, adding: "But they never were a part of our supplies, and far from the policy of the Salvation Army. Furthermore, the Salvation Army sent no men to France to work for them who smoked or used tobacco in any form. No man can hold a commission in the Salvation Army and use tobacco."

In publishing this quotation the Tobacco Leaf says it has no intention to discredit the Salvation Army, "which is undoubtedly one of the greatest forces for moral uplift in this country," but feels that it is its duty to show the attitude of the Army toward tobacco.

It would be interesting to get a statement from the editor as to why he considers the Salvation Army one of the greatest forces "for moral uplift in this country." We may well ask: "Could the Salvation Army work for the uplift of humanity without taking a stand against tobacco?"

A business which weakens the will, enslaves both mind and body, and throws tens of thousands of men out of employment, because its product has made them unfit to hold positions of responsibility, is no business with which any kind of an uplift organization can afford to flirt or to be on intimate terms.

TALK TO THE CONDUCTORS

Mr. J. B. Mills, writing in the Christian Herald says:

One day while on his way to a Baptist Association in the southwestern part of the state several men began talking about the failure of prohibition. The conductor said to the one who was talking the loudest:

"So you are opposed to prohibition?"

"Yes," was the reply.

Then the conductor said:

"If you were a railroad conductor you wouldn't be. For years I have been conductor on this local out of Birmingham and on Saturday afternoons in the old days when liquor was sold there we seldom had a trip without half a dozen or more fights. There was frequent shooting of revolvers and it was not safe for ladies to travel. The evenings after pay days were the worst. We had numbers of drunken people, both men and women, on almost every trip. Since prohibition, I don't know when I have had a drunken person on my train. And if you were a conductor in a mining section you would most certainly favor prohibition. I don't know of a conductor on the road who is not for it."

"I HAPPIED HIM UP"

Agnes is a little girl with such a bright, happy face that it is a pleasure to look at her.

One day, in answer to her mother's call, she came running home from a neighbor's, two or three doors away. Her eyes were bright, her lips so smiling that her mother smiled too. "Did you want me, mother?" asked Agnes.

"No, dear," said her mother. "Not for anything important. I missed you; that is all. Where were you, daughter?"

"At the Brown's. And O, mother, Walter was cross, but I happied him up, so that he got all over it; and then the baby cried, and I had to happy her up; then someone stepped on the kitten's tail, and I was just going to happy her up when you called me."

"Why, what a happying time you have had!" laughed her mother. "It must make you happy yourself to happy up little boys and babies and kittens, for you look as happy as possible."

And this is true. The more we try to make others happy, the happier we shall be ourselves. Then put away frowns and pouting lips. Try to "happy up" those who are troubled, or sick, and soon you will find yourself so happy that your face will shine with smiles.—Selected.

LIFE AND LOVE

A cynic once remarked that life had two ways of punishing us—by giving us the thing we wanted or by denying it—and which ever alternative it selected, the punishment was inevitable.

In a way that is true. In youth we pine for love. We don't exactly know what love is, but we imagine it is a glamorous state in which we are eternally happy.

Then love comes. It brings with it heartache and dillusion. Rarely does its golden surface remain untarnished. At best, it changes from the throbbing, excited, up-in-the-air state to the calm of understanding and peace. We never get love without getting experience. And experience has a high price.

A woman who rose suddenly from obscurity to fame has found the laws in her success. Whereas once she thought to be famous, and to figure in the newspapers would be the height of bliss, now she finds it impossible to avoid publicity—and she hates it.

She finds herself misquoted in interviews and her most trifling personal affairs played up in big type. She can't help paying the price of her success. Often she wishes she were still a nonentity, with no public to concern itself about her moves.

So many of us in our youth suffer the torments of despair. We find ourselves misunderstood. We find ourselves crushed by those we love and by the discouragements and disillusionment that seems too hard to bear.

And we say to ourselves, "Oh, for a calm, philosophical spirit! Oh, for nerves that do not torture! O, for minds that will rule our hearts, O, for peace at any price!"

And then in our maturity, we find this desire grateful. Perhaps, we grow comfortably fat at 40, with shock absorbers of adipose tissue protecting our once sensitive nerves.

We find ourselves greatly concerned with the material things of life such as eating, sleeping and living at ease. Then suddenly we realize that we are no longer capable of the old heart throbs, of the pains and the hurts of love.

We are more comfortable, yes. But the picture of life has become blurred before our vision. We no longer see the sharp clear outlines. Things don't matter so much, because they don't touch us as they used to. We have grown a shell, or muffled with padding of sophistry the spots where we used to be sensitive and keenly alive.

We have learned to live and have forgotten how to love. We have comfort, but we have lost sensitivity. Then we would give anything for the old self, that lived keenly and alertly, that suffered but also knew rapture.

It may seem like cold comfort, but don't feel too sorry for yourself if you suffer a deep hurt to your feelings now and then, if you are tortured through your feelings. It shows your emotions are still alive. It shows you can still feel life's hearts instead of being burdened to them.

It shows you are still young.—Selected.

BUT ONE TRACK

"There are many tracks and switches in a railroad yard, leading in various directions, but to the engineer in charge of a train there is to be but one track—the track his train is to take. No other will guide him to hs destination. So it should be with you if you expect to reach Heaven. There is but one track, and it leads toward the grand central depot of Heaven. Follow that one! You have no time trying to take every other track that you may see!"—Selected.

A TRIBUTE TO E. C. HARRIS

"The good that men do lives after them." While Brother E. C. Harris has departed this life his influence still lives and can never die.

It has been said a child's training should begin one hundred years before it is born. In this respect he was fortunate, for he was the worthy scion of a notable ancestry. History records that more than a century ago his forebears were active in the church. We find that Ivy Harris was a member of the General Conference of the M. E. Church, held in Baltimore in 1792. Dr. Paris records in his "History of the Methodist Protestant Church" two remarkable letters written by Ivy Harris, dated December 26, 1826, and January 7, 1827, respectively, condemning the arbitrary expulsion of a church member, who dared discuss reforming church government. These letters show that he was a man of initiative, fine ability, and strict integrity. Dr. Drinkhouse says in his History of Methodist Reform: "He was one of the most influential and pronounced of the original Reformers"; and further states that in North Carolina the name of Harris and Methodist Reform are identical.

Many notable men and women, lineal descendants of the Harrises of that day, have largely contributed to the formation and growth of the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina.

A distinguished family in which were four brothers, maternal uncles of E. C. Harris: Rev. S. J. Harris, Rev. C. F. Harris, D. D., Rev. A. C. Harris, D. D., and Rev. S. P. J. Harris, has been notable for the long and efficient service these ministers rendered in their day and generation. Dr. Drinkhouse in recording the death of Dr. C. F. Harris says: "Among those of the veterans who departed this life during the current year it seems fitting to name Rev. C. F. Harris, D. D., of North Carolina, who departed this life January 6, 1896, over eighty years of age. He was the last of the Harris brothers, who were so conspicuous in the Reform movement in that conference. His labors richly merit this historical embalmment."

Edward Clark Harris, born and reared with an environment so favorable, in early boyhood professed faith in Christ and when fifteen years of age united with Rehoboth Church, Granville Charge, and remained for fifty-seven years a loyal and useful member until in the early morning of February 4, 1930, he joined the church triumphant. For many years he was a leader in all church activities in his local church, and served it with an untiring devotion. He could truly say:

"I love Thy Kingdom, Lord,
The house of Thine abode,
The Church our blest Redeemer saved
With His own precious blood."

One of the most striking traits of his character was perfect sincerity. He was a man in whom there was no guile.

He was held in high esteem and honored by the citizens of his county, whom he served for many years in an official capacity. Business entrusted to his care was performed conscientiously and well. He was diligent and enjoyed his labors, but it was not in secular affairs his chief affections centered, but in an ideal home life and a supreme devotion to God. He and his excellent wife reared in the nurture and admonition of the Lord an interesting family of eight children—three sons and five daughters, as follows: Mrs. D. T. Perkins, secretary to the State Treasurer, Raleigh; Thomas D. Harris, of the Bureau of Public Roads, Washington, D. C.; E. C. Harris, Jr., civil engineer, North Wilkesboro; Mrs. Bert Lassiter, Four Oaks; Mrs. William Floyd, Miss Sue Harris, and Richard W. Harris, of Oxford, and Miss Delphia Harris, of Meredith College.

Brother Harris, perhaps, found of all church work his greatest delight in teaching his Sunday School class, to which he was greatly devoted. He had taught for more than forty years in Sunday School.

He was generous, and contributed largely to the support of the gospel ministry and all benevolent enterprises of the church.

The graces: faith, knowledge, virtue, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, and charity richly abounded in his life, making it fruitful and crowning it with glory and honor.

His memory will ever be held in highest esteem by his many friends and will ever remain a sacred treasure enshrined in the hearts of those who loved him.

BROTHER POWELL EXPLAINS

Dear Brother McCulloch:

I see you have republished a little piece I wrote the Pathfinder when I registered my straw vote. I really did not write it for publication. I was really mad at what was going on in Congress and the publicity the Pathfinder, Literary Digest, and other papers were giving the wets. I simply wanted to register my protest against the action of such papers and courts manned with wet jurors and officers not true to their oaths. The Pathfinder published my personal protest against the publicity of such periodicals, the slack enforcement of law the Congressional asses just for political purposes.

I am receiving thanks and congratulations from people I never knew and will never see for my article in the Pathfinder. I am not sorry I wrote it and for some cause the Pathfinder published it. I am a defender of the 18th Amendment and the strict enforcement of all laws. I have seen the devilishness, the slime, and meanness of the liquor traffic in all its devilishness from the old saloon days, the dispensary, down to the present time. I note very carefully and with gratification the great difference from the old saloon days to now. It is as different as day is from night. Liquor has always been a demon, an outlaw, a thief, a murderer, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. It never has obeyed the law and never will. I will stand by prohibition to the bitter end.

I am enclosing one of my letters from an officer in old Kentucky. You may publish any part of this letter or all of it.

Very truly,

H. L. Powell.

The Officer's Letter

Rev. H. L. Powell,
Thomasville, N. C.,

Dear Sir:

I notice your statement in the Pathfinder today in regards to enforcement of the prohibition laws, and I just want to thank you. I wish we could get more men like you to come to the front and not be scared to make a statement.

I am an officer and have been for a long time, and I know conditions pretty well. I have done all I can to enforce the laws and it makes a man very unpopular now. Just because we don't have enough men like you to back us up.

Prohibition can be enforced but we have got to have men to do it and not imitations.

And our courts are not what they should be. I have taken men who had broken a bottle and I only had the pieces and got convictions and others with a gallon or more and because it was Mr. C. Boe and he is a good politician, had a fine of probably $10. or nothing. I have a case now of three drunks that I got in a place I raided and captured a whole manufacturing outfit, found 20 gallons of brew and took 12 quarts and eight pints to court and party waived to the Grand Jury and I have had two Grand Juries to meet since and have yet not gotten them to take up the case and first of the year a new judge and county attorney went in office and they claim they find none of the evidence that I left. So you see what we have to put up with and then are cursed because we don't get them.

I know we have lots of crooked officers. But you will find the bigger per cent. higher up than a policeman.

I have not education enough to write for a paper, wish I could, but I will pat any man on the back when he comes out and lets the public know what is going on.

I had no intention of writing anything when I started except to thank you that it might cause you to write more. But when I get started talking about prohibition I can't stop. And I intend to fight whisky as long as I live. Am a Cumberlance Presbyterian. Have a wife and four children, three in the church and one baby, six years old.

Hope to see you have something else to say sometime. Keep fighting.

J. W. Wilkins.

ARE YOU STRESSING THEM?

The Committee on Evangelism is hoping that the failure on the part of pastors to send in report of how any have joined the Prayer Bands to pray for this Pentecost-Evangelistic-Campaign is not indicative of a lack of stressing the four things that we decided to push in the North Carolina Conference during this season.

The four things that we counted most essential just now, you adding such other points as you think best to your program, are: the organization of Prayer Bands, counting those who will promise to pray daily for the outpouring of God's Spirit for this great work that is before us, not sending names but reporting the number who have promised to pray definitely on your charge for this to the Secretary of the Committee. This will inspire others.

The second: Personal Work. This is needed to get people to pray as well as to be saved and to encourage the third which is Church Attendance. The fact that there are many people who do not know what it is all about shows that they are not in their place at the time of worship. There should be a revival of church attendance and this should be emphasized by the laity as well as the pastor.

Getting the folks to pray definitely for something; going out after those who have wandered away from the church as well as the unsaved; interesting the membership to be on hand and on time at each service. These three things at work will enable the pastor to preach more effectively Evangelistic Sermons which is the fourth thing that we are empasizing at this time.

Now Pastors, the Committee have gone to the trouble and expense of meeting and going over these things carefully and prayerfully, and after due deliberation decided that we should stress Prayer, Personal Work, Church Attendance, Evangelistic Preaching. I ask again, ARE YOU STRESSING THESE?

Yours for a Great Pentecostal Year,

N. G. Bethea, Secretary.

EVERY INCH A HERO

Recently in looking through a file of old papers, we came across this item, which was credited to The Youth's Companions

"A grocer in a town in Southern Ohio, who had taken an active part against the sale of liquor to boys, was recently visited by a delegation of saloon-keepers. After listening patiently to their threats to destroy his business unless he ceased interfering wth theirs, he replied: 'You mistake my wares, sirs; I sell groceries, not principles.' That answer transformed a humble trader into a moral hero."

That estimate was quite correct. It is true heroism for a man to stand uncompromisingly by his principles when to do so may mean a serious temporary loss, and possibly financial disaster. There are too few such men. But it is gratifying to know that there are some such characters in all the honorable walks of life from the highest to the lowest.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE DYNAMITE HUNTERS

"You will have to cut through that gulch and straight up this hill," Gene Shattuck, the chief engineer for the Midland Irrigation Company, told his new assistant. "Then swing north, going out beyond that knob. Of course, you'll have to survey the lines, but I've been over it times enough and I know it by heart."

"What about that?" John Cary asked, pointing his thumb over his shoulder at a hut, half thatch, half deer skin, that nestled in the shelter of the great rock known as the knob.

"Oh, that!" his superior came back contemptuously, "Dirty red skins. Glad to get rid of them anyway, just a squaw and a half-grown boy; they can move on."

"All right, just as you say," and the two walked off down the path to the pine-boarded shack, called by courtesy, office. Hardly had they gone when Kamish, the Indian boy, dropped softly as a cat onto the spot upon which they stood.

"Ugh!" it was a very loud grunt to come from so small a person.

"Dirty redskins are we? Well, I wish my father had lived. He would kill you for that," the boy shook a dark-skinned fist at the back of the retreating engineer.

For several weeks Kamish and his mother had watched the men at work in the gulch below their home. "Irrigation ditch," some one had told them, to bring water down into the Teseque Valley. Among the ranchers below the gulch there had been considerable speculation as to which branch of the long dry Teseque river the new ditch would follow. Water on East Branch meant an increase of crops and a proportionate rise in the value of the land to the settlers along that side, while it meant certain disaster to the unfortunate along the West Branch. The opposite results would follow the opening of the ditch up the West Branch.

No one but Kamish and his mother seemed to care which way the water came around the knob. To them it meant everything, for they had grown to love the spot they called home even before Long Knife, the husband, and father, had been brought home seriously wounded. Now his grave under the aspens near the hut, gave added value to the place.

As Kamish stood thinking of these things he saw the engineer and his assistant climb into the company car and ride away toward Dennison. Resentment filled the Indian boy's heart as he watched them.

"I wish I was grown up," he muttered, "I'd sure fight the whole bunch of them. My father said this place belonged to us forever, and now—" But before he could complete his thought he saw something that drew him to his feet. From out of the woods to the left of the trail down which the Midland men had gone a few minutes before, rode two horsemen. Ranchers, he saw at a glance, as they drew up at the office door.

"Queer," Kamish said to himself. "They know Mr. Shattuck isn't there. They must have met him down the trail, unless they were hiding," he added thoughtfully. Still wondering he watched the new comers. They peered in at the window, they walked around the shack, then one of them tried the door. Giving his single garment a hitch, Kamish started down the path on the run. As he came in sight of the office he slackened his pace and sauntered leisurely toward the two men.

"Hello," called the man who had tried the door and whom Kamish recognized as Jim Jensen, a West Branch rancher, with a none too good a reputation. "Where's the boss?"

"Gone to town," the boy answered. "Looking for something?"

"Yes; do you know how to get into this place?"

"No, of course not; why should I?"

"Oh, I thought perhaps you worked for the Midland." The suggestion was almost a sneer.

"I wouldn't work for them; I hate them," the boy declared sullenly. "They are going to put their ditch up there and take our home away from us."

"Ah!" it wasn't a word it was just an indrawn breath that escaped from the taller man, the stranger.

"Then you'll help us," Jensen said confidently. "We want to get the dynamite and blow up the whole works."

Amazed Kamish stood speechless as the man explained. "They have decided to carry the water down the East Branch and ruin us. We'll save your home if you will help us."

"Dirty redskins, dirty redskins," Kamish was thinking. "Sure, I'll help. What can I do?"

"Well, we don't just exactly like to break into another man's property, but we want that key, now you hang around tomorrow and get it for us, will you? And we'll come back tomorrow night." Kamish promised to do as he was told.

"Don't fail us," Jim called back, as they rode away.

"I'll get even with Shattuck yet; dirty redskins, ugh!" Kamish trudged slowly back up the path to his home and his supper.

An hour later he sat at the foot of his favorite tree and looked off down the valley over which a blanket of darkness was rapidly settling. Gradually the tall pines and overhanging rocks were wiped out of the picture. Dully Kamish watched them. Usually he gloried in the beauty of the night but now his heart was sad, he was weighted down with the fate that awaited him and his mother. "Everything will come out right, trust in God," she had said as they ate their meager supper. "What chance," the boy thought with the Midland against them.

Suddenly Kamish lifted his head and listened. Horses, surely! The soft thud became plainer. Who could it be? He wasted no time in speculation. Instantly he was on the trail to the office, the only way by which riders could enter the gulch. "Jim Jensen again," he caught his breath, "dirty white men, too, I reckon." By the time the two men slipped from their saddles the Indian boy was safely hidden under the steps of the new bunk house.

"If we can get those papers tonight we are on easy street forever," the stranger was saying.

"You'll have to be quick, Shattuck never stays away late."

"He will tonight; Joe Greaser fixed his car; someone else—"

The words were drowned in a crash of glass. Kamish peeked out from his hiding place just in time to see a dark form disappear through the window. As he looked, another followed. The little Indian boy crept toward the office. Stealthily he neared the open window. With the aid of a flashlight the two inside were searching the drawers of the desk Shattuck had brought up from the city. Hardly daring to breathe, Kamish watched. At last Jim put a bundle of papers in his side pocket. Kamish slipped back toward the horses.

"Did you get the key?" he asked the surprised men as they came up.

"Couldn't find it," Jim snapped.

"I'll get it, you wait," the Indian boy vaulted the window and was soon back.

"Come on," he said, leading the way to the storage house.

"We'll be back tomorrow night for that job;" it was the stranger who spoke.

"Might as well do it while you are here," the boy insisted.

Jim said something to his companion that Kamish could not hear.

"All right, go on," the stranger agreed.

Kamish unlocked the storage house and stepped in.

"The dynamite is in that back room," he told them. "I'll watch the trail; you get it out."

Jim, flashlight in hand, stepped into the back room followed by his companion. Like a young panther, Kamish sprung to the door, swung it shut after them, and slipped the bolt into place.

Shouts of anger came from the surprised men. Kamish did not bother to listen, he was busy shoving everything he could move across the closed door. Finally, out of breath, he halted. It was pitch dark; he started for the window, but before he reached it the front door opened, and the engineer stepped in, lighting a match as he did so.

"What are you doing here? he demanded, as he spied the boy. "Who broke that window, you young—"

"Wait," the new assistant stopped him. "Why the barricade, boy?"

Shattuck now saw the pile against the door, and as he looked at the boy, suddenly afraid, his voice changed. "What is it, Kamish, what are you doing here?"

As the boy told his story the engineer listened soberly, then laughed.

"Dynamite," he said, "why there isn't a stick of dynamite this side of Denver."

"But they didn't know that." Kamish pointed to the back room where the sounds of anger had suddenly ceased.

"They will think there is plenty when we get through with them. You two stay here. I'll go up to the forest patrol and telephone the sheriff."

The next morning Gene Shattuck climbed the path to the shabby Indian home.

"You did a good job, Kamish, better than you know. Jim Jensen's friend is a spy for the Richmond Company. It was the papers they were after, little they cared which way the water goes. The Midland Company will see you get a reward, enough to take you through school, if I have my say." The engineer turned to the squaw. "We are laying out the pipe line this morning, the other side of the knob. You can keep your home; and I'd take my papers to Dennison, if I were you, and have them put on file, because when our carpenters come they are going to build you a home like other folks."

"Reckon you're right, mother," Kamish said, as the engineer went back to his work. "Things do come out right after awhile."—Mary L. Rouchle, in Youth's World.

CULTIVATING COMMUNION WITH GOD

Man is created in the spiritual image of God and is equipped for fellowship with the Eternal. Here and there we see an individual with keen sensitiveness who is at home in the realm of the spirit. Jesus, of course, is the supreme example of one who was certain of the reality and accessibility of God and whose deepest joys emerged from communion with the Father. He certainly expected his followers to enjoy this companionship also. Indeed, the religion of Jesus is utterly meaningless unless communication with God is possible. Some of Jesus' disciples through the centuries have repeated his spiritual experience to a marked degree. God was as real to St. Francis or John Wesley as the birds or human beings. Most Christians have had at least a few hours when they were vividly conscious of the Divine presence. The tragedy is that for all except a few these experiences come too infrequently . . . The spiritual resources which were available to Jesus are open to us on the same terms. We, too, can be vividly conscious of God's presence; we can listen to His voice and share our problems with Him; we can gain insight and love and courage from Him. The price of spiritual power includes these: the losing of self in a great task on behalf of humanity, the doing of which is vastly more important than personal comfort or safety; the cultivation of the arts of solitude; the cultivation of the beautiful; the practice of fellowship; and the willingness to follow the gleam at any cost. If we do these things faithfully, year after year, we shall find ourselves rising higher and higher toward the fullness of the measure of the stature of Christ.—Kirby Page.

A PLACE FOR ME

Use me, God in Thy great harvest field,
Which stretcheth far and wide like a wide sea;
The gatherers are so few, I fear the precious yield
Will suffer loss. Oh, find a place for me!

A place where best the strength I have will tell;
It may be one the other toilers shun—
Be it a wide or narrow place, 'tis well,
So that the work it holds be only done.

Christina Rosetti.

FAULT NOT WITH THE BIBLE

"If any one utters vain words to the effect that the Bible contains errors, he is himself in error, and the Bible is not. It is as when at night an east wind drives the fleecy clouds westward across the face of the moon, a child looks upward and says, 'See, the moon is moving backwards!' Is the moon indeed moving backwards? Now the Bible is deeper than astronomy; and the attitude of man toward the Bible is like that of a little child observing the heavens."—The Chinese Christian Intelligencer.

HE GOES BEFORE

The Oriental shepherd was always ahead of his sheep. He was down in front. Any attack upon them had to take him into account. Now God is down in front. He is in the tomorrows. It is tomorrow that fills men with dread. God is there already. All the tomorrows of our life have to pass Him before they can get to us.—F. B. Meyer.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER
President C. E. Society, High Point College

APRIL 6: WHAT IS INVOLVED IN DECIDING FOR CHRIST?

Romans 10:8-5.
(Consecration Meeting)

Bible Readings

Monday—Hearing about Christ. Matt. 13:1-9; 18-23.

Tuesday—Faith in Christ. Mark 16:16.

Wednesday—Change of mind. Acts 3:19.

Thursday—Resolution to turn. Luke 15:11-19.

Friday—Obedience to Christ. Matt. 28:19, 20.

Saturday—Witnessing for Christ. Matt. 10:22, 23.

Suggestions for Leader

Ask eight persons to recite the scripture lesson, each verse following in order. Afterwards have sentence prayers followed by the roll call. Use any special music which is especially worshipful in nature. Give this meeting as much an attitude of worship as you can by the use of quiet music, silent prayer and general participation. Have some member read Lowells' "Choose Ye This Day," or that quoted by Susan Coolidge.

Choose your hymns from these: "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," "More Like the Master," "Have Thine Own Way," "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind,' "Following Jesus," "Have You Counted the Cost."

Leader's Talk

In accepting Christ we must first accept His message and next to confess our faith in Him. Someone has rightly said, there are no secret Christians. Everyone knows where and how we stand. We are to live His way and make our ways known. We are to tell others of the faith. In accepting Christ we are saved from the destruction we would bring to ourselves. We are saved from our selfishness and sin to a righteous life. The world looks to the Christian for high standards in nobler and more consecrated living.

Topics for Brief Talks

1. Hesitancy is making the decision indecision.
2. "Don't drift past your landing."
3. Weakness of obstinancy.
4. Christianity—taking—"not giving up."
5. Man's helplessness.
6. Try again!

To Be Answered

1. Discuss the value of quick and right decision in our lives.
2. What are some of the most common excuses for not deciding for Christ.
3. When is the best time to decide for Christ?
4. What are the greatest decisions?
5. Why is it that a large part of the heathen world is still non-Christian?

Poetry Corner

BEGIN AGAIN

Every day is a fresh beginning,
  Every morn is the world made new;
You who are weary of sorrow and sinning,
Here is a beautiful hope for you,
A hope for me and a hope for you,
All the past things are passed and over
The tasks are done and the tears are shed;
  Yesterday's errors let yesterday cover,
  Yesterday's wounds, which smarted and bled
  Are healed with the healing which night has shed.

Every day is a fresh beginning,
Listen, my soul, to the glad refrain;
And spite of old sorrow and older sinning,
And puzzles forecasted and possible pain,
Take heart with the day and begin again.

—Susan Coolidge.

CHOOSE YE THIS DAY

Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth and falsehood,
For the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah
  Off'ring each the bloom or blight,
And the choice goes by forever
'Twixt that darkness and that light.
Then to side with truth is noble,
When we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause bring fame and profit,
And 'tis prosperous to be just
Then it is the brave man chooses,
While the multitude make virtue
Of the faith they have desired.

By the light of burning martyrs
Jesus' bleeding feet I track
Toiling up new Calvaries ever
With the cross that turns not back;
New occasions teach new duties,
Time makes ancient and uncouth;
They must upward still and onward,
Who would keep abreast the truth.

Though the cause of evil prayer,
Yet 'tis truth alone is strong,
Though her portion be the scaffold,
And upon the throne be wrong
Yet that scaffold sways the future
And behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow,
Keeping watch above His own.

A FIRST-OF-APRIL TRAGEDY

'Twas first of April, All Fools' Day,
When many a joker sought his prey.
Schoolboys and girls filled all the walk,
Making queer marks with sticks of chalk.

Old Uncle Solemn came along,
With absent mind, but muscles strong.
He had in view his place of work,
To spend eight hours and never shirk.

He bore in hand his dinner pail,
Thinking he had both food and ale.
His neighbor's daughter came and said:
"Isn't your pail as heavy as lead?

I think you'll find when you open up
Nothing to eat and nothing to sup;
Your little girl is up to tricks,
She filled your pail with broken bricks."

But Uncle Solemn could not believe
That his own girl would so deceive.
Yet could he doubt the neighbor girl?
His brain was in a dreadful whirl.

But on to work he went his way,
Hoping to have a perfect day.
He didn't forget his dinner pail,
But hung it on its proper nail.

A little later a joker came
And tried to play a little game:
He interchanged two dinner pails
As they hung upon their nails.

When Uncle Solemn stopped to eat,
He learned about the miserable cheat;
For, opening the pail he thought his own,
He found it filled with broken stone.

He grabbed his hat and hurried home,
With gritting teeth and mouth a-foam.
His grievance told, his wife declared
To give him stone no one had dared.

The strain too much, Uncle Solemn's mind
Completely failed and he went blind.
He had never learned to take a joke,
So he must wear a dreadful yoke.

GRAHAM, ASHEBORO, GREENSBORO LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS PROVING SUCCESSFUL

The largest number ever enrolled in local Methodist Protestant Standard Leadership Training Schools is now working in the three schools, Graham, Asheboro, and Greensboro. In all approximately 225 have signed up for credit.

The students are interested to the extent that they are really doing a fine piece of work and getting a wealth of help from their classes in the three schools. In each school faculty of seven instructors conducting twelve classes in the thre schools. In each school the worship period is being efficiently conducted by the instructors in "Training in Worship and the Devotional Life" assisted by the class.

Everyone is cooperating with the program in an excellent way, pastors and Sunday School superintendents as well as all teachers and workers. We are so glad to know that such a great number are getting valuable materials and helps to carry on their work, and we feel encouraged for future work. We would be glad to have anyone who has not been working with us visit the school nearest you and observe.

POOR PEOPLE'S VITAMIN

When the American Chemical Society meets at Atlanta, April 7, Vitamin G will be given prime position on the program. Most interested will be the poor of the South who suffer from pellagra, the disease which Vitamin G is famed for fighting, for preventing.

Since 1906 pellagra has been a horror to the South. In the springtime it strikes people whose winter diet has been confined too closely to corn and pork. The first symptoms: dizziness, headaches, diarrhoea, painful skin rash.

In the fall these symptoms disappear only to come back the following spring with increased intensity. As the disease progresses the sick one becomes dried and parched like a mummy, with bones protruding at macabre angles. Muscles waste, body motions become slow and languid.

Disorganization of the nervous system is followed by imbecility, death. Between 30 per cent. and 40 per cent. of clinic and hospital cases died in the first years after pellagra's invasion of the South was noted.

The late Dr. Joseph Goldberger of the U. S. Public Health Service, after working in the South, flouted medical men who had thought for 200 years that pellagra was infectious, by announcing that it was a result of a poorly balanced diet. To prove his point he had himself, his wife and 14 assistants inoculated with the blood of an infected woman. They suffered no ill effects.

Next he asked for twelve volunteers in a Mississippi prison who would undergo a test. The test was alluring. He was going to put them in a house apart and feed them for six months on biscuits, mush, rice, syrup, gravy, sugar, sweet potatoes. The prisoners were enthusiastic until, six months later, they developed pellagra. They were cured with milk and meat, then pardoned.

Deduced Dr. Goldberger: pellagra is caused by lack of lean meat, eggs, milk, which poor people cannot afford. All contain Vitamin G.

An opposing school of thought holds that pellagra is due to an infectious agent which is allowed to grow in the body, due to its rundown condition. Both sides arrive at the same conclusion: proper diet is a preventive and a cure.

Research workers set themselves to the task of finding the relative Vitamin G contents of various foods. The results of this work will be announced at Atlanta. One paper will deal with beef, will rank the value parts as: liver, kidney, heart, muscle.

Surpassing lean meat in value is yeast, which was distributed by the Red Cross during the Mississippi flood of 1927 to prevent pellagra. Below lean meat come milk, eggs, wheat germ, tomato juice. Vegetables have little G value, fats and oils none.—Time.

CUT IT DOWN

(With Approval of Editors)

It you have a thing to say,
    Cut it down!
Something you must write today,
    Cut it down!
Let your words be short and few,
Aim to make them clear and true,
Monosyllables will do,
    Cut it down!

Do you spend more than you get?
    Cut it down!
Daily get in deeper debt?
Do not strive to make a show,
Settle promptly what you owe,
Pay your way or do not go,
    Cut it down!

Are you writing to the press?
    Cut it down!
Make it half or even less,
    Cut it down!
Editors like pithy prose,
Lengthy letters are their foes,
Take a hint from "One who Knows,"
    Cut it down!

Have to make a speech tonight?
    Cut it down!
Wish to have it sound all right?
    Cut it down!
Do not be a talking bore,
Better far to listen more,
Don't monopolize the floor,
    Cut it down!

THE SEA

What is this mystery
That holds me dumb
As the tides go and come?
Mutely and reverently I stand
As one awaiting a command.
Is it the Voice of God, O Sea,
Voice of Eternity?

What is this mystery
That holds me dumb
As the tides go and come?
Worn with the suffering of human toll,
Is it the longing of the soul
That hears God's voice, O Sea,
And yearns to be free?

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Pinnacle.—Dr. S. W. Taylor preached to us at 11:00A. M. Sunday using as his subject, "The Church at its Best," he delivered a very beneficial sermon, which was enjoyed by everyone present. Dr. Taylor said that although there are no perfect churches today, there will be a perfect church some day with a membership made up of Christians of all denominations. He stressed the importance of rendering the best service in our ability in whatever business we may be engaged. He said that the church that is trying to do its work at its best is fortunate in having a good man for a pastor, for if a pastor leads the church he must be led by the head of that perfect church that shall endure throughtout eternity. The preacher told us that in order for a church to do its work at its best it is essential for it to have a congregation that is willing to be led by the pastor; to be willing to try out ideas so as to attain a higher program of efficiency; to be able to see its duty; to have members that live up to their vows and manifest an interest in the spirit and purpose of the church, thus magnifying the grace in the spirit and purpose of the church, thus magnifying the grace of God; to so arrange the church services that it may be a means by which we shall be brought into a closer fellowship with Jesus and be lifted up in our admiration and aspiration of Almighty God. If a church does its work at its best it will have more spiritual life, more power, more joy, and more conversions. Then when triumphs that await us in the world to come are rendered we shall receive our reward if we have been a member of a church that did its work at its best.

The members of our Sunday School were sorry to hear of the accident which caused our superintendent to be away from Sunday School the last two Sundays, and we were glad that he is able to be back with us again.

There will be preaching service here Sunday, April 6, at 7:30 p. m.

Bethel, Mocksville.—Our Sunday School is progressing nicely. We have had a very good attendance during the winter and as spring opens we hope to have an increase in the attendance. Our C. E. Society is expecting to do some good work.

Our second quarterly conference was held on Saturday evening before the fourth Sunday at Bethel with a large attendance. All churches represented except Union Grove. It was an interesting and spiritual service. We have been somewhat slow with our financial part, but we are still hoping to do our part. The budget was apportioned out to the different churches, and each one urged to do their best in collecting at once. Brother Ferree has been talking "Dollar a Member," "Herald," Budget, and other important things quite a bit, so don't blame him if we fail to come out.

J. H. Cartner of Bethel, and Mr. Holten, of Union Chapel, are nominees for delegate to annual conference.

The fourth Sunday at 11 a. m. Brother Ferree preached a very interesting sermon to a good congregation. At this time the Lord's Supper was given, quite a number communed.

We have had lots of sickness and one death in our community, but we are glad to say all are improving now. Brother Ferree's daughter, Agnes, is home now very much improved since having her tonsils removed.

We are looking forward to the coming of Dr. Taylor. We always enjoy hearing what he has to say.

Glenn Cartner, a student of State, was home and worshipped with us Sunday.

We hope to give an Easter program.

First Church, Burlington.—Attendance at all services today was large. We are hoping to build up a real large Sunday School during the coming months and hope each member will help to accomplish this end.

The Central quartet, made up of local men, was present at the Sunday School today and rendered a number of special selections, which were greatly enjoyed, and added much to the interest of the service. The Sunday School orchestra is giving fine music, also, and we appreciate the important part which they are performing.

Rev. C. B. Way, of West Forsyth Charge, and one of our own boys, brought the sermon at the morning hour today. His subject was, "Grow in Grace," and the discourse was very helpful and practical. We are always glad to have our young men come back to us. Brother Gerringer delivered the message of the evening and used as his subject, "The Imperative of the Invitation of Christ." The sermon was inspiring and very appropriate.

More improvements to the church building noted. The Baraca room has been renovated with new paper and lends much to the improvement in the looks of the interior of the building.

Brother C. C. Lindley, our Baraca teacher, brought the lesson today in his usual good way. The attendance in the class was 73, including a number of visitors.

Brother A. E. Sykes, faithful member of the church and loyal officer, is in a sanitorium with ill health at this time, and we hope each member will remember him in prayer to our Heavenly Father and ask that he be restored to his family and church, if in accordance with His will. We have others still sick, which we pray will soon be well, if it is God's will.

The following was taken from the "Burlington Daily Times" recently:

Five-forty o'clock this morning found nine Girl Scouts of the First Methodist Protestant church collecting themselves, preparatory to a breakfast hike. Each had a little package in which there were eggs, or bacon, or cheese, or apples, or bread, and off they went to wake up the birds out in Trollinger's woods. Cook eggs on a rock! You can't do it! But these girls did. Their rocks were a bit small, so that only three eggs were cooked at a time, but they cooked one each. Then, "Cheese-bobs," what in the world? They were good, bacon and cheese, having had a good toasting over those coals! The director, who went with these Scouts, threatens to come driving into town some day with some large nice flat rocks, picked up along some highway, and unloading them somewhere near the spring, so the next time some Scouts, boys or girls, want to try cooking eggs on rocks, they will find it much easier than on the small ones that are ther now.

Do you know the value of heaps of coals Try building a fire that will give you a good size pile of them, then try your cooking. You will find it much more fun than having such a blaze that your face and hands burn before your food even begins to cook. Borrow one of these Scouts the next time you are planning a hike when you want to try that egg business. Any of them will show you how to do it.

Mt. Zion, Pinnacle.—Interest in our Sunday School seems to be growing; attendance is larger since warmer weather has come. We are now preparing an Easter program. We always enjoy the good messages that our pastor brings to us. He is doing all he can to help us to grow spiritually.

The District Rally was held at our church Sunday, which was a decided success. We were glad to have such a pleasant event as this, held here, and feel sure that it meant much to all that were present and heard the program, and has also given us renewed courage to carry on the work of the M. P. denomination. The whole program was most fittingly and ably carried out. Much credit is due Mrs. Iva W. Baity for the splendid report on, "Our Children's Home," and also Miss Nina Watts on "Youth of Today." May the Lord bless all efforts being made to aid in such a noble and worthy cause as caring for the orphaned children and training the youth to be worthy citizens and leaders in church work.

Funeral services for Samuel A. Lane were held at Mt. Zion church Friday, 28th, at 2 p. m. Interment was made in the church graveyard. Mr. Lane joined the church when very young and had lived a consistent Christian life until death. He will be missed very much, but our loss is his gain, and we know that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord.

Lebanon Church, High Point.—Brother Suits gave us another good sermon last Sunday morning. His thoughts were based on the second chapter of Titus, Paul's advice to servants. Among other things Brother Suits said that the Sunday School or C. E. Society that does not line the young people up for the church is a failure. He said that we should adorn the doctrine of God because God is a Triune Being, our maker, the ruler of the universe, the author of the scriptures and a loving, merciful heavenly Father. We must persevere to the end, regardless of what people say. At 7:30 Brother Suits gave us another good sermon and we were favored with a splendid solo rendered by Brother W. P. Jester whose singing always adds much to the service.

Our auxiliary reports the best year's work in the history of our society with all obligations paid and $50 to the High Point College; $10 to the High Point Welfare Board; $5 for material for several dresses; three table cloths and several jars of preserves to the Children's Home. May the Lord bless and prosper all who helped in this work.

The finances of the church are in very good shape considering the financial depression.

We have paid more than half of our "Dollar a Member" pledge to the college.

Our quarterly conference will meet at 7:30 next Monday, April 7.

We are sorry to report several of our members sick. Miss Ezora Suits, daughter of our pastor, underwent an operation for appendicitis Monday morning. Hope she will have a speedy recovery and soon be out to worship with us again. Mrs. Revis, Mrs. Goodson, Mrs. Clarence Pierce, and Mrs. J. W. Thacker are still sick, hope they will be restored to health and soon be in their places at church.

Knob Creek, Fallston Charge.—Everything is moving along nicely. We are making more progress, we hope.

Our pastor, Rev. J. M. Morgan, has filled all appointments. Sunday School has been good, but we hope to make better in the future.

Several of our faithful members have been kept from our church for some time because of sickness; among these Mr. W. W. Richard and Mr. Bynus Willis. We are glad to report they are improving.

Miss Elaine Deal, one of our teachers, has entered training at Lincolnton hospital. We all wish her great success.

Our pastor will preach again for us the second Sunday night in April, 7:30.

With many good wishes to the "Herald" and its readers.

Lebanon.—Sunday, March 30, was a good day for us, we were honored by having the first district rally with us. This was the first time that many of our people had ever been in a district rally, and we enjoyed it so much.

Brother Auman, I think, had the right idea when he said take the rally to the people, we hope it may be our pleasure to have it again. All enjoyed having Dr. Taylor address us on "Evangelism." It was a real treat to see Brother Ashburn in our church again; there were a number of our former pastors present. I think that all of the pastors except Brother Heathcock were with us, we were sorry that he did not come. Let me say to all the visitors, come again, we enjoyed having everyone of you.

I feel that the rally has been a real help to our church and Sunday School. It was a feast of good things to stimulate our interest in the whole workings of the church program.

Our Sunday School is moving on very nicely. We are planning for an Easter program. Brother Shelton is with us every second and fourth Sundays and always gives us a good sermon, for as you know, we have the best preacher in the conference. We miss him on the third Sunday in our Sunday School this year as we are "lending" him to Chase City on that day. I hope they are enjoying him.

Connelly Springs Charge.—The people received us kindly for our second term, and pledged their support. They have proved their pledge by regular attendance in church and Sunday School, and by the many useful gifts for the table and clothing and many other things that are useful in a preacher's home. We especially thank the good ladies of Rutherford College for a gift of $10. Our Sunday Schools are doing good work although the weather this winter has been bad, but have run with a very good attendance all winter. Preaching services have also been well attended. We have received three new members into our fellowship this year, making a total since the last conference year of about thirty new members.

One of the big things accomplished this year was in building a parsonage. We have a nice little four-room bungalow on one-half acre lot given by Brother Hugh Southerland. We are very grateful for this splendid gift. The four rooms are almost finished except the front porch. We are badly in need of about ten sacks of cement with which to lay the floor and walk to the public road. I wonder if a few of the Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies would give us a free will offering. Will say if five Sunday Schools would give the price of two bags of cement, our problem would be solved.

If any individual would like to give us something there is still the back porch and one room to be built yet and the basement. Our people have about gone to the limit of their resources.

We know there are many pressing demands made on us as a conference; there is the college and other interests of the conference. God grant that all may be met. Connelly Springs will sure do her part on them. Brethren, this is a real need, a good parsonage for Connelly Springs Charge.

We hope to give a picture of the parsonage in the "Herald" in the near future.

State Street, Lexington.—Sunday morning it was our privilege to hear one of the most timely and impressive addresses by our pastor on the subject of "Faith in God," using as a text, "Where is Your Faith?" Surely there never was a time when lack of faith in God brought its awful and inevitable results to individuals and churches and nations more plainly than now. All serious thinking people know that the lack of faith and the misplacement of faith have brought about the troublesome conditions of the present time.

Some of our own important denominational institutions are being allowed to suffer because many who could help and whose duty it is to help, are afraid if they give as they should they will not have enough for themselves, when if we all had the faith in God's tried and true promises, we would be fearless of results if we kept His commandments and kept our vows that we took when we joined the church..

The ninth district rally was held at South Lexington church Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. Brother Hendry is chairman for the district and is to be praised and congratulated for getting up a very splendid program throughout.

On Saturday night Brother H. F. Surratt, of First Church, Winston-Salem, spoke on a very important subject, "Making Worship Worshipful." This was a strong appeal to Christians on a subject we all need more or less to be thoughtful on. Rev. E. A. Bingham, of Denton, presented the claims and importance of the church paper, "The Methodist Protestant Herald," in a forceful way. A few others spoke of the merits of the paper. Many expressing their appreciation of it and declaring they could not do without it.

On Sunday afternoon Rev. G. H. Hendry spoke on "Evangelism" in his own inspiring way, making us all see how little we are doing along this important line. Dr. Kenneth, of the faculty of High Point College, spoke on, "Money as a Means of Service, or the Stewardship of Money." One statement of Brother Kennett's in this address surely met a response in every heart, "He who has faith in his God has peace in his heart." The entire address was most interesting and helpful.

Rev. Roy I. Farmer of First Church, High Point, talked on a subject ever near his heart, and indeed near the hearts of all Christian workers: "The Religion of Youth." This subject in all its possibilities and importance was very ably discussed by Brother Farmer.

The evening service was a very good one in every respect. Our pastor had promised us a surprise at this meeting and it proved to be a most pleasing one indeed. Mr. Y. S. Wall, Mr. C. M. Miller and Mr. William Jolly, all of this city, were with us to render their very splendid aid to the musical part of the worship.

Mr. Miller and Mr. Wall are violin artists and Mr. Jolly is an expert on several musical instruments including the trumpet, which instrument he used in a delightful way Sunday night.

Mrs. C. D. Potts and Miss Ruth Voncannon sang a duet in a delightful way that was highly praised by many. The congregation continues to be good at the night services, as at all the services of the church.

Next Wednesday night the monthly recreation period will be observed. A sandwich spread in the church dining room will be one interesting feature of the program. There will be a report at this time from all the different departments of work of the church.

A week from next Sunday our series of evangelistic services will begin. Brother Hendry will do the preaching and we trust that all his force as a solid body will co-operate with him in every way possible. We request the prayers of all that we may have a great revival and that many may be brought to Christ.

We were very glad to have Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Trogdon, of Richland charge, and their daughter, Miss Inez, worship with us Sunday morning. They came to spend the day with their daughter, Mrs. Lemons, who lives here. Mr. and Mrs. Lemons are helpful members of our church.

In writing of the speakers on the Sunday afternoon program of the Rally the writer failed to mention a splendid address by Mrs. C. L. Koonts on Missions. At the close of the service our pastor remarked, "Mrs. Koonts preached as well as any of them," which was very true. Mrs. Koonts is seldom, if ever excelled by anyone at anything she attempts.

Canaan, North Davidson Charge.—Spring time is at hand and it seems to me that there is no better time for progress than in the spring.

We have had very reasonable congregations during the winter months, but we are hoping that our attendance will grow faster and faster as the weather becomes more favorable.

Since Christmas we have put down new carpet in the church auditorium. The funds for this were secured mostly by the ladies who "Lent a Hen to the Lord" for the summer. Each set a hen, raised a group of chicks and sold them for the purpose of buying new carpet. Besides this, the other necessary donations were made by other members.

Our second quarterly conference was held Saturday, March 22, at Mt. Pleasant, with preaching service in the morning and the conference work afternoon. A nice dinner was served on the ground in picnic style. The conference was mostly about the pastor's salary. No definite thing was agreed upon.

Rev. Powell has been giving us good sermons and we hope that they have accomplished that whereunto they were sent. His next appointment will be the fourth Sunday in April. Everyone is invited to attend.

Best wishes to the "Herald" and its readers.

First Church, High Point.—Last Wednesday evening at the Fellowship Supper, which was served by Circle No. 8, Mrs. J. G. Snipes, chairman, the boys and girls of Junior and Senior high school ages to the number of 24 were seated at a special table and enjoyed the meal together, after which a Junior C. E. Society and Mission Band were organized with Mrs. R. I. Farmer leader. The first regular session will be held next Wednesday evening, when a brief installation service for new officers will occur. The topic to be discussed is the following: "What Is Meant By Living a Christian Life." The Woman's Auxiliary welcomes this Mission Band of Intermediates as a new recruit, which makes 11 circles, and we feel that the girls, young ladies, and older ladies of the church are well and effectively organized. Mission Study books have been obtained for the different Circles.

The church school report for March 23rd is as follows: Attendance, 377; offering, $17.41.

On last Sunday morning the Junior church met as usual in the 11 o'clock service with Rev. E. L. Ballard, the popular and efficient director of religious education, presiding. In the worship service for adults, the congregation heard with delight the beautiful solo, "Come Unto Me," by C. L. Gray, Jr., whose fine tenor voice is developing wonderfully. The choir rendered the anthem "Praise the Lord," in a charming manner. As a continuation of the last Sunday's sermon on "House by the Side of the Road," the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, chose for his subject, "The Christian Life as Love in Action." Ruskin said "When love and skill work together, we may expect a masterpiece." There are two attitudes of life, one that of a hermit or recluse, the other one who goes out in the spirit of "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow ye die." These are two opposite contrasts, but there is a middle, conservative road, "The Christian Life as Love in Action."

"The healing of the seamless dress
Is on our beds of pain."

The Christian life is a highway of service, and the love of Christ is best expressed, by means of service to our fellowmen. Christ's followers are organized into a systematic campaign for kindness. Passivity or sitting down is not service. No man or woman can associate long with Christ and not be led out into the highways where are found the sick, the sorrowing, the unfortunate, the troubled, the struggling, and the sinful. There is more sorrow and need for the consolation of religion in the world today than ever before. More people who need a grasp of your hand, a smile, and an encouraging word of kindness. The world does not wait to seek out "The House by the Side of the Road," but longs for companionship and human kindness. There is a little town in Minnesota, Rochester by name, where there is a celebrated and far-famed clinic, owned by the Mayo Brothers. These physicians lose themselves last; they must be steady handed and clear-eyed to perform the best service in operations. They guard their diet, exercise, and sleep in order to be most efficient. God blesses all kinds of service; he made some of us farmers, business men, doctors, merchants, ministers, professional men. The kingdom of God is made up of folks just like you and me.

"He prayeth well, who loveth well
Both man, and bird, and beast.
He prayeth best, who loveth best
All things both great and small;
For the dear God, who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

The final sermon of the series on "Ideals," delivered in the month of March, was presented at the Vesper service last Sunday at 5 o'clock p. m., by the minister, Rev. Mr. Farmer, on "The Ideal Marriage," the text being taken from Matt. 19:5. "For this cause shall a man leave father and mother and shall cleave to his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh." He said in part: "God has a divine purpose in the institution of marriage, which is the basis of our civilization and for our home and family life. It is a high privilege to lift these to such a plane that children may understand in some measure God's great fatherhood as reflected in earthly love. Father is the provider and mother is the builder and conserver of the home. The Christian home resulting from the ideal marriage has its foundation in the New Testament. Jesus made marriage indissoluble, except for the one great social sin. It is safest and wisest to begin the home with God. Forgetfulness of God is the greatest reason for broken homes. In Robert Burns' "Cotter's Saturday Night" we read that the father read the sacred page and then they prayed—"From scenes like this old Scotia's grandeur springs." The Christ spirit in homes helps each mate to sacrifice habits offensive to the other, and to learn to like what the other likes. In an ideal marriage husband and wife work for each other's welfare and happiness, and enthrone Christ as the head of the home. Not in the dance hall, the theatre, or the places of questionable amusement, but the church-going and prayer meeting group is the best place to find the worthwhile husband or wife."

At the weekly Christian Endeavor service Monday evening Misses Dennvee McAdams and Grace Koontz led the discussion on the topic, "Successful Evangelism in Mission Fields."

The Fellowship Supper on Wednesday evening will be the last one until after Easter and the minister will bring the message on "Triumphant Grace in the Early Church."

We are glad to note that Master Joseph Farmer, who has been wrestling with a case of mumps, is recovering satisfactorily.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Snipes and family went to Sanford, N. C., yesterday to attend the funeral of Mr. Snipes' niece, Mrs. Hilliard. This death is unusually sad, she having been a bride and married only since last July.

A host of friends will rejoice to learn that Mrs. Chas. P. Robbins, who underwent a major operation at High Point hospital last Tuesday, is resting comfortably and making satisfactory improvement.

Captain and Mrs. A. M. Rankin and children are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis E. Teague on Johnson street, while their residence is being moved to face Church street.

Her many friends will be pleased to know that Mrs. J. A. Tussey is recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

Albemarle.—A very interesting service was held last Sunday night when the congregations of the Methodist Protestant, West Albemarle Baptist, and Tabernacle M. E. churches all united in worship at the Baptist church. The building, which seats about 750, was filled to overflowing. Splendid music was rendered by the Tabernacle choir, led by R. H. Lefler. A male quartet also gave a beautiful selection. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Anderson of the Methodist Protestant church, from the text, "Roll ye away the stone," found in the account of Christ raising Lazarus from the dead. In his usual interesting way, Mr. Anderson pointed out the stones in our lives that prevent our enjoying to the fullest our religious experience.

We hope to have another of these union services in the near future at one of the other churches, as we feel that they create a spirit of co-operation between the different denominations. Plans to this effect are already being made by the pastors.

A most enjoyable measuring party was held at the home of C. W. Hatley last Friday night by members of the Cam Snotherly Circle and their husbands. Much merriment was provoked by the program which was arranged by a committee and carried out impromptu style. A guessing contest was engaged in, which caused much fun and also brought in several dollars. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the program, also comical favors. The sum of $28.13 was realized from this affair.

The Lucy Hatley Circle were entertained at a delightful weighing party on last Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. J. Kennedy. Games and contests were engaged in, which afforded much merriment. Candy was also sold during the afternoon. Tempting refreshments were served at the conclusion of the affair. Over $20.00 was brought into the treasury from this enjoyable occasion.

Mr. S. R. Green returned last Sunday from an extended trip to Raleigh and Burlington. We are very glad to have him back in the church life again. His Sunday school class have especially missed him.

REPORTER.

Gibsonville Church.—Last Sunday morning at the regular hour the Ladies' Auxiliary held its annual missionary meeting. Rev. N. G. Bethea gave a gist of his travel in Europe and Palestine. A large audience was present and I think every one enjoyed the talk. He told of many things of interest as well as the sad scenes that he witnessed. He also showed us several souvenirs of the old country, among them being two bottles of water; one of them was from Jacob's Well, the other from the River Jordan. Miss Mary Ruth Huffman sang two selections; she was accompanied at the piano by Miss Alia Josephine Ross. The men's quartet also gave a selection.

Several of the young folk are attending short course in Leadership Training at Graham.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavorers enjoyed a weinie roast on last Saturday evening at Summer's Mill.

PINE RIDGE NEWS LETTER

We shall soon enter upon the last month of our school year. Oh, how full these months have been! God has given us grace enabling us to meet the increasing demands and responsibilities.

We omitted the first three grades to save room for the more advanced students. We co-operated, however, with one of our graduates who was teaching in the public school nearby and taking very good care of the younger children.

Our two busses have been a very successful venture—the first ever operated in this section of the state.

Enrollment for the year has reached 163—not quite so large as last year, but the attendance has been more regular and not so many changes in the student body.

A good report recently reached us of one of our boys who graduated last spring. An elderly man was being buried in a community where preachers are scarce. In fact they were unable to secure one for the burial service, so when they got to the grave, inquiry was made as to whether there was anyone in the crowd who would lead in prayer. All hesitated until our fine young A. D. S. boy stepped forward and agreed to serve. A father who has two children with us now made the report to us and he was delighted with the impression our boy has made. The same boy has been teaching a public school nearby the past year and last fall started a Christian Endeavor Society, holding meetings each Wednesday night during the winter, greatly benefiting the community.

Last summer Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kopenol, graduates of Moody Bible Institute, came to work with us. They were not satisfied to settle down at Pine Ridge, but preferred to go out for home visitation and community work. We were glad to have them locate near our Bethel church and give their earnest efforts to the developments of the Sunday School there. The results have been very gratifying. Recently a preacher friend of Chicago visited Mr. Koppenol and preached a few nights in Bethel where they had over a dozen conversions, then they went on and held a meeting at Stillwater school house for four evenings with good results and then in response to our request they came to Pine Ridge. We held six services in four days, the preaching being done by the Chicago visitor, Rev. Joseph Smith. But every Christian in our midst seemed to realize the need of a revival and prayed accordingly. On the last night we had such an outpouring of the Holy Spirit as is seldom seen. Everybody seemed moved. We cannot say just how many were converted but certainly not less than forty. Brother Smith had to hurry back to Chicago, but the Lord continues His blessed presence with us and the revival is lasting. Twenty-six united with our church on Sunday morning and others are to follow. We are praising God for the wonderful blessing. Mrs. Woodford will tell of one of our converts:

"You will be interested in a little girl, who was brought to us in January by the magistrate of an adjoining county. She was sixteen years old last August. Until she came here she had never been to school a day in her life. Her father nad mother separated when she was about two years old, and she knows nothing of her father—not even whether he is alive. Two years later her mother married a shiftless man, who was blind in one eye. They have lived in the most extreme poverty with an increasing number of children to care for. The father has, in his cruelty, claimed the same privileges with his stepdaughter as with his wife and therefore the girl has known only strife and hardship. Oh! how strange everything seemed to her. It was like living in another world, and the first week she was very homesick for her mother, had several cries and indeed tried to run away. One of our teachers discovered that she had gone and ran after her and brought her back. When the mother wrote that the father was in the county jail, and she had been obliged to give up the shack in which they had lived—that she was trying to get homes for the other children and work for herself and that Bessie ought to be contented and thankful that she had a place to live, she changed her attitude. Oh, how she has studied, worked and eaten, and how she has improved. As we look at that bright smiling face now, it is hard to believe that she is that pinched-faced, hungry-looking, almost clothless, head-inhabited and dirty girl who came to us about two months ago. At our recent evangelistic meeting, she was among those who surrendered her life to Christ. Now she delights to sing and speak for her Savior, and she has advanced so rapidly in school that she can read the testament which our nurse gave her and delights in doing so. Is it worth while?"

Our grade school will close April 28, at which time we shall have as our visiting speaker, Rev. E. R. Biggs, formerly of Texas, but now at Cincinnati, Ohio. At our high school commencement—one week later Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of our general conference, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, May 4, and the commencement address on Monday, May 5. We are happy in the anticipation of having these brethren with us.

Sincerely,
THOS. R. WOODFORD.

A CORRECTION

Brother J. R. Anderson, pastor of our Albemarle church, calls my attention to some errors in the report from his church as printed on page 126 in the 1929 Journal. The figures for Alamance and Albemarle seem to be reversed, Alamance getting credit for what Albemarle has done. If you want to keep history straight, mark Alamance 2 and Albemarle 1. On page 127 the figures are as they should be except that the amount raised by the Ladies' Aid should be $716 instead of $77 as it appears. The totals appear to be correct.

I regret the error, whoever made it, and hasten to make whatever correction is possible. C. W. BATES, Sec'y.

Octagon Coupons

Our friends keep sending in little packages of Octagon coupons, and these will help.

Please collect what you can and send them in promptly, for we are all hoping for warm weather soon now, and that will call for ice or some kind of refrigeration. Ice cost us about $1.00 per day for the summer season last year, and we are assured that we can operate such electric refrigerator, as we need, for $4.50 to $5.00 per month. We thank you you for your prompt help in this.

Worthy of Note

Some items in the above report are worthy of special mention.

1. It was my pleasant privilege to attend the district rally held at Bess' Chapel last Saturday and Sunday. They gave me a royal welcome and a good time. Then they took a special offering for the Home amounting to $17.13.

2. Besides the regular offering of $35.00 from the Asheboro Sunday School, their Philathea class sent $8.00 for outfits for our four high school graduates.

3. M. E. Moore of Siler City, sent a personal offering at $5.00.

4. C. E. McCulloch, Wilmington, a personal offering of $10.00.

5. Another ministerial student in High Point College contributes the first money made as salary for preaching.

6. The following letter came from Asheboro: "Superintendent of Children's Home: Enclosed find $10.00 check. We want to help you a little. Mrs. D. A. Henley, $2.00; Clarice May, $2.00; S. Elizabeth, $2.00; Floyd, $1.00; Fred, $1.00; Alfred, $1.00; Joe Pugh, $1.00. These are the names of our children. They are proud to help a little. Yours truly, Mrs. D. A. Henley."

Don't you know help like this makes a fellow happy.

This is one of the best reports we have ever been privileged to make at the end of the month.

Now for April

The next two Sundays, the first and second Sundays, are the ones on which most of our Sunday Schools and churches take their offerings for the Home. A few take them on the third and fourth Sundays.

Please be sure to keep up the pace set during March, for if our offerings each month will hold up that well we will soon be a happy lot of workers at the Home.

Every Sunday School a Contributing Sunday School

There are several Sunday Schools which have not sent any offering at all since Christmas. Please remember us, and when an offering is taken please be sure to see that it is sent direct to the Home.

If every Sunday School in the conference will only set apart one Sunday per month for the Home, and not fail us on that Sunday, that will largely solve our financial problems here.

If Hickory Ridge, Guilford can take an offering each month, with their church building in ashes, surely every other Sunday School can. We believe you will, and we thank you.

The Farms

Our farm work goes on apace, and we are rapidly approaching the end of the school year when we will have our boys in good force for the work.

Yours in the Master's Service,

A. G. DIXON.

"I Saw No Temple There"

St. John the Seer had seen the world,
Had seen its cities great and small,
But never once had seen a city
Without some form of temple wall.

In cities great like Rome and Corinth
Where men believed in many gods,
He'd seen a host of temples grand
With beauty graced beyond all odds.

And John recalled the splendid story
Of that great fane on Zion's Hill
Where God in earthly dwelling-place
Revealed to men His righteous will.

A city without a fitting temple
Would seem a godless, reckless place;
Could such a city be built for men,
For any like the human race?

But in the New Jerusalem
Brought ready-made to earth below,
The seer could see no temple spire!
Had planner planned this city so?

The seer's perplexed but looks again
And sees a temple beyond compare:
'Tis God the Father and God the Lamb!
He bows himself and worships there.

This World and That

We all know this world. It is a world of substance and power. We never doubt its reality. It fades out of our view as sleep comes on, but we awake and find it abiding in all its strength. It is a world that gratifies our senses and ministers to our bodies. Our lives are bound up with the things of this world. We cannot be independent of it.

But while we are in this world, we realize or may realize that we are not wholly of this world. There is something in us that is not in the sun or the earth. An exhaustive catalogue of the elementary substances in the material world would not contain some elements we find in our own being. We have powers and capacities not found in the largest and most splendid bodies in the universe. We are at the same time in two worlds, partly in one, partly in the other. There is this world, there is that world. And the time is coming when we will withdraw from this world and be wholly in that world. This is a world of natural bodies; that is a world of spiritual bodies. Now spiritual bodies appear shadowy and unreal in comparison with natural bodies. But we will be delivered from this delusion when we make the transition. We shall pass from the stupor of this mundane life to the bright intelligence of the spirit world. We shall then know how foolish it was to doubt that world and give ourselves wholly to the pursuits of this world.

We may never be able to tell why we are placed in our present relationship to the material world. But the fact does not exclude from our thought a very different relationship hereafter effected through the ample power of God. Our present relationship was brought about through the providence of God, and the wisdom of it cannot be questioned. The thing to do is to recognize its bearings on our own future. In this relationship we may find hindrances or helps, depending on our attitude and action. Jesus sought to make men aware of the world to come, and He taught that the cares of this world may choke out from our minds the truth pertaining to that world. He warned us of the tremendous loss incurred in gaining the world, even the whole of it, and losing our souls. He urged men to seek first of all the things of that superior world, the world of spirit, trusting in God to meet our needs in relation to this material world. The world that seems most real to us, that appeals most mightily for our attention, seemed to Jesus of only secondary importance and as deriving all its importance from its relation to that higher world. It is a great achievement to order our lives with due regard to both these worlds, but Jesus performed the feat, and taught men how. The relative importance and unimportance of each world must be recognized. The man that thinks of this world as of equal importance with the other, or as of greater importance, is foredoomed to failure. He dishonors God, degrades himself, and chooses his portion with the unbelievers.

Corrections That Make Worse

There are many examples of attempted corrections that make matters worse. Our printers gave an example last week in a first-page article. Endeavoring to remove a faulty line they took out a perfect line and left the faulty line in. But if our printers never made a mistake we would stand in awe of them as supermen. We refer to this error as an example of a class of errors some of which are much more disastrous.

There are parents that try to correct their children and make them worse. There are states that try to correct their bad citizens and make them worse. Bad lines, bad children, and bad citizens must be corrected: it will not do to let them pass without an effort to correct them, but the effort must be carefully and wisely made. Bad lines can be reformed, bad children can be corrected, bad citizens can be improved, but it is a fine art to do it. Hasty and bungling efforts will not do the thing.

FROM WILSON'S SPEECH IN DARROW DEBATE

Mr. Darrow has a right to eat diseased meat. That is a part of his personal liberty. But he has no right to open a butcher shop and put diseased or rotten meat on the market. That comes to be a question of the public welfare; and society, organized into municipal government, has the regulation of that matter. I have a right to drive an automobile. There is no intrinsic wrong in driving rapidly, but if I go forty miles an hour through a crowded street, it becomes the city's affair. My personal liberty must end where the public good begins; and, as civilization becomes more complicated, its citizens more and more congregated into cities, the margin of the public rights moves up and personal liberty becomes a very much smaller inclosure than it would be if we were living a Robinson-Crusoe life on an island by ourselves.

Some philosopher has said: "I have a right to swing my fist, but that right stops exactly where your nose begins." Mr. Darrow ought to get once and for all, a clear distinction between the private appetite and the public traffic and recognize the difference in the arguments that bear on these subjects. Personal liberty applies to one, but it has no reference to the other. Moral suasion, scientific enlightenment, have to do with what a man shall drink, but what he puts on the market becomes a public question and it is to be regulated by law, and after a hundred years of experimenting, the law has finally in its evolution come to the absolute prohibition of that which is hurtful and wrong to society. It regulates the grocery business and the drygoods business; it regulates the production of oil, gas, electricity and power; but when it comes to drunkard making, dope peddling, maintaning a gambling resort or a brothel, the law uses its prerogative in prohibiting the maintenance of the same as public nuisances detrimental to the public welfare and subversive of the interests of the state.

If Mr. Darrow claims that, while the liquor traffic does produce evil, it is a necessary evil, I call his attention to the decision that Mr. Dooley gave to Mr. Hennessey. He said: "There are no necessary evils. If they are necessary, they are not evils; and if they are evils, they are not necessary."

Christ and Wine

Mr. Darrow says that Christ made wine. I haven't the least objection to Mr. Darrow's making wine, providing he makes it out of water as Christ did. Mr. Darrow, like a lot of other anti-prohibitionists, puts his five-cent glass of beer above everything. The American people are trying to deal with one of the greatest human problems the human race has ever confronted and here comes Mr. Darrow galloping down the street with an empty glass held high and bawling for five cents worth of beer. I don't particularly care whether Mr. Darrow gets his beer or not, but I object to his cramming a vast corrupt liquor traffic down my throat in order that he shall have his beer. I don't believe five cents worth of beer is more important to him than a baby's life is to the baby, or than prosperity is to the United States.

Mr. Darrow's description of Noah is amusing. Noah was a good man who in old age had gone wrong. He is a bad example for Mr. Darrow to follow.

Mr. Darrow objects to one-half of one per cent. That's just wet fanaticism. The trouble with these wets is they have the rabies. They can't even stand the sight of water. Mr. Darrow told you about Old Man Noah who got so sick of the sight of water that the first thing he did when the rain stopped was to get drunk. Well, the Bible holds him up as a horrible example. The fact is that these wets hate water a lot worse than we hate alcohol. We don't care if Mr. Darrow drinks a barrel of alcohol, provided he'll drink 200 barrels of water with it. The way he talks you would think he needed 200 barrels of water or something else to calm the unquenchable fire of his thirst.

Now you wets out there; I want to say this to you: Joking is all right and humor is all right, and perhaps hoots and jeers are all right sometimes, provided there are not too many of them in the same place. But when you come to consider your duty to your country, it cannot be determined by jokes or jeers. You will have to admit this: that the United States tried moral suasion and total abstinence, local option, state prohibition, high license, and government control in at least one of the states, and that for over a hundred years every remedy which was tried for this evil was a lamentable failure. The traffic went right ahead, debauching the young, taking bread from the mouths of children, destroying homes and inflicting upon the country a great burden of poverty. Why, then, when the United States, in despair turned to the only remaining hope of dealing successfully with this problem, some of you wets say, "To hell with the Constitution; you can't take my beer." And you propose to break down this experiment by resistance to the law. You may be wets, but I believe that down at the bottom you are patriots. Is it a square deal that you give your country when you say to Uncle Sam, "We don't intend to let you test this thing to see whether it is good or not. We are going to make it a failure even if we have to resort to crime and the commission of crime to do it." Suppose the United States is wrong? What of it? It's making an honest effort. It is honestly intended and prohibition came after it was an issue in thousands of local and state elections. Don't you think the United States has a right to a fair chance to try this thing out and see whether or not this last hope will prove to be a great hope of the human race?

I want to remind you of this: that everything you hold precious in life exists under the protection of the government which some of these wet brethren want you to defy. When your wife goes down the street she goes under the protection of the law. You own your house under the protection of law. Your children are kept in safety when they go to school or the corner grocery by the mighty hands of the United States. And yet the people who want to restore the legalized liquor traffic are willing to break down the standards of this land, which protects you and your wife and your children and your property, all because some people think they want to have a glass of beer. It is personal whim against the Public Welfare!

MR. ATTERBURY, RULE "G" AND PROHIBITION

The wets, having made miserable hash of their opportunity in the first day of their House Judiciary Committee hearing, redeemed themselves slightly by presenting a few witnesses of standing and sincerity to conclude their testimony.

One of these witnesses was Gen. Atterbury, president of the Pennsyvania Railroad. It is amazing that a man of Mr. Atterbury's ability and position would allow himself to be caught in a situation of such utter inconsistency. Mr. Atterbury opposes prohibition for the nation, but he is absolutely for prohibition when it comes to conducting the affairs of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Pennsylvania Railroad operates under Rule "G" which says: "The use of intoxicants by employees while on duty is prohibited. Their use or the frequenting of places where they are sold is sufficient cause for dismissal."

This is drastic prohibition. The rule uses the word. Violation of the rule calls for the most severe punishment the Pennsylvania Railroad can inflict. One drink and the employe is dreprived of his livelihood; sent out to tramp the streets in search of work.

When Mr. Atterbury's attention was called to this rule he said in effect, "Oh, yes, but that is really a voluntary agreement between the employees and the railroad and my complaint against the Eighteenth Amendment is that it tries to compel people to abstain."

Rule G may be voluntary, but the employe who does not "volunteer" is discharged. The rule applies to every single employe, no matter what his personal convictions as to its desirability.

What a Conductor Says

The railroad president to a certain extent bases his opinions upon theories. If Mr. Atterbury wants to know just what has been the effect of prohibition, he might consult a few conductors, men who have to deal with the drink problem as a matter of everyday administration. Mr. E. M. Hughes, a Chesapeake and Ohio conductor of 45 years' experience, says, "When there was a saloon on nearly every corner, I knew engineers and other trainmen to be taken from their engines after they had finished their runs and discharged for the sole reason that their were caught drunk or drinking on duty. On each trip in those days, we were afflicted with a dozen to fifty drunks. If we have one drunk on the train in a year today he is a curiosity. Before prohibition, fighting, cutting and shooting inside the coaches were common occurrences. More than once bullets have passed my head and lodged in the roof or sides of the cars. A bushel basket would hardly hold all the guns, knives, knucks, and blackjacks I have taken from drunks on my train. It was necessary for the legislatures to give conductors power to arrest and to make it mandatory for police officers to assist them when called upon. I have seen United States senators, governors, judges, and legislators, on my train so drunk that they did not know their names. Men who had been drinking heavily and who were apparently able to carry their 'load' very well in the fresh air would soon become disorderly when they entered a warm, steam-heated train, becoming quarrelsome, profane, vulgar, and indecent. Women were compelled to avoid certain night trains. I can yet smell the horrible stench of some of these cars loaded with drunks.

"You would think that the low price of liquor would have discouraged moonshining in those days, but it did not. There was plenty of moonshining and plenty of bootlegging.

"In sharp contrast to the conditions I have pictured, the quiet and order on the average passenger train today resembles the atmosphere of a Sunday School. I believe that my experience has been duplicated at least in part by every passenger conductor in the United States who was on a run before prohibition and who have to deal with the product of the saloon don't want to see any form of legalized liquor sale returned to this country."—Dees Pickett.

The greatest man is he who chooses the right with invincible resolution, who resists the sorest temptations from within and without, who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully, who is calmest in storms and most fearless under menace and frowns, whose reliance on truth, on virtue, on God, is most unfaltering. —Selected.

A LITTLE HOMILY ON GIVING

"Such as I have give I thee."—Acts 3:6.

Most men are amazingly liberal with the things that they do not possess. The millions that they do not have and never will have are gladly given for the erection of hospitals and orphanages, the building and endowing of colleges, the erection of churches and for almost any other call of humanity. "If I only had money," they say, "I would gladly give it for all good purposes." But that is about as far as some people ever go in the matter of giving.

Then quite a few are decidedly generous with what belongs to other people. They can without stint give their neighbors instructions at this point. If some men had the power they would gladly give away everything that their neighbors, their fellow church members, and the rich men they know possess. All this would be decidedly easy.

"But such as I have give I thee" was the apostolic rule; it is God's rule. If one has money give part of it; if one has social prestige use it! if one can preach, be a spokesman for God.

A man once said to Mr. Moody, "I noticed that you made eleven mistakes in grammar in your sermon tonight."

"Very likely," replied Mr. Moody, "I don't doubt it a minute. My early education was faulty. I often wish that I had received more schooling. But I am using all the grammar I know in the service of Christ—how is it with you?" Such is the attitude that counts.—Selected.

AT THE CROSSROADS

He stood at the crossroads all alone,
  The sunrise in his face;
He had no thought for the world unknown,
  He was set for a manly race.
But the road stretched east and the road stretched west,
And the boy did not know which road was best.
So he took the wrong road, and went down,
And he lost the race and the victor's crown.
He was caught at last in an angry snare,
Because no one stood at the crossroads there,
  To show him the better road.

Another day at the self-same place,
  A boy with high hopes stood;
He too was set for manly race,
  He was seeking the things that were good.
But one was there who the roads did know,
And that one showed him which way to go;
So he turned away from the road that went down,
And he won the race and the victor's crown,
He walks today the Highway fair,
Because one stood at the crossroads there,
  To show him the better road .

—We give an unusual amount of space to obituaries this week, trying to catch up. If the stream of obituaries continues with its present volume we will have to appeal to writers to abbreviate. Zion's Herald, a leading paper of the M. E. Church, with a subscription price of $3.50 a year, has this rule: "Obituaries are limited to one hundred words and, except in the case of ministers, their wives or widows, a charge of one dollar will be made for the insertion."

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

South Lexington

Our schedule for this date was on the South Lexington charge, with an appointment at Mt. Carmel in the morning, and Lexington at night. The rain in the morning kept us at home and gave us the privilege of worshiping with the family, in a helpful and pleasing communion service at Calvary. At night we filled the appointment at South Lexington, preaching to a large and attentive congregation. This church has a wide field for service, and is doing splendid work. Despite the rain, 144 were present in the Sunday School Sunday morning. A larger and better equipped church is badly needed here. We trust that this is a blessing the future holds for them, though we advise against incurring a heavy church debt. The people are working on short time—only three days a week—but they are keeping their pastor paid, and they expect to pay a large part of their other obligations, if not in full. Brother Isley, the pastor, is popular with his people, and diligent in his work. He announced a revival to be held in the near future. The work here gives promise of a good year. We (Mrs. Taylor and I) enjoyed the visit with this church.

Sick

Mrs. W. F. Kennett and Miss Ezora Suits, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Edwin Suits, are patients at Wesley Long Hospital, each having undergone an operation. They are recovering normally, and the hope is that they will be able to return to their homes in due time, restored to better health as the result of this hospital experience. In the meantime, they will continue to have the interest and prayers of their many friends.

Methodist Protestant-Recorder

This is the oldest, newest paper in Methodism, and since it is our only general church paper, it should be in the homes of our people throughout the entire church. The number of subscriptions to our own conference is not large, owing to the fact that we have our local paper. However, we need them both—the one to keep us in touch with local matters, and the other for information regarding the general church. The Methodist Protestant-Recorder is a thirty-two-page paper, ably edited, and providing space for every department of the church, and suitable reading matter for every member of the family. We urge our people to take it. The price is $2 per year. Send subscriptions to The Methodist Protestant-Recorder, 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md.

Sunday Schools and C. E. Societies

The apportionments given to these organizations for the purpose of financing the North Carolina Council of Religious Education in its work (formerly the Board of Young People's Work) is small, ranging as it does from $1.50 to $7.00 in Sunday Schools, and from $1 to $3 in C. E. Societies. The apportionment has been run twice recently in the HERALD, so that no one could miss it. In the recent rally in the first district it was cheering to find that some schools had raised their allotments already; others signified their purpose ot do so. Mr. F. R. Stout, treasurer, has already received several remittances, and we trust that his report may appear in the HERALD this week. He will publish from time to time the schools and societies that make payments. It will be interesting to see the list grow, as we believe it will. A proposition: Let's do this thing at once, and get it out of the way for something else. I am confident that we can. What do you say, pastors, superintendents, C. E. Workers? "Say it" with a check.

Visiting

Most people want their pastor in their homes. Such visits are two-fold in their blessings: the people are blessed and the pastor is blessed. Witnesses to this are legion. Many a pastor has gone back home with a better understanding of his people, and with fresh and timely sermon material as the result of a day's calling among his parishioners; and many hearts have been comforted and strengthened in their purposes toward God, and new interest aroused on the part of the careless and indifferent by these pastoral visits. This is a part of a pastor's work that he will do well not to neglect. And especially should he visit the sick. Attention at such a time will not be forgotten. It establishes a confidence toward the pastor, and provides an opening for him to do good, as God's man, as but few other things in his ministry will do. Both with the sick and the well, well-timed and well-ordered visits constitute for a pastor a valuable asset in his work. But just this hint: it takes gas to run the car. If your pastor is not visiting enough, fill up the tank.

How Other Churches Do It

We find some of our leading churches posting in the church the names of the members and a record of their payments to the church budgets, either monthly or quarterly. They provide recogniton, also, for yearly payments; as for instance, a church honor roll for all that pay in full. One church publishes a financial statement in booklet form for last year, which carried the name of every member and the amount contributed by each. The purpose of these efforts is to provide an adequate financial system for the church, and to create a sense of individual responsibility to the financial needs of Christ's Kingdom. The results of these efforts are encouraging. The treasurer of one church reports receipts considerably increased. Our observation confirms us in the opinion that two many of our people have no definite financial obligation to the Kingdom of God, with the resultant consequence of but little sense of responsibility in this matter, and small giving. One of our great hindrances in providing money for the church is a lack of an adequate financial system. We are glad to note any plan that indicates an improvement in this direction.

Districts 1, 9, 11, and 12 held rallies on the Fifth Sunday March. This leaves eleven other districts yet to hold rallies. We urge the chairmen of these districts to begin at once to plan for the fifth Sunday in June. These occasions are well worthwhile. They provide an opportunity for getting before the people important conference and denominational programs and purposes. In fact, that is largely the purpose of these occasions. There is, too, an acquaintanceship and fellowship advantage in these assemblies that is of no small value. People from more or less remote charges become acquainted with each other, and the bond of fellowship is thereby strengthened, and our common interests and problems are better understood and appreciated. Our slogan for the year is: A Rally in every district. On, Chairman! On!

Training Schools

The schools that have been in progress at Asheboro, Graham, and Greensboro, close this week with appropriate exercises. Brother F. L. Gibbs, the dean of these schools, has been diligent in his labors for their success, and we trust that his desires have been fully realized. He has been ably assisted by competent instructors, and encouraged by a good enrollment. We understand that the school has been large at Graham, and gratifying numbers have attended at the other points.

We were in the school one night in Greensboro, and were favorably impressed. These schools are potential of much good and we urge our people to support them.

Generous—Grateful

Asheboro was generous, and we are grateful. "We" means the A. C. B. For five months this budget has been practically "without funds," "short," "unable to pay," and to have a church send in $250 all at one time—well, that's "good tidings," and we just can't "hold our peace." Blessing on Asheboro, and "may her tribe increase." God is more mighty than the "panic," and it is still true that if we "seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness," necessary material things will be added unto us. This is a time when the church needs to rely with implicit confidence upon this promise. God grant us grace to do it.

Asheboro is the first charge to pay the A. C. B. in full this year. Yadkin College is the first church. We understand that this church paid this budget some time ago.

"Dollar a Member"

Do you "mind" that we told you last week that another church toward the "setting sun" would be heard from soon? Well, so it is. South Lexington gave us orders Sunday night, to give them a place with the "illustrious." Look in the list and you will find them right there—No. 21. We told you so. Now we are going to predict again. Watch for another church this time toward the "rising sun." You'll see. "Dollar a Member" is on the way.

Assigned

Rev. T. E. Martin was assigned, yesterday, to Pageland charge, to take the place of Rev. P. E. Bingham, resigned. It will be recalled that Brother Martin served in our conference some years ago. We are glad to have him with us again, and we trust that he may have a happy and successful pastorate with the Pageland people.

Easter-Pentecost

We are rapidly approaching the Easter tide ,and special evangelistic effort, in different forms, will be made in a number of our churches. Let us offer a prayer to God every day for his abundant blessings upon these efforts. We urge, also, that prayer leagues, Bible reading, and church attendance be insisted upon in all of our churches. And let us not forget that April is tithing month. Generous giving is one means by which we open the windows of heaven. The spirit of Pentecost is the church's imperative need, and God will come if only we make ready for him. We are meeting in Concord Thursday to spend a day in conference and prayer, that our hearts may be prepared unto the Lord.

"Come, Holy Spirit, heavenly Dove,
With all thy quickening power;
Come, shed abroad a Saviour's love,
In these cold hearts of ours."

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE

By Charles Haddon Spurgeon

We have no enemies but the enemies of God. Our fight is not against men, but against spiritual wickedness. We war with the devil, and the blasphemy, error and despair which he brings into the field of battle. We fight with all the armies of sin—impurity, drunkenness, oppression, infidelity and ungodliness.

Johevah, our God, abhors everything which is evil, and therefore, He goes with us to fight for us in this crusade. We may depend upon it that if we are on God's side, God is on our side . . . . Soldiers of Christ, gird on your armor.

—Who caused the hard times seems to be as hard to answer as who started the war. Most hard times are caused by panic, fear. If men had faith enough in God and love enough for men, there would be no hard times.

THE BEST IS NEXT

Some one asked Thornwaldsen, the noted Danish sculptor, "Which is your greatest statue?"

He promptly replied, "The next one!"

Whenever a man looks back to some achievement of the past as his greatest, he is admittedly on the decline. He has passed his zenith and is making toward the setting sun of his career.

The preacher who has had his best year in the ministry is on the decline. He who lacks the determination to make this year the best he has ever had is in the afternoon of life's achievements. The Christian who has ever had a better experience than he has now is a back-slider. "The path of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

While physically life may have its morning, noon, and afternoon, yet the Christian's star is ever in the ascendency. His zenith lies beyond the horizon of this life. The minister of the gospel may decline in volume of voice, in ability to cover as large an appointment list, or to make as many pastoral calls, but the richness of his ministry should ever increase until his life fades out like the soaring eagle in the deep blue of heaven.—From The Gospel Minister.

BREVITY OF TIME

The Christian who is really concerned to live well must possess himself continually of the thought that he is not to live long. A few more years, it may be, at most, and the place that knoweth us now shall know us no more. Let us "number our days and apply our hearts unto wisdom." (Psa. 90:12.) Let it not be: How much may I crowd into this span of time? but, rather: How may I do these few things well? The standard of Heaven is quality, not quantity. Faithfulness over a few things will bring the reward of ruling over many things. (Matt. 25:23.) What work we do must be done for the eyes of God.

A great sculptor in Greece, long ago, made a statue that was to be set on a high column; yet he was as particular about the hair on the top of the statue's head as about all the rest. "Why should you take such pains about that?" someone asked him, "for no one will be able to see the top of the head when the figure is on the column." "No," said the sculptor, "but God will see it!" So with us. Let us, therefore, be thorough in everything that we undertake in His Name.—Selected.

CRIME AND PUNISHMENT

The greatest deterrent of crime so far as law is concerned, is punishment. When criminals find that punishment is not inflicted, except in a minority of cases, crime will increase.

When preachers leave hell out of their preaching they are removing one of the greatest safeguards of society. Preachers are supposed to know, and when they leave it out, or even go so far as to say there is no punishment after death, the common criminal with no Bible, and no desire for one, easily drifts along in the way of crime. The worst he fears is extinction of life, and that is soon over. But after death is the judgment. The warning needs to be sounded of what the broken law will bring a man to, and then the Gospel remedy preached whereby men can be delivered from the love of sin.—From The Gospel Minister.

CULTIVATE GREAT EXPECTATIONS

Some men make small demands upon life and consequently get very little from life. Others expect great things from life and enjoy from it a generous response. Now there is a beautiful modesty in Jesus, yet He asked so largely that some of His words amazing us by their seemingly ambitious character. One of these is in Matt. 7:7:

> Ask, and it shall be given you;
> Seek, and ye shall find;
> Knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

And in the thought of Jesus this is applied to the requests we make not merely of life in general but of God. I would give much to have known the petitions in the prayers of Jesus. Of what did He talk in the long hours of communion with God when He stole up to the mountain summit long before day? I have an idea that sometimes He was asking for a world, for a nation, for a generation. The thing that gave Him confidence to ask in large terms was the kind of God He had. I believe the greatest weakness of most earnest Christian men is the niggardliness of their expectations. Our God must be a little Being judged by the smallness and vagueness of what we really expect Him to do and request of Him in our prayers.—Zion's Herald.

TO EACH MAN HIS WORK

To each man is given a day and his work for the day;
And once, and no more, he is given to travel this way.
And woe if he flies from the task, whatever the odds;
For the task is appointed to him on the scroll of the gods.

There is waiting a work where only his hands can avail;
And so, if he falters, a chord in the music will fail.
He may laugh to the sky, he may lie for an hour in the sun;
But he dare not go hence till the labor appointed is done.

To each man is given a marble to carve for the wall;
A stone that is needed to heighten the beauty of all;
And only his soul has the magic to give it a grace;
And only his hands the cunning to put it in place.

Yes, the task that is given to each man, no other can do;
So the errand is waiting; it has waited through ages for you.
And now you appear; and the hushed ones are turning their gaze
To see what you do with your chance in the chamber of days.

THE TOUCH OF GOD

Down 'mid the fields crusted white with snow
Where the damp mists hang, and the chill winds blow,
And scarcely a gleam from the sky breaks through,
And you'd think that never a daisy grew—
I felt the sun and I knew the sod
Was but awaiting the touch of God.

Down where the blues of solitude fall,
And the curtain of loneliness hangs o'er all,
And scarcely a glad, brave light shines through,
And you'd think that a happiness never grew—
I felt a presence beside me stand
And I touched a hand that had touched God's hand.

—Rose E. DeRibcowsky, in the New Outlook.

THE VERY SAME JESUS

When Jesus came to this earth, He healed the leper, the blind, the lame, the paralytic, the woman that was bound for eighteen years. "As many as touched him were made whole." Mark 6:56. The dark ages intervened between then and now; but today we are seeing the same mighty arm of God manifested, and His hand outstretched, and He is performing miracles in the world today.

A young man in the poorfarm, dying with tuberculosis, was healed; and today he is a contractor in this city. Hundreds here have been healed from diseases no doctor could touch. There are people here that came, almost skin and bone; people with cancers and tumors and diseases no doctor could touch; and the God we serve has made them every whit whole. He is the same living, mighty, risen Christ, and God over all.

Hundreds have been healed of different diseases, and souls saved from every walk in life. What does it mean? It means that the Word of God is true.

We have seen the handiwork of God in performing miracles and healing the incurable, almost beyond anyone's comprehension. People here are living on borrowed time. The only reason they are in the land of the living is because God has extended His love and mercy and marvelous wonder-working power in their behalf.

People have been raised from the very jaws of death, in the very throes of despair. The death rattle was in their throat, and God came down in answer to prayer and raised them up, and they are here alive because of the Lord. Not only here, but far and wide, people are saved and healed through prayer.—Selected.

DON'T QUIT

"When things go wrong, as they sometimes will,
When the road you're trudging seems all up hill,
When the funds are low and the debts are high
And when you want to smile, but you have to sigh,
When care is pressing you down a bit
Rest if you must, but don't quit.

"Life is queer with its twists and turns
As every one of us sometimes learns,
And many a failure turns about
When he might have won had he stuck it out;
Don't give up though the pace seems slow—
You may succeed with another blow.

"Often the goal is nearer than
It seems to a faint and faltering man,
Often the struggler has given up
When he might have captured the victor's cup.
And he learned too late, when the night slipped down,
How close he was to the golden crown.

"Success is failure turned inside out—
The silver tint of the clouds of doubt.
And you can never tell how close you are,
It may be near when it seems afar;
So stick to the fight when you're hardest hit—
It's when things seem worst that you musn't quit."

Hints and Helps.

A TRACT AND AN ACTRESS

A man one day gave a tract to an acress. About a week later he received a letter from the actress, asking him to remember her in prayer, as she was that day going to do a most difficult thing.

A few weeks later another letter came asking for permission to call on him. A day was fixed, and this is what the actress said to him: "Your tract led me to the Savior, and I immediately felt I must leave the stage. But what was I to do? I was the understudy of one of the leading actresses of the day, and was under a seven years' contract. The day you received my letter asking for prayer was the day I fixed to see the manager of the theater. I went to his office, and told him I was converted. Could he release me? The manager, deeply moved, said, 'Years ago, when I was a young man, I was saved, but there came a day when I had to choose between my profession and Christ. I chose the stage, and from that day I have not known what happiness is. I am going to hell, and I dare not take the responsibility of ruining you. I release you from this hour'."—From The Gospel Minister.

HAPPY THE MAN WHO KNOWS

By Thomas C. Upham

Happy the man who knows
His master to obey;
Whose life of care and labor flows
Where God points out the way.

He riseth to his task
Soon as the word is given;
Nor waits, nor doth a question ask
When orders come from heaven.

Nothing he calls his own;
Nothing he hath to say;
His feet are shod for God alone,
And God alone obey.

Give us, O God, this mind
Which waits for thy command
And doth its highest pleasure find
In thy great work to stand.

THE BIBLE

It is a small book. A child can hold it in its hands—a few ounces of paper, a few hundred pages of print, that is all. If we measure it by the words it contains it equals only a small part of an ordinary encyclopedia; but if we measure it by the value of its contents it outweighs the literature of the world.

The Hindu has his Vedas, the Persian his Zend-Avestas, the Chinaman his Confucian Analects, the Mohammedan his Koran, but it is only the Christian who has the Words of Eternal Life. The Book has done more to shape the condition of the world than all other books combined. It teaches of the wonderful fact of God as He deals with human life. It tells us of Christ as the gift of God for the sins of the entire world. It unfolds to us the workings of the Holy Spirit, and does it so simply and truthfully that a child can understand it, and yet the most learned stand before its mighty truths dumbfounded.—Selected.

OUR STORY PAGE

THE TIE THAT BINDS

"Huh! A summons to the dean's office! Did you see it?"

Lewis Masters rolled over on the window-seat and pulled himself from among books and papers. "Expected it, didn't you?"

Clark Damon flung himself indifferently into an easy chair. "Don't know as I did at that," he grunted.

"I wouldn't be a fool, Clark. At least not any longer."

"Good! Go on with the sermon. I'll improve the time napping," and Clark sprawled his lazy length over and around the chair and closed his eyes.

With one leap Lewis crossed the space between them and seized his chum roughly by the arm. "You'll listen for sixty seconds, then I'm through."

"That will be a relief," sniffed Clark.

"You've failed in the semester's exams. I knew you would. So did you. And your dad working his head off to give you a chance you don't deserve! Clark—cut the gang and get to work."

"Thanks. The minute's up. You're exempt from all further responsibility. Leave me in peace."

"There'll be no peace for you now or ever unless you right-about-face. You're headed for one grand, colossal failure."

"Thanks some more," Clark drawled as he flopped over in the chair and scraped his feet noisily along the floor.

Lewis turned back to his books. Clark was soon breathing heavily and continued for an hour in uneasy, restless sleep. At the end of that time Lewis spoke angrily. "Your appointment with the dean is in fifteen minutes. It will be the worse for you if you don't keep it."

Without a word Clark got to his feet, ran his hands carelessly through his hair, gave a twist to his tie, and went out slamming the door.

The dean outlined the situation with calculating coldness. Damon had been warned concerning his poor scholarship. Examnations showed the warning to have been unheeded. The university preferred to dispense with men who failed to appreciate its advantages.

"It will not hopelessly disappoint me, sir, to pack my trunk for home," Clark answered coldly.

"You are fortunate, young man, to have a home to which to send your trunk. There may be some one there to suffer hopeless disappointment."

Several hours later Clark was leaning lazily against a high-backed seat of the train that was rushing him away from the scene of his dismal failure. His mind, as yet untroubled by regret or apprehension, sensed only relief that the classroom, books, and professors had so completely dropped from his program. Wearied at length with following the changing scenes outside the window, he turned languid attention to his fellow travelers.

Across the aisle just ahead, his eyes were held by an interesting picture. A young man of about his own age was in earnest conversation with an elderly gentleman, evidently his father. The boy's arm rested affectionately across the shoulder of the older man. The two smiled into each other's eyes. with mutual admiration and confidence. The train drew slowly into a station. Both men rose. With a hearty hand-clasp they separated, the old gentleman saying as he turned to make his way down the aisle, "Son, you've never disappointed me yet. I'm counting on you now."

"You don't have to worry, dad," the young man returned. "It's your name I carry, you know. I'll not spoil it."

After that Clark watched, half cynically, half interestedly, the chap before him. Then his journey ended. Evening had come. He left the tran and hurried with his head down along the road that led—home.

The house was dark. He had a key and let himself in. So much the better. Now he could go alone to his room and think out the best way to break the news of his return to his parents. But no! There were voices.

His father and mother seated side by side—with the Bible. Family prayers! Clark moved away, but something drew him back. He listened. It was his father's voice.

"Hear us tonight, our God, as we talk with Thee about our boy—the child we long ago dedicated to Thy will. Perhaps he's homesick tonight. Comfort him. We're glad he cannot think of home without remembering that we pray for him. If he's tired and overworked tonight; if he's discouraged, remind him that the goal he means to reach is worth the struggle. Our pride is in him! Lord, hold us from being too proud of our son. Make us humble. Keep him humble as he adds new honor to his father's name.

"If temptations assail him tonight—if questions must be answered and decisions made—turn his thoughts to this home that has sheltered him. May he live up to its standards. May it be his inspiration and, next to Thee, the guiding influence in his life."

A pause, while the two graying heads remained bowed. A pause—while something seemed to snap in Clark Damon's heart. Almost he flung himself into the still room to voice love and devotion, to beg forgiveness—to promise the things these dear ones so confidently expected. But his father, speaking again, restrained him.

"God." A sob checked the old man's speech. "God, we Thank Thee for our boy—for all he has meant to us, for all he will yet mean. Amen."

Clark turned away from the open door, stole silently back through the dark hall and out into the night. A moment he stood looking steadily at the home whose value he seemed suddenly to understand. Family prayers! Yes, he remembered now that his father's or mother's voice in prayer had often in the years that were gone held him from mistep. Tonight the same voices were awakening him—calling him back to himself.

He walked slowly from the yard and down the street. He saw again the young man on the train and heard the proud father's words, "Son, you've never disappointed me yet." Once more the dean was saying, "You are fortunate to have a home to which to send your trunk. There may be some one there to suffer hopeless disappointment."

Clark made up his mind. A midnight train was returning to the college town. The dean had a son. Perhaps he would listen to the story of another man whose prayers for his boy must be answered.

Clark crept back to the house for a moment's silent farewell, to the window of the room where his parents still sat with heads bent, listening as it seemed for Heaven's answering word. Reverently he knelt upon the ground and added mute petition to theirs. Then he stole away to live his life well in the strength of the home prayers.—Zion's Herald.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER
President C. E. Society, High Point College

APRIL 13: "WHY EVERYBODY NEEDS CHRIST"

John 14:1-11.

Bible Readings

Monday—All are sinners. Rom. 3:9-18.
Tuesday—All are lost sheep. Isa. 53:6.
Wednesday—All are helpless. Eph. 2:8-13.
Thursday—Salvation is in Christ alone. Acts 4:12.
Friday—Christ reveals God. John 14:114.
Saturday—We need Christ's power. Rom. 8:1-4.

Suggestions to the Leader

This is a very important meeting. The one thing you want to stress most fully is the fact that we all do need Christ—that things are not all right just as they are. We cannot afford to settle down into that feeling that things will go on no matter what we do.

Use as hymns any of these: "I Need Jesus," "Since Jesus Came Into My Heart," "At the Cross," "Just When I Need Him Most," "He's a Wonderful Savior to Me." In closing your meeting sing softly, "I Need Thee Every Hour," and follow this by the Lord's Prayer.

Don't forget the poster for this meeting!

Ask whoever reads the Scripture lesson to make some explanation of each verse. This will at least vary your meeting in a little part.

Leader's Lines

Everybody does need Jesus. We need Him today just as much as did the disciples when they reaelized that He was going away—although centuries have passed. We know human nature to be the same in all ages—so that we are in dire need of Him as people have ever been. In order to have complete life we must take Christ into consideration and live as He wishes. He is vital to our welfare and happiness. He has always been and He will always be. Christ Himself is the Way. We are asked to accept Him, a PERSON and not a creed.

All individuals need Christ. All nations need Him. America needs Him to cure her of her materialism and her industrial world is not perfect, either. Other nations need Him for other causes, but one and all need Him.

Topics

Give these five topics to five persons, asking for at least a three-minute talk:

Everybody's need of Christ:

1. Civilization's.
2. Society's.
3. Business'.
4. Politics'.
5. The Homes'.

Questioning

1. Which of the nations do you think need Christ the most? Give reasons.

2. Discuss modern civilization in its relation to Christianity. Is it tending from or toward it?

3. Do you consider the teaching of Christ practical to a complete life?

4. What do you think of the statement: "The Kingdom of God is in you?"

5. Name three good ways of recommending Christ to others.

Poetry Corner

"Strange we never prize the music
  Till the sweet-voiced bird has flown;
Strange that we should slight the violets
  Till the lovely flowers are gone.
Strange that summer skies and sunshine
  Never seem one-half so fair
As when winter's snowy pinions
  Shake the white down in thee air."

◆

" 'Tis so sweet to trust in Jesus,
  Just to take Him at His word—
Just to rest upon His promise,
  Just to know, Thus saith the Lord."

 Who read to doubt, or read to scorn."

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Rehoboth, Creswell Circuit.—The work is moving on very well considering the financial condition in this section. Services have been held each second Sunday by the pastor, Rev. R. L. Hethcox. The "Dollar a Member" has not been paid at this church, but we hope to get that paid soon.

We are getting ready to observe an Easter service the second Sunday night, at which time we will have our pastor with us.

The health of this church and community has been good this year. No one has been sick or died. For this and many other blessings we are very grateful.

I spent Christmas with my brother, G .J. Cherry, and wife in Charleston; in February we took an auto trip down the East Coast of Florida as far as Miami; visited several points of interest in and around that section. On return we cross the Everglades, down by Lake Okeechobee, up through the interior of the state to Lake Vales; there visited the "Singing Tower." This was given to the people by Mr. Edward William Bok as a tribute of affection to his grandparents, who were lovers of beauty; this message from them: "Make you the world a bit more beautiful and better because you lived in it."

Really, while listening to the chimes of those bells, I never felt so near Heaven, so lifted up in all my life. I can truly say I was made better, and now have a more earnest desire to do something to make the world better, for my having lived in it.

Hope from now on to make regular reports.

Siler City Church.—Our Sunday school fell short some last Sunday due to the inclemency of the weather, but we are not discouraged. We are working to double our enrollment as the spring opens up.

Our special meeting began last Sunday. Our pastor is doing the preaching. At the Sunday morning service his subject was "Destitute Souls." At the evening hour the subject was: "Personal Evangelism." I wish all who read this could have heard these wonderful sermons. Surely, great good will come from both services.

Rev. Mr. Permar, pastor of the Friends church, Asheboro, is with us, conducting the singing. We are hoping and praying that we may have a great revival of religion in our church and community. The meeting will last through Easter, with services each night at 7:30 o'clock.

We have a real wide-awake C. E. Society. Dr. Williams told them Sunday evening he felt real proud of the society and urged them to do their best through these two weeks of evangelistic services to bring souls to know Jesus in the pardon and forgiveness of their sins.

The Clyde Auman Circle met last Thursday night at the Chatham Inn with Mrs. D. L. Johnson. Next Monday at 2:30 the Emma B. Siler Circle will meet at the church. Both circles are doing good work and we expect to send a good delegation to the Branch Meeting at Burlington from our Auxiliary.

A committee has been appointed to get up the Easter program to be given on Easter Sunday night. We hope this will be a joyful time for every one.

MRS. J. A. COOPER, Reporter.

Dulin's, Mocksville Circuit.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely since spring has arrived. We didn't have a very large attendance Sunday on account of rain and muddy roads.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, filled his appointment Sunday with another Bible sermon which was very pleasing to his hearers. He is giving sermons direct from thee Bible and that's the kind the people are interested in.

We are all looking forward to the coming of our president, Rev. S. W. Taylor, the first Sunday in May and the splendid messages he usually brings. We are always ready to welcome one of our home boys back to worship with us.

LEONA HENDRIX, Reporter.

West Forsyth.—We conducted regular services at Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches last Sunday. Owing to the rain and muddy condition of the roads, a small congregation assembled at each church for the services. Those present gave good attention to the discourses of the pastor. After the service at Baltimore church we went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Anderson Shore, according to previous invitation. Here we enjoyed a good dinner and then hurried on to Stony Knoll church for the service there scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

We desire to thank the person guilty of an intrusion on the parsonage property during an absence recently. The person, so far unidentified, left a nice load of wood for the pastor and family. This is the second act of the kind done by our kind members while we were away from home.

While on a visit to the home of Mrs. R. J. Whitman last week the pastor and wife were given a little pounding by Mrs. Whitman and her mother, Mrs. Martha Speas. We greatly appreciate their gifts.

We are glad to report that the condition of Mrs. Hobart Whitman is very much improved. She has been at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Douglass, in Yadkin County, for several weeks, during which time she was critically ill for over a week. She expects to return to her home in the Pleasant Hill community this week.

Speas Sprinkle, one of our men of Pleasant Hill church, who was ill all last week with bronchial pneumonia, is reported recovering.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with Tabernacle and Union Hill churches. We hope to have good attendance at both of these churches.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

◆

Graham.—In spite of the inclemency of the weather some attended the 11 o'clock service Sunday at which time the community service was observed. The young people gave the program Sunday evening. The cantata sponsored by the young ladies' class was especially fine.

The usual 7 o'clock evening service will not be held on next Sunday, but there will be worship from 5 to 6 o'clock instead.

Our revival will begin the second Sunday in April. The pastor is planning to do the preaching during the series of meetings. Let us remember the preacher cannot have a revival without the co-operation of the people, and through prayer we may prepare ourselves for a revival in our own hearts and pray God's blessing on the pastor and those around us.

Mr. P. S. Dixon, our very efficient Sunday school superintendent, is constantly endeavoring to improve the condition of the school; to find new and better ways to be used in the work. We are hoping our attendance may be better with the coming of spring.

Much interest has been manifested in the training school held in our church. Many from the surrounding churches have taken this opportunity to make themselves more competent leaders and workers in church and Sunday school.

The church wishes to express to our pastor and wife, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis, their heart-felt gratitude for the church hymnals which they recently purchased and presented to the church. REPORTER.

◆

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—We had a good Sunday school yesterday and a very good attendance. Bro. Joyner preached a wonderful sermon. We all enjoyed it. We were indeed glad to have with us last Sunday evening Rev. N. M. Harrison, Mrs. Little and Mr. and Mrs. Atkins, of Charlotte, in a called meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society. We have decided to change our Ladies' Aid into a Ladies' Auxiliary having two circles, one for the married ladies and one for the young ladies. We especially want all the young people present Wednesday evening at prayer meeting so we can organize their circle.

The Ladies' Aid Society had their March meeting with Mrs. H. B. Furr. We had a real good program. Bro. Joyner read the Scripture lesson, Mrs. M. L. Stallings made an interesting talk on the lesson. Several interesting poems were read. Mrs. J. E. Hartis and Mrs. Carl Stallings sang a duet. After the general reports and business were attended to Mrs. Furr invited us into the dining room, where she and Mrs. Hartis served delicious refreshments. The occasion being Mrs. Furr's birthday she received many beautiful presents.

We met with Mrs. Paul Curlee last Thursday evening. We had an Easter program. We had two interesting pieces read on the history of the Children's Home at Bethel. Mrs. Paul Curlee and Mrs. J. E. Hartis had birthdays in this month; they were joint hostesses and served delicious refreshments. Mrs. Curlee and Mrs. Hartis received many useful presents. We had the largest attendance that we had had all winter. We adjourned with a closing prayer by Bro. Joyner. The next meeting will be with Mrs. R. A. Drye and Mrs. D. C. Stallings.

We are having prayer meeting at the church every Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

We ask the prayers of all Christian people that we may do more for the Kingdom this year than ever before. REPORTER.

◆

Hickory Grove, Guilford Circuit.—I suppose other churches think we're not having Sunday school since our church burned.

Nevertheless, by the kindness of Brother O. E. Hassell we have been holding Sunday school in a dwelling house owned by him and we haven't missed having Sunday school a Sunday yet.

However, we are a little crowded; our attendance has increased 20 per cent. this quarter. The teachers as well as the pupils seem to take more interest than they ever have before.

We are very proud of our Ladies' Aid Society and we feel we are doing a great work, although it is very discouraging after having spent all our profits in and around the church to know that the church has burned down. We feel there is a greater need now for the Society to function and we are going to continue.

We had a soup supper last Wednesday evening and made a very nice profit; however, we want to make more next time we have a supper, whether it is a soup, fried chicken, or ice cream supper. We meet once a month and enjoy having meetings of this kind.

We all regret the loss of our church very much, but we're not going to give up. We are going forward with a greater determination than ever before, and if it is the Lord's will we hope to have a new church within the near future.

May the Lord bless each one.

Enfield.—Beginning with next Sunday, the 13th, there will be a series of Pre-Easter services held in each of the four churches in Engeld. The people of Enfield are requested to attend the service of their choice during this week, which will be known as Go to Church Week.

The second quarterly conference of the Enfield Charge will convene with the Enfield church on Friday night after the fourth Sunday in this month at 8 o'clock.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Pastor.

◆

Bess Chapel.—We are glad to report that the district rally was a great success and that all the charges were represented except one. Wonderful talks were made and I believe it will help our churches to realize their responsibilities toward the church more than they have heretofore. If we all could keep the program before us I am sure that we could do more for the Master in a spiritual way; not only that, but we would do more in a financial way. Let's all pray that we may be able to do more. At that time we had the pleasure of having Rev. A. G. Dixon from the Children's Home with us and speak in behalf of the Home. We took an offering which amounted to $17.13. We had a large number for Sunday school and preaching yesterday.

Pray for us that we may have a great number to make a decision for the Master on Easter morning.

M. C. HENDERSON.

Pleasant Grove—The revival closed Wednesday evening, April 2nd. Rev. R. S. Troxler was the pulpit help and did some wonderful preaching. The services were not attended as they should have been, but we feel that much good has been accomplished. There were 18 converted and reclaimed; eight of these gave their names for church membership to be received into the church Sunday morning. Since the weather was bad and some who wished to unite with the church were absent this was left until next Sunday.

Brother Williams brought us two of his best messages Sunday. At the morning hour he preached from Matthew 27:22: "Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?" At the evening service the message was from Psalms 116:13-14: "I will take the cup of salvation and call upon the name of the Lord. I will pay my vows unto the Lord." If more of the church members would resolve to do like David, take this cup of salvation and pay their vows to the Lord, there would be less Sabbath desecration, and fewer empty pews at church.

There are some of our number still on the sick list. Among them are Mrs. W. S. Cecil, Mr. J. R. Meredith, and Mr. Robert T. Kennedy. Hope they may soon be restored to health and be in their places at church.

First Church, High Point.—The new Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society, composed of Junior and Senior high school boys and girls, started well last Wednesday evening after the Fellowship supper, and a better meeting is expected this coming Wednesday. The president, Miss Juanita Wood, will lead the discussion on the topic, "How to Win Our Friends to Christ."

After a beautiful solo, "I Will Give You Rest," by Mrs. J. H. Allred on Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service, the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, delivered an eloquent sermon on the subject, "Stirring Up the Nest," from the text found in Isaiah, "As an eagle that stirreth up her nest, they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength like the eagle; they shall run and not be weary, they shall walk and not faint." In one of the new books about the life of Roosevelt in the troubled days of the World War, when his youngest son had volunteered for service, his wife said to him, "Teddy, you need not bring up your sons like eagles, and expect them to act like sparrows." The eagle is a bird of strange habitat, and seeks high, rocky cliffs on which to build nests to brood and rear its young; the nest is usually built of hard twigs and sticks high up on the barren hills. He is a bird of prey, and eats what no other bird will. The mother eagle often swoops down upon the nest, stirs it up, and forces the young eagles to fly; then when they are tired and their wings droop, she flies underneath them and holds them up until they are rested. So God in times of sorrow and grief bears us up and carries our burdens, for "Underneath are the everlasting arms." As an eagle spreadeth her wings to carry the eaglets, so underneath us are the arms of God. Out of love and affection God pushes us out to test us and try us, but in seeming bitterness, for "whom God loveth, he chasteneth." The Lord stirred up the nations, and sent Pilgrims, Puritans, Huguenots, Spaniards, Englishmen, and Dutch from Holland across unknown seas to unknown lands. They founded a new civilization in the wilderness, the beginning of our great American republic. In southern Ohio, in a small town, Hillsboro, where my mother was raised, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, that mighty factor for righteousness and sobriety, had its birthplace and has been the battleground where this powerful war against rum and all its attendant evils has been waged by the brave women of our land. They were stirred up by righteous indignation to go out and do something "For God and Home and Native Land." In old McGuffey's Reader which many of us studied and learned to love in the halcyon days of youth there is found a story of a lone oak out in an open field, where an eagle had built her nest. She started out to fly ten miles on a journey to the sea to catch fish for her young, and upon her return some mischievous boys threw stones and sticks at her, causing her to drop the fish; but she was courageous and undaunted, and flew again to the sea and found another for the hungry eaglets; and this time, as the story goes, the boys did not molest her. Hareld Bell Wright's famous story, "Shepherd of the Hills," recounts the story of a boy who had known a mother's love for ten years, when she died, and the lad was pushed out of the home nest, going to Arkansas, Missouri, and through Kentucky, a courageous orphan boy, who became a beloved "Little Minister." Sometimes the oldest son or daughter is pushed out by necessity to earn a living for the family; it is the pushing out from old home ties that tests us, and God means to try our mettle to do something for Him when He sends temptation, bereavement, and illness. "Mine eyes are ever toward the Lord," said the Psalmist. Let us be faithful and not tire in well-doing until the day shall come "when we shall run and not be weary, walk and not faint."

At the vesper service Sunday at 5 o'clock p. m. the Men's Chorus, Messrs. C. L. Gray, Jr., Arthur Fidley, Arnold Koonce, sang with fine effect "Wonderful Words," by Bliss, and Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a compelling and forceful message on "The Pull of the Cross." This service at the twilight hour and close of the Sabbath day is wonderfully impressive, and was attended by a large group of reverent worshipers.

The executive board for the Woman's Auxiliary held an interesting session at the church Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with the following members present: Mesdames Coe, Pickett, Allred, Andrews, Moore, Kennett, Snipes, Diffee, Pickens, Oakes, Douglas, Whitaker, Rankin, Shelton, Moffitt, McPherson, Peacock and Miss Young. A recommendation from the finance committee in regard to the budget for 1930-31 was adopted as follows: The missionary budget will remain the same as last year, $1,025, and the sum of $1,200 in monthly installments of $100 will be paid to Mr. J. S. Pickett, treasurer of the building fund, and $275 will be set aside for contingent and extras. This gives us a budget of $2,500 to raise. It was voted to buy new chinaware, silver, tables and glassware for use in the church kitchen. Mrs. H. A. Moffitt, chairman, Mrs. H. U. Oakes and Mrs. J. G. Spines were appointed a committee to superintend the luncheon to be given for the Young People's Conference of the M. E. Church, South, on Thursday evening, April 24th. All Circle chairmen except one, No. 3, will serve another year. A motion to send $10.00 for the outfits for the Children's Home graduates in Jamestown High School, three girls and a boy, was carried.

A delightful Easter Egg hunt for the Junior Mission Circle, composed of boys and girls under 12 years of age, was conducted by the leader, Mrs. J. C. Whitesell. There were 50 children present to enjoy candy eggs, besides the 30 dozen hen eggs wrich were served to them.

By request of a number of those who attend the Wednesday Fellowship suppers regularly, it has been decided to hold another at the church this week and the minister will speak on "The Message of Holy Week." The girls of Miss Margaret Snipes' Circle No. 1 will serve.

In preparation for the Easter season, cottage prayer meetings will be held in the homes next Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock as follows:

Mr. E. L. Douglas, Dr. A. G. Dixon, leader.
Mrs. L. J. Diffee, Mrs. S. S. Coe, leader.
Prof. J. H Allred, Prof Hinshaw, leader.
Mr. J. H. Everhart, Prof. W. F. McCanless, leader.
Miss Lillie Bean, Dr. Lindley, leader.

Congratulations are being extended by many frieends to Mr. and Mrs. Russell Blackburn, nee Miss Mary Ogburn, upon the arrival of a little son in their home on April 1. He will bear the name of Russell R. Blackburn, Jr.

Mrs. A. R. Hammer and daughter, Mary, have returned from a visit of several weeks to her daughter, Mrs. N. J. Parker, who is pleasantly remembered as Miss Juanita Hammer, and who lives in Melbourne, Fla.

The delightful play, "Umbrellas to Mend," which was so greatly enjoyed at two recent renditions at the church and was so admirably presented by the C. E. Society, assisted by Pastor Farmer and his associate, Mr. Ballard, will be repeated Friday evening at Ray Street School.

Her numerous friends will be much pleased to learn that Mrs. C. C. Robbins, who underwent a major operation in High Point Hospital two weeks ago, continues to improve, and hopes to be able to return to her home south of the city in a week or so.

Mrs. Richard Reitzel is visiting relatives in Durham, N. C.

ARTEMESIAN LITERARY SOCIETY REPORT

High Point College Debating Team was again successful on Thursday night. Our negative team defeated the affirmative team of Furman College. This is our fifth consecutive victory in debating this season. This week we debate against Appalachian State Normal and Elon College, and on Monday of next week we encounter Northwestern University here. We are very anxious to win these debates, and especially the one with Northwestern because it is so much larger than High Point College.

On Friday night several students and faculty journeyed over to Guilford College for the State Oratorical Contest. Mr. Webster Pope was High Point College's representative, however, Catawba took first place; Milbourne Amos, formerly of High Point College, but now attending State College, won second place. The representative from Lenoir-Rhyne was given honorable mention.

Saturday was a very busy day for High Point College. In the afternoon we had a track meet with Elon, and at the same time a baseball game with the High Point League team. I suppose Dame Fortune thought it would be too good to let us have two victories in one day because we won the track meet, but we lost the baseball game.

Saturday night we were entertained with a vaudeville and minstrel put on by the students for the benefit of the track team. There were some clever acts, good singing, impersonations of well known characters, and old-time fiddling. Everyone enjoyed it very much.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

A Tribute of Love

The members of the Ladies' Aid Siciety of the Methodist Protestant church of Enfield, North Carolina, offer a tribute of love and respect to the memory of Mrs. Mary Whitaker Collins, who died Feb. 23, 1930.

Mrs. Collins was one of our oldest and most faithful members. She was 83 years old and was one of the charter members of our aid, which was organized in 1907.

We realize in her death we have lost a true friend, one who was interested in all the activities of her church. She was loyal to the society and attended every meeting when her health would permit. We konw we shall miss her sweet presence and also her general financial assistance as she always felt it her privilege to give freely.

We feel that our Ladies' Aid has suffered a great loss, but our loss is her eternal gain. Her death has brought sorrow to her loved ones, her neighbors and to her church.

Therefore, be it resolved: first, that we bow in humble submission to our blessed Master's divine will; Second, that we extend our deepest sympathy to her bereaved daughter, and commend her to him who loveth all things well.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to her devoted daughter, a copy be placed upon the minutes of the Ladies' Aid, and a copy be sent to the Progress, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald.

Respectfully Submitted,
MRS. E. I. BELLAMY.
MRS. H. M. WHITAKER.
MRS. J. M. PERSON.

Orrell

"Who being dead yet speoketh." This is certainly an example of the truth of the above scripture. It was to the energy, love and devotion of this good man that Elbaville church owes more than to any other one man for what it is today. He was the last charter member of that church to go. His devotion is a pride today of that church.

Born 77 years ago, later married and was the father of five children and was widowed by the death of his wife in January, 1925. One daughter, Lena, died 22 years ago. The living children are: Mrs. D. C. Kurfees and Mrs. W. A. Ellis, of Davie County; Miss Eleanor Orrell and A. M. Orrell, of Winston-Salem, N. C. There are also eight grandchildren.

A very large congregation of neighbors and friends, including certain colored neighbors to whom he was greatly endeared, gathered at Elbaville Church for the funeral. The floral offering were beautiful and appropriate. After the service he was laid beside his loving companion and "Here we left the servant sleeping."

Coble

Our Heavenly Father in His love and tender mercy saw best to remove from our midst a faithful member, Mrs. Vernon Coble, on Tuesday morning, March 18. As we were beginning a new day on earth, a new day was dawning for her in Heaven.

We cannot understand why one so useful in this life should be taken from us at the age of only 48 years. She will be greatly missed in the church and most in the home where she left a husband and five children.

The husband and three children were upon beds of affliction and were unable to attend the funeral. To them we extend the fullest measure of our sympathy, trusting that the Great Comforter of Souls will dispel the darkness of their grief with the light of faith that sometime we shall meet again in that Eternal Land where there is neither death, parting nor sorrow.

REPORTER.

Workman

Hattie Margaret, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otis Workman, was born August 30, 1928, and passed to her heavenly home March 3, 1930.

Beneath a mound of beautiful flowers, her body was laid to rest in Cane Creek Cemetery beside those of her two litle sisters who had preceded her to the glory world.

The funeral was conducted by Miss Cora Lee Norman, assisted by Revs. Gerringer, Teasley and Mrs. Kenyon.

Margaret was a bright, sweet little girl, loved by all. All that loving hands could do was done, but God saw best to take her to live in that beautiful home with loved ones gone before. 'Tis true we loved her dearly, but Jesus loved her more. He loaned her to us for a short while to brighten our lives and homes, and then He called her to Himself to bring Heaven closer to us and draw us closer to Heaven.

We extend our sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and pray that the Holy Spirit may sustain and comfort them until the broken family circle is restored in that beautiful land where they shall meet to part no more.

"Sweet little darling, light of the home,
Looking for someone, beckoning, come;
Bright as a sunbeam, pure as the dew,
Anxiously looking, Papa and Mama, for you."

Spoon

Alfred Taylor Spoon was born March 9th, 1849, and departed this life March 19th, 1930. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Josephine Spoon, two daughters, Mrs. Callie Smith, and Mrs. Ida Garrett; two sons, W. E. Spoon and J. L. Spoon; one brother, S. L. Spoon; 22 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. He was a member of Rock Creek M. P. Church. We do not know when he become a member of this church, but it seems to have been in early life. His loyalty to his church and to the kingdom continued to the end. He was allowed to finish his work and was then called to his heavenly home. May the Father's blessing rest upon those he has left behind.

The funeral was conducted by J. A. Burgess and the body laid to rest in Mount Zion cemetery.

Wells

Elizabeth Sims Wells, born May 28, 1856, departed this life March 7, 1930. In her early girlhood she professed faith in Christ and united with Harris Chapel church, where she remained a faithful member until death. She lived a faithful Christian life for over sixty years. Though she is dead her influence still lives and will live on and on, thus making the lives of those better that she associated with. She was a true and devoted wife, a kind and loving mother. She had been in declining health for nearly two years, but was only confined to her bed for about nine days, suffering a stroke of paralysis. All was done for her that loving hands could do, but God knew best and took her home to rest. We have no doubt that she was prepared to go, for she told her family just a few days before the end came that she was ready when Jesus called. She bore her suffering patiently. On January 5, 1887, she was married to John A. Wells; to this union were born four children, all of whom still live except one who died in infancy. She is survived by her aged companion, two sons, L. A. and A. T. Wells; one daughter, Mrs. J. B. Glover; seven grandchildren and one adopted son, Robert Ross; also one sister, Mrs. H. G. Ellington, and one brother, W. W. Perkinson, and a host of other relatives and friends who feel their loss very keenly.

Funeral services were conducted from Harris Chapel church Sunday, March 9, by Rev. J. W. Braxton and Rev. R. A. Hunter, and her body laid to rest in the church cemetery beneath a beautiful mound of flowers to await the resurrection morn.

We have lost our darling mother;
  She has bid us all adieu,
She has gone to live in Heaven
  And her form is lost to view.
Oh, that dear one, how we loved her!
  Oh, how hard to give her up,
But an angel came down for her
  And removed her from our flock.
Farewell, dear mother, sweet thy rest,
  Weary with years and worn with pain;
Farewell, till in some happy place
  We shall behold thy face again.

HER DAUGHTER.

Knight

Mr. George L. Knight's earthly life came to a quiet and peaceful close on Friday afternoon, February 21, 1930, at his home near Hollister, N. C. His death was not a surprise to those of us who had known of his serious illness. He was taken ill with pneumonia on Wednesday and died the following Friday.

Grandpa Knight had lived a useful life for more than 84 years. For a number of years he had been a loyal and faithful member of Lee's Chapel (now Hollister) church. He had always taken a large and active part in the work of the church, maintaining his interest until the time of his death. He will be greatly missed by his family, church and community.

He is survived by his wife who before her marriage was Miss Rosa Mabry, and six children, Mrs. J. C. Hardy and Mrs. W. A. Delbridge, of Norlina, N. C., Mrs. E. N. Perkins, Portsmouth, Va., Mrs. J. W. Shearin, Essex, N. C., Mr. W. E. Knight and Mr. C. R. Knight, Hollister, N. C.; twenty-five grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The funeral services were conducted in his home Sunday afternoon by his pastor, Rev. H. F. Fogleman. His grandsons acted as pallbearers.

The interment was made in the family burying ground near the house. The large congregation and many beautiful floral offerings testified to the high esteem in which he was held by those who knew him.

His grand-daughter,
KATHLEEN SHEARIN.

Glass

On February 14 death entered our community and took from the Woman's Auxiliary of Moriah M. P. Church one of our eldest and most loyal members, Mrs. Sarah Glass, of Greensboro. In her going we have lost a true friend and a faithful member, one who was always interested in the various activities of the church. Whenever and wherever she could lend a helping hand she gladly did it. Remembering the words of the Master, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, ye did it unto me." We feel that our Auxiliary has suffered a great loss, but surely our loss is her eternal gain. Her going has not only brought sorrow to her family, but to the community.

Therefore, be it Resolved, First, that these bereaved friends be meekly submissive to Thy righteous will;

Second, that we extend our deepest and heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved ones and commend them to the Heavenly Father who doeth all things well;

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved children, a copy be placed upon the minutes of the Auxiliary of which she was a member, and a copy be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald and to the Missionary Record.

Respectfully submitted,
MRS. ETHEL SHARPE,
MRS. E. P. SHARPE,
MRS. J. W. MOORE.

Gerringer

Mrs. Mabel Gerringer, wife of Clarence W. Gerringer, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Bennett, on Maple Avenue, April 2, and was buried the following day in Pine Hill cemetery.

The funeral service was conducted at 2 o'clock in the First Methodist Protestant Church of which she was a member. The pastor conducted the service with Rev. S. W. Taylor, D. D., of Greensboro, and Rev. B. B. Bulla, of Burlington, and Mrs. Bulla assisting. The church was completely filled with sorrowing relatives and sympathizing friends.

The large congregation and the many beautiful floral designs bore testimony to the high esteem in which the deceased and her people were held.

Mrs. Gerringer had been in failing health for two years. During her long illness she maintained a cheerful, hopeful attitude. She looked forward to the time when she should be well again and able to be in the church services. Like most people, she clung to life. She was only 24 years of age. But she told her pastor and relatives and friends many times that while she wished so much to get well, yet she was not afraid to go. So she passed away triumphant in the Christian faith.

The husband, father and mother, brothers and sisters, and other sorrowing ones have the prayers and sympathy of the pastor and the church in this time of great sorrow and loss. May your hearts find consolation and strength in the mutual faith of yourself and your loved one who has gone on. For every time of need God's grace is sufficient if we but trust Him.

Sharpe

Whereas, our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call from our midst, February 24th, 1930, and to receive into life everlasting our beloved friend and loyal member, Bro. Julius H. Sharpe; and

Whereas, by his departure his wife and children have lost a loving husband and father, our Auxiliary and church a faithful and ever ready member to lend a helping hand at all times, and our community a true Christian; and

Whereas, it is but fitting to transcribe upon our records a fitting commemoration of those traits of character possessed by our departed friend and member who had endeared himself to all his associates, therefore be it

Resolved, that we, the ladies of Moriah church Auxiliary, do hereby extend to his widow and children our most sincere sympathy in their bereavement; and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, a copy sent to the family, and a copy be sent the M. P. Herald for publication.

MRS. C. F. SCOTT, Sec'y.

Harris

As the angels were gathering to heaven those whose work on earth was finished, they softly entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Hardin on January 11, and bore the gentle spirit of Mrs. Harriet Harris to her eternal home.

"Grandmother Harris," as she was affectionately called by many of her friends, was of a kind, gentle, and unassuming nature. She went quietly about whatever she did, whether it was administering to those less fortunate in a material way, or speaking a word of encouragement to those in trouble, or going quietly about her domestic duties—whatever it was her privilege to do, she did it quietly and cheerfully.

In her younger days she was often seen wending her way with a basket on her arm containing dainty things for the sick, or useful things for the needy. Many litle garments which she had made to lessen the care of the tired and overburdened mothers found their way into many homes. She might fittingly be likened to Dorcas of old.

Mrs. Harris was converted early in life. She was a constant Bible student, having read it through a number of times. She was not only versed in the Bible, but she obeyed its teachings—she lived it.

Since her husband's death, who preceded her some twenty years ago, she made her home with her daughter, Mrs. P. A. Hardin. In this home she was a benediction—gentle, sweet, kind and helpful. She endeared herself to those about her and to know her was to love her.

Scripture verses, marked her and there in here Bible, poems penned, which so often expressed such beautiful thoughts, quotations jotted down on the margin of some book—perhaps these are as if she were still speaking to her loved ones, thus bringing comfort and cheer in the hours of loneliness.

Surely it can be said of her "She hath done what she could." We think of her, not as dead, but as having entered into a broader, deeper life beyond, while her Christian influence still lives in the hearts and lives of her loved ones.

Mrs. Harris was born August 26, 1856, being 73 years and five months of age at her death.

Funeral services were held at her home church, South Fork Friends church, by Rev. H. L. Isley, pastor of Tabernacle Church, assisted by the Revs. J. T. Andrews, and E. B. Harris of the Friends' Church and Rev. A. O. Lindley.

Her body was tenderly laid by that of her husband, William Harris, in the church cemetery to await the resurrection morn.

One Who Loved Her.

Curtis

William Henry Curtis, born March 12th, 1909, died March 9, 1930. From early childhood he had been a member of Moriah M. P. church of which he was a faithful member. He attended Sunday school and church here until he was transferred from Greensboro to High Point and then to Knoxville, Tenn., where he passed away.

He had been in the employment of the Southern Dairies Co. between two and three years, with which he had made rapid progress, being promoted to office manager of the Knoxville plant on Feb. 15th. He was held in very high esteem by his employers and was very popular with all that he came in contact with. He possessed a wonderful personality and made friends where ever he went.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Curtis, three sisters, Mrs. L. V. Kimball, of Winston-Salem; Mrs. LeRoy Parker, of Charlotte, and Mrs. A. G. Whittemore. Two brothers, Roy and Clarence Curtis, all of this place. Funeral services were conducted by J. A. Burgess, assisted by the pastor of Moriah M. P. Church, and the body laid to rest in the Moriah cemetery.

Causey

Miss Angeline Causey was released from the sufferings of this world on March 25, 1930. She was a daughter of Rev. Joseph Causey, one of the pioneer ministers of our Conference who helped to establish the Methodist Protestant Church in North Carolina. Miss Causey was perhaps the oldest Methodist Protestant in North Carolina, having been born October 6, 1836, making her 93 years old. When just a young girl she was converted and united with Tabernacle Methodist Protestant church. The probability is that she had been a member of this church for more than 80 years. Tabernacle church was a sacred place to her, where she had worshiped God so many years. It must have been a happy meeting in heaven when she again met her father and mother, brothers and sisters, who had all passed on.

The funeral service was held at Tabernacle M. P. church by the writer, assisted by Rev. C. W. Bates, and the body was tenderly laid to rest in the nearby cemetery near her parents and other relatives.

H. L. ISLEY.

Coble

"God released her of her pain,
And then she went away."

On March 18, 1930, Mrs. Mary Horney Coble gently fell asleep to wake no more to the beauties and pleasures of this world, but to awake in that beautiful land above which God has prepared for His children. She seemed to realize that she would not recover and told the writer that she was trusting in Jesus and felt that she was saved by the grace of God. Mrs. Coble was born March 24, 1882, making her age almost 48 years.

On December 24, 1911, she was united in marriage to Mr. Vernon Coble, who with five children survive: Clark, Willard, Nellie, Robert, and Arthur; also five brothers, E. T., C. D., J. C., R. R., and W. E. Horney.

Mrs. Coble joined Tabernacle M. P. church early in life. In her passing Tabernacle has lost one of her most consecrated members. She loved her church dearly. She was ever concerned about the spiritual welfare of relatives and friends, and during the present pastorate she responded to every call of the church.

The funeral service was held in Tabernacle church by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. D. Williams and Rev. T. F. McCulloch. Burial took place in the church cemetery. A large concourse of friends gathered for the service, the large auditorium being unable to accommodate the people. There was a profusion of lovely flowers.

Orrell

Uriah Anderson Orrell passed to his reward January 25, 1930, after an earthly pilgrimage of more than three score and ten years. He was born in Forsyth county, North Carolina. Shortly after his birth his father died, and his mother removed the family to Davie county. It was here that the deceased grew to maturity and spent the remainder of his earthly life. In his early manhood he was married to Miss Mary Jane Williams. Her death, five years ago, ended this happy earthly relationship. Five children were born to bless the home, all of whom are living except the eldest, Lena Roberts Orrell, who died a number of years ago. Mrs. D. C. Kurfees, Mrs. W. A. Ellis, Miss Eleanor Orrell, and Arthur, are the surviving daughters and son.

The Orrell home, one of the highly respected in the community, was in the southeastern section of Davie county, near the banks of the Yadkin river, and only a short distance from Elbaville Methodist Protestant church. The deceased early became a member of this church, and continued faithfully and honorably in its communion until his death. He served his church in every capacity, and in his advanced years he took an active part, two years ago, in adding Sunday school rooms to the building. With him, his church came next to his family. He likewise took an active interest in all community matters, being especially interested in the school system of the county. His life was the sort that makes the community a better place in which to live. By the high integrity of his character, his unyielding loyalty to his convictions, and his desire to be helpful to his fellowman, he won the high esteem of all who knew him, both white and black. The negroes of the community loved him, and would often seek his advice. His affection for his family was tender and unfailing.

In the passing of Brother Orrell a good man has gone from us. But in his good life he will continue to live, and those who knew him best will always cherish his memory as a pleasant heritage.

His funeral service was conducted by his pastor, Rev. G. H. Hendry, and was held in the church that he loved so dearly. His body rests in the church burying ground amid the mortal remains of those who had been friends and associates in community and Christian service for more than half a century. His spirit, no doubt, is at home with Jesus and with his loved ones who have preceded him to the "city whose builder and maker is God."

"Soldier of Christ, well done;
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle is fought, the race is run,
And thou art crowned at last."

As his friend, and the friend of his family, I am glad to pay this tribute to this worthy man, and to join a host of friends in assurances of sympathy for those who feel his passing most keenly.

S. W. TAYLOR.

Monnett

Miss Georgia Elizabeth Monnett was born November 19, 1886, and departed this life April 5, 1930. She accepted Christ as her personal Savior many years ago and united with the Julian Methodist Protestant church. Her membership was held at this church until death. Those who knew her best speak of her as being a good woman. For the past several months she was a constant sufferer. We trust that she has received a welcome to that better country where there are no sufferings, sorrow, or pain.

She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Oscar Coble, with whom she made her home, and two nieces and one nephew.

The writer conducted the funeral at Tabernacle M. P. church Sunday afternoon, April 6, 1930. His body was then laid to rest in the church cemetery.

Beam

Thomas Luther Beam, born July 8th, 1877, departed this life March 28, 1930.

He professed faith in Christ and joined the church at this place in early life, and remained a faithful and consistent member until his departure. He took an active and faithful part in the Sunday school and was a regular attendant.

On December 21, 1899, he was united in marriage to Miss Essie Florence Beamguard. To this union were born four children, Walter, Arthur, Mrs. Marvin Beam, Karr Beam.

Tom (as he was known by his friends) was broadminded and a kindly adviser, a very extraordinarily good neighbor, always ready to render service to all who stood in need of a friend and helper.

He had been afflicted for more than two years. Although fully aware of the serious nature of his affliction, he bore it with Christian fortitude. He always had a smile and a word of good cheer for all whom he met.

The funeral service was in charge of the pastor, assisted by Rev. J. M. Morgan.

UNAVOIDABLE ACCIDENTS

To the Editor of The Tribune, Paris, France;

MEETING OF THE FIRST DISTRICT

The First District met in a rally at the Lebanon M. P. Church on Spring Church Charge on the fifth Sunday in March. This rally was probably one of the best attended rallies in this District recently. As chairman I appreciate this hearty co-operation on the part of the pastors and the people. Only one charge was not represented, and no doubt this was due to the distance more than any other cause. Next time if nothing happens we are going to take the rally to them and stay two whole days. So, look out, Creswell! We all like fish, so you need not worry.

Thee presence of Dr. Taylor, the president of the Conference, added much to the success of the day. I am hoping that some of the good things which he said will bear fruit in this District. Others on the program inspired us, as well, and made us more hopeful of a bigger and finer Methodist Protestant Church in this part of this state.

The pastor of Spring Church Charge, Rev. A. D. Shelton, and the people of Lebanon Church and the surrounding community had no little part in making the day a most profitable one. After lunch was served more then 12 basketfuls were gathered up.

The plans are now to meet at the Creswell Church on Creswell Charge the fifth Sunday in June.

J. CLYDE AUMAN, Chairman.

Thinking

Men keep thinking, thinking, thinking,
Through the day and through the year,
Spinning, weaving, knitting garments
They themselves must sometime wear.

Minds that feed themselves on error
Weave themselves a shroud and pall,
Wholly missing life's high purpose,
Like the blighted fruits they fall.

Souls that feed on truth in fulness
Clothe themselves in garments white;
Faces turned to realm celestial,
Soon they'll fly to heaven's light.

Brother Brittain Taken

One of the strongest men in our body of ministers was Rev. Nebula Britton. His physical power seemed superb. Now he lies helpless in the embrace of death and there is widespread sorrow. How he will be missed by those he has been serving who knew his worth! We shall miss him in our meetings of ministers. Why a career so useful should be terminated so soon we cannot divine, but we bow submissively. May the God he believed in and served bring consolation to all made sorrowful by his departure. The following report is taken from the Greensboro Daily News of yesterday.

Rev. Nebula Brittain, 38, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist Protestant Church, died at 5:45 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Clinic Hospital. On Monday of last week he became ill of pleurisy, which was followed by pneumonia.

At 9 o'clock this morning a short service will be conducted at the parsonage. Dr. S. K. Spahr, pastor emeritus of Grace Methodist Protestant Church, and Rev. C. W. Bates, pastor of Calvary Methodist Protestant Church, will officiate. At the close of these rites the funeral party will leave for Weaverville, the home of Rev. Mr. Brittain's parents. The body will remain there until Thursday morning at 11 o'clock; the final rites then will be conducted at Clark's Methodist Protestant chapel, nine miles west of Asheville, by Dr. S. W. Taylor, president of the North Carolina conference, Methodist Protestant Church, and Rev. Edward Suits, of High Point. Interment will be in the church cemetery at Clark's Chapel.

Rev. Mr. Brittain about four years ago came to the pastorate of St. Paul's Church from Roberta following three years as pastor there. He leaves his wife, his parents, who live at Weaverville, three brothers, P. H. Brittain, of Peachland; Verona and Iberea Brittain, of Weaverville; four sisters, Miss Maydalia Brittain, Miss Minerva Brittain, and Mrs. H. R. Woodall, of Weaverville, and Mrs. Elbert Jones, of Clayton. Rev. Mr. Brittain was recognized as a consecrated, effective minister, a fine Christian gentleman and a public spirited citizen. His attractive personality drew many friends to him. His life was recognized as distinctly useful. News of his death evoked many expressions of sorrow.

Neglecting the Essential Things of Life

Those who think of the purpose of life and think deeply come to the conviction that there are certain achievements necessary to the realization of life's high purpose. Many people feel that this is so who never allow themselves to express the conviction in words. The things to be done may seem so great and difficult that the easiest course is the indefinite postponement of the consideration of them. They are relegated to the remote future. There is no express or definite refusal of life's great task, but a habitual disposition to defer serious consideration of it. The result in many a case is the same as if there had been a decisive refusal of life's essential responsibility. While men are busy with the incidental things of life the time passes, opportunities pass, and some day there is the horrible realization that life is gone and its real task left unperformed. Men need to realize the value and importance of that point of time we call NOW. While we are grasping at shadows the substance passes forever beyond our reach. Remember NOW thy Creator. NOW is the accepted time. TODAY is the day of salvation.

Protest of Rabbi Wise

We publish this week a sermon by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, Jewish pastor in New York City, in which he voices vigorous protest against many offenses committed in the name of Christianity. From many of these offenses Jewish people have been grievous sufferers. One is not surprised to hear from members of the Jewish race voices of protest and resentment. Any race, unjustly treated, might be expected to respond similarly. There are other races besides the Jews that have been made to suffer grievously at the hands of men calling themselves Christians. From all these strong protests are to be expected. The outrages inflicted are in themselves sufficient to awaken strong resentment, but when they are inflicted in the name of Christianity they call for protest doubly strong. The crimes of human nature are bad enough, but when they are committed in the name of the holy and loving Christ, they call for severest condemnation.

I would that all that are persecuted and wronged in the name of Christianity could see that Christianity is not to be charged with a single one of the wrongs. Christianity is always and everywhere against all injustice and all wrong of every sort. Are honest men to be condemned for the frauds men perpetrate in the name of honesty? Should really Christian men be condemned for the crimes of those merely calling themselves Christians? Thieves pay tribute to honesty when they put on the appearance of honesty. Criminals calling

THE MEANING OF PENTECOST

Paul, on his journeying to Ephesus, found some people who were trying to lead a Christian life, but whose lives were so dead and utterly useless and had in them so little that was spiritual, that it smote his heart and he said to them: "Have ye received the Holy Ghost, since ye believed?" They opened their eyes in surprise and said: "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." When Paul asked them unto what they had been baptized, they said "Unto the baptism of John." That is, they had repented and were trying to get rid of their sins and do God's will, but without any conscious help from above. Paul told them that they had not as yet touched the rudiments of Christ's life. There was no joy, liberty or blessing. They must have the mighty uplift of the Holy Spirit, the Strength-giver. Under Paul's instruction the Ephesians found it, and their lives were transformed.

Lineal descendants of that Ephesian company are to be found everywhere; their names may even be written down in our church records and they are to be found in our pews Sabbath after Sabbath. Such people say they are trying to live virtuous lives, but it is the life under the law. It is the life of the first mile, not the second. There is no joy in it, no love in it, no abounding life. No greater question could be propounded to you than the question I am now asking—"Have ye received the Holy Spirit since ye believed? Has the Spirit of Christ come to rule in your life? Do you know anything about His power to fortify the soul?"

The Savior was so insistent upon the coming of this power into the lives of men that He told His disciples that they would be of no use in the world until it came. He would not allow them to go to the great tas kwhich He had laid upon them, until they wer eendued with that power. We do well to remember that the climax of the Christian religion is in the coming of the Holy Spirit. At Christmas Christ was born; at Easter He rose from the dead. But the Church itself was born at Pentecost. Even after the Resurrection the disciples were a frightened company. They were trembling behind bolted doors, but after Pentecost how changed! The man who preached on that day, what, in some respects, is the greatest sermon ever preached, was an erstwhile poltroon, liar and blasphemer. He had been frightened almost to death by a serving-girl; but after the Holy Spirit came, he was fitted to preach this greatest of all sermons. With him henceforth there would be no questioning, no doubt, but a going to his death for the love he had for his Lord, as a bridegroom might go to meet his bride. And what was true of him, was true of all the rest. They never abated a jot of heart, or hope, or service, until they paid the price of their devotion on the cross or by the headsman's sword, or went to meet their Lord in winding sheets of flame. If the coming of the Holy Spirit was necessary for the birth of the Church is it not also necessary for its continued life?

There are two words in connection with Pentecost to which I desire to direct attention. The sacred record says: "Cloven tongues like as of fire sat upon each of them." As they waited in that upper room they were there with one accord, all differences were laid aside, all selfishness was forgotten. It was an hour of cleansing and purifying. A new force had entered their lives. We use the word "Enthusiasm." What does it mean? It means God in us! We use the word "zeal" to express our devotion. Where did we get that word, and what does it mean? It is from the Greek word "zeo" meaning to boil. Wouldn't it be a glorious thing for the Church of God today, if it could reach boiling-point in its devotion? At what point does water boil? Well, if at the earth's surface, it boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit, wouldn't it boil at 150 degrees if it were kept there a long time? The answer is: if you kept it there to all eternity you wouldn't develop steam enough to blow a baby's whistle. But when water reaches boiling-point then steam is almost irresistible and will drive a great Mogul engine with a hundred freight cars at a terrific speed across a continent. It is not otherwise when you reach the boiling-point in life. As a matter of material mathematics, you might say that two halves equal one whole; but in spiritual mathematics it doesn't work that way. A thousand half-hearted Christians are no equal for a single whole-hearted one; or, to be more exact, every half-hearted Christian is a liability instead of an asset to the Christian Church. The more she has of them, the worse off she is.

The other word is "power." "Ye shall receive power," said Jesus, "after the Holy Ghost is come upon you." There we have the Greek word "dunamis" from which we get our word "dynamite." You can see the power of God in nature, and the marvel of it grows with every passing hour. Our scientists are telling us that there is force enough in a single atom to overwhelm the greatest city, or to lift the fleet that was sunk at Scapa Flow and put every vessel on the tops of the Trossachs. It is immaterial to God whether He uses that power in nature or in grace. All things are possible through the power of the Holy Spirit. —Charles L. Goodell in Federal Council Bulletin.

IF I WERE A CHRISTIAN

(Abstract of Sermon by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise before the Free Synagogue, Carnegie Hall, New York, N. Y., Sunday Morning, December 22, 1929.)

If it were fitting that I should—and if I were free to—deal with the many problems suggested by my theme, "If I Were a Christian," I would pause to consider certain questions which men face. The first of these is implicit in the substitution of church and ecclesiasticism, of dogma and its compulsions, for what were the faith and teachings of Jesus of Nazareth. Obvious it is that the so-called priestly system was not an exclusively or particularly Jewish vice but is one of the human evils bound up with the government of churches, whether pre-Christian or Christian. Nineteen hundred years after the beginning of the Christian era, a Jew cannot help noting that while Judaism has largely disfranchised itself from the evil, the church, which has grown out of—and away from—the teaching of Jesus, is encumbered by ecclesiastics and ecclesiastism as the Synagogue never was.

If I were a Christian, I could hardly help wonder at the great gulf that has become fixed between such unity and comradeship of the disciples of Jesus as he commended to them and the endless multiplication throughout the centuries of Christian churches and sects and denominations,—much of denominationalism growing up, as the very term implies, around names. If I were a Christian I should grieve—as indeed I do, although a Jew—over the contradiction between the word of him who is called the founder of Christianity, "Love ye one another," and the presence of a military guard at the Church of the Nativity in Bethlehem to keep the priests of different groups of Christendom from slaying one another.

If I were a Christian, I should rejoice in Saint Francis, but I should sorrow over a pact made by the church of St. Francis with Mussolini. If I were a Christian, I should have high pride in Aquinas and Augustine, but I should confess to shame over the immeasurable infamy of Torquemada, in truth of the Torquemadas, big and little, who have been persecutors and destroyers of the brothers of Jesus in the name of Christianity. If I were a Christian, I should pray that the Christian church or churches might supplement the recital of the beatitudes by one clear call for peace, not haggling and chaffering over the instrumentalities of war but moving resistlessly towards the ineffable triumphs of peace. If I were a Christian, I should wish to see my church hospitable rather than hostile to truth; for inhospitality to truth, or even the truth-seeker, is not a token of self-sufficing strength but of self-contemptuous weakness and cowardice.

If I were a Christian, I should give heed to the Jewish problem because the attitude of men to the Jew is always a test of the reality of moral standards and religious claims of civilization itself. For Christianity's sake, I would not have Christendom judged by its attitude toward the Jew,—although in truth there are, happily, multitudes of exceptions to un-Christian attitude.

In many ways, alas, the attitude of Christendom to the Jew may be tested. First, there is the unashamed persecution of Jews in unenlightened or half-enlightened lands, whether that persecution take the form of the numerous clausus in Hungary, of the economic boycott in Poland, or of the student warfare of Christians upon Jews in Roumania. If I were a Christian, as I am a Jew, I should say, "These are the real stigmata of Christ."

If I were a Christian, I should concern myself not only with the obvious brutalities and the unashamed indecencies of attitude on the part of the so-called Christian countries in Central and Eastern Europe, but I should be no less concerned about the silent programs and the bloodless discriminations and the politer but no less fatal proscriptions practiced against the Jews in lands of civilization, things which are not to be controverted because a few favored and, for one reason or another, powerful Jews are or believe themselves to be exempt from the operations of the law of Christlessness as practiced in Christendom. If I were a Christian, I should be ashamed of the cruelty of a myriad thoughts and words and acts of the Christian world which are ruthlessly and devastatingly anti-Jewish, the chiefest outcome of which is to evoke either the self-contempt of the surviving few or the moral destruction of the unresisting many.

If I were a Christian, as I am a Jew, I should feel deeply ashamed of the reaction of much of the so-called Christian world to the anti-Jewish deeds wrought in Palestine some months ago, even though this reaction be abetted or half-justified by the self-betrayal of a few outstanding Jews. The truth is that Christendom for the largest part has given of its sympathy and goodwill to them that have warred against the Jews in Palestine rather than to the Jews who have been warred upon. A terrible anti-Jewish illwill has been revealed by individuals and groups and journals within the Christian world which have borne themselves as if Jews were ruthless invaders and despoilers of Palestine and slayers of its people.

The Jews in Palestine are thereby right and not by sufferance, and yet a most distinguished Christian, Kirby Page, though finding it in his heart to set up a contrast between Jesus and Christianity, writes on Palestine for a number of American journals without one word of citation of the mind of the Jews in Palestine and quotes the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, a discredited and fanatical betrayer of his people, as comparing the coming of the Jews to an invasion of California by the Japanese people. And this is cited by one calling himself a Christian, who assents by his unrebuking silence.

One of the great Christian journals of America—the Christian Century—after years of effort on behalf of international peace through the medium of the Kellogg Peace Pact, does not reveal a scintilla of understanding of or sympathy with the Jews, who, resolved to hurt none and to serve all, are setting forth upon another creative spiritual and ethical adventure as gave to the world the glorious generations from Ezra to Jesus. If I were a Christian, I should ask myself, "Why stands Christendom against the 'Christ people',"—to use Zangwill's term—and why, in the face of all the evidence and facts and moral as well as political rights, does it render judgment on behalf of them that have despoiled and slain and raped, and rendered judgment against them that have been immeasurably wronged? Why?

If I were a Christian, I should answer, "Because Christendom and Christianity seem offtimes to be antinomous terms, because Christendom in its attitude to the Jew,—not universally, for there are many, many noble and glorious exceptions, —bears itself as if it were bound to be free from every iota of the influence of Jesus the Jew, as if Christendom had resolved that in its dealings with the Jew, its business was not to be Christian but un-Christian, even anti-Christian.

ALLIANCE WITH GOD

Divine mind is omnipresent. The mind of God fills all space and is therefore always available. When you think a good thought, you reflect the Infinite Mind from which all good emanates. Spiritual things are spiritually discerned. True wisdom comes from meditation on spiritual ideas. Justice, truth, mercy, love, goodness, and purity are the fruits of the spirit.

The solution of your personal problems is to seek first the Infinite Mind for ideas of truth and righteousness and to use them in your daily life. Divine Mind is always ready to cooperate with you, and to assist you in every right undertaking. Once assured of this direct alliance with God you will tend to do everything with relation to Him.

The highest conception of God is that He is a Being of infinite life, love, goodness, wisdom, and power. The highest conception of man is the image of God, and reflects, in degree, the qualities of his Maker.

As you more fully realize this exalted alliance, you will feel a sense of increased power and responsibility. You will more earnestly seek to do better and bigger things with your God-given abilities. You will have a clearer sense of the significance and possibilities of your life. You will wish to prove worthy of your high calling. You will become more obedient to the divine will. God being all-intelligent knows all about you, knows how to guide, counsel, guard, and protect you. Keep close to God.

EVANGELISM

All Things Through Christ

Concord

April 10, Thursday.—This meeting was called in the interest of the Easter-Pentecost program of evangelism. Rev. N. G. Bethea, chairman of the Conference Committee on Evangelism, was present and in charge of the program. The day was spent in addresses, open discussions, and prayer. About twenty ministers were present, and a few laymen. The meeting was characterized by marked earnestness, and a recognition of the need of an awakened spirit of evangelism in the church. The day, we think, was well spent. Dinner was served by the ladies of the church in the basement of the Sunday School building.

Yarborough

April 10-12.—Our work on this charge began in a business meeting with the Yarborough Chapel congregation Friday night. Saturday was given to some problems confronting the church at this place. On Sunday we were with the Harmony congregation, attending Sunday School at 10 o'clock and preaching at 11. We found the usual faithfulness that characterizes the work at this place. Some who were steadfast in the work when we first knew it 29 years ago, are still unabated in their devotion to the church. It was gratifying, also, to find there a group of young people who are earnest, active, and capable. Twelve dollars was pledged on "Dollar a Member," and seven dollars paid. A committee was appointed by the pastor to continue the effort until the full $44 is raised, if possible. Metal shingles have been purchased and a new roof is to be put on the church at an early date, at a cost of about $150. Most of this money has already been provided. This church has had a long and useful career in this community and is still doing worthwhile work.

In the afternoon we returned to Yarborough Chapel and held the second quarterly conference and preached there at night. Harmony was not represented in the conference, but reports were sent by this church. The general condition of the charge is normal, with, perhaps, some shortage on pastor's salary, as compared with a like period of previous years. Each church has an all-year Sunday school, and each school contributes monthly to the Children's Home. Yarborough has a flourishing C. E. and a society has just been organized at Harmony. This latter church has an active missionary organization. We trust that they may adopt the new order of women's work and organize an Auxiliary. Our opinion is that they would be pleased with the change. Brother E. M. Hipps and Brother N. H. Balentine were nominated delegates to the next annual conference. The charge can't go wrong in the election, as both are interested and earnest workers.

A helpful and pleasing C. E. meeting preceded the preaching service at Yarboroughs. This organization has a large enrollment and is very helpful in the work here. The attendance at the preaching service was gratifying and the attentive reception of our message was all that we could ask. "Dollar a Member" will be pressed here by the pastor, and, we trust, with good response. Ten dollars was paid during our visit. This charge is remotely removed from the other part of the conference, but we have here some of our most loyal Methodist Protestants. Brother and Sister Broom have endeared themselves to the people, and their earnest and wise work is telling with good effect. We enjoyed our visit on this charge, and pastor and people here are grateful . Thanks for their thoughtful concern for our comfort and welfare in every way. Even our car shared in their hospitality.

Please Do This

Next Sunday is Easter. Many churches will hold Easter programs, and of course an offering will be taken for New Century Service. Other churches will not hold the formal Easter program. We ask again that these churches take the offering, as the program was given. Pastor and superintendents, please see that this is done, and urge the people to give as liberally as they can. Send the money to Dr. Brown, and take credit on New Century Service.

And this also: Pray for the special meetings that are now in progress and that are to be held soon. Some of these meetings will culminate with Easter; others will be held in May and June. Let us pray every day—all of us—for the rich blessings of God upon these special efforts in soul-saving. If we stay on our knees enough refreshings from the Lord will surely come.

Abbreviating

We are making our report brief this week because of our absence from home (we are writing from S. Carolina, where the summer breezes are blowing) and because of the pressure of time. In a few minutes we must start on a fifty-mile drive to meet an appointment on the Anderson Charge.

Blessings on every pastor and every church! Amen.

Appointments

April 17.—Meeting with Committee to secure a President for High Point College.

April 27, Sunday.—Pleasant Grove in Centennial Anniversary of the church.

May 4, Sunday.—Mocksville Charge (changed from April 27 because of conflict in dates).

June 1-2, Sunday and Monday.—High Point College Commencement.

June 8, Sunday.—West Forsyth Charge.

June 13, Friday night.—In special program at Concord Church, Saxapahaw Charge.

And with great power gave the Apostles witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, and great grace was upon them all.

Fraternally yours,

S. W. Taylor.

TRUTH WILL ULTIMATELY TRIUMPH

The wild winds of unbelief, like atmospheric storms, will ultimately spend themselves, for the truth has the might of God behind it and must finally prevail. Such is the teaching of both the Divine Revelation and the centuries of human history. Therefore, they who stand for the truth are allied with the Deity and His invincible forces; and though they may be overtaken by temporary defeats, triumphant victors they shall be at last. By these remarks we do not mean to belittle the seriousness of the periodic storms of doubt and infidelity, stirred up by Satan. They effect an infinitely worse wreckage than cyclones and tornadoes because they accomplish their ruin in the domain of the spiritual, the consequences of which are eternal.—Selected.

HELPFULNESS OF THE BIBLE

Spiritual strength is the product of an intelligent and obedient study of the Bible. Wherever in the Christian churches the Bible is honored and thoughtfully taught, there will be spiritual life and evangelistic initiative and power.

Ministers who are thorough expositors of the Bible are real builders of the Christian Church. They preach, not their own surmisings and theorizings, but the clear revelation of the love and power of God through Jesus Christ.

A return to the Bible and to Bible teaching is the foremost need in the churches of America today. The primary mission of the Church is to bring home Scripture truth to the hearts and consciences of all men. To the degree that it fulfils this mission it is a means of regeneration and salvation to mankind.

There is in the Bible a living, energizing, regenerating force not of human origin. "My words," said Jesus, "are spirit and life." The Bible brings us face to face with Him and with the treasures of wisdom and knowledge that are in Him. The Bible is the message of God to the minds and hearts of all men and is inexpressibly profitable, for time and eternity, to all who receive it and obey it.—Don O. Shelton, in "The Bible Today".

—Let him that would move the world first move himself.—Socrates.

CLEMENCEAU ON ALCOHOL

Clemenceau, the great French statesman who recently died, had the following to say in regard to alcohol and it will surprise many who think that, because of the use of wine, there is no alcohol problem in France:

"The indictment against Alcohol has long been drawn. The sentence has been pronounced with such sharpness and such loudness, in all the territories of civilization and of savagery, that there is no need to reopen discussion as to the results of experiences purchased at so dear a cost.

"It is definitely settled that Alcohol, in the quantity in which too many people are in the habit of taking it, is a poison, a poison destructive of human energy, and therefore of society as a whole.

"Alcohol ravages the wage-earning class—the class that absorbs nearly four-fifths of the Alcohol consumed, and in that stratum of society, so responsible for much tuberculosis, criminality, insanity and mortality.

"The State, with all the powerful weapons at its disposal, stands an Indifferent Spectator of an evil, beside which the Great Epidemics of the Past are no more than place incidents in the human drama."

Protest of Rabbi Wise

themselves Christians pay tribute to Christianity but with selfish and unworthy motive. It is unfortunate for the cause of Christianity that wrongs are done in its name. It presents Christianity as a criminal and an enemy instead of a just and loving friend. Undiscriminating persons confound Christianity with the evil thing that appears in the conduct of false professors of Christianity. Many do not go back to the person of Christ to see what Christianity really is, but they judge from the characters of men about them who claim to be Christians and are no more Christians than brass is gold.

What prejudice against Christianity has been awakened by evil men who have assumed Christian names! Jesus had strong words of condemnation for those who cause little ones to stumble. Surely His righteous indignation is against all those who make Christianity an ugly and hurtful thing by their perversion of it for selfish ends.

We would recommend to all who have suffered at the hands of false Christians that they embrace the high privilege of dwelling in the presence of that great exponent of Christianity, Jesus of Nazareth. His thought, His spirit, His life will make a very different impression from that made by sinful men wearing only the outer garments of Christianity.

A survey of the conduct of the so-called Christian nations shows very impressively the need of Christianity. Perhaps no one needs it quite so deeply as the man who calls himself a Christian and is not.

To all the persecuted races we would say: it was not Christianity that caused your troubles but the want of Christianity. In all the centuries of human history men have been persecuting, injuring, and destroying their fellowmen, and it seems that it will continue to be so until Christianity, real Christianity, makes it otherwise.

We are glad to publish Rabbi Wise's sermon abstract, and hope it will enable our readers better to realize the importance of presenting Christianity as its really is. It is a glorious thing to show forth the Christ-spirit in all its power and beauty.

THE TRAGEDY OF POWERLESSNESS

Text—"And I besought thy disciples to cast him out; and they could not."—Luke 9:40.

There is much of the pathetic in every record of human life. There is more of it in the Bible than in other books because no other book is quite so true to human experience.

One of the most touching and significant stories recorded there is the account of the fruitless effort which Jesus made for the people of Jerusalem. It is easy for us to understand the peculiar appeal which Jerusalem made to Japan, for every one has felt peculiarly drawn to some particular spot, some special church. Despite the fact that he was interested in all places where humanity gathered, Jerusalem held a unique place in the Master's mind and heart. The depth of his love for the Holy City found expression in his oft-quoted lament: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wing, and ye would not!" It was this perverseness, this stubborness of the human will ,this "would not" spirit, that broke the heart of Jesus.

Another passage of Scripture, equally brief and significant is found in the ninth chapter of Luke, "and they could not." The words, "would not," imply the power of choice the ability to decide; but the words, "could not," indicate powerlessness. They are applied in this instance, to the disciples of Jesus. An anxious father with a sick child had gone to the disciples to ask their help. His only son suffered from what seemed to be an incurable disease. Every known expedient had been tried and had failed.

Children are always the first concern of parents who are normal in their attitudes and endeavors. People of religious training and conviction cannot be without interest in all children everywhere, but our very have the first place in our thinking and planning, and rightly so. Parenthood creates a point of contact that greatly enlarges influence and intensifies responsibility.

This father had gone to the disciples and besought them to heal his child. He was discouraged and down-hearted. His burden had been heavy enough during all the years in which he had expected some physician to bring relief, and now he had almost lost hope. When he heard of the miraclous work of Jesus and his disciples, how the sick were being healed, the blind given sight, and the lame made to walk and rejoice, hope stirred again within his heart and he hurried to the disciples.

Why he did not go outright to the Master, we do not know. It may have been more convenient for him to see the disciples. They, too, had shared this divine power, for people had been blessed and healed by them. We have no record of this father's interview with the disciples. We only know that he afterwards went to Jesus and said, "I besought thy disciples to cast him (the evil spirit) out; and they could not." They had lost the power they once had.

The loss of spiritual power is the greatest tragedy that can come to any Christian, preacher or layman. It is sad enough never to have had it; it is infinitely sadder to have had it and lost it. Who has not seen the man who once had power with God and men, and lost it? The preacher who preached to others and became himself a castaway? The layman who was the Church's most valuable asset, but became a liaiblity?

How does one lose spiritual power? By failing to keep in touch with the source of it. Dr. Boreham makes this observation on the subject: "Rubenstein used to say that if he stopped practicing for one day, he noticed it in his playing. If he stopped for a week, his intimate friends noticed it. If he stopped for a month, the public noticed it. If you are spiritually indifferent for a day, you are keenly conscious of it. If you are careless for a week your family notices it, and if you continue so for a month, the outside world will feel it."

Suppose this father had failed in his effort to get in touch with Jesus. This story would never have been written. What a privilege it was for the man to go to Jesus himself when the disciples failed him. Jesus has never turned an earnest person away. Men may fail us, but there is always an open approach to the Great Physician. It was he who said, "Whosoever will." I am glad that he said it. Its all-inclusiveness is its beauty and strength. It is a ringing challenge to every man that hears it and the acceptance of it brings healing to every sin-sick soul.

The words of this father, "and they could not," are not only sad; they are tragic. Applied to the Church today, they are enough to bring every Christian to his knees. This sick child is typical of the world about us, unregenerate humanity powerless in the grip of evil influences. The Church is the world's only hope. You and I are the Church. If unsaved people, sick with sin, come to us for help, what can we do for them? Are you close enough to the source of power to reveal it to others? Can you through prayer lead another to Jesus Christ? How close do you keep to him who said, "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth?" God speed the day when there shall be removed from the Church the stigma of the words, "and they could not!"—E. W. Potter, St. Joseph, Missouri.

A REPROVER OF SIN

The Holy Spirit tells a man of his faults in order to lead him to a better life. In John 16:8 we read: "He is to reprove the world of sin." There is a class of people who don't like this part of the Spirit's work. Do you know why? Because He convicts them of sin; they don't like that. What they want is someone to speak comforting words and make everything pleasant; keep everything all quiet; tell them there is peace when there is war; tell them it is light when it is dark; tell them everything is growing better; that the world is getting on amazingly in goodness—that is the kind of preaching they are seeking for. That suits human nature, for it is full of pride. Men will strut around and say, "Yes, I believe that; the world is improving; I am a good deal better than my father was; my father was too strict; he was Puritanical. Oh, we are getting on; we are more liberal; my father wouldn't think of going out riding on Sunday, but we will; we will trample the laws of God under our feet; we are better than our fathers."

Just wait till you bring the Word of God to bear upon them, and the Spirit drives it home, then men will say, "I don't like that kind of preaching; I will never go to hear that man again." The Spirit of God convicts men of sin. Do not blame the preacher for it, but the Holy Ghost.—Dwight L. Moody.

—Give not thy tongue too great a liberty, lest it take thee prisoner. A word unspoken is like the sword in the scabbard, thine; if vented, thy sword is in another's hand. If thou desire to be held wise, be so wise as to hold thy tongue.—Quarles.

THE TIMBER WOLF

"Have you heard about the big wolf that has been scaring people in the neighborhood?" Janet Henders asked her Cousin Dick. He had only arrived the previous evening on a visit to his uncle's farm in the northern part of Ontario.

"No. Have you really got wolves near you?" Dick laid down the roll of aeril wire he was carrying and gazed at Janet. He had lived most of his life in the city and this was his first trip to the northlands. "Say! But that's great! I hope the big wolf comes this way!"

"Well, I don't!" declared Janet. "I would be afraid of him. He takes any animal or chicken he can get hold of, and I think he would take a person, too. No, indeed! We don't want him around our place!"

"I'd shoot him!" affirmed Dick. "I know how to handle a gun, and Uncle Alex's rifle is handy. I saw it hanging on the kitchen wall."

"A timber wolf won't stand in full view to be shot at," scoffed Janet. "He skulks around and hides under cover until he can make a spring. You'd never get a chance at him."

"Well, perhaps not!" Dick was not conversant with the ways of timber wolves. "But I'd better not waste any more time talking or this radio won't be ready for Uncle Alex to listen in tonight when he comes home."

Dick had brought with him from the city a radio set and was now busy erecting the antennae. He wanted to have it all in readiness to surprise his uncle on his return from the nearby town.

"What time do you think Uncle Alex will be back?" Dick inquired.

"It will be after dark before he comes. But, of course, there is moonlight, so it won't be really dark. The moon is nearly full now."

"How would it do to get everything ready and then put the loud speaker at the open window?" queried Dick. "Then when Uncle Alex gets near the house he will hear music and people talking and he'll wonder where it is all coming from."

Janet nodded happily. It was great fun having this surprise for her father. Dick had brought the radio set as a present for Mr. Henders, and the latter was not aware he had it with him.

Dick and Janet worked away. Janet did not know anything about radio, but she was willing to do as she was told, and with her help they made fine headway. By the time the sun had gone down the aerial was up; the lead-in and ground wire connected with the set; and when Dick turned the dials a flood of melody floated out on the air, charming his aunt and cousin.

"Now, we'll put the loud speaker at the window," said Dick. "Uncle Alex will hear the music as soon as he turns into the lane."

"Won't he be surprised? He'll never guess what it is!" Janet clapped her hands. "Let's go outside, Dick, and see how far away he can hear it."

"Oh! Isn't it fine! We can hear it clearly, can't we?" exclaimed Janet.

"Yes. It is all right! The night is very quiet still and sounds carry a long way. Besides, there aren't any noises here like there are in the city. No street cars nor motor cars honking, and one can hear better on that account."

"I think it is wonderful! Father will be delighted!" Janet danced on tiptoe as she and Dick returned to the house.

"Will we leave the radio turned on?" Dick asked as they went inside and shut the door.

"Yes. We might as well, for father may possibly get through his business quicker than he expected, and we must be sure to have him hear it, as he comes along up the lane."

The loud speaker rested on the broad window sill, and every few minutes Janet and Dick went to the window to look out, hoping to see Mr. Henders returning. The moon rose in an uncloudy sky, and outlined clearly various objects in the yard. An open space, used on wash day for drying clothes, was directly in front of the window, and Janet made a laughing suggestion that it could be utilized, when summer came and the weather was warm, as a concert hall.

"We could invite all our neighbors, and they could sit on chairs out there in the yard," she explained to Dick. "The loud speaker in the window would give them a splendid concert. It would be almost as good as hearing it in the city."

"A capital idea!" Dick walked over to the window to visualize the scene. But instead of the imaginary audience, arranged row after row facing the radio horn, their faces alight with interest, he saw something which caused him to stand stock still, spell-bound.

After a moment's silence he tiptoed away from the window, finger on lips, eyes gleaming with excitement.

"What is the matter, Dick?" Janet inquired, seeing his expression.

"Hush! Don't talk!" The boy made for the kitchen and Janet followed him.

"Quick! Uncle Alex's rifle! Where are the cartridges." Dick took down the gun.

"What do you want it for?"

"To shoot the timber wolf that has been bothering the farmers lately stealing their stock," Dick replied.

"But you surely don't intend going out hunting for him, do you?" Janet was agast at the thought.

"No. He is right here waiting for me."

"Don't joke about it," Janet shuddered. "I am afraid of him, and would be frightened if I thought he was around our place."

"Look out of the window where the loud speaker is, but very carefully so you won't make a noise," said Dick.

Janet walked softly through the door and across the room. Then she drew her breath quickly. Out in the yard, plainly visible in the moonlight, stood a large timber wolf. He was motionless, with head cocked slightly to one side, apparently listening to the sounds of music that proceeded from the horn. His lean, gaunt body struck terror to Janet's heart. In the sparsely settled northlands children heard tales of pioneer days that made them look on wolves and bears with fear. But it was seldom, during Janet's life time, that any of the wild animals had come right to the door in this fashion.

Dick approached quietly, and Janet nodded the words as she did not dare speak less she startle the intruder away. Taking sight carefully, Dick pulled the trigger of the gun.

Scarcely had the echoes died away when their ears caught the sound of a horse's hoofbeats in the lane, and a moment later, Mr. Henders, his face pale, rushed into the yard.

"What is wrong?" he cried. "I heard a shot."

"Oh, father!" said Janet. "It was the timber wolf and Dick has shot him! And he was listening to the radio!"

"Radio and timber wolf!" Mr. Henders was puzzled. It was not until he had examined the fallen figure and pronounced the animal dead that explanations were forthcoming.

Janet told how Dick's father had sent the radio for a present to his brother and how Dick had fixed it up so as to surprise him on his return home.

"Then Dick saw the wolf and he took your gun and shot him," Janet concluded.

"Well, well! The neighbors will be glad to know that the beast will not bother them any more. It must have been the music that attracted him. 'Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast,' is a saying I have heard. So it must have been something like that, or else just plain curiosity, that brought him to listen. It is the first time I ever heard of a wolf being caught by radio!" Mr. Henders turned to Dick. "Your surprise worked better than you planned. The next time we have a wolf in our neighborhood we will give an open air concert for a bait."—Belle Burns in Junior World.

THE DREAM GIFT

Little Brother sat in the library reading a book about the strange brothers and sisters that we have in other lands. But sometimes his mind wandered from his reading to thinking of the lovely new pencil case that his father was to bring him when he came home that day.

Little Brother must have fallen asleep as he sat on the library couch, for such a queer thing happened. The door was pushed gently open and in walked the strangest boy. He wore a loose gown and had a real fez cap on his head. He spoke to Little Brother, and Little Brother spoke to him; but the boys could not understand each other.

Little Brother knew that the boy had come from Morocco, Africa, because his picture was in the book. He handed Little Brother a beautiful leather pencil case. For the nicest leather in the world comes from Africa. Then the boy sat down on the couch; and although the two boys could not understand one another, they smiled, for they could understand that.

Then it was but a minute until there came another little visitor. Little Brother recognized him, too. He was a dark-skinned Indian lad from South America; and he smiled and gave Little Brother a nice, big rubber eraser. The rubber had come from the rubber trees of his native country. Then he sat down to wait.

Again the door opened, and this time two children entered. They were both white children. One was a boy from far-away Australia, and the other was a little girl from Europe. And together they had brought Little Brother a knife. The girl's father had a knife factory where the finest steel knife blades in the world are made. But it takes more than just the blade to make a nice jacknife. It takes a handle, too. And this is what the Australian boy had given toward the making of a knife. His father was a diver, and from the shells of oysters that his father had gotten at the bottom of the sea a beautiful pearl handle had been fashioned for the knife.

Little Brother thanked the children with a smile, and then there came a boy from his own dear country North America. He handed Little Brother a pencil that had been made from wood and lead taken from the forests and mines here at home.

Little Brother put his pencil and eraser and jacknife into his leather pencil case. Just then another child came into the the room. This was a little girl dressed in a baggy gown with a veil over her face. She had come from far Asia and she brought Little Brother a lovely paint brush made from the hair of the camels in her country.

How thankful Little Brother was for all these gifts! He sat on the library couch with these queer children from far-away lands. And they all looked at one another very shyly and smiled.

Then bang! the door had opened and closed very suddenly and Little Brother's father stood in the room. He had been fast asleep and all these children from other lands had been only dream children.

Little Brother's father brought the boy a lovely pencil case filled with things just like his dream. He told his father about the dear children, and they both thought that the pencil case was ever so much more interesting now that they knew where it really came from. For he saw that the brothers and sisters of other lands were all necessary to help with even so small a thing as a pencilholder and what it contained. So he knew that truly he was a little brother to the big world; and his smile had been smiled back at him by the children of the world, because "a smile is the same in all languages."—Presbyterian Banner.

Without the Way, there is no Going.
Without the Truth, there is no Knowing.
Without the Life, there is no Living.
Without the Gift, there is no Giving.

Without the Hope, there is no Hoping.
Without the Faith, there is but Groping.
Without the Love, all love Defying.
Without the Death, all dead, all dying.

Without the Christ, how dark my way would be.
Without Jesus, how could His Truth make free?
Without Saviour, my Life redeemed for me,
Without God's Gift, The Christ of Calvary!

PREACHING TO PLEASE

The Rev. Joseph G. Chrysostom aimed to please.

So he stopped preaching sermons on social questions because Deacon Brown thought they were too secular.

And he ceased to preach sermons of Bible exposition because Deacon Jones considered that they were Sunday-schooly.

And he quit preaching devotional sermons because Mrs. Robinson held that they were not interesting to young people.

And he abandoned his plan to preach a series of sermons because Miss Smith wanted more variety.

And he gave up his evangelistic sermons because Professor Green regarded them as too personal.

And he decided not to preach any more sermons on ethical themes because Dr. Clapp asserted that they were not religious enough.

And finally he concluded not to preach any more sermons of any sort—because a committee of his church asked him to resign.—Amos R. Wells in C. E. World.

Suggestions to the Leader

Since this is one of the most important meetings in the year, you should give this meeting much time and thought. Music and prayer should be the main features of the meeting—praise and thanks to God. Let your music committee be in charge of the music for this meeting.

It would be well to have someone quote the lines from Whittier quoted further on.

These are appropriate hymns for the service: "I Know That My Redeetmer Liveth," "Lead, Kindly Light," "Whispering Hope," "Beautiful Isle," "Sweet Bye and Bye."

Leader's Lines

The question of immortality is indeed an old one. It was propounded long before Job asked, "If a man die, shall he live again?" Wise men have dared to guess about this question of such vital importance. We know, however, that many of the ideas which have been set up are not in accordance with our own—but all seem to have a hope—a faith. We must have a faith based on a sound base. If we have this hope it can only emerge unhurt. The spirit cannot die. Let us consider the reasons why we shall liver forever. We all have some idea of immortality and let us express ourselves as to this hope which springs up in us.

Choose your questions from these:

1. What is the good effect of mystery in religion?
2. Discuss the reasonableness of immortality.
3. What do you think is the best proof of the eternal life?
4. What of Jesus' words on the resurrection?
5. Why are those who believe usually more happy than those who do not?
6. How may we prepare for eternal life?

Quotations

Shall man alone, for whom all else revives
No resurrection know? Shall man alone,
Imperial man! be sown in barren ground,
Less privileged than grain on which he feeds?
—Young, in "Night Thoughts."

Through the clear silence of the moonless dark,
Leaving no footprints on the road it trod,
Straight as an arrow cleaving to its mark,
The soul went home to God.
"Alas," they cried, "he never saw the morn,
But fell asleep outwearied with the strife."
Nay, rather he arose, and met the dawn
Of everlasting life."
—Christian Burke.

One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break,
Never dreamed, though right was worsted,
wrong would triumph,
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.
—Browning, Epilogue to Asolanda.

I know not what the future hath
Of marvel and surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies;
And so beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from Him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.
I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air,
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond His love and care.
And Thou, O Lord, by whom are seen
Thy creatures as they be,
Forgive if too close I lean
My human heart on Thee.
—Whittier.

NEWS FROM HIGH POINT COLLEGE

From all the happenings around the college for the past week, spring is a very busy time for college students.

On Thursday night Professor Stimson presented four of the students of the Music Department in another very delightful Students' Recital. Vocal numbers were given by Misses Kathleen Teague and Edna Nicholson and Mr. Arthur Fidler. Miss Elouise Beam gave several piano selections.

On Friday we were very busy keeping up with the four contests which we had with other colleges. Of course, we can't win all the time, but we took our part of these four contests. Friday afternoon we were defeated in baseball by Elon College, 13-7. This was our first real baseball game we have had this season with another college. We expect our team to do better the next time, however.

Friday night we had encounters with Elon, Appalachian State Teachers' School and an oratorical contest. Our affirmative debating team, composed of Fred Pegg and Clay Madison, defeated Appalachian at Elon. Ralph Mulligan and David Plummer, upholding the negative side for High Point College, defeated Elon at Appalachian. Appalachian defeated Elon here at High Point. This was the triangular debate, and we are very proud of our teams winning both sides. I suppose there were enough victories for one day, because we lost in the Girls' Oratorical Contest which was being held at Catawba at the same time. Grace Barnett represented High Point College in this contest.

On Saturday evening the climax of the social events of the school year was reached when the Junior-Senior banquet took place in the dining hall. This banquet has been looked forward to for some time: by the Juniors as being a lot of hard work, and yet something they were glad to do; by the Seniors as the one banquet of their four years at college that they didn't have to work for. It was a great success. The tables were decorated in blue and white, the Senior Class colors. The modernistic idea was carried out in the decorations, favors, etc. Mr. Clyde Pugh, president of the Junior class, acted as toastmaster. Toasts and responses were given by Ruth Woodcock, Mary Beth Warlick, Dean Lindley, Professor Hinshaw, Ralph Mulligan, president of the Senior class ,and the mascots of the two classes, Stanwood Kennett, son of Prof. P. S. Kennett, and Bobby Allred, son of Prof. J. H. Allred.

This week most of us are looking forward to the Easter holidays which begin on Thursday, but before that time there is a lot going to happen. Monday night our affirmative debating team will meet probably the strongest opposition they will meet this season when they encounter Northwestern University here. North western has been touring the South, debating some of the strongest debating teams. Our team has to fight hard to win, but we are sure that they will do as they have done in all debates this season, come out victorious.

Wednesday night another page of history will be written in the history of the girls' literary societies of High Point College. It is the annual Inter-Society Debate for the Mary E. Young Loving Cup. This cup has been won by the Artemesian Literary Society for two years and by the Nikanthan Society one year. So far, no one has won the cup to keep because it must be won three years in succession to go into the possession of a society for always. This year is not a deciding year as to who shall keep the cup, but this does not lessen the competition any. The query to be debated is Resolved, that the constitution be so amended as to allow Congress to pass laws regulating child labor. The affirmative side of this question is upheld by Eleanor Young and Rosalie Andrews of the Artemesian Literary Society, and the negative side by Nettie Stuart and Lucy Nunnery of the Nikanthan Society. The marshals are: Chief, Eva Ellis, Kalopia Antonakos and Helen Osborne from the Artemesian Society, and Louise Jennings and Mrs. Morton from the Nikanthan Society.

We wish each and every one a very happy Easter.

ARTEMESIAN LITERARY SOCIETY.

P. S.: As we predicted, our debating team came out victorious last night against Northwestern.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS FIELD SERVICE

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

The presbytery also unanimously approved the merger of Queens College, of Charlotte, and Chicora College, of South Carolina, into Queens Chicora College, to be located at Charlotte.

—Fire recently gutted the interior of Moore-Hornady wholesale grocery store, inflicting loss estimated at several thousand dollars. The blaze was discovered about 11:30 o'clock by E. W. Fuller. Night Policeman A. A. Coble shot his pistol and rang a church bell to awaken the populace. This done, the fire hose was brought out and in about 30 minutes the flames were subdued. Considerable damage was done the grocery stock by water. The origin of the blaze is undetermined.—Liberty happening.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Good citizenship does not mean just one thing, but consists of many different things. First of these many things is fire. Fire is a good servant, but a bad master. As everyone knows, one of the most important things about fire is that it keeps us warm. It protects us from cold winter days. But still there are other things which make us hate it. Many beautiful homes are destroyed by fire. To be good citizens, we must try to prevent fires; so we have the fire department and the fire engines. But have you ever thought of a fire boat? In the large seaport towns we have fire boats. At night when the gong sounds, the firemen awake and hurry for the pole, which they slide down; and in a very few minutes the trucks are at the fire, ready for service. All good citizens must try to help prevent fires; also, help the fire department. There are always a number of ways we can help prevent fire.

The next thing of great importance is the police department. What would become of this great world of today if there were no policemen? The policemen have a very hard time. They often have to work all night. Who would help the children, going to school, across the streets if it were not for the good policemen? Who would do the detective work in our big cities. We must all try our best to be good citizens and help the police.

Heealth! Every good citizen wants good health. Can we have good health and live in a city that is not kept clean? "No" is the answer, of course. We must keep our homes and yards clean.

Everyone should try to prevent diseases. We can do this by having the children vaccinated and by keping them away from people who have bad diseases.

Everyone should know the duties of a good citizen, and in order to know them, you should read the book in our library entitled "Good Citizenship," by Hutum.

THE RAINBOW GARDEN

The glorious rainbow up so high
Is a garden of flowers in the sky.

The blue is larkspur and forget-me-not,
And the purple is violets Spring forgot.

The yellow is sunflowers straight, bright, and tall,
The pink is the hollyhocks that grow by my garden wall.

The green is very restful and cool;
The orange like the geldfish in our lily pool.

The red is the blushing roses which stand
On the very edge of rainbow land.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Orange Charge.—The second quarterly conference will meet at Hebron church Saturday, April 26th, at 2 P. M.

Candidates for delegate to be nominated at this conference. B. M. WILLIAMS.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Our pastor, Rev. J. C. Russell, brought us two very interesting and helpful sermons yesterday. We all enjoy the special music he plays for us. We are hoping to see a large crowd out Wednesday evening to hear Dr. S. W. Taylor. We are getting along nicely with the Easter program, but sorry some of the children who would like to help cannot on account of whooping-cough. We were glad to learn yesterday that Mr. Tracy Burton is to preach for us again on the fourth Sunday morning. We are glad Mrs. Hattie Poole, a good neighbor and a friend to Liberty Hill church, is at home after an operation. We hope she will soon be up and enjoying good health.

We are sorry to hear that Miss Kate McClimon, another good friend, neighbor, and teacher of some of our children, is in the Chick Springs Sanitarium. We pray that she may be strong enough to stand the operation and soon be back in good health.

Gibsonville Church.—Gibsonville church has had 15 of her young people to attend the Leadership Training Schools which have been held in the surrounding cities, and most of them received credit in the courses . Those who attended the school at Graham are Miss Georgie Clapp, Mary S. Shaw, Esquido Yow, Clara Fawcett, Orpha Burgess, Mrs. Carl Allen, Mr. D. M. Davidson, and Mr. F. R. Owen.

Those attending the school at Burlington were Mrs. F. R. Owen, Mrs. K. J. Williams, Misses Lessie and Lena Foucett, and Mr. Harmon Raldolph.

The Chrisian Endeavorers are planning a union sunrise meeting to be held next Sunday morning.

"Southern Cinderella" will be given in the High School auditorium on Friday evening of this week. It is under the auspices of the Ladies' Missionary Society. The admission will be 15 cents and 25 cents. Everybody is invited to come and spend an hour of real amusement.

The evangelistic services will begin the first Sunday in next month. REPORTER.

Salem, Saxapahaw Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Our young but efficient superintendent, Mr. T. R. Crawford, is doing his best in this work, but we all know he can't have a Sunday school by himself; so come on, members, let's put our shoulders to the wheel and help push the work along.

The work on the Sunday school room has been completed and we are planning to plant flowers around the church and grounds some time soon.

The Intermediate class of our school gave a box party some time ago. The proceeds amounted to $16.06, which is to be used to buy steps for the church.

Our pastor, Rev. T. J. Whitehead, filled his appointment Sunday at 11 o'clock. We were sorry more of the church members were not present to hear this splendid sermon. The congregation was small, but perhaps the ones who were not present were justified in staying away. But we feel sure some could have been present who were not. We hope that the ones who were absent will hear of the good messages brought us and will be present for the next service. For we have a pastor who is giving us his best.

Rev. G. W. Holmes will preach on Sunday morning, April 20th, at 11 o'clock. We are glad to have him with us, knowing he will bring us a worth-while message. He was our pastor for a number of years and we know what to expect from him.

Second quarterly conference will meet at Salem church on Saturday afternoon, April 19th, at 2 o'clock. All members are urged to be present.

We are sorry to report that Mrs. Bertha Tapp is in Rainey's Hospital for an operation. We hope she will soon be well again.

Best wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Shiloh.—The S. S. roll has reached 345. Attendance on April 13 was 282. Hope to reach 400 on roll before many weeks.

Everyone is very cordially invited to attend the Easter service to be held Easter Sunday night at 7:30.

Sunday morning, April 6, our pastor gave us a very helpful sermon on "Witnessing for Jesus." Bro. Troxler is wonderfully leading us on the upward way.

We are sorry to report that some of our members are sick. Mrs. Avery Beck is in Davidson Hospital, having undergone a serious operation on Friday. We hope for her a speedy recovery, and ask our Father's blessing on her family during her absence.

Florence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Berrier, is rapidly recovering from her appendicitis operation and was able to be at S. S. Sunday for the first time since her attack in last month. Glad to see you back, Florence.

Glad to hear that Mr. Jule Byerly is much better after having been confined to his home by illness. Hope to see him back in S. S. soon.

The whole S. S. was delighted to have with us on the fifth Sunday Rev. Joe Roach, who so ably taught the review lesson for us. Brother Roach is a school-teacher and also a Baptist preacher; but we thank God that the day has come when Methodists and Baptists and all denominations walk the Glory Road side by side and know the fellowship of serving the same Christ together. Come again, Bro. Joe. MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Cleveland Charge.—I will make a report of the Twelfth District Rally, which was held the fifth Sunday in March. It was indeed a pleasure to meet with Bro. Henderson and his good people in their beautiful new church at Bess Chapel. Despite the fact that a funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, the program was pronounced one of the most helpful we have had.

The people at Bess Chapel seemed to appreciate the Rally and we feel indebted to them for their entertainmnt and their hospitality. Space will not permit me to mention all the good things brought to us at this meeting. One thing worthy of note was the strong appeal of Rev. J. M. Morgan to support High Point College. I only wish more of our Methodist Protestants in our state could have heard this fine address.

Of course we were all delighted to have Dr. Dixon with us and to hear him preach again. He stirred our souls with his message on "Evangelism." Then at the Sunday evening service we were again favored with a sermon to the young people by Bro. Lowdermilk on the very appropriate subject of "Living for Christ."

He also made a strong appeal for the support of our denominational church papers in his message on Saturday afternoon. Perhaps every charge in the District was represented at the meetings and the co-operation upon the part of the speakers accounts for the success of the Rally.

As for our work here on Cleveland Charge, will say that so far as I have learned, things are moving along about normal. We are not accustomed here in the country to holding revivals in the spring months. But we are planning to hold ours in the summer and early fall. We are going to take a special Easter offering at all of our churches. We are planning a decision service at Oak Grove church Easter Sunday night, April 20. At this service we will also receive any who may wish to join the church.

Our second quarterly conference will be held at Kitsler's Church on Saturday before the fourth Sunday in April. There will be preaching at 11 o'clock. Dinner on the grounds and the conference will be held in the afternoon. Official members, take notice and please be present. C. E. RIDGE.

Center Church, Alamance Charge.—Center church has sustained two great losses in the death of Walter Lane and Mrs. Della Mann Richardson. Bro. Lane was a comparatively young man. He was an active man in the community, the church and Junior lodge. He leaves a wife and seven children. We have in his death a loss difficult to calculate, but surely God will bring good out of it.

During my ministry I have met but few women who possessed as fine a Christian spirit as that of Mrs. Richardson. She was 74 years old. She leaves behind her husband, A. J. Richardson, three daughters, four sons, two sisters, and three brothers. She lived well, and so her death was a triumph. In the funeral service the writer was assisted by Revs. G. W. Holmes, W. M. Pike, A. O. Lindley and Talton Whitehead.

In the funeral service of Bro. Lane the writer was assisted by Revs. Lindley and Whitehead.

The bodies were laid to rest in Center cemetery. J. A. BURGESS.

St. Paul, Greensboro.—Our Easter service will be next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Rev. W. F. Ashburn preached for us yesterday at the 11 o'clock service and also at night. Most of us know Bro. Ashburn, as he has preached for us before, and we are always glad to have him come.

We are real sorry to say that our pastor, Rev. N. Brittain, is very sick with pneumonia. He was taken last Monday, April 7th. We ask your prayers that he may soon be restored to health again. Mrs. Brittain has also been sick, but is able to be up again.

The Ladies' Aid held their April meeting Saturday night with Mrs. R. C. Lineberry. A committee was appointed at this meeting to get a refrigerator for the parsonage and also a linoleum rug for the dining room.

The mumps and whooping-cough have kept quite a number of our children away from Sunday school.

The Royal Blue class will hold their class meeting Thursday night of next week, if nothing prevents.

Miss Jessie Cline, of Hickory, is visiting her sister, Mrs. N. Brittain.

MRS. J. S. WADE, Reporter.

Weaverville.—We are liking our work here just fine. The folks have been very nice to us, and seem to appreciate having us to labor with them. We appreciate so much the increased interest and attendance at the church services. I preached at Clark's Chapel yesterday morning to a large audience and at the Weaverville church for the evening service. We had very good attendance for this service. We have organized a Christian Endeavor Society at this church. Am very well pleased with same. Our young people seem to be so interested and are willing to take part. I suppose there were about 20 or 25 present last evening. We have a group of dependable young people. They attend every service of their church. They are just as faithful to attend the mid-week service as they are the Sunday school or Endeavor meetings. We also have a very good Auxiliary started. We recently organized, and they held their first meeting with Mrs. Fred Edwards at her home in Asheville. The Auxiliary of the Asheville church was present and put on a very interesting pageant which was very much enjoyed by all present. At the conclusion of the program Mrs. Edwards served a course of refreshments which was also enjoyed.

We have received one new member in our Weaverville church, Brother J. A. Thompson, a ministerial student at Weaverville College. We were glad to have him unite with us. We find him to be quite useful; have had him to preach for us. He is also our C. E. president. We would appreciate receiving more like him.

We will appreciate an interest in the prayers of all readers of the Herald.

T. E. PIERCE, Pastor.

Spring Hill, North Davidson Charge.—Spring causes plants to take on new life; the same is true with Sunday school. Today there were 131 present, an increase over the previous Sundays. The Sunday school is planning an Easter program to be given Easter Sunday night.

Bro. Powell will fill his appointment next Sunday at 11 o'clock. The remainder of the year there will be only one 11 o'clock service a month; the other will be some night.

A few Sundays ago Bro. Powell received Mrs. Sammy York into the church by letter.

About a month ago Rev. T. J. Whitehead, our former pastor, addressed the Hasty School Parent-Teacher Association. His talk was thoroughly enjoyed by all present, and especially the Spring Hill people.

On Saturday, April 12, Miss Glennie Craven and Mr. Roy Collett motored to Danville, Va., and were united in marriage. Since both are members of Spring Hill church we expect to have them with us continually. We wish them a long and joyous life.

By making aprons and pillow-cases during the winter the Ladies' Aid has raised $86.48. With this they expect to help seat the church.

REPORTER.

Eden, Halifax.—We will not have our Easter service in our Sunday school as our superintendent, Mr. Hardee, and several others will attend the Knights Templar service in Enfield. We will have Sunday school at 10:30 and preaching service at 3 p. m. Our congregation was small on the first Sunday on account of the heavy rain.

The appearance of our church and grounds has been greatly improved by the erection of an iron fence around the burial ground. The fence is substantial. The pickets are 1 x 1 inch, and the steel posts are set in concrete bases. We are sorry no more land was available; however, the enclosure is 108 x 170 feet. We are especially grateful to Mr. I. D. Wood, of Enfield, Mr. S. P. Wood, of Selma, and Mr. I. T. Wood, of Marion, S. C., for their most generous contributions for this purpose. The entire enclosure is being cleaned off. Several new tombstones have been put up recently.

The Woman's Auxiliary held its regular monthly meeting with Mrs. S. A. Whitley, Mrs. T. Sexton and Miss Mildred Sexton, joint hostesses. The list of officers was completed at this meeting. Mrs. Z. A. Hardee was elected delegate to the Branch Meeting. The budget pledge was fixed. A check for $25.00 was sent to Miss Laura Braswell at the Children's Home as a graduation present. Plans were made for our annual barbecue dinner at Bellamy's Mill, Easter.

A Junior Auxiliary has been organized recently. Miss Winnie Burt is their leader, so it behooves us older ones to be up and doing.

We had a hundred per cent. attendance at Sunday school last Sunday. We hope to keep this up and also increase our membership.

We have no serious sickness or deaths to report at this time.

REPORTER.

Asheville.—Our pastor is this evening concluding a series of sermons from the direct sayings of our Master. Each of the series has been most helpful.

This is to be a very full week. Tonight begins our pre-Easter services each evening this week at 7:45. Monday evening at 8:30, immediately following the sermon will be the monthly meeting of the Girls' Auxiliary at the home of Miss Elsie Drake on Magnolia Avenue. Wednesday evening at 6:30 will be supper—our third church night. These get-together meetings have been very pleasant and profitable. Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock the Woman's Auxiliary will meet at home of Mrs. C. E. Fawcett, 19 Rosewood Avenue, and our president, Mrs. Ralph Beacham, expects a full attendance. Friday afternoon at 2:30 Miss Verda McIntire, who has charge of the Primary Department, has invited the mothers to meet with the children of the Sunday school and drive out to Biltmore Pines to the home of Mrs. J. A. McIntire and enjoy an Easter-egg hunt. The children are eager for the day to come. Miss McIntire seems to enjoy the various parties with the children of her department. Friday evening at 8:30 immediately following the service the Christian Endeavor business meeting will be held.

I believe you agree with me this is our busy week.

Mrs. F. W. Paschall returned home Tuesday from a visit to her parents at Whitakers. She was called home on account of the illness of an aunt.

Last Thursday afternoon our Auxiliary members had the pleasure of meeting at the home of Mrs. Edwards on Melrose Avenue and having charge of the devotional and program at the meeting of the Weaverville Auxiliary. A large membership from each Auxiliary was present. Rev. Homer Casto, of Bethel Home, and Rev. and Mrs. Pierce, the pastor at Weaverville were present. Mrs. Tilson, of Weaverville, gave us a solo which was appreciated and enjoyed. Miss Novella McIntire accompanied her at the piano.

Rev. F. W. Paschall, of our Auxiliary, was also present.

Next Tuesday our pastor and wife, and Mrs. Ralph Beacham, our president, will leave for Burlington to attend Branch Meeting.

Miss Mildred Younginer has just returned from a three weeks' visit with friend in St. Augustine, Fla. She visited many places of interest at various places, including Silver Springs.

Hope, Chatham Charge.—Rev. A. O. Lindley Sunday at 11 o'clock brought us a good sermon. Text: "And the Lord talked with Moses." He especially stressed communication with God through prayer. At the close of the service the Lord's Supper was observed, a goodly number participating.

We were glad to have several visitors. We were also glad to add some new members to our Sunday school. Attendance at Sunday school is increasing and we hope to see it grow more and more as spring opens up.

Our Auxiliary has been re-organized and new officers elected, so we are getting ready to launch out into a new year's work which we hope will be most successful. We are planning to send delegates to the Branch Meeting of the Auxiliary to be held in Burlington.

We feel that we have a treat in store for us on next third Sunday night in the way of some good music. Bro. Lindley tells us he has the promise of some good singers to be with us then. We are looking forward to this with great pleasure.

Beulah, Mecklenburg Circuit.—We were glad to have with us Sunday afternoon Rev. N. M. Harrison, of Charlotte; he preached for us a wonderful sermon which was enjoyed by all that attended the services, and we also were glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Stegall and Miss Welborn, of Charlotte. We certainly did appreciate the nice communion set that two of the kind ladies of Charlotte presented to our church Sunday evening.

We are having prayer meeting at our church each Sunday night. We were glad indeed to have our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Joyner, Sunday night with us in our prayer meeting. Rev. Mr. Joyner preached a fine sermon. We are glad to have our pastor and his wife any time with us in our prayer services. We are also glad to see the fine attendance at these meetings each Sunday night.

We are going to have an Easter program at our church Sunday night, April 20, and are expecting a large crowd to attend this service.

Our Sunday school is getting along nicely since the fine spring weather has come.

Rev. A. B. Haywood will preach for us Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. We are looking forward to a fine sermon.

Mr. W. E. Elmore is still on the sick list; hope he will soon be restored to health so he may be with us in our church services.

Union Chapel, Mocksville Charge.—Our Sunday school is progressing nicely with a good attendance. We are hoping to have a larger attendance and hope each member will help to accomplish this end.

Our pastor, Rev. G. B. Ferree, last Sunday brought another good Bible sermon. Brother Ferree is doing some wonderful preaching. Everybody seems to enjoy hearing him.

Brother Ferree is holding prayer services at our church with a very good attendance.

We are looking forward to the coming of Dr. Taylor. We always enjoy hearing what he has to say and welcome him.

First Church, High Point.—Special Holy Week services are being conducted by the pastor each evening at 7:30 o'clock. On Monday evening the message presented was "Suffering Undeserved Hatred;" on Tuesday evening, "Suffering from Blind Selfishness," Wednesday evening, 16th, "The Silence of Jesus," on Thursday evening, "The Broken Christ," when the Lord's Supper will be celebrated, followed by reception of members into the church, and on Good Friday a three-hour service, from 12, noon, to 3 o'clock P. M., will be held, when the Seven Utterances of Jesus as He hung on the cross will be presented by different ministers of the city. For the first time Mayor York has issued a proclamation urging citizens to close their shops, stores, and houses of business during this time and attend this solemn union service. On Friday evening the cantata, "Eastertide," will be rendered by the choir. Each evening the service will be closed by the appearance of an illuminated cross in the auditorium.

Last Sunday, Palm Sunday, was fitingly observed by the rendition of "The Palms" by the choir, a lovely duet by Mrs. J. H. Allred and Mrs. J. C. Whitesell, and a masterful sermon on "Christ's Kingly Entry" by the minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, who said in part: "Churches all over the world today celebrated Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem with palms, handing them out to the people and striving to come into the presence of the Lord. There have been many triumphant marches in the history of the world, and the Orient has given many displays in honor of heroes, Xerxes, Alexander the Great, Pompey, Aurelian, and countless others, when innumerable flowers have been strewn in their way, and throngs of singing people have hailed the victors of war as they entered the city in a triumphal procession. A few years ago General Allenby entered the city of Jerusalem quietly, but all these put together cannot convey the meaning of the entry into Jerusalem of Jesus, when palm branches were strewn in His path. Jesus came as King of kings and Lord of lords. Jesus was the only man whose face bore traces of tears, for He knew that the cross was to rest heavily upon His shoulders; He was ready to be arraigned. Now the nation must choose, and Christ was to let the world make its choice. He must be elected President of our lives and He cannot live in our hearts unless we want Him there. We cannot serve God and mammon. Lent is not merely giving up something, but taking up something, not only to remember Christ's sufferings on the cross, but it means a boycott on malice, hatred, and ill-will, and to rid ourselves of sin and evil thoughts. Palm Sunday to me means that Christ is to be enthroned in the hearts of the world. We pause to do honor to Lincoln, Lee, and Washington; should we not also pause to give honor, glory, and majesty to Christ, the King of kings and Lord of lords?"

At the Vesper service Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock the message was presented by the minister on the theme, "Suffering in Triumph," and the choir rendered "How Beautiful Upon the Mountains," with fine effect.

On next Sunday morning, Easter Sunday, the young people of all churches of the city will unite in an Easter sunrise service at 7 o'clock, a. m., on the lawn of the Presbyterian church. Antiphonal singing and other musical numbers will be impressive features of this occasion. Hot rolls and coffee will be served to all participating in this service. We hope that our church will be well represented.

On Easter Sunday evening a pageant, "The Call of the Cross," will be presented by members of the church school.

The general meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held at the church Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock with an attendance of 30. Mrs. S. S. Coe was in the chair, and Mrs. J. T. Ryan had charge of the program for the day. After the call to worship, prayer was led by Rev. Mr. Farmer. A paper on "Why Church Schools" was read by Mrs. A. M. Rankin, and another on "Our Leadership Training Schools" was read by Mrs. Paul S. Kennett. The dinner at noon on Thursday, April 24th, to be given for the Methodist Episcopal Young Peoples' Convention to be in session in Wesley Memorial church, was discussed, and donations were sought. Committees for the flower sale and chicken supper in May were announced. Circle meetings will not be held on Easter Monday, but are postponed a week until Monday, April 28. It was voted to send $10 to the shower for our missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis and children, who will return to India next fall. The retiring treasurer, Mrs. Pickens, announced that the sum of $2,692 was raised last year by the Auxiliary. A generous supply of chinaware, silver, and glassware has been added to the church kitchen, and we are now equipped to serve meals to 200 people at a time.

The minister, Rev. R. I. Farmer, has a good chance to win out in North Carolina by May 1 in the contest for Christian Endeavor World subscriptions, which will give him an opportunity to compete with leaders in other states of the district for a trip to Berlin next summer to attend the World Convention and to see the famed Passion Play at Oberammergau. Subscriptions to this splendid weekly magazine are $2.00 the year, $5.00 for three years, or $10.00 for six years.

A goal of 50 decisions for Christ and additions to the church is set for this Easter and Pentecost period.

Lexington, State Street.—All branches of the church work are going forward encouragingly. Sunday school attendance continues to grew. The C. E. Society is full of enthusiasm and desire to do things worth while. The Missionary Society has done a fine year's work under the faithful and efficient leadership of Mrs. A. H. Evans, president.

Our revival services began last Wednesday night. Bro. Hendry is doing the preaching in his very able and forceful way. Much interest and a fine spirit of co-operation are being shown. We are pleased and helped by having many visitors from other churches of the city and some from nearby rural churches.

The Palmer Sisters sing at all the evening services. These sweet singers always draw a large audience wherever they go to sing. The gospel they bring in song is most impressive. Prayer meetings of 20 minutes' length are being held in the different sections of town at 7:10 each evening asking the blessings of God on all the meetings in progress here at this time; these are being conducted at First Reformed Church, the M. E. Church, and at our own. We ask all good people to join with us in earnest prayer for a great revival in Lexington.

The men of the Bible class were much pleased to have Mr. John Leonard teach their class last Sunday in the absence of their regular teacher, Dr. Brannock. Mr. Leonard is a teacher of much force and has taught in his Sunday school (Shiloh) for many years. We are grateful to Mr. Leonard also for rendering us such fine help in singing. He and all his family are talented singers, and all help us very much indeed.

We were pleased to have Mr. and Mrs. Nash, of Concord, worship with us Sunday morning. They are faithfud and helpful members of First M. P. Church, Concord, and were recently sheep of Mr. Hendry's fold.

We are expecting a chorus of singers from Concord to sing for us one night this week, and are looking forward to it with pleasure.

The social hour and sandwich supper held in the church dining room last Wednesday night a week ago was much enjoyed. We have discovered that the oftener a congregation meets the more they love each other and their pastor, the better the co-operation and accomplishment.

There will be an Easter program given next Sunday.

The children of the Primary Department conducted opening exercises of the Sunday school last Sunday morning under the leadership of Mrs. J. F. Cox, in a delightful and touching way, a fit background for the good lesson on Jesus' great words, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

A good congregation was present today for Sunday school and preaching service. The second quarterly conference will meet with the Hebron church Saturday before the fourth Sunday at 2 o'clock.

Plans are being made for Easter service here the fourth Sunday afternoon; at that time we will have our pastor with us.

Death has claimed another one of our faithful members, Mrs. Mariah Snipes. Mrs.

Snipes was greatly loved and admired by all who knew her. She was a woman noted for her lovely Christian character, gentle and kind ways. She will be greatly missed in the church services at Chestnut Ridge.

Midway, Haw River Circuit. Our Sunday school is moving along nicely; the first Sunday morning it was pouring down rain but there was a very good crowd out for Sunday school and Christian Endeavor. Yesterday was a good day for us. Bro. Trollinger gave us an Easter message from the text, "If Christ be not raised, your faith is vain."

An Easter program is being prepared which will be given next Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock; we are having it at this hour so our pastor can be with us. Hope lots of you readers can be with us also. Come and let's have a good time together.

Our revival will begin the fourth Sunday in July with three sermons—at 11 o'clock, in the afternoon, and 8 o'clock. We are hoping and praying for a great revival. Pray for us.

Hollister, Halifax Charge.—We had a good Sunday school Sunday and a very good attendance. We missed our former superintendent and wife, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Ellington, in Sunday school. They are always regular attendants in Sunday school. I understand they had gone to visit Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Spencer and to attend services at Mr. Spencer's church. I am sure they heard a splendid sermon by Mr. Spencer.

Bro. Fogleman preached a splendid sermon at the regular evening service. There were a number of visitors from other churches present. We welcome them in our services and hope they will come again.

On the fourth Sunday morning in this month the baccalaureate sermon of Hollister school will be preached in Hollister church by Rev. M. C. Dunn, of Durham, N. C.

An announcement has been made that the second quarterly conference of Halifax charge will meet on Saturday afternoon, May 3rd, at 2:30 at Union church, (temporarily). It is hope that all official members will be present as this is the time for nomination of delegates to the Annual Conference.

Albemarle.—Pastor Anderson attended the district meeting at Concord Friday, which was called by the president of the conference for the purpose of setting aside that day as a day of prayer for the world-wide pentecostal movement. He delivered a talk in the program for the day, his subject being, "The Needs and Possibilities of Pentecost."

The Lucy Hatley Circle held their monthly meeting Tuesday, April 8th, at the home of Mrs. Ralph Andrew. Mrs. Ira Smart, chairman, presided over the meeting with Mrs. W. J. Kennedy leading the devotionals. We were glad to have so many of our members present, only two being absent. We hope to have them with us at next meeting. Master John Kennedy was present with his big smile. John is the youngest member of our Circle, being only five years old. He never fails to come to a meeting without bringing his dues along. We received one new member, Mrs. Allen Wagoner. Mrs. Fred Herrin was made an honorary member for this meeting. This Circle is doing splendid work, as we have been divided only two months, and the sum of over $50 has been realized.

During the social hour the hostess served dainty sandwiches and coffee.

Our pastor is preaching some very inspiring sermons, especially at the Sunday evening services. The sermons have been along the evangelistic order for some time now, impressing us with the necessity of preparing our hearts and minds for the revival meeting which we are hoping to have in the near future.

We were very glad to have Mr. J. L. Furr join us on last Sunday a week ago. Mr. Furr was previously a member of the Spencer church of our own demonination. Also Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Safrit and children, Clarence, Walter, and Ernest, joined the church Sunday night. We welcome these into our membership.

The Cam Snotherly Circle of the Ladies' Aid Society held its regular meeting Tuesday evening in the home of Mrs. D. F. Helms with Mrs. D. F. Harkey as joint hostess. Mrs. D. L. Hatley, leader for this meeting, selected as the scripture reading the Easter lesson from Mathew's gospel. Mrs. Don Helms read an interesting paper entitled, "Easter—Do We Understand It?" Mrs. Arthur Furr and Mrs. John Whitlock rendered a vocal duet entitled "Alone." Mrs. J. R. Anderson gave a beautiful poem entitled, "God Holds the Key."

A great many articles of fancy-work were brought in at this meeting, which were almost all sold.

We were glad to have a new member join us, Mrs. Pete Lowder.

It was decided that we have an old-fashioned tacky party in about two weeks. Plans and details were left in the hands of a committee.

Following the business hour, the hostesses served delightful refreshments, consisting of sandwiches, coffee and angel-food cake.

Mrs. C. S. Moton and her Junior Department, with all officers and teacher, will meet with us next Sunday morning and they will have charge of the opening exercises of the Sunday school. Also on Sunday night a musical program will be rendered by the choir. It is expected that a large crowd will attend both these special services.

New Hope, Pageland.—Since spring has come and everybody on our work seems happy we are writing to tell others about it.

We certainly appreciated Dr. Taylor's visit with us, and also thank him very much, because he made every effort possible in granting our people just what they asked for.

We are glad to have Rev. T. E. Martin as our pastor. His life and works have been an inspiration to us. We will never forget him for what he has meant to our church and people as a whole. A church that has a pastor who they know was sent from God should appreciate him. We are going to give him our support in every way possible.

On last Sunday Bro. Martin preached two of the most inspirational and helpful sermons I ever heard. At 11 o'clock his subject was "Drifting Away." Then on Sunday evening his subject was "The Great Need of the Day."

Our Sunday school is doing splendid work now. All seem to be interested. The young people's Christian Endeavor Society is doing better work than ever before. We ask each of you to pray that we may continue to grow and improve.

MISS MILDRED RICHARDSON.

Hawkins Chapel, Littleton Circuit.—We have a service every second Sunday morning and third Sunday night. We had a large congregation Sunday morning. Mr. Smith rendered us a fine sermon. We were glad to have him in our C. E. Society Sunday evening. Circle No. 1 gave a program. We as Endeavorers of the Littleton charge are planning to have a social meeting Monday night at our schoolhouse, if we don't decide on something else.

We have made some new plans in our Sunday school. The Sunday school is going to give an Easter-egg hunt Sunday morning. Let's think why we have Easter, for God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

We are missing Mr. E. B. Pair at our services very much, as he is one of our older members; he was once our superintendent. I am glad to report he is back home from the hospital.

Mr. Willison Hawkins and Mr. Willie Collums are improving nicely, and also Mrs. Georgie Thompson.

I want to say to the Greensville Circuit you have a fine preacher, for I love him and Mrs. O'Briant, for when I see her she makes me think of my sweet mother God called in 1918. Mr. O'Briant knows you at home, at church, on the street, always with that little pleasant smile.

We enjoyed being at Lebanon the fifth Sunday at the Rally Day. Thanks for your invitation for the visitors to come again. There were between 20 and 30 members from our church there . I think everybody enjoyed President Taylor's sermon in the morning; it was a sermon so plain.

We welcome visitors from far and near to attend our services.

MRS. CLAUDE HAWKINS, Reporter.

West End, Greensboro—The pastor and leaders of the various organizations of the church seem very optimistic over the increased enthusiasm and interest shown in the work at West End.

Mr. L. M. Foust, general superintendent of our Sunday school, is especially pleased with the results of the Standard Leadership Training School, which was held in our church during the past few weeks. Twenty-four teachers and members of our Sunday school registered and attended these classes—this being over 50 per cent. of the entire enrollment of the Training School. Eighteen or twenty of this twenty-four, it is understood, will receive credits.

At a recent meeting of the Greensboro Christian Endeavor Union our Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society was awarded the beautiful C. E. shield which the union offers each quarter to the I. C. E. Society having the highest efficiency rating, based on the contest points as mappel out by officers of the Union. We are proud of these young people and wish for them continued interest and enthusiasm in this work.

At the 11 o'clock service last Sunday the choir was composed of members of the Intermediate-Senior Department of the Sunday school. The congregation was agreeably surprised with the efficient and impressive way in which these boys and girls filled this place. The evening service was in the nature of a pageant, "At Cross Roads House," which was given by the young women of the Philathea class.

Next Sunday morning Dr. Lindley will use as his subject, "The Glories of Immortality." At 8 o'clock the choir will give an Easter cantata entitled "The Easter Evangel," by Lorenz.

Calvary, Greensboro.—Last Sunday was a good day with us; 206 in Sunday serool; quite a gain over the same Sunday a year ago. The first Sunday's collection for the Children's Home was so small, that we repeated it, and made the total offering for this month $20, which is also a gain. It is interesting to notice that our offerings in Sunday school are increasing over a similar period last year, and that our first Sunday offerings are almost double. If the other Sunday schools in the Conference will follow our good example, the Home will not suffer, as it now does.

At the morning worship service a goodly number was present. One of the features of the service was the singing of "The Palms." We were glad to see Leon, the son of our editor, in the congregation, besides a good many other visitors. At the evening service the officers of the Auxiliary were installed. A candle-lighting service was used. Following the installation service, the preacher spoke to the women of the church on "Phebe, A Servant of the Church."

Easter Sunday will be observed appropriately. At 6 o'clock the Christian Endeavor Societies will hold a sunrise prayer service, which will be followed with breakfast in the Hut. At 11 o'clock the choir will render an Easter cantata, "Life Eternal." The preacher has been privileged to hear two practices of the cantata, and can assure anyone who can be present to hear it a most enjoyable treat. Following the cantata there will be the reception of members. If all come in who have indicated their intention of so doing we will have one of the largest ingatherings in the history of the church. At 5 o'clock a vesper service will be held, with a short sermon by the pastor. This will take the place of the night service.

C. W. BATES, Pastor.

—Avoid the use of manure on Irish and sweet potatoes, advises Mr. Morrow. It enriches the soil too much for sweet potatoes and may cause scab on Irish potatoes. If used to enrich soil for Irish potatoes it should be applied to a previous crop. Sweet potatoes do best on land of moderate fertility heavily fertilized. Both Irish and sweet potatoes respond best to fertilizers containing rather high percentages of potash.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Resolutions of Love and Respect

We, the members of the Maple Springs Auxiliary, desire to record the passing of one of our most beloved members, Mrs. R. W. Waller. She was a faithful members of Maple Springs Methodist Protestant Church, a zealous and untiring worker in our Auxiliary and a devoted mother in the home, and now whereas the church shall miss her sunny and cheerful life, and whereas our Womans' Auxiliary shall keenly feel the loss of one of its most faithful, loyal and consecrated members, who never shirked a duty to the organization but always rendered her services with a smile.

And, whereas, the home is made sad in the loss of this wife and mother, be it resolved:

First, that we bow in humble submission to God and say, not our will but "Thine be done."

Second, that we shall ever remember the noble service rendered and the sweet influence that radiated from the life of this servant of God.

Third, that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the bereaved family, a copy to be sent to the Methodist Protestant Herald and a copy be recorded in the minutes of the Womans' Auxiliary.

May God comfort all the bereaved ones.

TREASURES

There are little fragrant blossoms
  Sending perfume in the air,
There are little bright-plumed songsters
  Making music here and there.

There are treasures rich and costly,
  There are sparkling jewels rare,
To grace the crowns of royal kings,
  Such as queens and princess wear.

But the grandest, finest treasure,
  One from which we could not part,
Is the gem of spiritual kindness,
  Revealed through the human heart.

And never is that treasure fairer,
  And never does it bring more cheer,
Than when we see its beautiful beams
  Shine forth from a child-heart dear.

The Great Conqueror

Foes were glad and friends were sad
Because He lay among the dead:
Both believed He'd ne'er come forth,
Forgetting what Himself had said.

Ages past the human race
Had seen none break the bars of death;
Life was gone and hope was past
The moment men gave up their breath.

Grand surprise awaits the world,
Unheard-of things will soon appear:
Death will lose its dreadful power
To bind and hold men everywhere.

He who lies a seeming prey
To monster death's most fierce onset,
Prince of Life will soon come forth,
The only conqueror death has met.

Life for all will be His aim,
And men who will can rise again,
Rise to reign o'er sin and death,
Triumphant through His grace. Amen!

Human Rights and Property Rights

We frequently hear this expression in political discussion of the present day. There is an effort to fill the seats of the Supreme Court with men favorable to human rights rather than property rights. But are not property rights human rights? It appears to us that there is a cross classification involved in the expression. Men who work today have a right to fair wages for their work, and men who worked last year and saved their wages have a right today in the money saved. Both are human rights. There is need of greater clearness in much of our political thinking. Men are more valuable than dollars, and the man who saves his money from extravagant expenditure is worth more to the world than he would be if he wasted his money. Let us have less vagueness in our discussions.

China's Distress and Our Duty

We have perhaps all read of the terrible famine in China and wished we could do something to save some of the starving people from death. An opportunity has come to do this. An organization has been formed for China Child Welfare to raise money to save Chinese children from starvation. It will take a large sum, but North Carolina is asked for only $15,000 to be paid by June 30th. We believe freewill offerings in churches and Sunday Schools will meet the demand. It is our opportunity to act the Good Samaritan. Contributions may be sent to General Albert L. Cox, Raleigh, N. C.

Jesus' Good Confession

In Paul's first letter to Timothy he refers to Jesus' testimony before Pontius Pilate and calls it "a good confession." Jesus was on trial for his life and the issue of the trial depended upon the attitude and action of the prisoner. Jesus might have saved himself from the court's condemnation had he chosen to do so by simply denying the charge against him which was a charge of rebellion against constituted authority. The charge was a very serious one, as it declared that he was an aspirant for kingship over the Jewish nation. The Romans held their power over the conquered peoples with jealousy and firmess. Woe to the man that was found guilty of leading in a revolt. But Jesus' record was clear. His teachings were in public and no word of his could be cited that would sustain a charge of rebellion. Why did not Jesus simply deny the charge and put upon his accusers the burden of proving it?

We think it was because Jesus saw greater issues at stake than the saving or losing of his own life. If he wished to die (as he did for the sake of others) he might have been silent and reached that goal. Had he wished to save his life, he might have done so as we have said by denying the charge against him. But he pursues neither course. He chooses a third course. He admits that he is a king, but declares that his kingdom is not of this world. Why not leave that unsaid? It did not save him from condemnation, but it did subject him to ridicule. We think this testimony is what Paul refers to when he speaks of Jesus' good confession. It took strong courage to say it in face of the outburst of ridicule it was sure to provoke. But Jesus chose to say it and did say it. Why?

Because his testimony as to the invisible kingdom and invisible world was needed. The world's dreamers may have dreamed of a future world and a future life, but there was needed the testimony of one that knew and could speak with authority, and Jesus was the one man of all the centuries qualified to speak with absolute confidence. His testimony was worth to the world more than the earth was worth. Small and pitiable is the human hope that is based on nothing greater and better than this little planet which we cling to for a few years. Jesus by his testimony gave to life's outlook an infinite enlargement. "My kingdom is not of this world—it is the kingdom of the heavens." It is a kingdom without boundary lines. It is a universal and everlasting kingdom. The kingdoms and empires of earth are petty, mere playthings, in comparison. What men on earth call life—a few years of sleeping and waking or sleeping and dreaming—in comparison with life in the invisible and eternal world is as a fleeting firefly in contrast with the stars that shine forever and ever.

Men needed the enlarged vision and Jesus bore testimony to the truth in its grandeur. He said to Pilate: "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I

JESUS AND THE RESURRECTION

St. Paul's message to the Athenians was the climax of his mission to the Gentile world. That sermon was indeed a revelation to the Greeks; and the one surprise above all others to Athenian ears was its proclamation of a risen Savior. "Because he preached Jesus and the resurrection" the Greeks of that greatest of Grecian cities thought Paul to be a "setter forth of strange gods." And, inasmuch as the Athenians and the strangers sojourning there spent their time in nothing else but to tell or to hear some new thing, they set the Apostle in their great tribunal and heard his great message.

He preached the doctrine of the one God to a people that worshipped idols innumerable; and that was surely a much-needed revelation. But the burden of his message, in every city and in every home-circle, was Jesus and the resurrection. And from that high day on the Hill of Mars, in the greatest center of ancient culture and learning, to this latest Eastertide, the name of Jesus has been one with the hope immortality and eternal life. Two great, undying messages were forever embodied in the preaching of Paul and these messages found found expression in two phrases which are the greatest in all the literature of the ages. The one is this: "Christ and Him crucified!" The other is this: "Jesus and the Resurrection!"

Easter Sunday proclaims anew with every passing year the blessed hope of immortality, through the resurrection of Jesus. On every Easter, Christians of every creed confess in sermon and song, their faith in a risen glorified Redeemer. It is indeed true that the resurrection theme is too closely confined to the annual festival of joy and gladness associated with the celebration of the day when Christ became the first-fruits of the hope of eternal life. The great doctrines of the Gospel should be proclaimed with equal emphasis throughout the whole year; and, even on Easter Sunday we should not forget the Bethlehem miracle nor fail to hear the echo of the song of the Christmas angels. And even on Christmas day, we should look forward with triumphal anticipations, to the Easter miracle. There is a growing tendency to set artificial bounds to the preaching of the Gospel; to reduce the pulpit to the lavish demands of a calendar; to so exalt the high days of the year as to confine the proclamation of Christian doctrine to the one day which suggests and symbolizes that doctrine; thus making the ministry of the Word fragmentary and ineffectual.

The hope of the resurrection and the joys of the heavenly life should be the every-day message of the Christian Church. When we limit our preaching of any one doctrine to the message of a single day with the accompanying habit of neglecting that teaching throughout the year then we unconsciously weaken the hold of that doctrine upon the mind and heart of the Church. In all too many parishes of the Christian world the people seldom hear a message on immortality and eternal life except on Easter Sunday or on funeral occasions. Such a usage, however bravely we fight against this inevitable result finally subdues the triumphal note of faith to the minor key of sadness until even the Easter message loses its glorious meaning. If the people of God are made familiar with the blessed hope of immortality, by frequent and joyous messages throughout the year then even the funeral services of the Christian will be lifted to the mountain heights of victory and sorrowing hearts shall hear an Easter anthem even at the open grave!

Every Sunday was Easter among the Apostles. And so engrossed were these first messengers of the Gospel with the resurrection hope, that every Lord's day in its commemorative thanksgiving for the heavenly miracle, and its blessed anticipations of the final joys of the resurrection life was like an Easter festival to every worshiping soul! The hope of immortality should find its way, as a prevailing and triumphal note in every Gospel message; not necessarily in the word-message of the hour but always and forever in the life-message of the man in that thrill of hope eternal which wells up forever in the heart of the believing minister, and so deeply interflows with the whole current of his pulpit message as to become a fountain of hope and joy in every believing heart in the great congregation!

The ever-living Savior is the one supreme fountain of hope for a dying world, and the one great source of power and of achievement for the Christian Church. The vision of St. John must become the vision of the Church universal; the unclouded vision of the Church in all generations. Then shall the Christian communion of every land hear the reassuring words of our risen Lord: "Fear not! I am the First and the Last! I am He that liveth, though I was dead, and behold I am alive for evermore! And I have the Keys!" The ever-living Savior is the keeper of all the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven. He holds the master-key to every problem of life, here on earth and to that final door that leads through death to the life everlasting.

"Lift up your heads, O ye gates; even lift them up ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in! Who is the King of Glory? The Lord of hosts, He is the King of Glory!"—Editorial in Methodist Protestant-Recorder.

PENTECOST AGAIN

"Are you in sympathy with this, Merton?" Mrs. Rosalie Howard thus addressed her husband as they took their seats at the dinner table.

"This what, my dear?"

"This—this—well, this crude performance our church is about to put on."

"I don't know, Rosalie. My recent business trip kept me away from the last board meeting, you remember. What are they doing of which you disapprove?"

"This letter best explains. Listen:

"Dear Members of Calvary Church: Are you anxious about the quality and growth of your spiritual life? Do you find it difficult to feed your soul in this day of hard, bare facts and absorption in material things? What about those people who are overlooking eternal values? If our church doing all it it should to help you and others? What more might we do?

"The following plan is an answer to this last question. It is also an appeal for your sympathy and co-operation. Our officials feel the need of an old-time revival of religion. They believe the story of Pentecost and so they believe in 'revivals'; in the power of the Holy Spirit; in conversion; in salvation. Do you thus believe? Will you help bring these things about here and now?

"An evangelist has been secured for special services a few weeks hence. He is a man of sterling character, untiringly devoted to the work he is called to do. He will bring Heaven very close to all of us and help us to see the Father's plan for our lives. Before his arrival, some of us must prepare ourselves for our part in this campaign. We need personal workers and singers, whose hearts are cleansed from all that might hinder the work of the Spirit—consecrated people, anxious to do God's will. There will be cottage prayer-meetings when we shall ask guidance from above and seek to attune ourselves to the Eternal Mind.

"Will you offer your home? Will you join the chorus? Will you enlist to co-operate in other ways? Please make your reply in person by attending a preliminary meeting at the church on Tuesday evening next.

"Thank you and may God bless us all.

"Your pastor,
"Leonard Harkness."

Silence greeted the reading of the letter. Mrs. Howard tossed it impatiently aside, while an amused smile curled her lips. An answering smile appeared upon her husband's face.

"I had thought we were beyond things like that," he said indifferently as he carved the roast. "It would seem that a church of the standing and intelligence of ours need not turn to such a worn-out game."

"Not only worn-out, but insufferably obnoxious," returned Rosalie with spirit. "As if people should be molested in what they choose to believe! And to make a public outcry concerning your personal convictions and intentions, as you are supposed to do at a revival meeting—oh, the mere idea is irritating!"

"I think we are agreed on the matter, my dear. Had I been present at the business meeting that proposed the farce, I should have registered my disapproval. Since I wasn't, I've no responsibility. Let's forget it. By the way, why is James so late tonight?"

A change passed over Mrs. Howard's face. "Oh, Merton, I—I don't know. I'm worried about James. While you were away he was out very late on several nights. When I reprimanded him he answered me rudely. I'm afraid—I'm afraid he is not in good company."

"We'll stop that straightway," replied Mr. Howard angrily. "I'm still his father and he still eats my bread. He will do about as I say."

"He is getting older, Merton. Young people today do not take kindly to dictation. Yesterday he almost demanded money from me. He seemed nervous and desperate about it. I fear he is spending time in pool rooms—or worse."

The door opened noisily and James Howard entered. He threw his hat upon a chair and slouched into his seat without any word of greeting to either parent. Mr. Howard looked sternly at him, started to speak, and changed his mind. The meal went on awkwardly. At its finish James was commanded to follow his father to the library.

The interview was stormy. Rosalie Howard paced up and down the hall outside, trembling with anxiety as occasional harsh words reached her ears. Her boy! Her only child, upon whom she had lavished unstinted love, unlimited gifts! That he should go wrong! It had never occurred to her as a possibility.

The weeks that followed were full of heaviness and fear. Constant friction with the lad; anxious hours of waiting for his step; remonstrate and reblelion; dread of the outcome; despair concerning the remedy. Rosalie grew pale and hollow-eyed. Mr. Howard became stern and silent. It was a time of hideous misery.

Meanwhile the work of the church went quietly on. The Howards, absorbed in their own problem and uninterested in the evangelistic program, knew little of what was being accomplished. They were unaware that the same God who granted a Pentecost in the first century could vouchsafe another in the twentieth to those who were willing to tarry in the place of prayer. And there were those in Calvary Church who tarried and prayed; who received the power of the Divine Spirit; who went out—God working with them—to reveal to many the way into a more abundant life.

There was nothing of the sensational—no noise—no confusion. Merely a group of earnest, consecrated men and women seeking to do things in God's way. And God did not fail them. People of all ages and conditions heard and resolved to live the remainder of their lives after the pattern of the Man of Calvary.

Workers went out to find some who would not come voluntarily to the services. They persuaded them to listen—and, one night, in a dingy, smoky basement room, the preacher himself found James Howard. Found him—and saved him! Saved him to begin a career as a Christian evangelist who should find other boys and lead them away from the pitfalls into the strait and narrow path.

So the cloud was lifted from the Howard home. The anxious parents smiled again. "A revival takes on a different appearance when it rescues our own boy, doesn't it?" Rosalie said with unsteady lips and tears in her voice.

"Quite," was Merton Howard's reply. "Perhaps—perhaps, dear, we are in need of a revival ourselves."

"Yes, Merton. If we had not been, we should have known how to save James, or better, he might have never been lost. That is what hurts. He has been saved in spite of us, not because of us. Our home—our home—"

"Has not been deeply Christian, Rosalie. I see it now—church membership is not enough."—Zion's Herald.

THE CONTRACTING WALLS

Some one has likened time to the contracting walls of a prison. At first there is ample room to all appearances, but as each year passes there is a noticeable shrinkage in the size of the cell, until at last the prisoner is crushed by the contracting walls. But to the Christian, while life here below may contract, yet at the end he escapes to a world of larger dimensions whose walls will never contract upon him. He will go to dwell in the house of the Lord for ever. He will be at the right hand of God where there are pleasures for evermore, and where there is fulness of joy.—From The Gospel Minister.

THE SUCCESS FAMILY

The father of Success is Work. The mother of Success is Ambition. The oldest son is Common Sense, and some of the other boys are Stability, Perseverance, Honesty, Thoroughness, Foresight, Enthusiasm, and Co-operation. The oldest daughter is Character. Some of the sisters are Cheerfulness, Loyalty, Courtesy, Care, Economy, Sincerity and Harmony. The baby is Opportunity. Get acquainted with the "old man," and you will be able to get along pretty well with all the rest of the family.—League Echoes.

—Believing that "children should be allowed and encouraged to enter the church as members at as early an age as is consonant with an understanding of this union," the official board of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of Somerville has meomorialized the Board of Bishops "that it undertake an extension of the church ritual for reception of members, to the end that a special ritual be made, comprehensible to children of the lowest age at which the church will receive them."

The Ranks Broken Again

The death of Brother Brittain which occurred Tuesday, April 15, has broken our ranks again, and we are grieved because he is no more with us. His going was so sudden, and seemingly so untimely, that we can hardly realize that it is true. Being large of body and apparently robust in health, we never thought of him as an easy prey to disease and a ready victim of death. But so it was, and our hearts are sad because he is not. But there is balm for our wounds. Brother Brittain was a good man and a faithful minister of the Lord Jesus. His short years were well lived, and he came to the end unafraid, and in the confidence of the better things that awaited him in the conference above. The funeral service was held in his home church, Clark's Chapel, near Weaverville. By request of the deceased Brother Edwin Suits preached the funeral sermon. Others assisting in the service were Brothers Pierce, Casto, Paschall, and two M. E. brethren, Armstrong and Ratledge. We laid his body to rest in the church burying ground where the towering mountains will keep watch until the graves are opened, and those who sleep in Jesus will come forth to meet him in the air. Our hearts go out in tender sympathy to his loving companion, his relatives, and to St. Paul's church, bereft of a pastor by his death. May the God of all comfort be gracious to them, and to all of us, in this sorrow.

In this connection we must pay tribute to the memory of a good woman who has just passed from us, Mrs. Mary Outerbridge. Her death occurred at Whitakers about 1 o'clock last Sunday morning. We were called, with Brothers Dixon and Bethea, to attend the funeral, which was held in our Whitaker's church Monday at 2:30 p. m. My acquaintance with Mrs. Outerbridge began in my early ministry. I soon discovered in her a marked type of noble womanhood, and the high opinions that I formed then of her, have persisted through the intervening years. She was the sort of woman that fills a place. In the home, the church, the community her presence counted. All that was worthy and good interested her, and she shared in it. She will be missed, but her life will always be a pleasant memory to those who knew her best. We share this sorrow with her loved ones, and assure them of our tender sympathy. There is great comfort in the blessed immortality that awaits a life like hers.

Anderson

April 14-16.—Our report last week of our itinerary in South Carolina ended with our visit on the Yarborough Charge. We remained down there over April 16th, giving two days to the Anderson work. The first appointment on the charge was on Monday night at Fairview. Only a small congregation was present, but the attention was good, and we enjoyed speaking and worshiping with them, and likewise their fellowship. "Dollar a Member" was presented, and pledges received to the amount of $23, with $5 paid. We are grateful for this response. Brother T. B. Nally was appointed by the pastor to continue the effort. For long years this church has been a benediction to this community. Many have been saved at its altars, and have been strengthened in their religious purposes by its ministry. It still has a mission here, and we trust that this year may be one of its best in service.

On the 15th, Tueday night, we were with the Greenville congregation. This service was held in an M. E. Church, South, by the courtesy of the pastor, Rev. Mr. George. Our people meet regularly in the Y. M. C. A. building, but could not at this time because the auditorium was in use. We are grateful to our M. E. brethren for the use of their church. Our membership here is small, but made up largely, if not totally, of life-long Methodist Protestants. We have some property in Greenville, deeded to the church about fifty years ago by a Mr. Burdine, for the purpose of establishing a church there. He also willed $2,000 for this purpose. This bequest was in the form of stock in two business enterprises, both of which failed, and this bequest was consequently lost. Our people realize the difficulties that confront them in erecting a building and establishing a church, and are moving cautiously. We shall keep in touch with the movement and await the outcome with sympathetic interest.

The last appointment for this charge was at Liberty Hill, on Tuesday night. Since our visit there last year, the church has been repainted, new window frames installed, and some improvements made at the front entrance. We were greatly pleased to find these improvements.

This church, like Fairview, has served long and to a good purpose. It is deeply rooted in the life of the community, and its prospects for continued usefulness are encouraging. Twenty-one dollars was pledged on "Dollar a Member."

We were glad to hear the people speak well of Brother Russell, the pastor. He has entered earnestly upon the work, is moving cautiously as he learns the field. With the co-operation of his people, we see no reason why he should not have a good year. Like other sections of the country, this charge feels the financial depression that is so wide-spread now. We were pleased, however, to find them making provision for their pastor. We earnestly trust that they will continue to do this. There is always hopeful life in a charge that is concerned about the pastor's financial needs.

We enjoyed our visit to our South Carolina fields. The fellowship of pastor and people was pleasant, and their hospitality provided well for our bodily comfort. We thank them.

It was our privilege on our way down to these fields to worship with the Charlotte congregation in their revival services, and to be the guest of Brother and Sister Harrison at the parsonage. Brother Milloway was assisting Brother Harrison in these meetings. We trust that much good was accomplished. Some went forward to reconsecrate themselves the night we were there.

Asheville-Weaverville

April 17-18.—We had no appointment on these charges at this time, but the death of Brother Brittain called us to Weaverville, and while there we were glad to give attention to our work in that section of the conference. The churches on the Weaverville Charge were not visited, as there were no services in progress at any of them, and no opportunity to make appointments. However, we were glad to find a hopeful condition maintaining. Brother Pierce is enthusiastic over the outlook. He has been kindly received by all the churches, and he feels confident of a good year's work.

On Thursday and Friday nights we worshiped with the Asheville congregation in pre-Easter revival services which Brother Paschall was conducting. We were glad to be with him in these services, and to get from him and his people some understanding of the work there. Brother Paschall and his wife have the esteem of the congregation, and they are both giving unstintedly of their time and means to the church. They have, also, some earnest and capable supporters in their work. We should like to see a new day of service and progress dawn upon our cause here. Nothing would do so much to bring this about as a deep spiritual awakening in the church.

Bethel Home

Brother Casto is enlarging this house of healing by building a cabin on the mountain side just back of the home. He has made a place of beauty and comfort out of a one-room log cabin,—just like Brother Casto knows how to do. He will move out to the cabin, and thus make room in the "big house" for more patients. This home is a great benediction to sufferers, and the pity is that funds are not sufficient to enlarge its usefulness beyond its present limits. We enjoyed our brief visit here.

Easter Sunday

This day was spent with the family. We attended Grace Church in three services,—Sunday School, morning worship and the Easter program at night. We enjoyed all of these services, and the unusual privilege of spending a Sunday with the home folks.

Other things that we should like to speak about must await our letter next week.

Brother Stubbins and the Mt. Carmel people have our grateful thanks. We understand that this church paid in full some time ago. We have just now learned of this, and are glad, indeed, to place them on the "Honor Roll" this week. We are waiting for that church toward the "rising sun," but in the meantime any other church may have No. 24. Come on, brethren, let's keep this list growing.

We are sending a list of college pledges, made last year, to pastors. This should help in raising "Dollar a Member," as payments made on these pledges count on that. Send name and amount of payment to Mr. J. Norman Wills, Greensboro, so proper credit may be made on the pledge.

The Coommittee.

Jesus' Good Confession

should bear witness unto the truth." Did He not mean the truth regarding the future and eternal world? Men needed above all things to see and know that world in true perspective. What we call worldliness and the worldly life is due to ignorance of the life to come.

Worldlings close their eyes to that future state and laugh at those who believe in it and order their lives accordingly. This is as true in our day and generation as it was in the time of Pilate. Men who follow Jesus in declaring their belief in a life to come subject themselves to ridicule today. The world laughs contemptuously at the Christian's creed and has a sort of pity for the one mentally weak enough to accept it. It takes courage to profess acceptance of the Christian religion. The world may laugh loud and long. But it is the Christian's part to witness a good confession, as Jesus did, in order that the unbelieving may be convinced. Paul charged Timothy to make his life and testimony a rebuke to the worldly life. If Paul were here now, would he not so charge us? The intense worldly spirit of our time and the existing skepticism regarding the future life call for a Christian spirit and testimony of intense earnestness. We owe it to Christ, we owe it to our conviction of its truth, we owe it to our pitiable fellowmen of clouded minds, that we repeat Christ's testimony in a tone that will carry conviction. Men may laugh for a time, but some will in time be impressed and yield to their impressions.

LIFE TENURE OF BISHOPS INCONSISTENT

Whenever the wisdom of electing Methodist bishops for life is questioned the appointment of federal judges for life is cited. If judges for life, why not bishops?

The cases are not parallel. For instance, the methods of securing these men are widely different. Just now in our midst Judge Parker has been named for the Supreme Court of the nation. But before he takes the oath of office he must undergo close scrutiny on the part of the Senate of the United States. The press of the whole country reports the findings for or against him. The judge is selected by a most careful process in which both the executive and legislative branches of the government have a responsibility and an opportunity to gather the facts.

What do we do when it comes to electing bishops? Delegates gathered from all the home land and across the sea proceed to ballot without even any process of selection, and usually the ballot is for more than one man—oftentimes four and six names are voted for. There is no provision for a process of selection based upon approved fitness before or after the election. It is all most democratic and allows all kinds of alignments to be ade so as to put across a certain man or certain men.

This would not be so bad were the opportunity granted, as in all other offices of the church, to correct any mistakes made. Democracies have a way of correcting themselves in the long run, but here is an election in which the possibility for the correction of mistakes has gone beyond the voters. At this point the life tenure breaks down. In state affairs only those most carefully selected—such as the federal judges—are selected for life.

Careful attention is given to finding a president of a college or a judge on the bench, but we elect a bishop or a judge for life and put him in the highest position we know without any care in the act of doing so. Many of the best men we have do not stand any show of being elected bishops because they will not pay the price of securing sufficient publicity to get the vote of a widely scattered electorate such as is the General Conference.

If we were going to continue our loose democratic way of electing bishops, with no provision for testing the real and abiding fitness of the man, we should elect for a term of years and then make the test in the school of experience. After a time the mistake could be corrected.—N. C. Christian Advocate.

THE SOUL OF AMERICA

A $3000.00 prize contest for the best literary work on "The Soul of America" announced by the National Arts Club through President John G. Agar, who stated that the object of the award was to stimulate the writing of a work which will reveal the soul of America as distinguished from books in which the authors thoughtlessly praise or condemn the national character.

The award will be made by a committee of members of the National Arts consisting of William Allen White, chairman, Mary Austin, Hamlin Garland, Ida Tarbell and Henry Goddard Leach.

Under the rules of the contest, manuscripts submitted may be in any literary form—novel, history, poetry or critical essay—but only those presenting a constructive view of America, as implied in the title to be given the prize-winning work, will be considered by the committee.

It is the feeling of those who are sponsoring "The Soul of America" contest that the post-war literature of the past decade has been given largely to magnifying national faults and to a cynical criticism of passing phases of our national life.

In the deluge of such books, Mr. Agar said, the underlying character of America, its achievements and its ideals, have been submerged. He expects that the $3,000.00 prize, with all rights reserved, will serve to bring out another and older view of the aspects of our civilization which are fundamental and admirable.

The rules pertaining to the submission and choice of the best work on "The Soul of America" are as follows:

The manuscripts to be considered must be from 40,000 to 100,000 words in length.

Only those works written between March 31, 1930 and April 1, 1931, will be eligible for the competition.

All manuscripts must be forwarded to "The Soul of America" Committee, the National Arts Club, 15 Gramerey Park, New York City, not later than April 1, 1931. The manuscripts will be submitted anonymously and no prize will be awarded if, in the judgment of the Committee, no work is worthy of the prize. The judgment of the Committee will be final.

In connection with the submission of manuscripts to "The Soul of America" committee, the author, whose name must not appear on the manuscript, is requested to write a letter to the Executive Secretary of the National Arts Club, marking on the envelope containing it the words "Personal and Confidential." In this letter the author will give his or her name and address, and state the title of the manuscript submitted. The Executive Secretary of the club will be the only one to see these letters until after the Committee has announced its award.

The choice of the committee will be announced publicly on June 1, 1931, and the award itself will be presented to the winning author at the opening of the annual Book Exhibition at the National Arts Club on Wednesday evening, November 4, 1931. The prize book will be published during the fall of that year.

All rights in the manuscript and book shall remain in the author, and all manuscripts will be returned.

NUDE ART

We have scant respect for nude art. There is a tremendous power for good or evil in suggestion. A noble sentiment expressed in painting or in sculpture may be a perpetual source of blessing or of inspiration. On the other hand, a picture or a statue which suggests the impure may kindle in a man's bosom the unholy fire of lust and start him in paths which lead to the deepest degradation. We do not doubt that the scale of human destiny has often been turned by an appeal to the passions made by a scene exhibited upon canvass or in marble. They who would keep morally clean must shut out evil thoughts. It is a most significant fact that in the exhumed city of Pompeii, where it is known that licentiousness flourished openly and with scarcely any restraint, art in all its forms was thoroughly sensuous and debased. Parents cannot be too careful in selecting pictures for the walls of their homes; and many of the purient calendars sent out nowadays should be by them excluded, as one would quarantine against a contagious pestilence.—Selected.

WHEN SKIES ARE DARK

A good many people never learn to sing until the darkling shadows fall. The fabled nightingale caroled with his breast against a thorn. It was in the night that the song of the angels was heard. It was at midnight that the cry came, "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him."

Indeed it is extremely doubtful if a soul can really know the love of God in its richness and in its comforting, satisfying completeness until the skies are black and lowering.

Light comes out of darkness; morning out of the womb of the night.

James Creelman, in one of his letters, describes his trip through the Balkan States in search of Natalie, the exiled Queen of Serbia.

"In that memorable journey," he said, "I learned for the first time that the world's supply of attar of roses comes from the Balkan Mountains. And the thing that interested me most is that the roses must be gathered in the darkest hours. The pickers start out at one o'clock and finish picking them at two.

"At first it seemed to be a relic of superstition; but when I investigated the picturesque mystery I learned that actual scientific tests had proven that fully forty per cent of the fragrance of roses disappeared in the light of day."

And in human life and human culture that is not a playful, fanciful conceit; it is a real veritable fact.—Malcolm J. McLeod.

MISSIONARIES TO GATHER AT TORONTO

By action of the Convention Committee of the International Convention of Religious Education, Toronto, June 23-29, 1930, all missionaries on furlough are being especially invited as the guests of the Convention. Not another person, even including those responsible for the Convention program, is enrolled without payment of the fee of five dollars. But missionaries are given complimentary enrolment.

Furthermore the good people of Toronto are asking the privilege of entertaining these frontiersmen of the Kingdom in their homes while in Toronto. Many missionaries will be there to enrich the program and fellowship and to meet those interested in their work. More and more the work of world-wide missions and of world-wide Christian religious education is seen as one task. No religious education is Christian without the world vision. No missionary enterprise is effective withuot the educational method.

AN OBEDIENT BOY

It is told of General Havelock that one day, when a boy, his father, having some business to attend to, left him on London Bridge and bade him wait until he came back. The father was detained and forgot his son, not returning to the bridge all the day. In the evening he reached home, and after he had rested a while his wife inquired, "Where is Harry?" The father thought a minute. "Dear me! I quite forgot Harry. He is on London Bridge, and has been for eight hours waiting for me," said he.

He hastened away to relieve the boy, and found him just where he had left him in the morning pacing to and fro like a sentinel on his beat. The strict fidelity to duty which the boy gloriously displayed showed itself in after years in the march to Lucknow.—Selected.

CLINGING TO JESUS

A gentleman, walking along the shore, thought he would carry home one of the pretty limpet shells all about him on the rocks. He tried to pick up one, but the limpet clung so firmly to the rock that he could not pull it off. He was surprised that so little a creature should be too strong for him. He next tried to push the limpet off the rock with his cane, but he could no more move it than the rock to which it clung so firmly. He said to himself, "I'll see whether I cannot have you yet." So he sat quietly and watched the limpet, to see if it would stop clinging and move about. For a long time it held on. Then it moved a little. With one sudden grasp he took it in his hand, because it was not clinging to the rock.

Satan knows he has no power to harm us when we are cleaving to our Rock, Christ Jesus, so he lurks about for his chance when we have abated our watchfulness and prayer. What we all need is the baptism of the Holy Ghost. With Christ enthroned in our hearts, "that wicked one toucheth us not."—Selected.

PERPETUITY OF THE BIBLE

The empire of Caesar is gone; the legions of Rome are moldering in the dust; the avalanches that Napoleon hurled upon Europe have melted away; the pride of the Pharaohs is fallen; the Pyramids they raised to be their tombs are sinking every day in the desert sands; Tyre is a rock for bleaching fishermen's nets; Sidon has scarcely left a wreck behind; but the Word of God still survives. All things that threatened to extinguish it have only aided it; and it proves every day how transient is the noblest monument that man can build—how enduring is the least word that God has spoken. Tradition has dug for it a grave, intolerance has lighted for it many a fagot; many a Judas has betrayed it with a kiss; many a Peter has denied it with an oath; many a Demas has forsaken it, but the Word of God still endures.—Cumming.

DEADLIEST OF POISONS IS UNGUARDED TONGUE

An unmerciful tongue may be more cruel than the most terrible instrument of torture ever forged. It can stab more keenly than a dagger, and cut more deeply than a sword. That quick tongue; that fiery, temper-driven tongue; that insidious, insinuating tongue; that soft, slimy, slandering tongue; that sharp, sarcastic tongue; these, an inspired writer has said, are set on fire of hell! It is dangerous to handle such cruel weapons heedlessly. With one of them you may so rend your mother's bosom that she will wish she had never been born; you may so pierce your father's heart as to bring down his gray hairs in sorrow to the grave; you may cut the nearest, dearest ties and leave the heartstrings bleeding.—Montreal Family Herald.

A COMMENDABLE PRACTICE

George Muller, of Bristol, England, the founder of Ashley Downs Orphanage, made it a rule not to leave his bedroom in the morning until he was as he put it, "Happy in the Lord." Mr. Muller's practice was a good one. If Fritz Kreisler set out to play his violin with the instrument out of tune, not only would he himself have a bad time but all the people within sound of his instrument, at least all with an ear for music, would wish themselves absent. No tuning, no tune.—News and Truth.

OUR STORY PAGE

AUNT SOPHIA'S HENS

Crash! Bank! Biff! Ouch! No, it wasn't an explosion, it was Tommy Moore arriving on his bicycle car. You see, he had hitched his express wagon to his bicycle and made a sort of sidecar out of it, only the express wagon was behind the wheel, so maybe it ought to have been called a behind-car. Well, it worked just fine on the level or going up hill, but going down hill was different. Sometimes the wagon went faster than the bicycle and then oh, my! It would bump into Tommy's rear wheel and like as not spill him off.

Aunt Sophie ran out of her warm, cozy kitchen exclaiming:

''Good lands! What's happened?''

But no harm had been done and Tommy and Betty went back into the kitchen where there were always nice fresh cookies and gingerbread men for Aunt Sophie's young friends.

''I've come with some pretty bad news,'' said Tommy after eating his fifth cookie.

''Lands sakes, child!'' exclaimed Aunt Sophie, looking quite scared for she was a nervous old body. ''You don't mean the Brody's bull has gotten loose again?''

''Worse than that,'' said Tommy seriously. ''There's a chicken thief around.''

Aunt Sophie sat down and wrung her hands, for she had, as every one knew, some very fine white leghorns and a silver gray dorking rooster and his wife, which were her pride and joy.

''Mrs. Renny had fifteen hens stolen and last night the Lukes had twenty taken,'' said Betty.

''You don't tell me!'' cried Aunt Sophie. ''And who do they reckon is taking all those hens?''

''Why, you see, there's the mortgage man who took Smith's farm away from them,'' Tommy replied. ''Mom says that a man who'd be mean enough to take away the Smith's farm is mean enough for anything.''

''But that man is Mr. Green and he's rich,'' Aunt Sophie said. ''What would he be doing, stealing folks' hens?''

''He sells 'em to the hotel, he does,'' explained Betty. ''He dressed eighty yesterday, and where did he get so many, that's what my daddy wants to know?''

''Well, he came around to our house and wanted to buy hens, but we don't keep more than a few,'' said Tommy, ''and Mom locked them up in the shed that night.''

''Shucks!'' said Aunt Sophie. ''Mr. Green wouldn't dare steal so many hens. He'd get found out.''

''He could kill them and quick pull off the feathers and nobody could tell whose hens they were,'' said Betty. ''That's what my mother says.''

''I hardly like to believe such things against anyone,'' Aunt Sophie said. ''But now I'm beginning to get worried about my fine white leghorns and my silver gray dorkings.''

''You'll be the next one,'' warned Tommy. ''You've got fifty of the finest chickens around here.''

Aunt Sophie grabbed four more cookies from the crock and put them in Tommy's hand and said:

''You're so inventive, Tommy. Can't you invent some way to save my hens? You know, old Aunt Sophie hasn't got much of this world's goods and if her hens are stolen she's going to have a hard time getting along.''

Tommy bit into a cookie and grinned.

''Yes, I've got a plan, no invention. I can't tell it to anybody, though, not even you, because it's a secret, and you know they say a secret is no secret if you tell anyone. So please let me go out into the hen yard all by myself and nobody look and I'll fix it so you'll get the best of that thief.''

''Oh, Tommy, please let me go too!'' begged Betty, but all in vain.

''It won't work unless it's kept secret,'' said Tommy.

So while Betty stayed and shelled chicken corn for Aunt Sophie in the kitchen, Tommy went out to the hens and was gone a long, long time.

''It always pays to be good to the boys,'' said Aunt Sophie. ''There isn't a lad around here wouldn't do right by me.''

''Now maybe you'll laugh tomorrow,'' was Tommy's parting word as he and Betty started homeward.

But alas! next morning Aunt Sophie was far from laughing for when she went out, all her chickens were gone. She didnt cry but she had to say ''The Lord will provide'' over fifty times before she could go on with her day's work.

Very soon Tommy was seen coming on his behind-car bicycle. When he heard the sad news he was almost cheerful. He ran to the telephone and called up his dad. Then in a little while there was the rattle-de-bank of an old car and along came Mr. Moore with the sheriff.

''Come on, Aunt Sophie,'' said Tommy. ''Get in, we're going to pay Mr. Green a visit.''

''Oh, but I don't believe he did it,'' protested Aunt Sophie. ''Besides I never could pick out my hens without any feathers and I shouldn't want to go around accusing people.

But they coaxed her to get in and away they went to the old farm where the mean and miserly Mr. Green lived. There were lots and lots of dirty, white feathers in his yard and there was Mr. Green putting dressed chickens into his his buggy.

''Go on, speak to him, Tommy,'' said Mr. Moore.

Tommy ran up to Mr. Green.

''Just let me look at those hens, please,'' he asked.

''Git out of here!'' was the gruff reply.

Then the sheriff and Mr. Moore got out and the sheriff said:

''Green, we're looking for some hens with a claw missing on their left feet. You didn't happen to see any such, did you?''

''Never saw such hens,'' growled Green, looking nervous, but Tommy had pulled a couple out of the buggy and was holding up the feet. Each one had only two front claws on the left foot, the other claw had been cut off.

''See!'' Tommy explained to the old lady. ''I marked your hens. Now Mr. Green will have to make good.''

''A hundred dollars or jail,'' said Mr. Moore. ''Come on now, Green.''

This time the rascal was caught for fair, and he was scared when he saw that the sheriff was about to arrest him. After a talk, he gave Aunt Sophie one hundred dollars and promised to go away and live in another place, so he was left off.

''Now you can get some more hens,'' said Tommy.

''Come home with me and I'll give you a whole crock of cookies,'' cried Aunt Sophie with tears of joy in her eyes.—Selected.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR HELPS

By ELIZABETH HANNER

President C. E. Society, High Point College

APRIL 27: "WHAT IS A 'USEFUL LIFE'?"

II Tim. 2:3-15, 21, 22.

Bible Readings

Monday—A Christian life. Tit. 3:1-8.

Tuesday—A pure life. I John 3:3.

Wednesday—A purposeful life. Acts 9:10-16.

Thursday—A loving life. I Cor. 12:1, 2.

Friday—A consecrated life. Rom. 12:1, 2.

Saturday—A faithful life. Matt. 25:14-21.

To the Leader

Put as much of practical thought into this meeting as possible. The useful life is a practical one. Try to get some of the influential people in the community to give you their opinion as to what constitutes the useful life. Bring this into your own talk as its basis. Use any of these songs—the more worship-provoking ones first, then those of a more practical naure: "Into My Heart," "Jesus Shall Reign," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "I Would Be True," "Give of Your Best to the Master," "Saved to Serve," "Lead On, O King Eternal."

Try to make the closing moments of the meeting very impressive.

Suggestions for Leader's Talk

The useful life—one of practical benefit—a life of some kind of SERVICE. The useful life must of necessity be gained through preparation.

The useful life—the good life—quiet, kind, cheerful.

The useful lives spent where there is no award—the importance of such a life. Contrast this to the life that demands praise. Many people whom the world calls failures are not.

Our responsibility in finding the right niche for our lives—and the importance of our own decisive qualities.

Topics—Talks

1. Practicality.
2. Optimism.
3. Service—all helpfulness.
4. Loyalty.
5. Ability.
6. Humor.

Answer These

1. Describe the life you would like to live?
2. What may we as Christian Endeavorers do to be of use in the world? In the various fields?
3. Give examples of usefulness in the lives of great men—either Biblical or otherwise.
4. Why is all helpfulness useful?

Quotations

An idler is a watch that wants both hands;
As useless if it goes as if it stands.
—Cowper.

Behind any achievement worth calling by the name, you will find a man who in some way or other has hit upon what he can do.—E. A. Robinson.

THINGS THAT COUNT

Not what we have, but what we use;
Not what we see, but what we choose:
These are the things that mar or bless
The sum of human happiness.

The things nearby, not thing afar,
Not what we seem, but what we are:
These are the things that make or break,
That give the heart its joy or ache.

Not what seems fair, but what is true;
Not what we dream, but what we do:
These are the things that shine like gems,

Like stars in fortune's diadems.
not what we take, but what we give;
Not as we pray, but as we life:
These are the things that make for peace,
Both now and after time shall cease.

IS YOUR BIBLE OPEN?

Home Bible Reading Courses

One of the most pleasant and helpful ways of reading or studying the Bible is the method pursued in the home Bible reading courses inaugurated by the American Home Bible Institute. Hundreds enrolled at the start, and the many letters of appreciation received by the Institute from all parts of the country are strong commendations of the plan.

The plan is simple. Any one who can read may enjoy and profit by these delightful reading courses, and men and women of the highest intellectual attainments find added pleasure and knowledge in their pursuit.

All that is required is the repeated reading of the selected book of the Bible, each reading from a different point of view. Upon the completion of the readings a test may be taken to ascertain what has been gained. Answers will be graded if desired.

The results are surprising. Most Christians are familiar with small, disconnected sections of God's Word; few have ever taken a comprehensive view of even one book. The result is like an aeroplane view.

Your promise to read the selected book on the lines suggested brings the suggestion sheet at once. Each one must enroll for himself.

These courses are not sold and no enrollment fee is charged.

Their support and extension depends, under God, upon the contributions of friends. It is desirable that each one who enrolls become a SUPPORTING FRIEND of the Lnstitute and share, as one of Christ's stewards, in the great work that is being done. One dollar, or more, at time of enrollment is suggested.

There has been a considerable slump in receipts in the past month, and your treasurer has been in hard straits. It would be much better, it seems to me, if we would work steadily instead of working spasmodically. A long, steady pull will accomplish more than a series of jerks, and there is not so much danger of breaking the traces. The fiscal year for the General Conference closes with April 30, and I am expected to have my report in Dr. Straughn's hands not later than May 1. Please send all money for G. C. B. in your possession to me by the 30th instant. I ought to receive a large amount in the next week from the Easter services. Your treasury is hungry and thirsty, and nothing but money will satisfy it. Feed it, brethren.

N. C. SOCIAL SERVICE CONFERENCE

The North Carolina Conference for Social Service was started 18 years ago by a few citizens who were alive to the social, civic and economic problems of the state. Their purpose was three-fold:

1. To provide through committees and annual conferences, means for study and analysis of conditions which tend to create and perpetuate such social ills as preventable ignorance, poverty, delinquency and disease; and to consider means which are needed to enlarge the opportunity for wholesome life and to insure social justice to our people.

2. To inform the people of the commonwealth about current problems of this kind, and to stimulate them to thought and to an interest in remedies.

3. To secure remedies for such social ills whenever possible by marshalling public opinion and official action in favor of policies which study, reason and experience show to be beneficial.

—A whale, malodorous and unsightly, is being exhibited on a freight car in Greensboro this week. It is said to be 55 feet long and to have weighed 66 tons. It was caught off the coast of California. The two men in charge have been in the whale exhibition business since the world's fair in Chicago in 1893. They show the weapons used in catching whales and some of the substances derived from whales, as ivory, ambergris, etc. They charge 25 cents for admission to adults and 15 cents to children.

FIRST DISTRICT RALLY AT LEBANON

To say that the "fifth Sunday" Rally of the First District was a success is mild praise. Any meeting that is as thoroughly enjoyed by every one as that one was is bound to be of untold benefit.

At the morning session, Dr. Johnson talked in his simple, philosophical way about the "Pentecost of 1,900 Years Ago and the Pentecost of Today." We were extremely fortunate, then, in having with us the president of the Conference, Dr. S. W. Taylor, who spoke in a most inspiring way of many things that are near to the hearts of us all. He made a special plea for new member for the Honor Roll of paid-up churches in the Dollar a Member campaign.

Intermission for lunch was a most delightful hour. Those good-hearted, friendly people of the Lebanon neighborhood had prepared a regular banquet under the trees. Brunswick stew, fried chicken, country ham, sandwiches, relishes, and every sort of cake in the cook book or out was heaped up on the tables—but not for long!

An interesting program was that of the afternoon. The superintendent of schools from Roanoke Rapids talked with the ease of one who knows his subject about the superintendent's place in the Sunday school. Following his talk, Mr. Auman led an open forum on the problems of the superintendent. Many helpful suggestions and criticisms were made.

The next speaker was Miss Winnie Burt, of Eden Church, who talked, in the voice of true consecration, of the spiritual obligations of the Sunday school teacher. Then, Miss Ruth Barnes, president of the Senior C. E. Society of the Enfield Church, told in her vivid way of the splendid work C. E. Societies are doing, particularly that which our own fine organization in Enfied is accomplishing. The C. E. she said, is the most alive organization of today, for it reaches a more interested group of young people than does the church or the Sunday School. Its atmosphere of informality and friendliness appeals to both the intellectual and social side of the individual. Miss Ethel Harrison then gave some of her well-thought-out views on the business organization of the District.

Mr. J. Clyde Auman, chairman of the First District, has been arranging some very fine programs all along, and he is to be congratulated on his excellent program for March. The next meeting is planned for Creswell. There we hope to have not only the district meeting of charges, but also a young people's rally in connection with the C. E. Societies, not to mention boating, fishing, and a big, campfire supper one night.

CONSCIENCE

When a foolish thought within
Tries to take us in a snare,
Conscience tells us "It is sin;"
And entreats us to beware.

If in something we transgress,
And are tempted to deny,
Conscience says, "Your fault confess;
Do not dare to tell a lie."

In the morning, when we rise,
And would fain omit to pray,
"Child, consider," conscience cries,
"Should not God be sought today!"

When, within His holy walls,
Far abroad our thoughts we send,
Sonscience often loudly calls,
And entreats us to attend.

When our angry passions rise,
Tempting to revenge an ill,
"Now, subdue it," conscience cries;
"Do command your temper still."

Thus, without our will or choice,
This good monitor within,
With a secret, gentle voice,
Warns us to beware of sin.

But, if we should disregard,
While this friendy voice would call,
Conscience soon will grow so hard,
That it will not speak at all .

GAMBLING COURSES

The Pathfinder has received a letter from Columbia university offering a home study course in Wall Street gambling. This letter holds out rosy promises of riches to be made in Wall Street. It says: "The investor who bases his moves on knowledge of fundamental principles will, as usual, show a good profit and loss statement a year hence."

How familiar this line of bunk is! It is exactly the same sort of stuff that was fed to the droves of lambs who were led to the slaughter last fall. Wall Street made such a grand clean-up that time that it has all its bell-wethers out working overtime to round up new victims. And even the old victims will be back in Wall Street again for more—as soon as they can beg or borrow enough from their more thrifty friends to try and "recoup their losses."

People with the gambling instinct never get enough punishment; they are always coming back for more, hoping to get even. Hence Wall Street is perfectly safe as a gambling institution—a million times bigger than Monte Carlo. Some of the leading bankers have recently issued elaborate pleas in defense of stock gambling—they argue that it is what keeps business alive. The government could interfere with the game but it doesn't dare, as too many powerful friends would be thrown out of a job and might have to go to work like us common people.—The Pathfinder.

INVASION OF LOCUSTS

Huge swarms of locusts still continue to invade Palestine, Transjordania, Egypt and North Africa. In Transjordania 75,000 men, practically the man-power of the nation, has been mustered to repel the invasion. Thousands of acres of land where the locusts have laid eggs have been plowed up. The men, working in three shifts, have collected 1,500 tons of locusts and 200 tons of eggs. Meanwhile the Egyptian government opened a credit of $25,000 for emergency measures to fight locusts which seem to be sweeping out from the Sudan, a vast marsh land. The swarms are 20 or 30 miles wide and are flying across the Red Sea into Arabia and Sinai. Even railway trains are impeded by the number of the insects on the tracks. Two companies of the famed French Legion, armed with sprayers, were sent out to fight the insects when they invaded Casabianca, Morocco. The locusts swarmed into the town in such numbers that all cafes had to be closed and out-door activities in general were paralyzed. With the battlecry, "Save our Beer," the Legionnaires went into action with insecticide sprayers and successfully repulsed the pests so far as that town was concerned.—Pathfinder.

DENMARK AND LEAGUE

An interesting question recently came up in the Danish parliament. Since Denmark proposes to reduce her army and navy it was proposed to appoint a commission to determine Denmark's military obligations to the League of Nations, namely, whether a member of the league must maintain a certain military establishment in order to be prepared to act if called upon by the league. The parliament voted down the proposal on the theory that membership in the league does not prevent Denmark from reducing her military and naval forces as much as she desires, even to the extent of abolishing both.—Exchange.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Roberta Station.—We were very sorry indeed to learn of the death of our former pastor, Rev. N. Brittain.

We had a fine prayer service at Roberta church last night. Services are conducted there each Sunday night beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

Our Sunday school is progressing very nicely. Attendance for Sunday was 206. We are wanting to go over 300 again this summer.

Rev. Robert Short delivered a fine, soul-stirring message Sunday morning.

An Easter-egg hunt was greatly enjoyed by the children of our Sunday school Saturday afternoon.

There have been several of our members absent from Sunday school on account of sickness. We hope they will soon be able to come and be with us again.

Mount Carmel Church.—Time has passed since a piece has appeared in the Herald from our church. Our many thoughts have been among the readers of this wonderful paper.

Sunday was a very busy day for us, but a happy one. This being Easter Sunday we had a splendid Sunday school lesson taught us pointing out the way in which Jesus bore the cross.

Immediately after Sunday school Rev. C. G. Isley, pastor of the church, preached an instructive sermon to a well filled house.

The Ladies' Aid Society met Sunday with Mrs. Curtis Koontz from State Street church presiding. The words of cheer and encouragement that she brought with her were deeply appreciated.

Just a few days ago I passed along the highway and saw an old lady with silver hair sitting on a porch. As I looked at her I thought of this poem:

"I wouldn't make fun of the aged, not I;
Perhaps you'll be aged yourself by and by;
'Tis better to smile when you happen to meet,
And give them your aid when they're crossing the street;
You will feel well repaid for the good you have done,
As they thank you and add a 'God bless you, my son.'"

Matthews Chapel, Greensville Circuit.—On Easter Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. E. G. Cowan, preached an interesting and helpful sermon. After service the Lord's Supper was administered.

We are having good attendance at Sunday school, also a live Christian Endeavor Society.

Several of our members attended the Rally Day on the fifth Sunday and report an enjoyable time.

Our hearts have been recently saddened by the loss of one of our most faithful and loyal members, Mr. A. W. Moore, who departed this life on Wednesday, April 15. He was in his 58th year. Mr. Moore was stricken with paralysis a short time before his death. He was a man of true worth, always patient, gentle and kind, never forgetting to serve others. His going is a great loss to the community and church, and to his loved ones.

May the Lord sustain them and keep them. The funeral services were held at his church, and his body was laid to rest in the family burying ground.

We enjoyed having Rev. S. W. Taylor with us the fourth Sunday in March at 3 o'clock. His sermon was excellent.

Fairview.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely.

We are planning an all-day service for Mothers' Day.

A few Saturday nights ago our Baraca class gave a musical program and raised $63.40, which will be paid on our Sunday school rooms.

We are having an egg-hunt today for the entire Sunday school at 9:30 a. m.

Our Philathea class held its regular monthly business meeting on Friday evening, April 18, at the home of Mrs. J. H. Coleman, Jr., eleven being present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. W. E. Coffin. After all business was finished we decided to have a social at an early date.

We also organized a Ladies' Aid Society, electing our pastor's wife, Mrs. O. B. Williams, for president, Mrs. Joe Troxler, vice-president; Mrs. R. L. Ireland, secretary and treasurer. We are expecting to do some good work. All business finished, delightful refreshments were served by the hostess.

On the second Sunday our pastor gave us two good sermons. We always enjoy the helpful messages he brings us. He will preach for us again the fourth Sunday night.

Siler City Church.—We had hoped to have a record-breaking attendance in Sunday school on Easter day, but we fell short, only 82 being present. Glad to report four new scholars and several visitors. Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Smith and daughter, Gladys, and Mrs. Smith's mother, Mrs. Ross, have moved from Liberty to our town and joined our Sunday school. We are more than delighted to welcome them to our church and town.

Our special meeting, which has been in progress for the past two weeks, came to a close the third Sunday at the 11 o'clock hour with a special Easter message by our pastor. The subject was "Atonement and Its Necessities." We feel that this was the greatest sermon he had preached in the past two weeks.

Dr. Williams did all the preaching for the meeting. He was at his best at each service and gave us some wonderful messages. There were four conversions and we fel sure much good was accomplished, but not what we had hoped for. Rev. Permar, pastor of Friends church, Asheboro, was with us at each service and conducted the singing. We were well pleased with his efforts and feel sure he did great good. We hope to have him with us again at some future date. We all enjoyed having Mrs. Permar with us for one service and singing for us. We were very glad to have the other churches of the town worship with us at each service, and especially the co-operation of the pastors. Every one was carried away with our pastor's sermons, and said many good things about him, and no wonder, "We've got a good preacher and are real proud of him."

The Easter exercise was rendered at the evening hour. Misses Flossie Siler, Sallie Smith, Mrs. C. E. Brady and Mrs. Duncan Welch had charge of the program. Each child did his part real well and we are proud of our young people.

Four from our church attended the Leadership Training School at Asheboro. Mr. D. L. Johnson, Miss Sallie Smith, Cletus Whitehead, and D. G. Fox. We wish more might have gone.

Miss Lebus Stone, of H. P. College, is spending the Easter holidays with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Stone.

Miss Mabel Williams, of the faculty of High Point College, and daughter of our pastor, worshiped with us Sunday.

The Woman's Auxiliary called a meeting last Wednesday night to elect new officers for the coming year. Mrs. L. L. Woody was re-elected president; Mrs. Emma B. Siler, vice-president; Mrs. Duncan Welch, recording secretary; Mrs. E. D. Woody, corresponding secretary; Mrs. D. L. Johnson, treasurer. Our Auxiliary will meet at the church Thusday, April 24th, at 2:30 o'clock. This is the beginning of a new year and we trust much and lasting good will be accomplished through our Auxiliary. The past seven Saturdays we have had on a cake sale which has netted us a neat little sum.

The second quarterly conference will meet at Liberty Sunday afternoon, April 27th. Hope a good number of our church may attend.

Davidson.—Our second quarterly conference will be held at Pine Hill on Saturday before the second Sunday in May at 1:30 o'clock. We hope to have printed blanks in the hands of each steward so that each one can make a personal report, showing the condition of their list. Stewards, please don't report by proxy if you can possibly report in person.

The Ladies' Aid of Lineberry has bought carpet for Lineberry which will add much to the atractiveness of the church. The wonder is, how can any church get along without an Aid?

The Christian Endeavor Society under the leadership of Ernest Smith is growing in numbers and interest. Every church needs a C. E. Society. It helps to keep your church alive and wonderfully develops leadership.

Asheboro.—Our revival services will begin next Sunday, April 27th, to run for ten days or more. Rev. R. C. Stubbins, the pastor of Rorsyth charge, will come in time for the service on Monday night. We extend a cordial invitation to our people on the nearby charges to come in and be with us as much as possible during the meeting. The evening services will be at 7:30 and very likely after Monday there will be an afternoon service at 3:30.

J. E. PRITCHARD.

First Church, High Point.—After Holy Week services every evening during the week, a most impressive and solemn service was observed on Good Friday, beginning at 12, noon, and continuing for three hours in commemoration of the crucifixion of Jesus. At this meeting, which was a union service and well attended by reverent worshipers from the different denominations in the city, Rev. Tom Alderman Sikes, pastor of Central Friends church, presided. There was special music by Mesdames Whitesell and Allred with Prof. E. B. Stimson at the organ. Among the ministers, who ably presented the seven utterances of Jesus on the cross, were the following: Rev. W. R. Shaffer of the Reformed church, Miss Clara I. Cox, pastoress Springfield Friends church, Rev. A. L. Aycock of South Main M. E. Church, Mr. John C. Abels of the Presbyterian church, Rev. R. I. Farmer, pastor of First Methodist Protestant church, and Dr. R. M. Andrews, president of High Point College. At the close of the service the brightly illuminated cross behind the organ added solemnity to this impressive occasion. In the church auditorium on Easter Sunday morning, the pulpit was a scene of loveliness, the offering of beautiful flowers, palms, and ferns, being donated by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Penny, an annual tribute of love in memory of their only daughter, Evelyn, who passed on in 1922.

At the 11 o'clock service Rev. E. L. Ballard announced that the Junior church has been functioning for three years, and some of the boys and girls have been attending ever since, and he felt that the time has come for them to be promoted to the adult congregation. The names of a dozen boys and girls were read, and Rev. Mr. Farmer received them and gave them diplomas. Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a very forceful and convincing message on "The Promise of Immortality." He said in part: The resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ was not an extraordinary event, but a commonplace event with extraordinary surroundings and happenings. The resurrection will happen to every believer in immortality; the best we can do at Easter is to look upon it as a reassurance of the idea of the resurrection from the dead. Paul, the master student, says that Jesus has abolished death and risen victor over it. I stand here today and affirm with all the power and emphasis of which I am capable my belief in the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of our spiritual body, and a future life beyond the grave. All nature teaches it; the bulb bursts into the exquisite lily, the acorn grows into a graceful and majestic oak, the fruits all re-appear in due season. When Sir William Hamilton, the great Scottish metaphysician, lay dying, upon being asked what was his state of mind, replied: "Intense expectancy!" The deepest thinkers and greatest minds of all ages have believed in immortality, and have left behind sincere expressions of that glorious faith.

A beautiful pageant, "The Call of the Cross," was presented in an admirable manner by members of the Sunday school at 7:30 o'clock p. m. Much praise and commendation is given to the committee, which so ably and efficiently directed this presentation, of which Mrs. S. S. Coe was the capable chairman.

We were delighted to receive 15 boys and girls into membership Sunday morning, a number of whom not having received the rite before, were baptized by Rev. R. I. Farmer, assisted by Rev. E. L. Ballard. This scene of youth's pledge of faith and allegiance to Christ as its Lord and Saviour is always impressive, and was a fitting climax to the Lenten services.

The church school report shows much improvement over the preceding week: Attendance, 392; offering, $16.44.

The Wednesday evening supper meetings, which have proved so popular, will be resumed this week. After supper, a song service will be held for ten minutes, followed by a half-hour prayer meeting, when the minister will speak on "The Post-Resurrection Ministry of Christ." At 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening the new Intermediate C. E. Society will meet, and the leader, Billy Vance, will speak on the topic, "Thoughts Suggested by Easter."

At the Senior C. E. Society meeting Monday evening the topic, "Why We Believe That We Live Forever," was discussed. Miss Myrtle Davis is the faithful president of this group of young people.

High Point is rapidly becoming a Convention City. This week the N. C. Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will convene in Wesley Memorial church for a session of three days, at which 300 delegates are expected. On Thursday at noon dinner will be served to 250 young people of this delegation in our church by the Woman's Auxiliary. High Point College is entertaining the N. C. Collegiate Press Association on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of this week, and an urgent appeal is being made for the entertainment of some of these youthful journalists in our homes.

We are pleased to learn that Mrs. Johnsie Oakes Jackson, who underwent an operation at High Point Hospital Saturday morning, is recovering nicely.

Mrs. W. P. Pickett suffered a misfortune last Tuesday afternoon when her residence on North Main street caught on fire in an upstairs closet, the origin of which is a mystery. The roof of the house was badly damaged, and the inside walls of the greater number of the rooms were damaged so much that they need to be renovated. Mrs. Pickett lost all her clothing in this fire. The apartment occupied by her son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Pickett, was not badly damaged.

Mrs. R. I. Farmer, wife of the pastor, was called to Wellsville, Ohio, last Tuesday morning to the bedside of her father, Mr. W. H. Fogo, who is seriously ill of heart trouble and pneumonia. Mr. and Mrs. Fogo spent one winter her with their daughter, and made many warm friends, who are grieved to learn of his illness.

The numerous friends of Miss Ruth Welch, daughter of Mrs. J. C. Welch, Sr., will be pleased to know that she is recovering satisfactorily from a recent operation at Guilford General Hospital.

Rev. R. I. Farmer, Mrs. S. S. Coe, and Mrs. S. D. Shelton are in Burlington today in attendance upon the First Annual Sesion of N. C. Branch of Women's Work. Mrs. Shelton will remain as a delegate for tomorrow's sessions.

The pleasing play, "Umbrellas t' Mend," which was so admirably given here on three occasions recently by the C. E. Society, will be presented at Calvary church, Greensboro, on next Friday evening. This delightful production will furnish an evening of wholesale fun and entertainment, and we bespeak for these young people and their assistants a splendid audience, who will be well paid for their attendance.

A visit on Friday to Mrs. Jennie Pickett Ferree at her home on Steele street was an inspiration. She was listening to West Market, Greensboro, church services of radio, and was enjoying it. Although blind and shut in by illness, she is keenly interested in the activities of her friends, the church, and the world at large. She is the widow of Rev. T. T. Ferree, an honored member of N. C. Conference for many years, of which he was at one time the president. She is tenderly cared for by her devoted daughters, Misses Elizabeth and Fern Ferree, and a sister, Miss Louise Pickett.

Pleasant Hill, West Forsyth Charge.—The pastor filled his appointment here Sunday morning. We were glad to have quite a number of visitors for the preaching service as well as for Sunday school. Among the visitors for both services was "The Junior Girls Quartette," from Burlington. They sang several splendid selections in Sunday school and at the 11 o'clock service. We were also glad to have Mr. Easley, the blind musician of Burlington, with us again, who accompanied the quartette on the piano. Every one seemed thoroughly to enjoy the special selections and we hope to have them sing for us again soon.

The Woman's Auxiliary met on last Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. C. B. Way.

Miss Martha Louise Speas will be hostess to the Junior Missionary Society on next Saturday afternoon, April 26. The meeting starts at 3 and all the members are urged to be present.

The second quarterly conference will be held at Harmony Grove church the fourth Sunday of this month. The regular preaching service will be held in the morning. A picnic dinner will be served and the business of the conference will be transacted in the afternoon. All the official members are requested to be present.

REPORTER.

Pageland.—I feel that we have a real God-sent man to be our pastor. I think he is going to do more than merely come twice a month and preach to us. I just wish he could be with us all the time, for we need him in and around Pageland. We wish the other churches on the charge would help build a parsonage in Pageland, for I feel like this is the place for it. We desire the prayers of the other churches and our president, Bro. Taylor, that Rose Hill may go all the way through and put on new life for our Master Pray for us and dear Bro. Martin. We have already learned to love him and hope he is going to help us do a great work this year.

Brother Anderson, from Albemarle, was with us last Friday night and brought us a grand message, but we very much regret he did not have many of the Pageland people to hear him on account of a misunderstanding, but there was a good number from New Hope and Bethesda. We hope to have him again sometime.

The Ladies' Aid did a good work last year and we want to do more this year. We meet once a month at different homes.

Our Sunday school is small, but we have an interesting school. The attendance averages around 50.

Brother Martin preached two good sermons Sunday. They were much enjoyed by all who heard him.

Brother Taylor visited us some time in March. We were so glad to have him and wish he would come more often.

MRS. J. H. MARZE.

Forsyth Charge.—Our second quarterly conference has been held. Some good reports were made from Sunday schools, Christian Endeavorers and Women's Auxiliaries. Mr. S. W. Oldham and Mr. R. M. Cox are nominees for delegate to Annual Conference.

Beautiful shrubbery has been planted on the church grounds at Union Ridge and Maple Springs. Mt. Carmel church has spent considerable money and effort in beautifying their cemetery this spring.

We had our district convention the fifth Sunday in March. The people seemed pleased with the program. Our help from out of the district was Mrs. W. C. Hammer, who gave us an excellent report of our women's work in North Carolina Conference, and we also had a male quartet from High Point College that highly pleased the congregation with quartet selections and solo speeches.

Finances are somewhat behind on our charge. However, some of the churches are keeping fairly well toward the front. One church, Mount Carmel, has paid its college "Dollar a Member" several weeks ago, but somehow has not been given its place in the credits column.

Since our last report we have lost three members in death: Miss Margaret Elizabeth Wilson, a faithful member of Hickory Ridge; Mrs. R. W. Walker, a loyal and much-loved member at Maple Springs, and Mr. I. O. Patterson, a well beloved member of Mt. Carmel church.

The writer also assisted Rev. A. L. Hunter in the funeral of Mr. A. J. Long, who passed away the last of February. Mr. Long was a staunch supporter of Oak Grove church and a long time subscriber to our church paper. He was a good man and always stood by his pastor.

R. C. STUBBINS.

Harmony.—We, the members of Harmony church and community, were very fortunate to have with us the president of our Conference, Dr. Taylor, the second Sunday in April. Dr. Taylor delivered a very interesting sermon at the 11 o'clock service.

The Sunday school, Missionary Society and Christian Endeavor of our church are progressing fine.

The children of our community and Sunday school gave an interesting Easter program Sunday evening. The Christian Endeavor also took part in the program. Mrs. Henry Balentine should be given credit for getting up this interesting program.

Since last report from our church our community has been saddened by the death of two of its oldest citizens. Mr. J. H. Henley died at his home Thursday, April 17. Mr. Henley had been confined to his room for some time. Mr. J. L. Knight died suddenly at his home Saturday, April 20. The community regrets the passing of these two faithful citizens.

REPORTER.

Mount Pleasant, Mount Pleasant Circuit.—One hundred and eighty-four people were present for Sunday school Sunday morning, and the collected amounted to $5.77. The primary and beginners' classes sang a special Easter selection in the assembly meeting of the Sunday school.

During the church services a special offering was taken for home missions.

Rev. J. R. Hutton delivered a splendid sermon on the topic of "Miracles," stressing especially Christ being raised from the tomb.

Much work has been done recently on and around the church grounds, and much is contemplated being done soon.

A quartette of girls, composed of Miss Rebecca Woody Causey, Misses Ruby and Lillian Smith, and Miss Ruth Bowman, from the local church, sang several numbers over WNRC in Greensboro Sunday afternoon. They were accompanied at the piano by Miss Mae Smith, church pianist. Many listeners enjoyed the program immensely.

We were glad to have Dr. Thomas C. Amick, of Elon College, worship with us Sunday.

MRS. LILLIAN SHOFFNER TROGDON,

Burlington, First Church.—Our reporter has been keeping the readers of the Herald so well informed of the activities of First Church that it has not been necessary or even advisable for the pastor to have anything to say. However, since Brother Braxton was not in the services today, I will write a report of recent happenings.

In spite of the "hard times" we are still attempting to be about the Father's business. The Sunday school attendance has been on the increase recently. Brother Floy Rogers is a good superintendent, and his fine group of teachers is doing splendid work.

On Sunday, April 13th, we observed Decision Day during the closing period of the Sunday school. Previous to this, for four Sundays preceding, the pastor had met with a group of boys and girls and had instructed them in the matter of becoming Christians and church membership. Then when the opportunity was given for those who would "Accept Jesus as my personal Savior" 24 boys and girls came to the altar for a prayer of consecration.

Last Tuesday evening 51 members of the Woman's Auxiliary met for the regular monthly meeting. This was a most interesting meeting. Besides the regular business of the meeting Circle No. 1 gave a little play entitled "Sewing for the Heathen." This was rather amusing. The women are rejoicing in the fact that they have raised their budget in full; and that they are to be hostesses to the North Carolina Branch meeting that convenes in our church on the 22nd and 23rd.

Easter Sunday was the best day we have had in a long time. There were 343 present for the Sunday school session. Then a large congregation assembled for the preaching service. At this service the music was unusually good, and the pastor preached the best he could on "Jesus Christ the Resurrection and the Life." Janette Downing, the infant daughter of Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Lindley, was christened at the beginning of the service. When the opportunity to unite with the church was given 25 came forward and were received. They were as follows: Prof. and Mrs. C. C. Lindley, Lillian Moser, Helen Ingle, Miss Elizabeth Miller, Miss Mary Miller, Mrs. Leland Miller, Mr. and Mrs. George R. Haltom, Mrs. C. C. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Byrd Shepherd, Mrs. J. V. Dollar, Aldrow Dollar, Marvin Pickard, Lad Anthony, Ruby Dare Isley, Margaret Way, Mrs. George O. Crawford, Ruth McPherson, Bennie Evans, Mr. Thomas Campbell, and Mack Campbell. Ten of these were by transfer and the others on profession of faith. There are quite a number more who have expressed their intentions of joining with us and will be received later.

At the evening hour the pageant, "The Call of the Cross," was given. This was one of the best special services given by our church during the past two and a half years. A large congregation enjoyed the program. The committee that had charge of the service and all those who took part from the least to the greatest have our sincere thanks. The offering was good, but not so large as it seems it should have been.

After Easter—what? We are already looking forward to Pentecost. A quiet and rather limited "Visitation Evangelistic Effort" was put forth the week of April 6-13, and some work was done last week. The large number uniting with our church Sunday was a part of the result. We are hoping that this work may continue right on up to and including our special evangelistic services that are scheduled to begin the second Sunday in May, and then reach on to the 8th of June when we shall observe the 1900th anniversary of Pentecost. Rev. J. E. Pritchard is to assist the pastor in the special services.

With the newly-renovated church, the glorious Easter day, the good congregations, and the splendid services, all in all it was a most blessed day with First Church.

L. W. GERRINGER, Pastor.

Mount Pleasant, Cleveland Circuit.—Brother Ridge came to us Sunday with a very interesting sermon. His subject was "Playing Fair With God."

We were glad to see Bro. John Johnson back at church Sunday, who has been very sick for some time. We were glad to have Mr. John Powell with us Sunday, and also other visitors. We hope they will come again.

We are hoping to meet with our Sunday school superintendent and teachers next Sunday, as we have not met in Sunday school for several months. We hope our Sunday school will increase and be successful.

DELLA MAE BRACKETT, Reporter.

Greensville.—Our work on the charge is moving slowly, yet we feel, surely. Good congregations greet us at each service, and there are signs of progress on the field. We have not completed the campaign for "Dollar a Member" for the college yet, but trust that we will have a good report to make from this source soon. An offering will be taken at all of the churches for the N. C. S. on Easter Sunday and same will be forwarded to the treasurer at once. There has been a great deal of sickness on the charge this spring, but all are better now, am glad to report.

Brother Spencer and Brother Auman will be our pulpit help for our entire series of revival meetings this summer. And we are trusting, hoping, and praying, that we may have a gracious ingathering of souls for the Master's kingdom at this time.

We plan a series of cottage prayer meetings for at least two weeks before our special meetings begin. Pray for us, brethren, that we may have successful meetings.

Our district Rally at Lebanon church on Spring Church charge was a great success from every standpoint, and we trust that much good was accomplished.

With all good wishes to the Herald and all its readers, and with prayers for the success of our Beloved Zion this year, I am,

Faithfully yours in His serivce,
E. G. COWAN.

Liberty.—Our pastor, Dr. J. D. Williams, preached a wonderful sermon for us last Sunday. At the close of the service he administered the Lord's Supper.

Our Auxiliary met at the church on Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. Scripture was read by the president and prayer by Mrs. Siler. Study for the afternoon, "Faith," Hebrews 11. This being our first meeting for the year. Our treasurer reported the best year's work in the history of our society with all obligations paid and $5.00 to High Point College. Mrs. J. W. Curtis, Mrs. A. J. Brower and Mrs. J. B. York were elected delegates to Branch meeting at Burlington April 22-23.

We are very much aggrieved at this writing by the moving of our faithful and loyal members, Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Smith, and small daughter, Gladys, but feel that our "sister church" at Siler City will be gaining ground. I am sure no members could leave us who would be missed more. Our prayers and good wishes go with them.

We are sorry to report several of our members sick. Mrs. S. M. Smith is at St. Leo's Hospital, but is doing nicely after an operation and we hope she can be home soon. Mrs. Will Smith, wife of our Sunday school superintendent, is also sick. Hope a speedy recovery for both.

With many good wishes to the Herald and its readers.

MRS. J. B. YORK, Reporter.

Pleasant Grove.—The Easter program was given Sunday morning. All the children rendered their parts well. The Senior C. E. Society sang the beautiful Easter songs in a very pleasing manner. The offering amounted to about $27.00. Our pastor preached a splendid sermon Sunday evening from St. Luke 23:33: "And when they were come to the place, which was called Calvary, there they crucified him."

We were very glad to have the children of our pastor and wife worship with us: Mr. Ralph Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Staley Garrison. We were also glad to have Mr. and Mrs. Gorrell Morris, of Lexington, and Mr. McAdams and family, formerly of Orange County.

Next Sunday, April 27, we are planning to celebrate the centennial anniversary of our church. We are hoping to have with us a number of the former pastors. Rev. T. F. McCulloch is to make an address to the Sunday school. Rev. S. W. Taylor, president of the North Carolina Conference, the sermon at 11 o'clock; in the afternoon short talks by Rev. G. L. Reynolds and Rev. Edward Suits and the address by Rev. R. C. Stubbins. There will be special music furnished by the Graham and Thomasville quartets.

The Brotherhood will meet Saturday night with Mr. F. H. Clark.

Lexington.—We are glad to report that our work is going along nicely. Our Sunday school is still on an increase. We are having an average of over 200 each Sunday. Our preaching services are being well attended also. We had our regular Easter entertainment on Sunday evening at the regular preaching time; a large crowd was present.

Our revival meeting begins Monday evening at 7:30 with Rev. O. C. Loy as the pulpit help, and we are hoping and praying for a gracious outpouring of the Holy Spirit during the 10 days of the meeting.

We received four new members into the church at the morning service Sunday morning. We ask the prayers of all Christian people that our revival may have great success and that it may be a means of making this community a better place in which to live.

POLYGAMY IN PHILIPPINES

Polygamy still prevails among the Mohammedans in the Philippines notwithstanding American laws to the contrary. The Koran tells the Moro that he may take four wives and the Koran is the last word on all subjects so far as he is concerned. The Philippine legislature has passed an amendment to the marriage law, and Governor-General Davis has approved it, which will abolish polygamy in 20 years. Christian elements in the Philippines desire to abolish the institution immediately, but the government feels that it is better policy to attempt to change old customs gradually. The old law against polygamy has not been enforced because the Moros resent it keenly and the government desires to interfere with native customs as little as possible.—Pathfinder.

MEXICO TAKES CENSUS

Uncle Sam is not the only one who is counting his children this year. Mexico is planning to take its first complete and accurate census on May 15, which has been declared a holiday so that public officials can devote their time to the work. Governors of the various states have volunteered to take the census of the block in which they live. Heavy penalties are provided for officials who do not co-operate in this grand count of the population.—Exchange.

TINY BOAT CROSSES ATLANTIC

A 15-ton, one-sail boat arrived in Havana harbor from Port Palos in southern Spain, after having followed the historic route taken by Columbus in 1492. The tiny craft, manned by Gurh Folgero and four others, is named the Roald Amundsen. Folgero left Oslo in the boat last June and is on a voyage from the Old World to the New in the interests of a fund for a monument to Amundsen.—Pathfinder.

MARRIED

Clary-Whitby

On February 22nd, Mr. Harvie E. Clary, and Miss Annie M. Whitby, were united in marriage by the writer at the parsonage in the presence of a number of friends and relatives of the young people.

Miss Whitby is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Whitby, of Brunswick, Va., and Mr. Clary is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Clary, of Brunswick, Va. Both Mr. and Mrs. Clary are members of the Methodist Protestant church at Matthews Chapel, both are active in the Sunday school and both are officers in the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor in this church. Both are from old and well established families and are among the finest people in our county.

TRAIL OF THE TITANOTHERE

In 1846 a huge fossil jaw was found in the White river badlands of South Dakota. Scientists called the animal the titanothere and declared that it was a giant odd-toed, hoofed beast which belonged to the same general family as modern horses, tapirs, and rhinoceroses. It became extinct at least a million years ago.

Since then the fossil remains of titanotheres have been assiduously collected by many expeditions. Prof Henry Fairfield Osborn has made a close study of the evolution of these remarkable animals and the results of his work are published by the Geological Survey.

When the titanotheres first appeared in America in early Eocene times, says Prof. Osborn, they were small, swift creatures, in appearance not very unlike the ancestral horses with which they lived. Some were only 14 inches high, and the largest were less than three feet high at the shoulders. Their descendants developed along many lines with their adaptation of varied environment and habits, some becoming somewhat like tapirs in size and proportions, others like rhinoceroses, and finally at the end of several lines were huge elephant-like forms such as Brontops and Brontotherium, more than eight feet high and weighing probably 6,000 pounds. So great was the differentiation that 12 subfamilies are recognized and there are represented in western America by 24 genera and 88 species. All this development took place within a short period, geologically speaking. Osborn estimates the time between 600,000 to 1,000,000 years.

Most of the remains have been found on the Great Plains and in the Rocky Mountains between Colorado and Utah on the south and the Cypress Hills in Canada on the north, but three species have been described from fragmentary specimens found in eastern Europe, and a recent expedition to the Gobi desert of Mongolia brought back a varied titanothere fauna.—The Pathfiender.

IN HONOR OF THE DEAD

Whitby

February 27th, 1930, June Whitby, aged 60 years, of Valentines, Va., was called from labor unto rest. Brother Whitby was a good man, honest as the day was long. He was a member of Wesley's Chapel M. P. church, a man that was devoted to his family and friends, and he numbered his friends by the hundreds. He will be greatly missed in the home, in the church, and in the community. Truly, a good man is gone. He leaves to mourn his going a wife, two daughter, four sons, and a number of relatives. We are glad to have known him. He died very suddenly from heart disease. He had suffered with this malady for several years but was not thought to be in a serious condition.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

Lingerfelt

Mrs. Maggie E. Lingerfelt, of Fitzhugh, Va., died in the hospital at Roanoke Rapids, N. C., on Monday, April 7, 1930, and was buried April 8th at Matthews Chapel. She had been a member of this church, but some years ago while living in Hopewell, Va., moved her membership there, and had just returned to this community a short time ago.

Mrs. Lingerfelt was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buck Harris, and leaves a father, mother, several sisters and brothers and a number of relatives, in addition to her husband, A. F. Lingerfelt, and three small sons to mourn their loss. She was a young woman, just 33 years of age, and will be sadly missed in her home and community.

The funeral was conducted by the writer in Matthews Chapel church on April 8th; a large gathering of friends was present.

E. G. COWAN, Pastor.

Moore

Alfred Whitfield Moore, aged 58 years and four months, departed this life very suddenly on Wednesday morning about 1 o'clock. Brother Moore was one of the best and one of the best known men in this county, and was admired and respected by all who knew him. For 15 years he had been a member of the official board on Greensville Charge, and at the time of his death he was secretary of the quarterly conference, a position he had held for a number of years with credit.

Brother Moore was a man that was always interested in his church, and in the welfare of his community, and devoted to his home, his family and his friends. He was always in his place in the church, in the Sunday school and in the Christian Endeavor meetings. No man was more active in the church work than was he.

He leaves to mourn their loss his wife, five sons, two daughter, three grandchildren, two brothers, and two sisters, and a number of nephews and nieces, and a great host of friends. Truly he will be missed, and we can but say, Our loss is heaven's gain.

The funeral was conducted Thursday afternoon, April 17th, 1930, at Matthews Chapel church, of which Brother Moore had been a life-long member, by the writer, assisted by Rev. J. B. O'Briant. The great throng, half of whom were not able to get in the church, and the profuse floral offerings attest the high esteem in which Brother Moore was held by his friends. He was interred beside his father in the old Moore burying ground at the home of his sister, Mrs. H. A. Clarke, near Vineland, Va. No man will be more missed than Brother Moore. He was stricken with paralysis on Tuesday morning, and never regained consciousness until the end came to relieve his suffering at 1 o'clock on Wednesday morning. Our hearts go out in sympathy to the bereaved ones.

And may the great God of all love and all grace comfort and sustain the loved ones in their sad hour of bereavement.

Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past,
The battle's fought, the race is won,
And thou art crowned at last.

Paris

Rocky Mount, April 13.—Miss Adelaide Paris, 69, beloved Rocky Mount school teacher, died here this morning after an illness of two weeks.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock, at her home, 614 Tarboro street, and interment will be made in Pineview cemetery. The rites will be conducted by the Rev. T. G. Vickers, of the First Methodist church, and the Rev. F. H. Craighill, of the Church of the Good Shepherd.

Miss Paris was a daughter of the late Dr. John Paris, Confederate army chaplain and circuit rider of the Methodist Protestant Church, who made his home at La Grange. She was born December 26, 1861, in Mecklenburg County, Virginia, and is survived by one sister, Miss Minnie Paris, of Rocky Mount, and two nieces, Mrs. F. E. Winslow and Miss Mabel Murchison, also of this city.

Miss Paris came to Rocky Mount in 1898 to become identified with the city's school system, and her many years of service were marked by the making of a wide circle of friends who mourn her death. She retired from her teaching profession about five years ago.

In Memoriam

"Forgive my grief for one removed,
Thy creature whom I found so fair;
I trust he lives in Thee, and there
I find him worthier to be loved."

Thus faith alone has served to conciliate the numerous friends of Rev. Nebula Brittain, pastor of St. Paul Methodist Protestant church, to his untimely death, which occurred at sunset on April 15. His members and friends stand grief-stricken and appalled at such an unexpected catastrophe; yet we dare not lament his promotion to a "brighter clime." Though we fail to comprehend the work of God, we realize that "Now we see through a glass, darkly; but then face to face."

In the three years and a half that the deceased one has lingered with us he has endeared himself to the hearts of all with whom he chanced to come in contact. Like a good shepherd he led his flock both faithfully and well, never hesitating to leave the ninety and nine to go in search of the one who was ever prone to wander.

He had, through the grace of God, formulated for himself a practical philosophy of living and that was serving mankind; with encouraging words he uplifted the despondent; with his steadfast earnestness he heaped coals of fire upon the brows of his enemies; with his deep-seated convictions we was able to outwit the cunning miles of satan.

His profound piety may be likened to a deep, fathomless stream, which flows on in silent majesty, swerving not from its course.

His earnestness deserves no less credit. He delivered every sermon as if it were his last, and when his last was rendered two weeks ago, a premonition of his forthcoming death was embodied in every word he uttered; then we comprehended not.

"Twilight and and evening bell,
And after that the dark;
May there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark."

THREE OF HIS FLOCK.

POISON IVY REMEDIES

Every spring people everywhere get a sort of "itching" to clean up their premises, get rid of unsightly weeds, briers, etc. Farmers must clear around fences and streams to make ready for the coming crops. And as the weather gets warmer picnickers flock to the hills and woods. Despite repeated warnings many contract a real itching—ivy poison. Lead acetate (sugar of lead) is widely and highly recommended for ivy poisoning. This can be procured at any drug store. Have the druggist dissolve the concentrated crystals in a given amount of 50 to 75 per cent medicated alcohol until he has a milky solution. Rub this solution into the skin several times a day. Sugar of lead is poisonous and must not be left where youngsters may claim it for internal use. Milk of magnesia rubbed on the affected parts will also give relief. Washing the hands in warm water with a strong laundry soap immediately after touching the poisonous plant may prevent a severe case of poisoning. A strong solution of baking soda will also relieve the itching.—The Pathfinder.

THE DAY OF LIFE

Have you ever been up in the morning
To watch the beautiful sun
Come up from the grounds of the eastland
To shine till the day is done?

Have you ever watched the sunset
When it lit the western sky,
And compared it to life's sunset
After busy years gone by?

Like the sunset of day, God made it,
To be beautiful, quiet and calm.
For after the sunset of life on earth
In heaven the soul goes on.

Vista is a young woman of special musical talent and many good qualities of heart and character. Mr. Mansfield is a successful business man in Durham.

Our Graduates

You surely know by this time that we have four young people graduating from high school in just two weeks, one boy and three girls. This week we report two contributions for graduating outfits, Mrs. A. C. Bulla, of Asheboro, a personal gift of $2.00, and the First Church Auxiliary, High Point, $10.00. We appreciate these. More will help, and we thank you. Two of the three girls will be with us some weeks yet, and one of them two years more. The boy, George Crickmore, a fine boy, will be going out just as soon as we can find work for him. If you can use a good boy who is 19 years old and who is graduating from high school in two weeks, or if you can help us place him well, please let us know.

Octagon Coupons

These coupons are still coming in, put we need more and more yet. Please send them along. We know you will. Thank you.

Many things are coming these days to cheer our hearts and we are glad.

We still need YOU to help us over the stressing needs here, and YOU WILL keep helping. May the dear Lord lead in it all.

Yours in His service,

—Dr. S. K. Spahr had the misfortune to be a party to an automobile collision last Monday night. Bro. Spahr was not hurt, but the driver of the other car received some wounds which sent him to a hospital. It is hoped his injuries will not prove to be serious. Neither car was badly damaged. The collision occurred at a street intersection where we believe there is no traffic signal.

May

Come on, sweet May, in garments fair!
Your new spring styles will bring no shock:
With colors rich and taste so rare,
You'll show the best in nature's stock.

You'll teach us how to clothe our forms,
Also our heads and hands and feet:
With strict regard to truest norms,
You'd have us dress not loud but neat.

You'd send us forth upon our course,
Not clothes on men but men in dress;
You'd have us feel ourselves the force
And what we wear a thing far less.

Come on, sweet May, in new garb clad,
And let us see what is real beauty—
Not something to ourselves we add,
But soul's outgrowth in realm of duty.

Christian Advice to the Jews

We are permitted to publish this week an address by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise in which he puts into the mouth of Christians what he considers wholesome advice to his people, the Jews. Dr. Wise honors Christians in thus giving them the role of advisers of his people. It is implied that Jews would respect advice coming from such a source. We thank him for this concession to Christian teaching and influence. The fact suggests a question. If Christian teaching received indirectly is good for the Jews, would it not be worth more to them if received directly from Christian teachers? We are not jesting. Would it not be a good thing for people of every race and religion to be permitted to hear Christian doctrine from ministers best prepared to expound it? We suggest the question for the consideration of those interested in leading their people into the fullest possible knowledge of the truth. What a good thing it would be if all lovers of truth would make common cause with all other lovers of truth.

It has seemed to us that Jews—many of them—put themselves at a disadvantage religiously by making religion a racial matter. They seem to argue: "The Jewish race is the superior race; therefore the Jewish religion is the superior religion." They should see that true religion is the chief concern of all races, of all men. The flattering delusion of being "God's elect favorites" has resulted harmfully to those that have held it, both Jews and Christians. But the truth as God has revealed it will help every one and hurt no one. In the religious world as in the economic world there is temptation to rely upon the achievements of ancestors. Yielding to this temptation is disastrous in both cases and fatal in the case of religion. Religion is an individual and personal matter. Primarily it is a matter between the individual soul and God. Secondarily it is a matter between the individual and his fellowmen. True religion is we believe essentially the same thing in all souls, Jews or Gentiles. We all become brethren by becoming truly religious.

The speeches put into the mouths of Christians by Dr. Wise are such as may Christians would make. "I would be proud of my race," "I would never become a renegade to some unreasonable, upstart faith," "I would not remain an ignorant Jew," "I would not indulge in self-pity," "I would not allow myself to be swallowed up by a materialistic age," "I would be firm in allegiance to traditions." But would not some Christians say more than this if given the floor? As Christians see it, Judaism was not simply a creation of Jewish genius. It involved elements of revelation, tradition from God. When Jews take to themselves all credit for Judaism they are ignoring the all-important part God took. If God made revelations to the Jews of antiquity, is it certain that He had no further revelations to make? Christians believe that the most important divine revelation of all was made after the Old Testament was written. They believe that God revealed Himself through His Son, a personage of superhuman intelligence and power, who came offering to take up His abode with the trusting soul and prepare it for its true destiny in the eternal world. Christians believe that all souls have equal interest in this divine Savior without whose aid none can attain to satisfactory condition or state of character. Christians believe that a system of religion that ignores Christ Jesus is wanting in an all-essential factor.

Christians recognize the great worth of Judaism to the world, but see in Christianity more complete and adequate provision for man's spiritual need. There ought to be no quarrel between Jews and Christians. They have much in common and may have all things in common. Let not the Jews be ashamed of Judaism, but let them cease to glory in it. God's plans for us are so much beyond our highest achievements that it ill becomes any of us to glory in what we have done. We should rather put away all pride of race or religion with all unrighteousness and clothe ourselves with the spirit of humility. Then we may all enter the heavenly kingdom together in the way God has prepared for us.

O that every Jew and every man of every race might enter into full possession of the great spiritual inheritance God has prepared for all through His Son, Jesus Christ. The ground for our hope of glory is Christ in us. Ceremonies and creeds will not suffice.

"IF I WERE A JEW,—WHAT CHRISTIANS MIGHT SAY"

Address By Dr. Stephen S. Wise

If I were a Jew, I should be deeply proud of membership in a group, which at one time or another has excelled in nearly every sphere of life and art, of knowledge and conduct. Far from being ashamed of, mine would be the loftiest pride and the deepest joy in the priceless heritage of my people, —if I were a Jew.

If I were a Jew, I could hardly understand, let alone join, those Jews who in fear or shame run away and seek to hide themselves from their people and its heritage of life and faith. The more the world misprised my people and my faith, the more loyally I should hold it and the more rejoicingly I should magnify it. If I were a Jew, I would not lightly abandon that God-consciousness of my people which has been its distinction and its nobleness. Rather would I anchor my soul in the deeps of the oceanic God-consciousness of Israel. I would not lightly relinquish my faith in the divine and supremely moral governance of the universe in behalf of any and every seasonal substitute, whether Christian Science or theosophy or Bahaism or psychoanalysis or humanism—indeed for any new faith urged upon my fears by expediency or upon unreason by the devotees of a fugitive cult. Instead of abandoning the reasonable, spiritual, ethical faith which Judaism is, I would hold fast to that which is true, whether the world approved or not.

If I were a Jew, I would refuse to remain ignorant, as too many Jews are, of the wondrous story and the unrivaled literature of the Jewish people, those treasures of the Jewish spirit embodied in the great works of religion, philosophy, ethics, poetry. If I were a Jew, I would perish sooner than do aught which brought dishonor and hurt to the escutcheon of my people. And I would pay much less attention to the discrimination visited upon my people from without and I would give more and more of my attention to the possibility of self-enrichment from within. If I were a Jew,—Christians might well say,—I would hold my own; that is to say, I would scorn forever to be a base and servile imitator of the world without and, instead of that, would proudly affirm myself in all those segments of life in which my faith and my tradition have a contribution to make to the totality of life through high self-insistence.

If I were a Jew, I would try not to be guilty of the crushing weakness of self-pity. I should be too proud ever to think that "it is too bad I am a Jew." I should pity myself only if I were an unworthy Jew. I should pity only those who are unequal to the ethical demands and unworthy of the spiritual excellences of my people. If I were a Jew, I should sorrow over some of the things which the world without has, in one way or another, seen fit to enforce upon the Jew, the substitution too often of materialism as a creed for the life of the spirit. Even though the world has taught me the necessity of having some means and method of maintaining myself against adversity, I should with all my soul do battle against the tendency to substitute the crass material things, that give power, as the world sees it, for the potency of the spirit so long as it be true to itself.

If I were a Jew, I should loath the possibility of being assimilated,—that is to say, swallowed up,—not because of pride of opinion or pride of race, but because of a sense of obligation to hold unafraid the post of sentinel on the uplands of the world's spiritual and moral advance. If I were a Jew, instead of surrendering in weakly and cowardly fashion at the behest of an unfriendly world, I should insist upon myself not so much for the sake of self-insistence as because of the conviction that surrender to injustice crowns injustice and retards the coming of the day of justice and freedom for all men.

Above all, if I were a Jew,—Christians might well say,—I should be firm in allegiance to that great racial, religious, cultural tradition which has laid the heaviest burdens upon the Jew but given him the distinction of being at his best a pioneer in the onward march of man, daring to dream dreams of justice, beholding visions of truth and fronting a world of foes and perils in order to be true to the divine call.

THE NEGLECTED OF THE CITY

Probably the most neglected class of people in the city is the country girl who for some reason or other leaves the country and goes into the city to live. She usually ends her journey by finding employment in some factory.

I have heard some people say that these girls are Mary Magdalenes. Of course, this is sometimes true, but usually it is not. Out of every one hundred girls of this class that I have come in contact with practically five are of the type just mentioned; ninety of the poorer class; the other five of the better class.

The reason for this last class of girls being where they are, is usually due to the fact that their parents die while they are in their early teens, and of course when they reach the age of sixteen they go to the city to find employment. When they reach it they find themselves homeless and friendless. They are compelled to find room and board at some boarding house, and often at these places, they fall under the influence of people whose characters are rather questionable.

Back home these girls were taught to go to church. Often they were pianists, Sunday School teachers, or other church workers in their home church, but when they get to the city, no one takes any interest in them and they are allowed to drift away. This is a great problem for the church. "How can we find these? How can we reach them?" are questions that the church confronts.

Some will say, "why be more interested in this group than in the poorer class." The reason is that this class furnishes the leaders in nearly all of the little social groups to be found in the mill; and if we can reach them, we have reached the leaders who will in turn reach the others.

In a certain industrial city, there are hundreds of these country girls—between sixteen and twenty-five. There are 112 churches within the city limits and three of these are Methodist Protestant churches, but less than twenty-five per cent. is reached by any of them.

I hope to see the day when the church can, sowehow, reach this group.

THE EFFECT OF WINE DRINKING

Those in America who advocate wine and beer as a solution of the economic, social and moral evils of the liquor traffic may well take notice. A study of the results in wine and beer drinking nations does not give promise of relief through wine or beer. Figures quoted in "Current History" shows that arrests for drunkenness in wine drinking Paris were forty-seven per 10,000 population as against eighteen in Prohibition New York City. "Give prohibition a chance!"

MEASURING CHURCH EFFICIENCY

Dr. H. K. Carroll has given to the public his compilation of statistics as to the numerical gains and losses of the various denominations in the United States during the year 1929. The figures are printed in full in the Christian Herald, issue of April 26th. Dr. Carroll is an expert at the most difficult task of collecting definite figures as to the number of members enrolled in the various churches of the country.

All the various churches show a net gain of a little over 300,000 during the year, which is a considerable falling off from the more than a million gain in membership during 1928. The American people have learned to place great confidence in statistics. We are impressed with an array of figures, whether we know what they indicate or not. I suppose that all of us will be inclined to breathe a sigh of relief when we learn that, as a whole, the churches have been gaining in membership. We will feel that, after all, much of the criticism as to the weakness and failure of the church was entirely unfounded.

But for the individual church and the individual denomination, there should be scant comfort in the showing made throughout the entire country. The important question is what has been happening in the particular field of labor with which we are connected. And most of us are fully aware of the fact that numbers are but a poor index of the spiritual life of the church. There must be other standards of measurement by which the efficiency of the church is measured rather than that of numbers.

Spiritual growth is generally slow growth. It requires years for Christian character to reach maturity. Long acquaintance with a single congregation reveals the fact that there are certain individual members who have attained to a splendid spiritual stature, while others have remained almost stationary through the passing of the years. The work of ministering to the growth and development along spiritual lines is essentially a work of faith, and no one can tell at the time of sowing what the harvest will be.—Christian Sun.

A PERSISTENT MUSKRAT

Most of the wild animals are given credit for a remarkable instinct which protects them against their destroyers, but few are known to have a gift for friendship unless first tamed and allowed to forget their grievances against their enemy, man.

A farmer in Saskatchewan, Canada, tells of finding a muskrat in his garden one evening. He caught it and placed it in an empty tank with straw, a dish of water and a couple of carrots of which he had heard muskrats are fond. The next day he carried it in a bag to a slough three-quarters of a mile away in which there were other rats.

Next day his wife, upon going down cellar noticed some half-eaten carrots on the steps and making an investigation found a muskrat sitting nearby. The farmer did not believe it could be the same rat, for he had carried it to the slough in a wagon and thought it unlikely it would find its way back. He fed the new visitor some more carrots and returned it to the same slough. Next day it was back again—or else one very like it—sitting in the corner of the cellar. To make sure the farmer decided to mark it but being busy he merely drove a quarter of a mile from the house, left the muskrat there, and blocked up the hole under the side of the house.

In a short time the muskrat was back again, and scratched the dirt away and had gone into the cellar. The man did not get a chance to take him back to his native haunts for two more days. When he did, he clipped some hair off the animal to distinguish him. Two hours later he was back again, the very same rat.

We are not told how the patient muskrat was rewarded for his persistent efforts toward friendship but I am sure that the busy farmer showed enough kindliness to justify our surmise that the muskrat became the family pet.—Georgina Collins in Our Dumb Animals.

NONE BUT CHRIST

To whom, my Savior, shall I go
If I depart from Thee,
My Guide through all this vale of woe
And more than all to me?

The world rejects Thy gentle reign
And pays Thy death with scorn;
Oh, it could play Thy crown again,
And sharpen every thorn.

But I have felt Thy dying love
Breathe gently through my heart
To whisper hope of joys above;
Then can we ever part?

Ah, no! with Thee I'll walk below
My journey to the grave;
To whom, my Savior, shall I go
When only Thou canst save?

—Unidentified.

FIGURES DON'T LIE, BUT LIARS FIGURE

Was not an old farmer accused of having said something of this sort in the long ago? The hearings on prohibition at Washington lead us to believe that the farmer stated a great truth. It is reported that Dr. Gerty's document, intended to prove that prohibition can't be enforced in Chicago, was inspired by the anti-prohibition campaign headed in Cook County by Anton J. Cermak, president of the county board. If the rest of the country knew Mr. Cermak as we know him here, Dr. Gerty's figures would count for nothing. Mr. Cermak, in saloon days, organized and led 150,000 foreigners and aliens in protest against Sunday closing laws to prove that Chicago could not enforce laws regulating the liquor traffic. An Old Testament prophet complains that the poor were sold for a pair of shoes in his day. The crowd that Cermak led in saloon days would sell a girl's virtue for 50 cents, and this sort of thing was regularly done in connection with the saloon. In those days it was impossible to get a jury in Chicago to convict violators of liquor laws; now we get plenty of convictions for such violations, and many valuable buildings have been closed for the year because of violation.

Cermak is now accused of wasting the county funds and of various forms of graft in office. He has bragged much of the forest preserves, bought under his administration as public parks, but it looks as if exorbitant prices had been paid for this land and as if somebody on the inside received the bonus. The accusations seem to have a good deal of foundation. It is the testimony of this sort of man that the "wets" put up against Edison, Ford, Stagg, Mary McDowell and Jane Addams. Which do you believe?—R. W. G., in The Congregationalist.

All Things Through Christ

Pleasant Grove

April 27, Sunday.—A Centennial service gave us an occasion to worship with this congregation, and to appear on the program with four former pastors here.—Rev. T. F. McCulloch, G. L. Reynolds, Edward Suits, and R. C. Stubbins. We shall not attempt any account of the program, as the reporter of the church will no doubt supply that. The land on which this church stands was deeded to the Associate Methodist Churches in 1830, April 24. The dead of conveyance is framed and hangs on the wall of the church. This Centennial celebration was held one hundred years and three days after the deed was executed. The John Wesley pulpit was on exhibition during the service, as a fit memento of this occasion. This pulpit is the property of the conference, by the courtesy of the Rehoboth church, Creswell charge. The first Pleasant Grove church was a log building.

Two other buildings have followed. The present one is a large frame building, with a splendid auditorium, and a two-story Sunday School annex in the rear. The membership numbers 180, and is made up of the substantial citizens of the community. This church is one of the few in the conference that have their beginnings synchronous with the rise of liberal Methodism in this state. We congratulate the congregation upon the rich heritage that comes down to it from the distant past, and we bespeak for them increasing devotion to the purposes of the church as they face a new century full of challenging opportunities and testing responsibilities, as well. Brother Williams, the pastor, is popular with his people, and is giving himself unsparingly to his work. Evil doers in the neighborhood are finding him a terror to their business. It was a privilege and a pleasure to share this important event with the pastor and his people and their friends. May the God of our fathers, and our God, abundantly bless in the work here, and give increasing strength with the increasing years.

A President for High Point College

Upon the resignation of Dr. Andrews, some weeks ago, a committee was appointed by the trustees to recommend some one to succeed him as president of the college. The committee has had the matter under careful consideration, and will have some report to make to the college trustees in a very few days. The work of the committee has moved smoothly and hopefully, and toward ends that give promise of continued growth for the institution. At the very earliest possible date, the new president will be announced. Until that can be done let patience and confidence be the watchwords.

High Point College Day

By action of the Annual Conference, May 18, the Third Sunday, is High Point College Day. The purpose of this day is to create interest in the college and secure a larger support for the institution. The idea is to get the college before our people in some way at every church, and to magnify the merits of the institution. Members of the college faculty would be of much value as speakers on this day. A college student, or groups of students, for talks or a musical program, would be pleasing and helpful in giving concrete illustrations of the merit of the school. Pastors and Sunday School superintendents can best decide how to make the day effective for the college. A few minutes talk by each of them, or some one that they designate, may be the best way of doing it. However, it is done, let us see that thought and care is given to this part of the day's program, and that in every church High Point College is magnified before our people.

"Dollar a Member"

May is the remaining month allotted by the committee for completing "Dollar a Member." What the committee desires is: "Dollar a Member" paid in full if possible, but if not, then pledged in full, to be paid later during the conference year. This certainly does seem to be a reasonable expectation, and one to which the conference should make a full response. On many charges the work has been completed, and the results have been good. The work has been started on other charges but not yet completed. The committee urges that this be done during the month of May. If the money can not be paid now, then by all means get it pledged and let it be paid at a more convenient time during the year. Nothing before the conference this year of a material nature is so important as financing High Point College. A very suitable way of observing the 18th—High Point College Day—would be to raise "Dollar a Member," either in cash or pledges. If we can have a hearty response during this month, it will be unnecessary to continue this, as a major project, longer. Everybody on now for a hard pull, and a pull all together, to go over the top during May.

Herald Subscriptions

The conference committee, headed up by Rev. N. M. Harrison, to increase the subscription list to 3,000, is waging a vigorous campaign to accomplish this good end. We urge that every possible support be given to this good effort. It is gratifying to see that the list is growing, though only a few charges have as yet obtained their quotas. Brother Bates informed me a few days ago that Calvary would be with the list in the next report. A pastor is doing big business for his charge when he gets the people to reading the church papers. And surely we owe it to Dr. McCulloch, the editor, as a debt of gratitude, to subscribe to this paper. He has given thirty-six of the best years of his life to the conference in making the paper possible for us. A HERALD subscription will bless the subscriber and the editor, too. Send them in, brethren, send them in. All success to this undertaking!

Easter

It is pleasing to learn that in some of our churches there were gratifying additions as the result of Easter evangelistic efforts. We trust that there was, also, a large offering for the Board of Missions. Detailed information will not be in hand until the reports of the second quarter are in. The offering should be sent at once to Dr. Brown so it may be available promptly for the use of the Board of Missions. Pastors and church treasurers, please see that this is done. And let us not fail to pray for the evangelistic efforts that are in progress, in harmony with the Easter-Pentecost program of evangelism. Special meetings are on now in some of our churches; others are to follow soon. Let us pray daily for God's blessings upon these efforts.

Salaries

Upon the whole, our pastors seem to be having the usual financial support, despite the money stringency that is so wide-spread at this time. However, there are some exceptions. We urge the officials of the church to attend to this matter, so that pastors may go ahead with their work with the minimum of financial handicaps. The salary, with most of our ministers, is the only income. If this is cut off, the wolf gets uncomfortably near the door. It is our opinion that churches prosper in proportion as they provide a proper living for the pastor. The Master of us all has said, "the laborer is worthy of his hire."

Rallies

Our slogan is, "A Rally in Every Conference District." Some have been held already, and others are being planned now, for the fifth Sunday in June. These occasions are eminently worth while, and we trust that chairmen of the various districts will not fail to arrange for them. The fifth Sunday in June would seem a most excellent time for such a meeting. We shall watch the HERALD with deep interest for the announcements for the various districts. Time enough remains to arrange a rally for the Fifth Sunday in June.

A Methodist Shrine

While in Weaverville recently, we learned of a Methodist Shrine at Clyde, N. C., and immediately planned to visit it on the next day. The information came to us through Brother T. E. Pierce, who served a Methodist Episcopal church at Clyde some years ago. Clyde is a small town twenty-two miles west of Asheville, on highway No. 10. The shrine is a chapel, in which Bishop Asbury preached. The chapel is just off the highway passing through Clyde, but you would not detect it, as it is concealed in a dwelling house. The chapel, a room about 15x25 feet, is in the garret of the house. The original home was erected probably 150 years ago, and this chapel was built in it at the time for public worship. The house is now owned by Mr. D. I. L. Smathers, and has been remodeled and enlarged, but the chapel in intact as it was originally. That Bishop Asbury preached there seems to be fully authenticated. The pegs that used to be in the ceiling for hats have all been taken away as souvenirs, and one large ceiling plank has been removed. We understood that it, too, was taken off for the same purpose. Clyde is just three miles from Junaluska, the summer assembly place of the Southern Methodist Church. We were told that they go to the chapel every year, and that it is their custom to hold religious service while there. Brother and Sister Pierce and Brother and Sister Paschall accompanied us on this visit. We were very kindly received by Mr. Smathers and his daughter, Mrs. Morgan. They told us that the chapel is visited by a great many people.

—"I have been tithing for about twenty-five years, and have also done all I could to get others to do the same. I have never known any one who was not happier or more blessed than if he had not been a tither. Of course, we sometimes have losses, and feel hard times, as at present, but in some way God always supplies the need when the time comes, and gives us the happiness of having something for His work, too."

THE POWER OF SONG

When the apostles in the prison at Philippi "prayed and sang praises unto God," "the prisoners heard them." It must have been a sad and pitiable congregation. But some, at least, would feel better and take heart again, as they listened to these midnight songs. Thirty men, disheveled and red-eyed, lined up before a judge. It was the usual crowd of "drunks and disorderlies" from the night before. Some were old and hardened; others hung their heads in shame. While they stood, a clear voice from below began to sing—

"Last night I lay a-sleeping,
There came a dream so fair."

Last night! For these men it had been a nightmare, not a night. The song was such a contrast to the horrible fact that it brought a sudden shock.

"I stood in old Jerusalem,
Beside the temple there."

The song continued, and the judge paused and quietly inquired. A former member of a famous opera company, known all over the country, was waiting trial for forgery, and was singing in the cell below. Meantime the song went on, and every prisoner showed signs of emotion. A few dropped upon their knees. One lad at the end of the line buried his face in his hands, and sobbed aloud: "O mother, mother!" Through the courtroom the song blended with the hush. One man protested: "We're here to take our punishment; but this—" And he, too, began to sob. It was impossible to carry on the business of the court. The police sergeant, after surprised attempt to keep the men in line, stepped back and waited with the rest. The song swelled to its climax—

"Jerusalem, Jerusalem! Sing for the night is o'er!
Hosanna in the highest! Hosanna for evermore!"

The last words rang out and there was silence. Visibly every one was touched. Neither fine or sentence did the judge pronounce. A kindly word, and he dismissed them all. It was a conquest of them, not by punishment but by song, as Paul sang in the prison, and the prisoners overheard them.—Homiletic Review.

WHAT THE CHURCH MEANT TO JIM

At a nod from the minister, Mr. Richfield, the elder, came forward and cleared his throat. He had to present to the congregation its too-familiar plight—that of a small plight, struggling half-heartedly against the fate that has overtaken so many others. Older members and generous supporters had passed to their reward; substantial families had moved away until now the case looked hopeless.

Mr. Richfield mentioned the deficit in the crisp tone of a man who knows what dollars and cents mean, and how hard they are to get. The Ladies' Aid Society, he added, would pledge fifty dollars; by a very liberal estimate, another fifty might be picked up here and there; but seventy-five dollars still remained unprovided for. That was a large sum for a church at Garnet. "Sanctuary privileges" were not beyond the reach of those who cared to seek them elsewhere, even if the doors of the old church were closed.

The half dozen men accustomed to "say a word" on such occasions agreed regretfully with the elder. The mood of the assembly was despondent. As the discussion went on, some of the women wiped their eyes. Then upon the silence that ensued a new voice broke. It was that shabby Jim Wager. He shrank a little from the curious glances that were turned upon him.

"I never could speak in meetin'," he began in a voice that quavered with embarrassment, "but when it's a question of losing all a man has he can't keep quiet. You know what I was until the Lord got a hand on me a year ago. I ain't braggin' of what I've been since. It's been a close fight sometimes, and if it hadn't been for the church here, and the prayers and the preaching and the hymns every Sunday, I couldn't have done so well as I have. I don't care to do without them. Mr. Richfield says that seventy-five dollars will keep things movin' for another year. It'll be a sight better for me to pay that myself than to take the chances of drifting back where I was once.

"I can't earn but a dollar a day, and there ain't always work to be had, but if we come to short rations Mary and the children would rather put up with that than to have me staggering home twice a week, as I might do. Mr. Richfield, put Jim Wager down for seventy-five dollars, and, granting he lives and has his health, every cent will be paid. It's not half nor a quarter what the Lord has done for me."

Mr. Richfield rose to his feet. "I will assume twenty dollars of the amount," he said, simply. "I feel that we have treated a serious matter too lightly—hidden away from our eyes under the disguise of routine a sacred trust committed to us by God for the souls of men."

The despondency was gone. A dozen women sat with uplifted hands. The church at Garnet was saved.—The Youth's Companion.

GOD, OUR SUFFICIENCY

Who trusts in God, a strong abode
In heaven and earth possesses;
Who looks in love to Christ above,
No fear his heart oppresses.
In Thee alone, dear Lord, we own
Sweet hope and consolation;
Our shield from foes, our balm for woes,
Our great and sure salvation.

In all the strife of mortal life
Our feet shall stand securely;
Temptation's hour shall lose its power,
For Thou shalt guard us surely.
O God, renew, with heavenly dew,
Our body, soul, and spirit,
Until we stand at Thy right hand,
Through Jesus' saving merit.

THE LOGGING CAMP ROBBER

When I arrived at the logging camp, Slim Walker was already there. He was about the same age as I, and everybody thought that we should be great pals. The men had their work to do cutting down the trees and dragging them to the river. The women were always busy in the kitchen, and that left Slim and me to ourselves.

"How did you happen to come up here?" I asked him, one day. "Did somebody invite you?"

"No," he answered. "Nobody would ever invite me anywhere. I came up with Big Ned Brown."

"Is he your father?" I asked.

"No, I haven't got any father. But Big Ned has always taken care of me, so I guess he's just as good as a father. I go wherever he goes and so far, I've liked it."

Just then the man we were talking about came down the drag path behind a team of horses. He stopped when he saw us and cuffed Slim over the ears.

"What did I tell you about keeping away from the boss' son?" he growled. "He isn't your kind, and I don't want you to mix, understand?"

Slim nodded his head and without saying another word to me, ran off into the woods. Big Ned looked at me and scowled, then passed on. When he had gone, Slim came back.

"I can't stay with you long," he said. "I'm afraid of Big Ned. But whatever happens, I want you to believe that I am honest. Will you?"

I said I would, and at that Slim shook my hand and disappeared. I did not see him again until late that night when I awoke from my sleep and discovered him trying to get in the window of the cabin where the paymaster kept the money.

He had a bag in his hand which looked like the pay bag of the logging camp. As he came in the window and stood for a moment before the strong box, I watched him but did not move a muscle. But when he lifted the lid of the strong box and took out the real bag, replacing it with the one he had brought with him, I leapt out of my bunk and caught him from behind.

He struggled a little, but when he found out it was me fighting him, he backed away into a corner and lowered his head as though he hoped I wouldn't see who he was.

"I know who you are, Slim," I told him. "You needn't hide your face. Give me that big you took out of the strong box."

He handed it to me and I took it, intending to put it back, but before I could raise the lid of the box, I saw Big Ned coming through the window. In another moment the bag was snatched out of my hand and I was being tied to the bunk post with a piece of rope. Slim tried to escape, but Big Ned held on to him.

"You would try a trick like this, would you? I'll fix you for it, you young scamp. I'll fix you for it."

And that is all I heard as both of them disappeared through the window and down the path leading to the river. Next morning I was found still tied to the bunk post, and a posse was sent out looking for Big Ned and Slim. The paymaster and my father examined the bag that had been left in the box.

"It looks like our bag," said the paymaster, in surprise. "The seals are all unbroken, and it feels just as heavy as the bag I brought up from the bank yesterday."

"Big Ned is a clever crook," said my father. "He knew that if he duplicated the bag we could not discover our loss until pay day. By that time, he could be across the border and safe. Break the seals and see what is inside."

"Money!" gasped the paymaster, as he emptied it out on the table. "Our money! Every cent of it! We haven't been robbed at all!"

We looked at one another in amazement, and it was some moments before any of us spoke. Then my father said:

"Jim, are you sure you saw Slim change bags?"

"Yes. He opened the lid and took out the bag that was in the strong box. Then he carefully dropped this one in its place. I saw him do it quite plainly."

"Wasn't the strong box locked?" queried the paymaster, astonished .

"No, it wasn't."

"That's strange. I'm sure I locked it last night before I left the cabin."

That made the problem even more difficult, and we would never have solved it, I guess, if the two loggers hadn't burst into the room with Slim held prisoner between them.

"Here's the boy, Mr. Stone," said one of them. "We caught him between here and the river, but the young thief was headed the wrong way!"

"I'm not a thief!" flared Slim .

"You are," replied the logger. "You're a tool for Big Ned, and if it hadn't been for you we would have caught him, too. This boy helped Big Ned to escape, Mr. Stone. I guess you've got a pretty good case against him."

"Let him go," said my father kindly. "Slim, you were in this cabin last night, weren't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you lifted the lid of the strong box and put in this bag, didn't you?"

"Did you know that it was full of money?"

"Yes, I did."

"Where did you get it?"

"Big Ned gave it to me."

"Umm! Where did he get it?"

Slim did not answer.

"But he had the bag, didn't he? And he gave it to you?"

"Yes, sir. He told me that we were leaving camp at midnight and that I was to hide the bag among the trees where I could find it again when we were ready to go."

"But you didn't hide it. Instead you came back to this cabin and tried to put the real money back into the box?"

"Yes, sir."

"Gentlemen," said my father, "it seems as if we are dealing with a very honest boy instead of with a crook. I feel like shaking hands with him."

"But why did he help Big Ned who stole the bag in the first place, to escape?" queried the paymaster.

"Yes, how about that, Slim?"

"Well," was the explanation. "Maybe you people think that Big Ned is a thief and a criminal, but to me . . . well, he's the only father I've ever had. This was the first time he had ever asked me to do anything that wasn't right . . . and I knew I'd have to leave him. But I didn't want to see him go to prison. So I thought if I pretended to play the game and helped him escape with the dummy instead of the real one, everything would be all right."

"Everything is all right," replied my father, kindly. We will drop this case entirely, men."

Later, when the three of us were alone, my father turned to Slim and said:

"How would you like to go back to school with Jim?"

For a moment Slim was too surprised to speak. Then he looked at me.

"Would Jim want me to?" he asked.

And for a reply I just put out my hand and said: "Shake."

Three days later both of us left for the city, and in my pocket was a letter from my father asking the principal to be sure and let Slim and me be roommates.—Selected.

WONDERFUL PEACE

Jesus said, "My peace I give unto you." John 14:27. God is the same in this day and age. He is the same yesterday, today, and forever. He will save you if you will let Him, and give you this wonderful place. He will heal you if you have need of healing. But remember, your body is the least consideration. Your body may go to the grave, but death does not end all.

Death is only the beginning of a long eternity, where you will never have power to change one thing done in your life. As the tree falls, so shall it lie. "Now is the day of salvation." II Cor. 6:2. Here is the place to prepare. You have heard of how God has added blessing, health, comfort, rest, and peace to others. What could be better than salvation, health, strength—and, above all, peace in your heart?

We would not exchange the peace of God for the whole round world. I had everything that heart could wish. I would go to my home and cry myself to sleep, night after night. My mother would say, "Daughter, what is the trouble? What can I do?" My poor infidel mother!—trying to comfort my heart that was crying out for God.

All that unrest, that heartache, left when God came into my heart. Such a peace came into my soul that I could never express!

The power in this Gospel is wonderful. When I was nothing but a walking skeleton, the doctors did everything they could for me. They said, "We can do no more for you." But between me and that old Evergreen Cemetery, I saw the shadow of the Cross and the power of God to heal my body. I gave one look and said, "God, if You will heal me, I will give You my life."

I had been serving God and worshiping God. I had been going to the old county jail; and many times the sheriff let me in at the private door, and said, "Some day you will come up here for the last time." I said, "I will come as long as there is breath in my body; for I must tell what God has done for me to these men and women that nobody cares for."

But I saw the day when I went back to that jail, strong and well. The power of God and health was in my life. They said, "What has happened?" I said, "God did it." The officer said, "I don't doubt you at all." He believed that anyone that had courage to walk to the last breath, God would help them.

Don't you want this peace? You may say that if you could get peace, you would give your heart to God. If God saves you, He will give you peace. He will save you if you will furnish Him an honest heart. All you have to do is to cry out to God for mercy. Friends cannot give you that peace. Only God can give it. God will do the same thing for you that He has done for us.

When you are saved, you become a child of God. You walk and live like a child of God. You will not belong to lodges, play cards, smoke cigarettes, nor enter a theatre. You will want to serve God with all your heart and with all your soul. And the Gospel of Jesus Christ will give back to you a million times more than all these things.

Some of us know what it is to come out of the opera or theatre night after night, where we thought we were having a good time, enjoying the pleasures of the world but for a moment. But oh, that aching void down in the heart! And to feel as if you wanted to die right there on the sidewalk! The one without God is without peace. "There is no peace, saith my God, to the wicked." Isa. 57:21.

Many have had all that heart could wish in this life, yet there was an unsatisfied longing and an aching heart. And it took the same grace for God to save the moral leper as it takes to save the criminal who has broken the law. There is power in the Blood of Jesus Christ and the Gospel of the Son of God to save the "whosoever."—Selected.

THE MENACE OF PRIVATE REFERENDUMS

"The taking of nation-wide polls under private auspices may be a menace to democratic government for the following reasons:

"First, such referenda being costly will be taken not simply when a considerable portion of the voters call for them, but when some private interest with abundant financial resources deems the time favorable to take them;

Second, the referendum is taken without the safeguards which should make it fair and authoritative;

"Third, once taken the interests which it favors will argue from it as if it were an authentic and official disclosure of voter opinion;

"Fourth, when the result of such a referendum is adverse to a law it will be used to paralyze the law-enforcing agencies, to justify law breaking, and as an excuse for local nullification."—Statement by Dr. Edward A. Ross, noted professor of Sociology at the University of Wisconsin, in a letter addressed to the editor of the Journal of the National Education Association, dated April 7, 1930, and quoted by permission.

—There are any number of outstanding men in the British Empire today who are calling attention to the fact that no nation with a drink bill so large as that of Great Britain or one so out of proportion to the national income can hope successfully to compete with the United States under prohibition. The handicap which the liquor traffic has imposed upon Britain's production and Britain's trade is becoming clearly recognized. It is one of the factors in the steadily increasing restrictions which are being placed upon the drink traffic in that land. The Royal Commission recently appointed is seeking to solve Great Britain's liquor problem. Until that problem is solved, the related problems of unemployment, industrial depression and loss of world markets are not likely to be solved. Prohibition seems to be the answer not alone to the liquor problem but to most of the serious economic problems with which the wet nations of the world are today struggling. While Mr. Denny does not appear at all friendly to prohibition and scarcely mentions it in his encyclopedic book, those who study the conditions which he portrays may find much testimony to the almost incredible gains made by the United States in the prohibition period.—Selected.

AN OPPORTUNITY IS A CALL

My opportunity! Dear Lord, I do not ask
That thou shouldst give me some high mark of Thine,
Some noble calling, or some wondrous task—
Give me the children's hands to hold in mine.
—Anonymous.

I SHALL NOT PASS THIS WAY AGAIN

The bread that bringeth strength I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day;
I'm sure I shall not pass this way again.

I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears;
Beauty for ashes may I give alway—
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give good measure, running o'er,
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away—
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give to others hope and faith,
I want to hear all that the Master saith,
I want to live aright from day to day—
I'm sure shall not pass again this way.
—Anonymous.

MAY 11: "DEVELOPING GOOD WILL THROUGH THE HOME"

Ruth 1:6 10, 15-17.

Bring out the home in any possible way. Divide the topic in the following manner as has been suggested:

1. The influence of the home on the playground.

2. The influence of the home on the school.

3. Influence of home on church and Sunday school.

4. On the workshop.

5. On law-making.

6. On business.

7. On printed matter.

8. On international relations.

Have several members make short talks on each of these topics.

Hymns

"Give of Your Best to the Master," "Into My Heart," "I Would Be Like Jesus," "God Will Take Care of You." "Home, Sweet Home" might be used as a solo.

Poetry

Home is the resort
Of love, of joy, of peace, and plenty, where,
Supporting and supported, polished friends
And dear relatives mingle into bliss.
—Thomson.

I turned an ancient poet's book
And found upon the page:
"Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage."

Yes, that is true, and something more:
You'll find, where'er you roam,
That marble floors and gilded walls
Can never make a home.

But every house where Christ abides,
And friendship is a guest,
Is surely home, and home, sweet home,
For there the heart can rest.
—Henry Van Dyke.

A house is built of bricks and stones,
Of sills and posts and piers,
But a home is built of loving deeds
That stand a thousand years.
—Victor Hugo.

NEWS FROM HIGH POINT COLLEGE

Easter has passed and we have settled down for the last lap of the school year. Every one had a very enjoyable vacation, some at home, some visiting and some unfortunate ones who had to stay on the campus because of baseball, too far from home, and other reasons.

The girls' Inter-Society Debate which was held on Wednesday before Easter was won by the debaters of the Nikanthan Literary Society, Nettie Stuart and Lucy Nunnery.

On Easter Monday our baseball team lost to the team from Elon. The game was played in Greensboro. It seems to be almost impossible for us to win from Elon in this sport.

On Friday night the Extension Department of the Christian Endeavor Society gave a model Endeavor program at the Friends' Church in High Point.

High Point College had the honor of being host to the North Carolina College Press Association on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the past week. The people of High Point heartily co-operated with the students of the college in putting this convention over with great success. The last session was held Saturday morning in the auditorium, and with it came one of the greatest things H. P. C. has attained during the six years of its existence. "The Hi Po," the weekly paper of High Point College, was awarded first place in the state. Competition was stronger in this field than in any other that our college has entered. It was being judged along with such schools as Carolina, Duke, Salem, Queens, E. C. T. C., and others. We consider this one of the greatest honors we can win, and we sincerely congratulate the staff of "The Hi-Po."

Saturday brought two other victories for H. P. C. Saturday afternoon the "Little Six" track meet was held in the Memorial Stadium in Greensboro. Our team won first place in this meet. At the same time our baseball team was winning a game at Catawba.

We certainly think that High Point College has had a very successful week.

STOP THAT NOISE!

Sir:

Use your influence to suppress needless noise.

Noise, noise, noise, noise, noise that murders peace and poise. Noise of traffic on the street, noise of midnight tramping feet; noise of klaxons, hooters, drills, noise of singer's maddening trills; noise of ponderous, clattering vans, noise of milkmen's rattling cans.

Noise of fiends who slam the door, noise of the loquacious bore; noise of vendors lacking sense, noise of cats on neighbor's fence; noise of clicking type machines, noise of gigglers in their 'teens; noise of jangling telephones, noise of dreadful saxophones.

Noise of dishes, yapping dogs, noise of roosters, cows and hogs; noise of radios, phonographs, noise of boisterous, raucous laughs; noise of rusty, grinding wheels, noise of sirens, pianos, peals; noise of actors' rant and roar, noise of airships when they soar.

Noise of riveters, striking clocks, noise of vacuum cleaners' shocks; noise of ghostly, creaking doors, noise of lusty sluggard's snores; noise of shunting trains at night, noise of fire-trucks that affright; noise of ambling trams and cars, noise of revelers after hours.

Noise, noise, noise, noise, noise that murders peace and poise.

—Grenville Kleiser.

—Twenty years ago the editor of the Herald was on South Elm street in Greensboro and met a party of young men coming from Chapel Hill where they had just completed courses in the University of North Carolina. We were introduced to one of them who had taken a law course. His name was given as Mr. Parker. We asked him, What next? He replied, "Chasing the almighty dollar." United States senators are this week talking about that same Mr. Parker, now known as Judge J. J. Parker.

—Calvary's Easter cantata was repeated last Sunday night and enjoyed by a still larger audience. Quite a number were present from West End church.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

Read this column carefully during the next few weeks—and don't forget to keep on reading it after that.

SEND FOR SAMPLES

We wish to give a wide circulation to the news from the Branch meeting. Mrs. Ballard writes that a number of reports were ordered published. We therefore hope that the Secretaries of Literature will write for sample copies of the Herald, especially during the next few weeks, and see that they are given to women of their church who are not subscribers. You may write either direct to the Herald or to Miss Pearl McCulloch, Secretary of Literature.

EFFICIENCY STANDARDS

Now is the time to begin working to reach the goals set by the Mission Board for Auxiliaries that desire to be on the Honor or Standard list of next Branch meeting.

One of the requirements is that money be sent in monthly, so do not neglect the first months of the Branch year, even though the amount is small.

I am sending the list of questions that constitute the standard of efficiency to the Herald and will also get a new supply of Efficiency Charts for all Auxiliaries that want one.

Fourteen Auxiliaries filled out and returned the charts last year, so that the report at Branch meeting showed four Honor and seven Standard Auxiliaries, as follows:

Honor: Asheboro, Charlotte, Community, Thomasville, High Point, First Church.

Standard: Burlington, First Church, Asheville, Calvary, Graham, Moriah, State Street, Lexington, Winston, First Church.

I hope all Auxiliaries will strive to reach the standards this year, whether they succeed or not. There is merit in trying.

Efficiency Standards for Auxiliaries

The following list of ten questions constitutes the standard of efficiency. Each Auxiliary answering "yes" to all the questions shall be called an Honor Auxiliary.

Each Auxiliary answering "yes" to eight of the questions, the second question being one of the eight, shall be called a Standard Auxiliary."

1. Have you held 12 meetings during the year?
2. Have you raised your apportionment?
3. Does your membership include two-thirds of the women of your church,
4. Did you send in funds monthly, and answer all official letters promptly?
5. Are you having missionary educational work done among the young people or children of your church?
6. Did you hold two thank-offering services during the year?
7. Do you have secretaries of all departments to correspond with the Branch Secretaries of the Women's Missionary Work?
8. Do you have Record subscribers equal to one-fourth the number of families represented in your Auxiliary?
9. Was your Auxiliary represented at each Branch or District meeting?
10. Have you used the Program material provided by the Program Committee?

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor. Sec'y.

REPORT OF N. C. BRANCH MEETING OF WOMEN'S WORK

The North Carolina Branch meeting opened at 11 a. m. Tuesday, April 22, 1930, at First Methodist Protestant Church, Burlington, being preceded by a meeting of the Executive Committee at 9:30. The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. C. W. Bates. With the president, Mrs. W. C. Hammer, in the chair the minutes of the executive meetings were read.

Greetings from Burlington were given in a whole-hearted way by Mrs. Reid Maynard, and graciously responded to by Mrs. H. G. Paschal. A very excellent address was made by Mrs. Hammer, a copy of which will appear later on this page. Many reports were also ordered published in the Herald, so in this report I will only mention them.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker was elected chairman of the Nominating Committee, with Mrs. H. C. Nicholson and Mrs. H. A. Garrett. The president appointed Mrs. R. M. Andrews a committee of one to write resolutions of respect for Miss Alice Coates, who for more than 30 years labored in kindergarten work in Japan.

The report of the treasurer was given, which showed that a total of $10,484.83 had been raised during the year. This amount was short of the budget, however, and the Auxiliaries were urged to increase their share of the budget next year, if possible. The chairman of Districts reported a total of about 600 miles traveled during the year in the interest of the Women's Work. Most of the districts are active and have aided greatly in getting the new plan of work perfected.

Rev. G. L. Curry, representing the Ministers' Conference to be held at High Point College June 16-19, inclusive, requested that the last day of this Conference the women of the N. C. Branch visit the Conference and furnish a picnic lunch, and that they also furnish speakers, etc., for one evening's program.

After a delightful luncheon served cafeteria style, the program for the afternoon was opened with a devotional period led by Mrs. S. S. Coe, her subject being "Yesterday, Tomorrow and Today." The Burlington Auxiliary arranged for special music at various times during the sessions, a feature which the delegates and visitors thoroughly enjoyed. The Thank-Offering Secretary and Secretaries of Christian Education and Missionary Education submitted reports, some of which were ordered published in the Herald.

More than 30 loyal pastors of the North Carolina Conference were introduced to the convention during the two days, most of them attending the sessions regularly.

The evening program was in charge of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis. Miss Bessie Holmes led the devotional service, and Mr. Minnis showed a number of interesting pictures of the work in Dhulia, India. Mrs. Minnis followed this illustrated lecture with a delightful talk on some of the customs of India. She was assisted by four girls, who dressed in native Indian costumes and appeared on the platform with Mrs. Minnis. A reception in the church hut followed this program. A girls' quartet from the Burlington Church furnished several numbers, and a one-act play entitled "Sewing for the Heathen," was presented by members of the Auxiliary of the Burlington Church. In a very unique way a box containing gifts for Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Minnis was presented at the conclusion of the play. Mr. and Mrs. Minnis will sail in September to resume their work in India and the North Carolina Branch was glad to have an opportunity to express in a small way their love and admiration for them and their two attractive children. We bid them Godspeed in the wonderful work they have chosen to spread the Kingdom of God on earth.

The report of the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. George R. Brown, was heard on Wednesday morning. Nine new auxiliaries have been organized during the year. The Burlington Auxiliary stood first in subscriptons to the Missionary Record. Six Auxiliaries reported as not takng the Mssionary Record at all. Mrs. Brown called attention to the fact that there are 3,734 women in the North Carolina Conference, and only 1,648 are contributing to the Missionary work. In some churches the proportion is much higher than in others, but in no church is it as high as it should be. Under the new plan a wonderful opportunity is afforded the women of the Methodist Protestant Church to do their bit in spreading the Gospel, and we pray for a hastening of the day when every woman will be a contributing member.

Mrs. T. L. Speas, Secretary of Young People's Work, gave a good report of the work done in her department. Banners were awarded to Burlington Precious Jewels, Asheboro Sunshine Circle, Winston-Salem Mission Club, and Maple Springs Young People.

In the absence of Rev. Homer Casto, Mrs. F. W. Paschall gave some news from Bethel Home. The Branch regretted Mr. Casto's inability to attend. Again this year Mr. Casto extended an invitation to the Executive Committee to hold its August meeting there, an invitation much appreciated by the committee. A free-will offering was taken for the Home, which amounted to $80.84. This will be used to purchase flowers for Mr. Altman, a bed patient, and toward the purchase of a radio for the Home. Special prayer was offered for Mr. Casto and his work by Rev. H. L. Isley.

Dr. Dixon gave a most encouraging report of the work being done at the Children's Home. A number of good things have come to them this year, among them being free laundry service by Mr. Fred McPherson, of High Point; a car load of bridge lumber by Mr. Speas, of West Forsyth Charge; a team of mules from Mr. Teer; three doors for the dormitories from Mr. Ross of Asheboro; a load of lime from the Baraca Class of Grace Church; a donation on a school bus from a friend; a generous bequest from the Benjamin N. Duke estate to be used for building purposes; and a donation from the Duke Endowment Fund. Dr. Dixon expressed the hope that these donations would inspire the people of the N. C. Conference to give more to this worthy project of the Church.

Mrs. C. L. Whitaker reported a total of six scholarships loaned this year to students at High Point College. She plead for more money for this worth-while work.

Rev. C. W. Bates and Rev. N. M. Harrison spoke in behalf of the Methodist Protestant

Herald, and suggested that the Woman's Auxiliary stage a campaign for this paper. Rev. J. Clyde Auman spoke briefly of the work in Japan.

Delegates to Board meeting, which will be held in Edmondson Avenue Church, Baltimore, May 8-12, were elected as follows: By virtue of their offices, Mrs. W. C. Hammer and Mrs. George R. Brown. Other delegates elected, Mrs. J. Norman Wills and Mrs. H. C. Nicholson. Alternates are Mrs. S. W. Taylor, Mrs. C. W. Bates, Mrs. J. M. Millikan, and Mrs. E. L. Ballard.

There was one change in the list of officers for the coming year. The work of the Record Agent was merged with that of the Secretary of Literature. Other officers remained the same. A list of the Departmental Secretaries is as follows:

Missionary Education, Mrs. E. L. Ballard, High Point.

Scholarships and Workers, Mrs. H. G. Paschal, Winston-Salem.

Spiritual Life, Mrs. J. M. Stone, Greensboro.

Thank Offering, Mrs. D. S. Coltrane, Greensboro.

Christian Education, Mrs. H. W. Maier, Thomasville.

Literature, Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro.

Young People's Work, Miss Mary Young, High Point College.

Temperance, Miss Velna McCulloch, Greensboro.

Benevolences, Dr. Harris Glascock, Greensboro.

Life, Memorial and Perpetual Members, Mrs. S. R. Harris, Henderson.

High Point College Student Loan Fund, Mrs. C. L. Whitaker, High Point.

Bethel Home, Mrs. F. W. Paschall, Asheville.

Children's Home, Mrs. H. C. Nicholson, Mebane.

The Committee on Resolutions expressed the gratitude of the entire Branch for the untiring efforts of Rev. and Mrs. L. W. Gerringer and the membership of the Burlington Auxiliary, as well as other auxiliaries in the community, for their many deeds of kindness and thoughtfulness on behalf of the delegates and visitors during their stay in Burlington Thanks were also expressed to those furnishing special music during the sessions of the conference.

Much praise is due our beloved president for the capable and efficient way she has led the women in North Carolina during the trying season of organization, and as an expression of our appreciation we pledge to her our loyal support as we take up the duties of the new year. We pray that God may give her strength to continue her admirable leadership.

Mrs. E. LESTER BALLARD, Reporter.

—We have gotten used to horrifying reports from China with its wars and famines, but we were perhaps not prepared to read that bandits with machine guns had shot down to death a thousand people in one town in one day. What monsters of iniquity and brutality men may become! It seems as though all the fiends of hell had been let loose in poor China.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS FIELD SERVICE

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first column of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

HERALD CAMPAIGN SET FOR MAY-JUNE

During the months of May and June we are asking the churches to make special effort to secure their quota of new and renewed subscriptions to the Methodist Protestant Herald. To make the paper self-supporting we must increase its subscription list by the addition of 1,600 more subscribers. Each pastoral charge was assigned a quota, by order of last Annual Conference, and this campaign was then authorized. Each charge can get its quota from the Herald, and weekly see the progress which is being made toward meeting this quota. The pastors are requested to divide the quota given the charge among the different churches of their charges, and appoint an agent for each church, where there is no Woman's Auxiliary. The Secretary of Literature of the local Auxiliary is supposed to secure subscriptions for the church papers. This is outlined as her duty in the constitution. At the Branch meeting at Burlington last week the women endorsed the Herald Campaign and pledged their support.

Watch this department of the Herald each week. I will have more to say next week.

N. M. HARRISON, Chairman.

James Field of Calvary church congregation is in a hospital with appendicitis. The operation was delayed too long, but his recovery is hoped for. His mother is ill with pellagra, supposed to have been brought on by an effort to correct stomach trouble by dieting.

—Calvary church received five adults into membership last Sunday. They were Mrs. S. F. Coe from Moriah church, Mr. and Mrs. Surratt, formerly of Denton, and Mr. and Mrs. Cashin, recently moved to Greensboro from Kannapolis. The church highly appreciates this increment in membership.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Bess Chapel Church.—The Easter service was a decision day especially for the young people. Fifteen boys and girls under the age of twelve gave their hearts to Jesus. This scene around the altar touched and moved the hearts of many people in the congregation who offered a sentence prayer for them.

Several young people were home for the Spring holidays to worship at their home church again.

Our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, is a live and active wire in the Christian Endeavor society which has been recently organized. It is showing rapid progress and is growing bigger and better every day.

West Forsyth.—Our second quarterly conference was held at Harmony Grove last Sunday, with morning and afternoon services. The pastor preached the sermon for the occasion. Dinner was served by the women of Harmony Grove church, which was spread in picnic style. The business session of the conference was held in the afternoon. All of the business of the conference was transacted in a harmonious manner. It was revealed in the conference that there had been objection voiced among some of the members to the holding of the quarterly meetings on Sunday. This was discussed by members of the conference. Those opposing the Sunday conference were not present to discuss their side of the question. A vote was taken and the conference decided unanimously to hold the next conference on Sunday. Nominees for delegate to the next Annual Conference were elected. They are: Miss Gertrude Masoncup, of Tabernacle church, and J. H. Speas, of Stony Knoll church. These will be voted on by all of the churches on the charge to determine which of the two will represent West Forsyth charge in the next Annual Conference. The reports of Sunday school superintendents showed that the Sunday school work on the charge is moving along fairly well. The pastor reported 199 visits made during the quarter, having made 54 visits during the first quarter, making a total of 253 for the first half of the conference year. Amount reported paid on pastor's salary was $322.58. Tabernacle church made the best record for paying pastor's salary nearer up to date than any other church. The secretary of the conference, Bro. J. H. Speas, was absent, and Bro. C. G. Hunter served as temporary secretary. The next conference will be held at Pleasant Hill church.

The pastor and family have been the recipients of a number of useful things for the dining table and othe necessities since our last report. We acknowledge with thanks gifts from the following: Mrs. J. T. Briggs and Mrs. Thomas Allen, of Tabernacle church; Mrs. J. F. Hunter, Mrs. E. G. Long, Mrs. C. G. Hunter, Mrs. E. M. Long, and Mrs. A. R. Long, of Pleasant Hill church; Mrs Pearson Sprinkle and Mrs. A. F. Long, neighbors belonging to other denominations. We appreciate a gift of firewood from Bro. Clinton Sprinkle, of Pleasant Hill church, which was delivered to the parsonage last week by Bro. A. R. Long. This gift of about two cords of wood is highly appreciated as well as other gifts received.

Our appointments for next Sunday will be with Baltimore and Stony Knoll churches. At Baltimore church we are expecting to organize a Woman's Missioary Auxiliary, and will have Mrs. T. L. Speas, of Winston-Salem, and others, to assist in the organization of the auxiliary. The Lord's supper will be administered at each church.

C. B. WAY, Pastor.

Kannapolis.—Our church is still growing. A good many of our people are sick but we are hoping to have them back soon. We are having a good attendance. One year ago today we had forty present for Sunday school, and today we had ninety-four present. At the eleven o'clock service our pastor, Rev. J. L. Love, brought us a very helpful sermon. Four new members were received into the church, and we are glad to have them join in with us. They are as follows: Mrs. and Mrs. F. G. Starnes, Mrs. Addie Weaver, and Mrs. Clyde Faggan.

We have just closed our services of which each church of Kannapolis was requested to hold by the ministerial board following up the home visitation survey in which every home was visited and invited to attend some church during the meetings.

Bro. J. R. Short, of Roberta, had charge of our meeting and did some fine preaching which we all enjoyed and we assure him he has encouraged us all.

We did not get results from the meeting we had hoped for, but we feel like it has been a great help to the church. Reporter.

◆

Orange Charge.—The 2nd quarterly conference was held at Hebron church Saturday, April 26. Each church was represented, some of the reports were very encouraging.

S. N. Hayes and J. Sam Nelson were nominated as candidates for delegate to the next Annual Conference. The vote for these candidates will be taken at each church in June, 11 a. m. appointments.

Yesterday was a good day. Splendid congregations at Hebron and Chestnut Ridge. After the preaching services the Women's Missionary Auxiliaries were re-organized at each church. We are expecting to hear from these societies from time to time.

B. M. WILLIAMS.

Friendship, Mount Hermon Charge.—The work of our church seems to be progressing nicely now. The attendance at all the regular services seems to be increasing.

We were glad to have Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro, to speak to us at the Easter service last Sunday. He gave us a very helpful talk on Easter and its significance.

Several of our young people attended the leadership training school in Graham during March and April. The classes were very helpful and inspiring.

We want our young people to begin now to plan to attend the Young People's Summer Conference at High Point in July. We hope that a goodly number will avail themselves of this opportunity to study, work, and play for a week with other young people of the conference.

A young people's District Rally will be held at Friendship Sunday, May 4, 1930. This district embraces the Burlington churches, Gibsonville, Glen Raven, Alamance and Mount Hermon charges. Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, pastor of our church, will preach at 11 a. m.; Rev. Lawrence Little, of Duke University, will speak at the afternoon service. His theme will be "The Inner Life of Youth." We hope all the churches in the district will send representatives to this meeting.

Several members of our missionary society attended the branch meeting held in Burlington this week. Our society reported the annual budget paid in full.

Immediately after the church service last Sunday afternon, Mr. W. Dailey Mansfield, of Durham, and Miss Vista Garrett, of Friendship, were united in marriage. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, assisted by Rev. T. F. McCulloch, grandfather of Miss Garrett. Wedding music was furnished by Miss Dorothy St. Clair, of High Point College, violinist, who played "Meditation" from Thais, and Mrs. Ernest Teague, of Greensboro, soloist, who sang "At Dawning" and "O Promise Me." Miss Edna Nicholson, of Mebane, was accompanist.

We wish for these young people every happiness that life can offer.

Liberty Hill, Anderson Charge.—Dr. Taylor was with us the evening of the 16th and brought a very interesting sermon. We wish he could be with us oftener. We were honored again yesterday to have Mr. Tracey Burton preach to us at the morning hour. At the evening hour the beautiful pageant, "The Call of the Cross," was presented. We were afraid we would not have many by having to wait until after Easter to have the program, but were pleased to see such a large congregation. The offering was very good. We are sorry Mrs. Will Campton was too sick to attend, especially as several of her children had parts in the program. We hope she will soon be able to come to church regularly as is her custom.

MRS. JEWELL HARRISON, Reporter.

First Church, Burlington.—Our work is moving onward very satisfactorily, we believe. Attendance in the Sunday school today was 334. Offering was $21.77. We are still having splendid music by the Sunday school orchestra and this adds much to the interest of the school.

We are glad to report more new members to our church as follows: Mr. L. H. Sharpe, Misses Iola Williams, Elaine Kidd, Mary Frances Payne, and Williard Wagoner. Mr. Wagoner united with us on last Sunday and the others joined at the morning preaching hour today. This give us a total of around 30 new members received for this Conference year.

Our revival is scheduled to begin May 11, (Mother's Day) and we are hoping and praying that we will have a successful meeting.

Glen Raven.—A new spirit arose in Glen Raven last Sunday morning when the church bell began vibrating in the early stillness of the day. As the sun began to appear and cast its beautiful rays in every direction the Christion Endeavor Society, a large group of church members and church workers, together with visitors, began their Easter Day with sunrise services. This was a very interesting and impressive meeting, with special music for the occasion and the program all centering around the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus Christ, our Savior.

Mr. Troxler, superintendent, was very glad to report an increase in the Sunday school. All classes seemed to be especially interested in the beautiful Easter lesson.

At the morning service, Mr. O. C. Loy, pastor, brought a very inspiring sermon to his congregation, and more interest was added to the service by special songs. On Sunday night a Decision service was conducted by Mr. Loy and this closed the day's services, proving to be one of the most outstanding of the season.

REPORTER.

Chapel Hill, Davidson Charge. Brother Reed preached us a good sermon Easter Sunday on "The Risen Lord." I was glad to hear another sermon on that line; it did us good.

We had a good prayer meeting yesterday; good talks from the brethren; 40 present in our service yesterday. Collected $1.70 on Children's Home.

We are planning our Rally Day the third Sunday. It will be home-coming day, also. We invite all our old friends and new ones, too.

Homer Surratt does not improve much; let us remember all the sick in our prayer.

LIZZIE CRANFORD.

Mount Moriah, Cleveland Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Seventy-five were present last Sunday and the collection amounted to 74 cents. We have gained 25 new members since spring has opened up; hope to gain a good many more this summer.

We were truly glad to have Rev. Self Ivester and family with us last Sunday, as our pastor, Bro. Ridge, had to attend other business. We were also glad to have other visitors with us. Hope they will come again. Bro. Ivester's text was found in the book of Daniel 2:28: "But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets." Think everybody enjoyed his sermon fine.

MRS. ETHEL HUNT, Reporter.

Alleghany, Davidson Charge.—Bro. W. D. Reed preached us a good sermon the fourth Sunday in April.

We are glad that Mrs. A. L. Smith is home again from Southern Pines where she has been for her health. She is much improved. It did not seem like home with her gone.

Quarterly meeting on Saturday before the second Sunday in May at Pine Hill.

We are sorry that Mrs. Reed stays on the sick list; pray for her that she may be well again if it is the Lord's will.

ABIGAIL COGGIN.

First Church, Thomasville. On Easter Sunday night our church gave a splendid Easter program. Misses Lucille Carmichael and Louise Powell had charge of the program. We want to thank them for their efforts to make this program a success. We especially want to thank Mrs. Treva Eliot for helping with the music.

Our Sunday school is moving forward. On some Sundays different classes have charge of the program. This seems to create more interest. We are striving to raise the attendance at Sunday school and church. We have set 200, or more if possible, as our goal.

We were sorry that our pastor, Rev. E. O. Peeler, was ill and could not be with us Sunday morning. In his stead Rev. K. G. Holt, of High Point College, preached for us. Mr. Peeler was with us at the evening service but did not feel able to preach. Mr. Holt's theme, at the morning service, was "Qualities of a Christian." His evening theme was "The Glory in the Commonplace."

(MISS) JUANITA DORSETT, Reporter.

Chestnut Ridge, Orange Charge.—The second quarterly conference was held at Hebron church Saturday, April 26, at 2 p. m. with a very good representation from all churches. The business was transacted in a business-like manner. Mr. Sam Nelson, of Hebron church, and Mr. S. N. Hayes, of Chestnut Ridge church, were nominated for delegate to Annual Conference. Either of these will be competent to represent this charge.

The Easter program was given by the children last Sunday afternoon. Mrs. A. N. Jones had charge of getting up the exercise. Mrs. Jones takes great pains in training the children.

Mr. Williams brought us a short but very interesting message Sunday afternoon which was enjoyed by all.

Best wishes to the Herald and it many readers. ANNIE SQUIRES, Reporter.

Albemarle.—Our services on Easter Sunday were most impressive. The Junior Department had charge of the opening exercises of the Sunday school and gave a splendid program. The pastor brought us an exceptionally fine sermon at the morning service and the choir gave a special musical program at the night service. Quite a large crowd was present at all these services.

We are very glad to welcome the following new members into the church: Mr. and Mrs. Allen Wagoner, Mr. Henry Randall and little Miss Thelma Hunt.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Gantt announce the arrival of a son, Robert Baxter, on April 25, at the Yadkin Hospital.

We want the prayers of all Christian people for the success of our revival meeting, which will probably start in about two weeks.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society is doing some splendid work and we are proud of them. About 25 boys and girls meet every Sunday night before preaching, and under the leadership of Mrs. Moton carry on a wonderful program, which is filling a great need in the lives of our young people.

REPORTER.

State Street, Lexington.—The series of revival meetings which closed a week ago last Friday was very helpful and uplifting to all Christians who attended, and some conversions resulted. There was much good music during the services and the most forceful and inspiring preaching by Bro. Hendry. Four new members have been added to our number since the close of the meeting. These are Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Blanton, who joined by letter and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Neal, who came on confession of faith. We are all very glad to welcome these new additions, all of whom are good workers. There are some others to come in soon, probably next Sunday.

Sunday morning we had as a pleasant surprise provided by the Men's Bible class a splendid orchestra to furnish delightful music during the opening exercises of Sunday school. This fine music was given by Mr. Myers and his talented young son, of South Lexington, Mr. Lunsdon of Erlanger, and Mr. Davenport and Mr. Ragan, of the city. We are very grateful to these friends and hope to have them with us often.

Attendance at Sunday school Sunday morning was 194. We have 194 on roll and were so glad to have a hundred per cent. attendance.

Next Wednesday night there will be another sandwich supper in the church dining room, followed by a period of fun, worship and a report from the various branches of the church work.

Last Friday afternoon the Missionary Society met with Mrs. Hendry at the parsonage with a large and enthusiastic audience. Mrs. Annie Harkey was our delegate to the recent Branch meeting held at Burlington. She brought us an interesting report. The new study-book will be taught by Mrs. C. L. Koonts. We are expecting to have the first chapter at our next meeting.

At the evening worship hour we were favored with delightful string music by Messrs. Hall, Miller, and Jolly. These fine musicians have been with us before to the delight of all present. We are hoping to have them with us for the morning services in a few weeks.

We were pleased to have Mrs. E. E. Allen and her granddaughter, little Miss Emily Gray Leonard, of Winston-Salem, with us in the morning services Sunday.

Winston-Salem.—A revival in our midst! Perhaps we all know the song that ends so: "Revive us again." Our revival began Easter Monday night, and so far hasn't closed. Services are held at 10 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Much good has been accomplished, we feel, in the revival. Letters from elsewhere have been received, older people have been brought into the church and children, too, have given their lives to Christ. Easter Sunday morning was a glorious time in our church. There were 14 received into the church. The revival in any church should help to instill new interest into the hearts and lives of those already in the church as well as bring others to Christ. We hope and pray ours will do these two great and needed things for our church and community as far as our church influences may reach. Rev. Mr. Johnson is with us in the services.

Easter Sunday night the children gave an Easter program which conveyed beautiful thoughts of the resurrection of our Lord to the congregation. The choir rendered an anthem of Easter

At the last Workers' Council meeting we were fortunate to have as speaker Rev. J. Kenneth Pfohl, a well known Moravian pastor of our city. Dr. Pfohl brought to the Council a message that helped one to realize the importance of being a leader of the right type and lead in a way as concrete as business transactions are carried on, if one would term it so.

The Ladies' Auxiliary is having an executive meeting Tuesday afternoon and immediately following a meeting of all the Auxiliaries combined. The work in the various circles seems to grow each year, even at the first of the year; that is, the year's work from March to March. They start off at a rapid rate and continue for 12 months. A great work they're doing. The young people's circle, which is Circle No. 4, is helping clothe a little girl at the Children's Home at High Point. A lot of fun and pleasure it is to them to send this dear little girl packages; also they have their regular budget to make each year. PAULINE BRANSON, Liberty, Davidson Circuit.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. Our superintendent, Mr. P. J. Walker, is doing his best in this work, but we all know he can't have a Sunday school by himself; so come on, members, let's put our shoulders to the wheel and help push the work along.

On Easter Sunday our pastor, Rev. W. D. Reed, preached an interesting and helpful sermon. All of Mr. Reed's sermons are good, but this one was especially good.

On Easter Sunday night at Fairgrove "The Call of the Cross" was presented by the school. The program throughout was interesting, and was well attended; offering, three dollars.

At Seagrove last Sunday the apportionment for Gratitude Gift deficit was raised in full. This church will be on the honor roll.

Our revival will begin here the third Sunday night in May. Rev. Edward Suits is to be our helper, beginning Monday night.

All-day memorial services will be held at Fairgrove next Sunday. Singing, a sermon by the writer, and brief addresses by others will be the main features of the program.

Henderson. There is a marked increase in our Sunday school attendance these past few Sundays and for this we are very proud. All our other church services are well attended and, due to an evangelistic campaign being put on by all local churches, much interest and loyalty is being shown by church members and others.

The Easter services were of exceptional beauty and impressiveness. The choir furnished several selections of Easter music and a large congregation enjoyed the well-delivered sermon by the pastor, Rev. R. A. Hunter. The church was lovely in its array of flowers and ferns. Much praise to the flower committee for this.

Several ladies of the Auxiliary attended the annual Branch meeting last week, which was in Burlington, N. C.

Last Thursday evening the supper for the Brotherhood was served in the Baraca rooms. The president, Mr. W. R. Trogden, presided. During the business period the plan for fitting up a dining room in the basement of the church was discussed. No definite action was taken. The program committee presented the following: Vocal solo, by Mr. Clyde Finch; an address by Lawyer D. P. McDuffee.

A very interesting service was held yesterday morning at the 11 o'clock hour. Preceding the sermon a short memorial service was conducted by Rev. R. A. Hunter for the late A. E. Smerdon. This occasion being made so by the gift of a handsome marble baptismal font from Mrs. A. E. Smerdon. In conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Finch had their daughter, Caroline, a niece of Mrs. Smerdon, baptized.

First Church, High Point.—Death has again invaded the ranks of First church, and removed a valuable member, Mr. Earl F. Brooks, who died quite suddenly Monday evening about 11 o'clock at his home, 410 Otteray Drive. He and Mrs. Brooks attended church services last Sunday morning, and he was at his office in the Municipal building yesterday attending to his duties as superintendent of the water and light department of the city. His age was about 52 years. Surviving him are his wife, a son, Robert D. Brooks, two daughters, Mrs. W. I. Spaugh and Miss Minnie Brooks, of this city; his mother, Mrs. William Brooks, and a brother, Hunter Brooks. Funeral arrangements have not yet been announced.

The dinner served last Thursday by the Woman's Auxiliary to the members of the Young People's Department of the Women's Missionary Convention of M. E. Church, South, was a decided success. More than 200 plates were served, and the sum of $106.00 was realized thereby.

The N. C. Collegiate Press Association, which was in session at High Point College last week, closed its 19th semi-annual meet on Saturday afternoon with a luncheon at the Elwood Hotel. In the election of officers for next year J. Clyde Pugh, of the local college, who was general chairman of the entertainment committee, was elected second vice- president. Members of the staff of Hi-Po, weekly newspaper at High Point College, are rejoicing over the fact that their paper was awarded first place among the college newspapers of the state. For the first time this honor has been given to a newspaper of one of the smaller colleges, and the judges were the staff of the Winston-Salem Journal. The personnel of the Hi-Po staff includes the following: Editor in-chief, C. R. McMannis, Frostburg, Md.; managing editor, Verne Nygard, Duluth, Minn.; business manager, J. Clyde Pugh, Climax, N. C. Prof. T. C. Johnson has been faculty adviser since the establishment of this publication three years ago.

The gift of the class of 1930 to High Point College has been installed on the campus, and faculty and students are delighted with this addition to the atractiveness of the grounds. Twenty stone benches, two crystal gazers, two bird baths, and a sun-dial have been placed on different parts of the campus, thereby expressing in this beautiful way the love and loyalty of the class for Alma Mater upon the eve of their good-bye to the walls that have sheltered them for the past four years. This spring the campus presents an unusually attractive appearance.

Commencement exercises will be held on June 1-2; the baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Dr. J. C. Broomfield, president of the General Conference, on Sunday, June 1st.

A high honor has been accorded to Prof. Stanley G. Pugh, head of the Department of Commerce of the local college for three years past, in the awarding of a Fellowship in Economics in the University of Cincinnati. This Fellwoship is worth $1,500 per year and free tuition for post-graduate work in the University. This is the first time that such a Fellowship has been granted in N. C., the award having been made on the basis of merit and a competitive examination. Professor Pugh has not yet announced his decision as to his acceptance. This is a high and well-deserved honor to this efficient member of the faculty.

The splendid and delightful play, "Umbrellas t' Mend?" which has been so successfully presented by members of the Senior C. E. Society of First church, assisted by Pastor Farmer and Rev. E. L. Ballard, on several occasions, will be given in Roberts Hall at High Point College next Friday evening, May 2nd, at 8 o'clock. The cast went to Greensboro last Friday and gave the play at Caldwell school under the auspices of the State C. E. Union. The presentation on Friday evening next will be sponsored by the High Point College C. E. Society.

Much sympathy is extended to Mr. and Mrs. John B. Spencer in the loss by death of their mother, Mrs. E. E. Spencer, who passed away at her home on the Greensboro road two miles from the city on Sunday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. Mrs. Spencer had been in failin ghealth for several months, having suffered two or more strokes of paralysis. Born in Randolph County, May 5, 1856, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Branson Coltrane, she had almost attained her 74th birthday. She was married to Mr. Elias E. Spencer in 1875, and they moved to High Point about 25 years ago. Surviving relatives are her husband and 10 sons and daughters, all worthy citizens, most of whom live in High Point and the surrounding vicinity. Mrs. Spencer was an excellent woman, a member of the Friends Church. Her funeral services were conducted at historic Deep River Friends church at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning by Rev. T. A. Sykes, of High Point, and burial was made in the cemetery there where sleep seven generations of Guilford County's worthy dead.

Last Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service Rev. R. I. Farmer delivered a comforting sermon from an unique text: "Thy shoes shall be iron and brass, and as thy days, so shall thy strength be." He said in part: God meant that we should be more than a match for every experience of life that comes our way. It is not in gala days and picnics, but in stormy days that our best is displayed. God perceives what we need and furnishes help for us. Human life is divided into days and we shall be wise if we live day by day. "Teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." What you and I need is strength for today, and not for next year. Our social obligations and responsibilities are for today. I do not know and do not want to know what will happen ten years hence. A merciful God keeps the future hidden from us, and assures us that He is willing and able to supply all our needs. In Bulwer-Lytton's lovely poem, "Lucille," are found these beautiful lines:

"Honest love, honest sorrow,
Honest work for the day, honest hope for the morrow;
Are these worth nothing more than the hand they make weary,
The heart they have saddened, the life they leave dreary?
Hush! The seven fold heavens to the voice of the spirit
Echo; He that overcometh shall all things inherit."

Pleasant Grove.—Sunday was one of the greatest days in the history of our church, when we celebrated the One Hundredth Anniversary. The congregation was one of the largest ever gathered at this place. It was a happy reunion for a large number of old friends and former pastors. An old-fashioned basket dinner was served in the grove where every one spent an enjoyable hour. The large birthday cake graced the center of the table, and almost every one present was able to partake of this.

The musical program rendered by the Graham quartette and the Thomasville Male Chorus was pleasing to the audience, and very much appreciated by the church.

Rev. T. F. McCulloch, of Greensboro, addressed the Sunday school at 10:30 o'clock. This was one of the best talks on the Sunday school lesson we have heard. We were glad to have Bro. McCulloch spend the day with us.

President Taylor preached a very impressive sermon at 11 o'clock, using as his text: "I Speak Concerning Christ and the Church," from Ephesians 5:32. In closing, Dr. Taylor said: "The church should resolve in this, the beginning of a new century, to do more for the upbuilding of the Master's kingdom."

One of the interesting features of the day was the reading of the church history by Rev. G. L. Reynolds at 2 o'clock.

Rev. Edward Suits brought a very timely message. He was pastor of our church for several years, and we are always glad to have him with us.

The 3 o'clock address was delivered by Rev. R. C. Stubbins, of Winston-Salem. Rev. Mr. Stubbins made it clear that the church should be a lighthouse to steer us safe in business, educational and social life.

We were delighted to have each of the above with us, and are sure their messages were enjoyed by all. We will be glad to have them visit us again when they find it possible to do so.

We feel that these services have encouraged us in our church work, and with the help of our able pastor, Rev. D. R. Williams, we hope to accomplish many things in the name of our Master.

Rockingham.—Our Sunday school is progressing fine. Our collections and attendance are very good. Our class programs each Sunday are excellent. We feel that it is a great help to our school.

The mid-week and the cottage prayer meetings are real good. The people receive a great blessing every week.

Our Easter program was a great success. The church was beautiful with sweet-peas, hyacinths and Easter lilies. We had two crosses wrapped with white paper with a crown of Easter lilies on each. The singing in the program was real good and the play a success. We had good congregations at both the morning and evening services. We had an Easter service for the small folks in the morning at 11 o'clock, and immediately after the morning service a number of us left for Melton's Grove to hold a service. The service there was fine. We then had our program at home for the larger ones at 7:30 in the evening. We also held a sunrise service that was fine. We feel that every one present received a great blessing. On Easter Sunday part of our happy band went to Melton's Grove and part with Bro. W. F. Hudson, the leader and organizer of the Happy Band, visited a number of the unfortunate homes in our community. They carried a basket of flowers to each home, gave the aim of their work, sang and just really made them happy, and departed. There is a great work open here for our young people.

The church work in general is good.

Rev. T. L. Hill, of Colfax, has been running a meeting at the Wesleyan Methodist church for two weeks. On Sunday, April 27, he had his quartette from Colfax here in service with him. At 2:30 Sunday afternoon Bro. Hill held service at our church. The quartette sang and we had an excellent service. We feel that the meeting has been a blessing to both churches.

Enfield.—A delayed report does not mean that our church is less active. It means we are in need of a more active reporter; for really our church work is encouraging. The various organizations are progressing, though not so rapidly as one could desire. Mr. Auman's sermons each Sunday are filled with helpful and inspiring messages; they reveal careful preparation. May a great harvest be the result of his untiring labor.

We observed the pre-Easter services in our church. Mr. Auman delivered splendid sermons each evening throughout the entire week with exception of one; Rev. Mr. Johnson, of Whitakers, came Tuesday and gave us a splendid sermon. We are always glad to have him.

Yesterday at the 11 o'clock hour Mr. Auman gave over his pulpit to Rev. Frederick Frederickson, of New York. He comes from a Christian organization of that city whose purpost it is to publish and put before the people religious literature. We pray the motive will be rewarded. He preached a splendid sermon, of which we are grateful.

With the advance of spring our Sunday school is taking on new life. Yesterday's attendance was the best in a number of Sundays; however, there is yet room and we are hoping for an increase.

We are sorry to state circumstances over which we had no control made it necessary to call off our Easter program; however, we hope we may be able to make amends in some other substantial plan.

Our C. E. Societies continue to grow in interest and attendance. The programs are helpful and we enjoy them more and more. In this great work the young people are preparing for themselves useful lives. Our little folks, too, the Juniors, are a wide-awake, active little group, willing to serve in whatever they are asked. They prepare programs, lead, tell Bible stories, and so on.

Miss Ruth Bellamy, who is assistant Junior leader, is visiting in New York City and Washington, D. C. We miss her and will be glad when she returns. She has been of much help in training this group of lads and lassies in their songs and story-telling. A party was given the Juniors in the Hut a few days before Easter. Stormy-telling, various games, and an egg-hunt provided fun for about one hour. Then came refreshments. "Yes," ice cream and cookies cut in the shape of chicks and bunnies; also little cups filled with Easter candies.

We have recently organized a Cradle Roll in our Sunday school. Mrs. Auman was appointed as superintendent of this department. We have planned to provide our Hut with a competent Hut mother to serve as nursemaid to the little ones and give the mothers desiring to do so the opportunity to attend the Sunday morning service. We will begin this new plan next Sunday. The Hut will also be furnished with suitable toys to be used by the little ones.

Success to the Herald and its readers.

—Arnold J. Thomas, a prominent business man of Australia, on his first visit to America has been making a study of prohibition conditions, and on his arrival in Chicago told Charles R. Jones, cahirman of the American Business Men's Prohibition Foundation, whose headquarters he visited, that he was amazed at the prohibition situation in the United States as compared to his native land. "From the hour of my arrival in Seattle, March 29, I have spent considerable time in the large western cities, including San Francisco. Last Angeles, Salt Lake City and Denver, studying evidences of liquor drinking and selling in hotels, restaurants, stores and shops to discover to what extent drinking men were in evidence in the centers of population," he said. "Since landing in America I have seen only one man noticeably under the influence of liquor and that was in San Francisco."

May

May is almost here and on the 8th of May our four young people graduate from the Jamestown High School. We are rather proud of them. The one boy will be going out of the Home, but the three girls will be with us for some time yet.

Please remember us with your offerings in every Sunday school in the Conference during May. We need you and you need us. Together we live and grow. May God bless all of you.

MOTHER

(For Mother's Day)

I see you sitting
Smiling today
You who first taught me
The right way to pray.
No trial too heavy
For your noble heart;
One supreme purpose,
To fill a good part.

Words that were golden
Fell from your lips,
Bringing to me
Rich-laden ships
Of thoughts of service
And worth-while work;
Hard though the task,
Never to shirk.

My thought of you,
O'erleaps words and rhyme;
My love for you,
Transcends space and time.
If I cannot, dear Mother,
Be with you today,
Your heart will tell you
What I wish to say.

We have heard him say that religious service elsewhere never seemed to him quite so genuinely religious as at Tabernacle. He has a warm place in his heart for the people of that community and asks us to send the Herald to ten families at his expense. The families were selected by the class leaders and other officers of the church. One of Bro. Coble's good deeds on his last birthday was making this gift. We thank him heartily and commend his example to others who can find it in their hearts to do likewise.

—The play brought to Greensboro last Friday night by the High Point C. E. Society was highly entertaining. It was very amusing and at the same time unfolded a plot to a satisfactory conclusion. Bros. Farmer and Ballard took prominent parts. All characters were well represented. You did not realize that they were mere players and amateurs at that. Note that this play is to be given at High Point College on Friday night.

The School At Mother's Knee

The bestest school I ever see
Was jist the school at Mother's knee.
I larned the most and larned it well,
Tho' never larned to read and spell.

She did not show us how to write,
But showed us how it's wrong to fight.
She did not read to us from books,
But made us see how quarrels looks.

She could not have us tell a lie,
She would not let us storm and cry.
She made us keep our faces clean
Or stay in dark and not be seen.

She had us do a kindly deed
To those we found in urgent need.
"Deny yourself for others' sake"
She said was bestest rule to make.

Jist why that school at Mother's knee
Was bestest school for you and me
I now see well tho' I'm no preacher:
'Twas 'cause it had the bestest teacher.

A Man Who Ceased To Believe In God

He said he was taught by his superstitious parents to believe in God, but he had learned better, he had thought his way to freedom. He would henceforth live a different life. He would never work any more: he would leave work to the stupids who did not have any better sense than to believe in God. And of course he would never be so foolish as to pray again. And he would not be intimidated by fear of death.

He went out to enter upon his new life. He of course was not looking for work, but for a chance to live without work. He snatched a lady's purse. She cried out, and he saw a policeman coming. He was not afraid of God, but he was afraid of that policeman. He ran with all his might, but the policeman outran him and took him before a judge. The judge said: "Three months in the chain gang on the streets." It was tough, but there was no escape. In bitterness he worked the time out.

He would be more cautious in his next effort. He decided to rob a bank. He found an accomplice and the two formed their plan. But they had not foreseen some factors in the case and they were both captured before they got out of the city with their loot. They were sentenced to ten years at hard labor in prison. So the man who had resolved never to work again found himself entering upon a ten-year job. Life looked dark to him, but he had resolved not to be intimidated by fear. The days and years dragged on. He felt like cursing God, but he had discovered that there is no God.

Prison life told upon him, and as he approached the end of his term he found himself in the clutches of an incurable disease. He was taken from prison to a hospital where he grew steadily worse. One day his physician told him that he had only a few hours to live. He turned his face to the wall. He remembered his resolution not to be afraid of death. But how could he keep from being afraid? If there is no God, there is some power that had put him into this life and punished him terribly for his sins. Might not the same power put him into another life and punish him still more terribly? As he thought of these things there rushed to his lips an outcry of his soul which he could not keep back: "O God,—O God, what a fool I have been!"

Education Versus Dictation

Men are moved to courses of action in two ways: by other men through dictation or by their own choice. If you look over the worlds in which men live, economic world, political world, ecclesiastical world, educational world, even the world of amusement, you will perhaps be surprised to see how much of human conduct is still under the sway of dictators. How few are they who in life are following courses of their own choosing. In a state of immaturity in which all men spend the first years of their lives there is need of dictators. Our parents, our teachers, our captains of industry fill the place in some way, well or ill. But it is not expected that this state of dependence upon dictators will continue throughout life. It is expected that the process of education will set free from the rule of dictators, that it will develop powers of intelligence and choice which will enable the individual to choose his course of action better than any other person can choose it for him. Thus education makes way for freedom while dictation tends to bondage. Both of these opposing principles of human action have their true place in life and neither of them should be allowed to usurp all authority. But every person should recognize the fact that the way to escape from bondage to dictators is through the true education of his powers, mental, moral, and physical.

THE LIVING SERMON

I'd rather see a sermon than hear one any day.
I'd rather one would walk with me than merely tell the way.
The eye's a better pupil and more willing than the ear;
Fine counsel is confusing, but example's always clear.
The best of all the preachers are the men who live their creeds,
For to see good put in action is what everybody needs.
I soon can learn to do it, if you'll let me see it done,
I can watch your hands in action, but your tongue too fast
may run,
The lectures you deliver may be very wise and true,
But there's no misunderstanding howsoever what you do.
I may not understand the high advice you give,
But I'd rather get my lessons by observing how you act and live.

OUR NEED FOR CHRIST

First, we need Christ in temptation. Temptation to do wrong comes to us all. Reckless companions beg us to leave the good training we have had in our home. Good times are promised at certain action. There are great temptations nowadays to do wrong, but Jesus tells us that He was also tempted, but that He overcame these temptations by the help of the Holy Spirit. We, too, need Christ to help us overcome our temptations.

Second, we need Christ in danger. Danger comes to us all and we need someone to help us. We have the story of the disciples on the Lake of Galilee when a storm came on, and the boat which they were in was tossed on the water. When they saw something which frightened them they thought they saw a ghost but it was only Jesus. When Peter recognized Jesus he called out, Lord, if it be thou bid me come to thee. He starts but loses his faith and begins to sink. He calls on Jesus to save him. Can not we call on Jesus?

Third, we need Christ in trouble. We do not live in this world long before trouble comes to us. Sickness, death and loss befall us and we need someone to comfort us. It is sad when trouble comes to the home where they know not Jesus and His readiness to help in time of trouble.

Fourth, we need Christ in time of perplexity. There is nothing so sweet in our religion as Jesus' invitation, "Come ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." We are often perplexed, we do not know the way to go and what to do, like the young man that went to Jesus to ask Him what he must do to have eternal life. When he realized that he was not living right he went to Jesus to ask Him what to do.

Fifth, we need Christ in choosing a calling.

When girls and boys of today reach maturity they are faced with hard problems. They do not know what is best suited for them, so they need Jesus. Jesus called Peter from his fishing, Matthew from his tax gathering. Will not He call us to our work?

SELECTING A PRESIDENT FOR THE LOCAL COLLEGE

A special committee of the board of trustees of High Point college has been charged with the duty of selecting a successor to Dr. R. M. Andrews who recently resigned the presidency of the institution. The duty is no light one and a decision will be made, no doubt, only after a careful survey of the local situation and of the men available for the place. The future of the college will depend largely upon the success of the trustees in placing a suitable man in charge of the administration.

Dr. Andrews, who served as president of the college from the time of its opening six years ago to the present, has succeeded in establishing a first class institution, so recognized by the state department of education and graduate schools. He and his corps of instructors have set a high mark for their successors to measure up to. In every respect, except for finances, the college administration will be turned over to a new administration in excellent condition and with a prestige unexpected of so young a school. Nor can the financial difficuties of the institution be attributed to the retiring administration which seems to have managed the business of the college in an economical and efficient manner.

Whoever takes over the presidency of the college now will have a firm foundation upon which to build a splendid student body and a widespread popular interest and favor. If he has the qualities of leadership and vision and courage, qualities that the committee will doubtedly require in the man whom they recommend, rapid progress and growth may be anticipated. Should the committee, however, be unfortunate in its selection and name a man unable to inspire general confidence and too easily swayed by every wind of sentiment that blows, the work so splendidly begun will be seriously impaired. The man will need to be further a financier, a diplomat, and something of an autocrat.

It is generally understood that the trustees of the college have been somewhat undecided as to whether or not the next president should come from within or without the North Carolina Methodist Protestant conference. There would probably be advantages in deciding either way and perhaps geography should have no influence in the final decision. Education, like business, has passed the stage where it is in any way limited by state or sectional lines. It finds its leaders without regard to place.

Rumor has it that an outside man is favored at this time. One consideration which might move the trustees to select a man from some other section of the country is that of finances, now the pressing problem of the college. Possibly a churchman of some other section would enable the institution to enlarge its constituency and widen its appeal for financial support. One other institution in the state owes its recent rapid expansion to the fact that its president is able to draw support for it from its denomination in other sections of the country. For a small denomination such wideness of appeal may seem to the trustees to be essential. Certainly some generous source of strength must be tapped for High Point college.—High Point Enterprise.

WHY SHOULD WE READ THE BIBLE TODAY?

If the bible is not read today as formerly, I believe it will be read again when the new knowledge interpretation of the old books is better known and that it will be found to be more interesting and vital than ever.

Our fathers were folk of one book, and that book was the Bible. Some of them read other books, but all of them read the Bible, simple and learned alike. To it they turned for light in the dark places of life and found guidance in perplexity. Its passion for righteousness spoke to their consciences; its gorgeous coloring stirred their imaginations; its vision of the unseen gave them inward strength and hope. It would be hard to over-estimate the influence of the Bible upon the mind and conduct of the generation before us.

But we are not people of one book, the great classics are not read today as formerly; and with them something sweet and strong has gone, which thoughtful minds regret.

But the neglect of the Bible is also due to a changed conception of its value and authority and the new setting in which it is read.

It is not the new view of the Bible but an inadequate understanding of it, which is at fault, Bible study of the modern type is just as reverent, just as enthusiastic in its loyalty to the old book as ever it has been. What we need to reclaim its throne in the consciousness of mankind, is to grasp what the new view is and what it means.

The Bible should be read in a new light, for at least four good reasons: The first of which is that it is a great and varied literary classic, with an atmosphere of serene power which we dwellers in this breathless age deeply need.

Second, we have in the Bible the record of a racial experience of God, unfolding through many ages, which is without parallel in history.

Third, the whole Bible is a setting, a shrine, for the life of Christ. It is in this context, and none other, that He appears who is the hope and desire and need of all nations.

Fourth, in the teachings of Jesus, we have, illustrated in His ever-living presence, principles of right relationship between man and God and between man and man, which prove out in practice verifying the truth of the Bible by communicating to the souls of men, peace, purity, power and that buoyancy which as of old, makes every man who has real contact with Christ a new creature.

IS THE UNIVERSE TOO TERRIBLE?

Last night I stood beside the ocean where the darkness was wrapped round me like a garment and the sky was brilliant with a crescent moon and a multitude of stars. It was one of those nights, so beautiful that it hurts, when strange moods play about one. It was a world of wondrous beauty; but it was also a vast and dreadful universe spread out before me in the night. The great rollers were breaking in lines of surf. My little body would last but a moment in the clutch of their pitiless arms. Above were the vast spaces and the stars. How small my little life appeared! They had looked down on all the vanished races and would be there when the last man lived out the span of his fleeting years. The whole world, save for faint lights here and there, was mantled in thick darkness, in which, if I wandered from the beaten path, I should soon be lost beyond recovery in marsh or forest. These facts came into the scene and they would not be put out by any thought of the magic beauty of the night. The universe could grind me to powder in a moment. Is it not too terrible? Yes, without a God that is greater than the universe. That is why we need the word of the poet and prophet to tell us a truth that will save us from despair as we try to live in the universe that science has discovered for us.—Ozora S. Davis.

JENNY LIND

Numerous anecdotes are related to prove the kindness and goodness of her nature, but no one is more characteristic than the following, which, we believe, has not been made public before: During her visit to Bath, she happened to be walking with a friend in front of some alms-houses, into one of which she entered, and sat down for a moment, ostensibly to rest herself, but in reality to find some excuse for doing an act of charity to the old woman who lived in it, and whom she had seen feeble and tottering at the door. The old woman, like the rest of her neighbors, was full of the Swedish Nightingale, who she had heard was just then at Bath, entertaining with her voice all those who were so happy and fortunate as to be able to go to the theatre. "For myself," said the old woman, "I have lived a long time in the world, and desire nothing before I die but to hear Jenny Lind." "And would it make you happy?" inquired her visitor. "Aye, that it would," answered the old woman; "but such folks as I can't go to the playhouse; and so I shall never hear her." "Don't be so sure of that," said the good-natured Jenny; "sit down, my friend, and listen"; and forthwith she sang, with all her richest and most glorious powers, one of the finest songs she knew. The poor old woman was beside herself with delight, when, after concluding her song, her kind visitor observed, "Now you have heard Jenny Lind."

O, FOR A BIGGER BOAT!

Just half a century ago a terrible accident took place on the river Thames at London. A ship, the Princess Alice, with 900 on board, sank, and only 200 escaped. On that night a ferryman heard a crash, went home to his comfortable fireside, and thought no more about it. Another ferryman, who had made his boat fast for the night, hearing the crash, put her back into the water, rowed as fast as he could to the scene of the disaster, and rescued many from drowning. As he pulled to the shore with his boat so full that it could not hold another one, though there were struggling people all around, he lifted up his heart to heaven and said, "O, God for a bigger boat!"

This is the spirit that should inspire the Endeavor host in their Crusade with Christ for evangelism. All around is a needy world, and our prayer should be for a larger influence, or for a bigger boat.—Robert P. Anderson in C. E. World.

CHEERFULNESS IN CONTENTMENT

The way to happiness does not lie in attempting to bring our circumstances up to our minds, but our minds down to our circumstances. Many birds wear a finer coat than the lark, nor is there any that dwells in a lowlier home; yet which of the feathered songsters soars so high, or sings so cheerily, or teaches man so well how to leave the day's cares and labors to go to the bosom of his family—as when, neither envying the peacock its splendid plunge, nor the proud eagle its lofty realm, it drops singing into its grassy nest to caress its young, and with its wings to shield them from the cold dews of the night? Let ours be the cheerful happiness of Him who, content with little, pleased with whatever pleases the Father, careful for nothing, thankful for anything, can say with Paul, "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content."

HONESTY IN LITTLE THINGS

One of the kings of Persia, famous in history for his justice, was once out hunting, when finding himself hungry, he ordered his people to dress a deer that they had just taken. When all was nearly ready, they found that they had forgotten to bring any salt with them; so they sent a lad off to fetch some from a village at a little distance. The king overheard them, and calling to the boy, said, "And mind you, take money to pay for it." The attendants expressed surprise at his thinking of such a trifle, and asked what harm there could be in taking a handful of salt. The king replied, "Most all the evil that now troubles the earth began in such trifles, till by degrees it grew to its present height; and if I take the salt, my officers will perhaps seize a cow."

RELIGION

It has been said that men carry on kind of a coasting trade with religion. In the voyage of life they profess to be in search of Heaven, but take care not to venture so far in their approximations to it as to entirely lose sight of the earth; and should their frail vessel be in danger of shipwreck, they will gladly throw their darling vices overboard, as other mariners their treasures, only to fish them up again when the storm is over.—Colton.

—Life is to be fortified by many friendships. To love, and to be loved, is the greatest happiness of existence.—Sydney Smith.

Mocksville Charge

May 3-4.—According to appointment, we were with this charge on these dates in four services. This enabled us to visit all the churches on the charge except one—Byerly's Chapel. Saturday night, the appointment was at Union Chapel, and on Sunday we visited Bethel, Dulins, and Union Grove. The attendance was graitifying at each church, and a cordial reception was given us at every place on the charge. We found Pastor Ferree zealous and hopeful of a good year. This is his first year on this charge. He is tempering his zeal with tact, and he and his family are winning their way to the hearts of the people. The campaign for HERALD subscriptions is being pressed, and the pastor is very hopeful of securing the full allotment of 44 subscribers. We are confident that more interest and progress would be experienced by the charge if more of the people would become readers of the church papers. Information always begets interest; interest begets action; and action leads to results. A larger HERALD circulation is one of the needs here. There apears to be good interest in Sunday School work at all the churches visited. We shared in the school at Bethel. More than a hundred were in attendance.

An Easter offering was taken, we believe, in nearly all of the churches on the charge. Our appeal on behalf of "Dollar a Member" resulted in pledges to the amount of $16, with one dollar paid. Some pledges had been secured previous to our visit. We are grateful for all that has been done, and for anything that may yet be done for this cause. The prevailing financial depression is felt on the charge. The spiritual condition seems normal. We were glad to be with these churches, and to see relatives and old friends again. Pastor and people were generous in their hospitality toward us, for which they have our grateful thanks.

We shall watch the progress of the work here with interest and prayers.

Famine

The present famine in China, we are told, is one of the most distressing in all history. In two provinces, Shensi and Kansu, 3,000,000 have already died of starvation, and unless help can be provided soon, this number will be doubled. So great are the hunger pangs that the people are eating human flesh, and this has become so prevalent that it has ceased to attract any special attention among the natives. While many among all nations are living in luxury, and adding more and more to their abundant accumulations, millions of their fellows are dying of starvation. Surely the compassion of the world will be moved by this appalling condition. We are hereby calling upon all of our churches throughout the conference to make an offering for famine-stricken China.

"For I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat—In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

I am going to presume on the willingness of Dr. Brown to handle this fund, and am asking you to send the money to him. He will see that it goes promptly to relief headquarters. Please take this offering at once, brethren, in every church.

"The First Number Was Worth the Entire Subscription"

This is what a subscriber said about the HERALD when he and his family had read their first number. They had no idea that the paper was so valuable in giving information and reading matter for the entire family. But "seeing is believing." What has been true of this family would be true of others if only they would give the HERALD an opportunity to convince them. We regard our county and state papers necessary in order that we may keep abreast of the times. By the very same token, we should take the church papers. It is absolutely impossible for any of us to keep informed as to what is going on in the conference and the denomination without reading the church papers. And where information is lacking, interest and action will be lacking. A tendency on the part of the people to read church papers and to discuss church programs—ask questions, raise issues, approve, point out problems, suggest solutions—is always a hopeful sign.

All success to Brother Harrison and his committee in the HERALD subscription campaign to be waged during May and June!

Children's Day

June is the month for the observance of this day. The program, "Onward and Upward," is ready and will be mailed to every church without charge. The program consisting of music, pageant, and recitations, has been prepared by the ablest talent. It is adaptable to every church and will be found pleasing to every audience. Some settings of the program, local to our own denomination, give an added interest. The Board of Missions counts heavily upon the Children's Day offerings for funds with which to carry on the work. The total amount received from this source during the last quadrennium was $108,266—an average of slightly more than $27,000 annually. Our offering last year for this purpose was $1,116. During the last quadrennium our annual Children's Day offering was $1,884. We must do our best this year for a program and an offering in every church. Send order to Rev. G. W. Hadaway, 516 North Charles St., Baltimore, Md., for supplies.

Third Sunday In May—First Sunday In June

High Point College Day—One by order of the Conference, the other by appointment of "Dollar a Member" Committee. The purpose of these days is to magnify High Point College, and to create added interest in the institution among our people. The committee hopes, also, that these days may afford an opportunity for completing "Dollar a Member" undertaking, at least by getting the amount pledged, if it can not be paid now. We most earnestly solicit the help of every one for this undertaking during the month of May, and including the first Sunday in June. Surely much can be done in raising this allotment during that time. We must support High Point College, and help just now, when the load is heavy, will count for much more than the actual money that we give.

At the beginning of the year the Committee districted the conference, and appointed directors to promote this undertaking in each district. We want to assure them of our appreciation of the work that they have done, and to express the hope that they can get behind this matter during the month of May with a determined purpose to see it through to a happy and successful conclusion.

For the information of charges, we give again the list of directors:

BROKEN THINGS

It is on crushed grain man is fed; it is by bruised plants that he is restored to health. It was by broken pitchers that Gideon triumphed; on broken pieces of the ship that Paul and his companions were saved. It was by the bruised and torn bodies of the saints that the truth was made to triumph.

When the true story of all things shall be known, then will it appear how precious in God's sight, how powerful in His hands, were many broken things: Broken earthly hopes, broken bodily health, broken earthly fortunes; above all and supremely, the broken Body of His Son, and the broken bread of the Sacrament which commemorates it.—St. Mark's Messenger.

THE POWER OF SONG

When the apostles in the prison at Philippi "prayed and sang praises unto God," "the prisoners heard them." It must have been a sad and pitiable congregation. But some, at least, would feel better and take heart again, as they listened to these midnight songs. Thirty men, disheveled and red-eyed, lined up before a judge. It was the usual crowd of "drunks and disorderlies" from the night before. Some were old and hardened; others hung their heads in shame. While they stood, a clear voice from below began to sing—

"Last night I lay a-sleeping,
There came a dream so fair."

Last night! For these men it had been a nightmare, not a night. The song was such a contrast to the horrible fact that it brought a sudden shock.

"I stood in old Jerusalem,
Beside the temple there."

The song continued, and the judge paused and quietly inquired. A former member of a famous opera company, known all over the country, was waiting trial for forgery, and was singing in the cell below. Meantime the song went on, and every prisoner showed signs of emotion. A few dropped upon their knees. One lad at the end of the line buried his face in his hands, and sobbed aloud: "O mother, mother!" Through the courtroom the song blended with the hush. One man protested: "We're here to take our punishment; but this—" And he, too, began to sob. It was impossible to carry on the business of the court. The police sergeant, after surprised attempt to keep the men in line, stepped back and waited with the rest. The song swelled to its climax—

"Jerusalem, Jerusalem! Sing for the night is o'er!
Hosanna in the highest! Hosanna for evermore!"

The last words rang out and there was silence. Visibly every one was touched. Neither fine or sentence did the judge pronounce. A kindly word, and he dismissed them all. It was a conquest of them, not by punishment but by song, as Paul sang in the prison, and the prisoners overheard them.—Homiletic Review.

THE CONTRACTING WALLS

Some one has likened time to the contracting walls of a prison. At first there is ample room to all appearances, but as each year passes there is a noticeable shrinkage in the size of the cell, until at last the prisoner is crushed by the contracting walls. But to the Christian, while life here below may contract, yet at the end he escapes to a world of larger dimensions whose walls will never contract upon him. He will go to dwell in the house of the Lord for ever. He will be at the right hand of God where there are pleasures for evermore, and where there is fulness of joy.—From The Gospel Minister.

THE SUCCESS FAMILY

The father of Success is Work. The mother of Success is Ambition. The oldest son is Common Sense, and some of the other boys are Stability, Perseverance, Honesty, Thoroughness, Foresight, Enthusiasm, and Co-operation. The oldest daughter is Character. Some of the sisters are Cheerfulness, Loyalty, Courtesy, Care, Economy, Sincerity and Harmony. The baby is Opportunity. Get acquainted with the "old man," and you will be able to get along pretty well with all the rest of the family.—League Echoes.

BOMBING AN ICE PACK

While Billy Gardner was out at the airport tuning up the planes, Colonel Marks stepped out on the field.

"Get the Kitty Hawk ready to go up," he called to one of the mechanics, who replied, "Yes, sir," and moved away to do as he was told. The Colonel turned to Billy.

"There's a report just come in from the city that the river is overflowing its banks and there is danger of a flood," he said. "Want to come up with me and take a look at it?"

"I'd like to," replied Billy, eagerly.

"Get ready, then," the Colonel told him. "We'll start just as soon as the plane is ready."

Five minutes later, the Colonel's Kitty Hawk, with Billy sitting in the mechanic's seat, was leaving the ground on its way to the clouds. As it got higher and higher, Billy could see more and more of the country beneath them and when he saw how much the river had swollen he gave a cry of surprise.

The Colonel heard him, because they were connected to each other by a helmet telephone set.

"What's the matter, Billy?"

"Take a look at the river," gasped Billy. "It's three times its natural size!"

The Colonel looked down at the flooded country below and realized at once that the situation was more serious than he had thought. Already the water had risen above the river banks and was pouring into the level valley. A rise of a few more feet and the city would be in grave danger.

"Let's go down the river and see what's holding all this water up," said Billy, and the Colonel must have thought it was a good idea, for he turned the plane around and did what Billy had suggested.

Just below the city the river took a sharp turn to the right, and as the Kitty Hawk approached this bend Billy saw that it was jammed solid with large pieces of ice.

For a few minutes they hovered over the jam to see if there was any chance of breaking away by itself. But instead of doing that it was getting bigger and bigger, for more ice was coming down the river every minute and jamming itself in tighter than ever.

"If we only had something heavy we could drop," mused Billy, half to himself. For a moment he played with this thought, then he had a brilliant idea!

"Colonel Marks! Remember the army bombing plane that's supposed to be at Bismark Field today?"

"Yes."

"Well, I wonder if it's there?"

"Billy, I know what you're thinking about," replied the Colonel quickly. "It's our only chance to break up that ice jam. We'll fly to Bismark and bring the army plane back with us. One good bomb dropped down in the middle of that pack and the city is saved."

The Kitty Hawk flew as she never flew before. Over the mountains and down into the next valley she went, landing safely on the field not fifty feet away from a heavily armored plane which they recognized as the bomber.

"Where's the army aviator?" asked Colonel Marks as soon as he could get out of the Kitty Hawk.

"Haven't you heard?" replied a mechanic. "He had an accident when he tried to land and was sent to the hospital."

"Is the plane damaged?"

"Yes."

"Badly?"

"Enough so that the engine won't run," was the reply.

"Then that settles it," said Colonel Marks, turning to Billy. "Let's go back?"

But Blily had been doing some thinking.

"Why can't we borrow a couple of bombs and drop them ourselves?" he queried. "We could put them in the cockpit with us and I could lean over the side and let them go."

"It would be dangerous, but we could do it!" cried Colonel Marks, and explained to the men at Bismark Field why he wanted them. He took three torpedo bombs from the army plane and stood them up carefully in the cockpit of the Kitty Hawk. Then, when everything was ready, he took his place at the controls and started back over the mountains.

"Look at our gas, will you, Billy?" he asked, as they were clearing the highest summits. "They didn't expect me to make a long flight and maybe they didn't fill the tanks."

Billy looked at the indicator.

"Why, we haven't any!" he gasped, in dismay.

"We must have a little," replied the Colonel. "Look again."

"There is some," was Billy's answer. "But not enough to take us to the ice jam."

"There's got to be," said the Colonel, grimly. "Look at that city. If the ice jam is not broken within a few minutes the houses will be entirely under water."

A few minutes later Billy was carefully placing the first bomb on the edge of the cockpit, ready to drop it at the proper moment.

"Use your own judgment," called the Colonel. "I'll keep the plane steady and as directly over the jam as I can."

Billy looked at the swirling water below and waited until the Kitty Hawk was in a vertical line with the solid barrier of ice that extended across the river. Then he pushed the bomb over and waited for results.

It was a bad shot. The bomb landed in the woods on the righthand side of the river and when it exploded the ice didn't even budge.

"Try again," directed the Colonel. "This time allow a little bit for the wind."

The Kitty Hawk circled around and when Billy thought it was over the right spot, he let the second bomb fall. His aim was perfect! The bomb landed in the middle of the jam and bored its way into the heart of the ice. Billy gave a sigh of relief. When the explosion came it would tear a hole big enough to break up any jam. But the explosion never came.

"It must have been a defective bomb!" cried Billy, turning toward Colonel Marks.

The aviator did not reply immediately. He was to busy trying to do something with the controls, but after a few moments he said:

"No use. Our gas has run out and the engine has stalled. We'll have to make a forced landing."

Billy looked down at the flooded valley and then at the third torpedo. If he could only have one more chance!

"Listen, Colonel Marks," he said. "One forced landing is as good as another. Why can't we coast down past the jam again, so that I can have another try with this last bomb?"

"That's what I intend to do," came the reply, and now the powerless Kitty Hawk banked a complete circle and turned toward the ice pack, dropping swiftly as it went.

"We may not clear it," warned the Colonel. "Get ready for a crash."

But the Kitty Hawk was higher than the Colonel thought. When it passed the middle of the barrier it was still three hundred feet in the air.

"Here it goes!" yelled Billy, dropping the last bomb over the other side. Then he sat down in the mechanic's seat, closed his eyes and waited for the crash.

It came almost at the same time as the explosion and Billy was thrown out of the cockpit against part of the wing, which had already crumpled into a hopeless piece of wreckage. He was stunned by the impact and for a few minutes he went unconscious.

When he opened his eyes again the Colonel was leaning over him, holding a glass of water to his lips.

"Are you all right, Billy?"

"I think so," replied Billy. "How are you?"

"I escaped without a scratch," said the Colonel. "We cleared the ice pack, brushed against the tops of the trees and landed hard in this field."

"And the bomb?" queried Billy as he got unsteadily to his feet.

Billy stood in an attentive attitude for a moment and heard a sound like Niagara Falls.

"That's the river roaring around the bend," said the Colonel, with a smile. "I bet the water has dropped ten feet already."

"That's all I care about," grinned Billy, but later, when he and the Colonel were given medals for what they did, he admitted that he had a second care.

"What is it? To keep the medal shined up?" queried the Colonel, laughing.

"No," replied Billy. "To get more of them so this one won't get lonely."—Selected.

AS EINSTEIN SEES JESUS

When men become famous it is customary to seek their views on many things quite outside the range of their immediate interests. Albert Einstein is the most famous physicist of our generation. He has had to suffer much at the hands of interviewers. But a recent interview by George Sylvester Viereck, published in The Saturday Evening Post, shows among other things that he does not share as a Jew the prejudices of so many of his people concerning Jesus. The following conversation with his interviewer reminds us that the appeal of Jesus is universal, compels often the attention of the high as well as of the lowly, of great scholars as well as of the unlearned, of the Jew as well as of the Gentile.

"To what extent are you influenced by Christianity?"

"As a child, I received instruction both in the Bible and in the Talmud. I am a Jew, but I am enthralled by the luminous figure of the Nazarene."

"Have you read Emil Ludwig's book on Jesus?"

"Emil Ludwig's Jesus," Einstein replied, "is shallow. Jesus is too colossal for the pen of phrasemongers, however artful. No man can dispose of Christianity with a bon mot"

"You accept the historical existence of Jesus?"

"Unquestionably. No one can read the Gospels without feeling the actual presence of Jesus. His personality pulsates in every word. No myth is filled with such life. How different, for instance, is the impression which we received from an account of legendary heroes of antiquity like Theseus. Theseus and other heroes of his type lack the authentic vitality of Jesus."

"No man," Einstein replied, "can deny the fact that Jesus existed, nor that His sayings are beautiful. Even if some of them have been said before, no one has expressed them so divinely as He."

It becomes more evident every day that Jesus has definitely entered into the horizon of Jewish life. Everywhere throughout the world Jews are thinking and speaking of Jesus. The years of silence concerning Him are over. Even if Jews do not see as yet in the Man of Nazareth what vast numbers of the children of men have seen, still it is a movement fraught with great promise that they see Him at all. The more He is thought about the more transcendent He must appear. The dawn is the sure forerunner of noonday splendor. — Our Jewish Neighbors.

AN INCIDENT IN GLADSTONE'S LIFE

Many years ago Mr. Gladstone heard of two young men in the village who had become notorious for their drinking habits, and he determined to make an effort to save them. He invited them to see him at the castle, and there, in "the Temple of Peace," as his library was called, he impressively appealed to them to change their ways, and then knealt with them, and fervently asked God to sustain and strengthen them in their resolve to abstain from that which had hitherto done them so much harm. The sequel cannot be told better than in the language of one of the men concerned, who says: "Never can I forget the scene, and as long as I live the memory of it will be indelibly impressed on my mind. The Grand Old Man was profoundly moved by the intensity of his solicitation. My companion is now a prominent minister, and neither of us has touched a drop of intoxicating drink since, nor are we ever likely to violate an agreement so impressively ratified in Mr. Gladstone's library."—The Parish Visitor.

GOD'S LOVE AND MINE

REV. J. MOUNTAIN

The earth absorbs the soft, refreshing rain
And sends it back in flowers and fruit again;
So I receive Thy love so rich and free
And send it back in joy and praise to Thee.

The moon receives the sun's bright golden light
And gives it forth to cheer the darksome night;
So I receive Thy rays of love divine
And with them try to cheer this world of Thine.

O help me, Lord, to take, by grace divine
Yet more and more of that great love of Thine;
That day by day my heart may give to Thee
A deeper love and grow more constantly.

THE HEAVENLY COMPANY

Who is in Heaven? Blessed are the mighty, for they are in Heaven; blessed are rich, for theirs is the kingdom of glory; blessed are the famous for theirs are the trumpets of eternity; blessed are the noble for the angels are their servants. Why, that is not the text. Who is in Heaven? The poor in spirit. Not many mighty, not many noble, not many learned, not many brilliant are called; then perhaps we may be there.

May 18: WHAT ARE THE CAUSES OF WAR?

Jas. 3:13-18; 4:1, 2.
(WORLD GOODWILL DAY)

Daily Bible Readings

Monday—Tyranny. Gen. 14:1-12.
Tuesday—Conquest. Josh. 1:1-6.
Wednesday—Divine punishment on sin. Judges 6:1-6.
Thursday—Envy. II Sam. 15:1-18.
Friday—Greed. I Kings 20:1-12.
Saturday—Lack of brotherhood. Gen. 4:1-8.

To the Leader

Just now when there is such a marked desire for peace this particular topic is one of extreme importance. Much depends upon the desire of the youth of our land for PEACE. At this meeting bring out not only the very obvious causes of war, but also the causes which remain overlooked—in other words, the more remote causes. A very good idea for this meeting would be to let each person taking part represent a cause of war. Let him also name some war that he has caused—giving the absurdities of the cause. Last, have one who represents the "War-weary World" to sit in judgment and to condemn whole-heartedly all these causes. This last part should be made very impressive.

Hymns

"Al Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," "Wonderful Peace," "America the Beautiful," "Jesus Shall Reign," and "The Son of God Goes Forth to Peace."

Leader's Lines

The causes for war are both numerous and obvious, for every effect must have a cause. If we hunt long and hard enough we will find a cause for everything that has happened. Things do not just happen—they are caused by something. Causes may be either immediate or remote and it is often the case that the causes are a culmination of minor events. If we are to find a cure for anything we must get at the very bottom of the cause—not only the apparent cause, but the real, basic cause. In our meeting tonight we are to try to get at the real causes of war in order that we may, at least, aid in the GREAT CAUSE OF PEACE. It is our business to try to educate for peace. War is a snare—a dissolution. War has, since there began to be wars, claimed to settle problems, but even Napoleon has declared, "War settles nothing, but rather unsettles everything." War sows seeds of hatred; it abolishes reason; it makes sacrifice of the best blood of the land; it lowers the standards of morality—finally, it does everything to tear down that which civilization has through the ages been trying to build up. Today it is absolutely necessary that we have universal peace, for science has made this true. Lord Bryce says that if we do not destroy war, war will destroy us. At last we will have to come to the realization that the great pre-requisite for world peace is—RIGHTEOUSNESS.

For Topic Talks

The causes for war are:

1. Greed.
2. Conquest.
3. Jealousy.
4. False pride.
5. Fear.
6. Suspicion.
7. Selfishness.
8. Oppression.
9. Hatred.
10. Worldly power and glory.
11. Misunderstanding.
12. Retaliation and ignorance.

Questions to Be Answered.

1. On what basis do you believe that world peace must rest?
2. If nations are allowed to fight why are not individuals?
3. What motives have promoted some of our largest wars?
4. Is science helping to bring about world peace, or not? Why?
5. Under what circumstances do you think Christ would take up arms?
6. Why can there not be lasting peace without Christ?

Poetry Corner

However the battle ended,
Though proudly the victor comes
With fluttering flags and prancing nags,
And truth proclaims this motto,
In letters of living light—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Though the heel of the strong oppressor
May grind the weak to dust,
And the voices of fame with one acclaim
May call him great and just,
Let those who applaud take warning,
And keep this motto in sight—
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

Let those who have failed take courage,
Tho' the enemy seems to have won,
To' his ranks are strong, if he be in the wrong,
The battle is not yet done:
For as sure as the morning follows
The darkest hour of night,
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

O man, bowed down with labor!
O woman, young, yet old!
O heart, oppressed in the toiler's breast
And crushed by the power of gold!
Keep on with your weary battle
Against triumphant might;
No question is ever settled
Until it is settled right.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

MOTHER'S DAY

Next Sunday, May 11, is Mother's Day. Let every living mother receive from sons and daughters evidence of their grateful love. Mother is their most self-sacrificing friend, with a devotion to her children which will endure till death and beyond death. Let those whose mothers have passed into the other life fondly remember them and look forward to a blessed reunion beyond the skies. This day will bring blessing to all who rightly observe it.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

TO SECRETARIES OF LITERATURE

The women of your society ought to read the reports we are publishing this week from the branch meeting. Send for sample issues of the HERALD containing these reports and distribute them, calling attention to these reports. You may send your request either to Miss Pearl McCulloch, Greensboro, or direct to the HERALD.

We hope during the coming year to publish something in this department every week. Look it up every week so you won't miss something important.

ANNUAL REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY

(Read at Branch Meeting)

Madam President and Women of the N. C. Branch of Women's Work:

Ten months ago the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary branches of the North Carolina Annual Conference met at High Point College and created a new organization—"The North Carolina Branch of Women's Work of the Methodist Protestant Church." This new branch adopted the constitution and by-laws formulated by the General Board of Missions of our church, and endorsed the purpose contained in it, namely, "to organize and strengthen the work of women in the conference, to promote the spiritual, educational, financial and social welfare of the churches; to increase intelligent interest in world-wide missions, and to acquaint the women with the whole program of our denomination."

The launching of a new enterprise fraught with such vast possibilities and responsibilities is always an awesome and solemn occasion. We, the women who had given up the old boats that had weathered many a storm and were going aboard a new and untried ship, no matter if it were larger and more luxurious in its appointments, were torn by emotions of sadness and hopeful expectancy. John Oxenham has, to my mind, expressed our feelings in the following beautiful lines:

"We break new seas today—
Our eager keels quest unaccustomed waters,
And from the vast uncharted waste in front,
The mystic circles leap
To greet our prows with mightiest possibilities;
Bringing us what?

—Dread shoals and shifting banks?
—And calms and storms?
—And clouds and biting gales;
—And wreck and loss?
—And valiant fighting times?
Or chance of glorious deeds:—
Of help swift-borne to drowning mariners,
Of cheer to ships dismantled in the gale;
Of mighty service to all needy souls.
And Treasure Isles, and Kingdoms to be won,
And Undiscovered Countries, and New Kin?

So—Ho for the Pilot's orders,
Whatever course he makes,
For he sees beyond the skyline,
And he never makes mistakes;
And the Pilot knows the unknown seas,
And He will bring us through."

Our Pilot, the God in whose hands we placed the guidance of our missionary ship, has brought us safely through the first year of our voyage, and we are anchoring a few days at the port of Branch meeting. We have had no mishaps worth mentioning. We have had no mutiny among the crew, no storms to make us afraid, no wreckage and loss, and we offer gratitude and thanks to our Pilot who has brought us past Treasure Isles of friendship and fellowship with women we had not known before as co-workers; and who has shown us "undiscovered countries and new kin" among women and girls in our church whose interest and energy had hitherto been hidden from us. The voyage has been wonderful and pleasant and profitable beyond our anticipation.

After I recovered from my surprise at being elected corresponding secretary of this new Branch, I began at once to try and get a complete list of the "passengers," that is, I endeavored to find out the names of the auxiliaries in the Home and Foreign Branch that were willing to come in with the new Branch, and also to get a list of those that were not quite ready to make the change.

The last of July I sent blanks to all whose names I could get and asked for a list of their officers and their activities. I also sent with each report blank an efficiency chart showing the goals, or standards, set for our work. I asked that these charts be kept before the auxiliaries until just before Branch meeting and returned to me so that I might find out how each auxiliary stood with reference to these standards. Through misunderstanding five charts were filled out at once and returned. Only twenty-three report blanks were returned, nineteen working under the new program, two foreign and two home societies. I began to wonder where a number of auxiliaries were hiding. Notices had been published in the HERALD asking that all auxiliaries send me a list of their officers and such other information as would be helpful to me in my work, and I had written to sixty-five auxiliaries asking for the same thing, and only twenty-three responded. Had they decided not to go with us, but to stay on the shore of indecision and doubt? The first Executive Committee meeting found me somewhat—shall I say discouraged?

I appealed to the fourteen district chairmen and their leader, Mrs. C. W. Bates, to assist me in getting a complete list, and several chairmen have been most helpful, while some—well, letters are sometimes lost in the mail.

In October I mailed sixty-eight report blanks to auxiliaries that had existed at some time, either as Home or Foreign. Forty-one blanks were returned, six of them marked "Home Missionary Societies." You can see that we had made progress during the previous three months. In addition to this number three new auxiliaries had been organized.

The last of March I mailed annual report blanks to seventy auxiliaries. Ten of these were mailed to treasurers whose names I got from Mrs. Taylor when I made a special trip to compare my list with hers. After waiting two weeks for the return of blanks, I followed some of them with postal cards to the presidents of auxiliaries thinking I might have gotten the addresses of the corresponding secretaries wrong. A much greater degree of progress is indicated by the fact that fifty-eight report blanks were returned to me.

I should hate very much to omit any auxiliary or any individual—man, woman or child—who has been active in working for the church through an auxiliary when I send my annual report to our Secretary of the Board of Missions. But what more can I do to find them?

Some one has said that the auxiliary is the power house in which is generated the power for running the work of the church, but why should we have so much lost power in the auxiliaries that fail to connect with the dynamo? I want to mention one very pleasing feature of the reports I have here. In not one of them do I find "Home" or "Foreign" society; and when I asked Mrs. Taylor how many had sent money to her for "Home" interests alone she said, "they have nearly all sent money for both North Carolina and the General Conference budgets."

A neighbor of mine loaned me the Missionary Voice, Organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and I found in it the following interesting item: "At a recent meeting of the Missionary Council there was a luncheon for home and foreign missionaries. Many interesting stories were told, and one of the best was that of three negro men who were discussing the radio, the aeroplane and the thermos bottle, trying to decide which is the most wonderful. The last negro to speak said, "I think that the thermos thing is the most wonderful because it keeps hot things hot and cold things cold, but I am mightily bothered to find out how the thing knows 'when to which'." The speaker said that in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South the line between the Home and Foreign Boards is becoming so dim we can hardly tell "when to which." I believe we have already reached the point when we can not tell "when to which," don't you?

I feel that I have done my best during the year to help get the machinery of our Branch to work smoothly and accurately, so that it may contribute the greatest possible amount of service to our great church; and as far as I am able I shall have for the new secretary a list of auxiliaries with correct names and addresses of each officer and departmental secretary. Will the delegates here help me to do this? You are just as responsible for the success of the work as I am.

A traveler, standing outside Cologne Cathedral, expressed his admiration of its beauty.

"Yes," said the laborer, who was standing near, "it's a fine looking building, and took us many a year to finish."

"Took you!" exclaims the tourist. "Why, what had you to do with it?"

"I mixed the mortar, sir," was the modest yet proud reply.

The laborer had a right to feel that he had a share in the grand work. In the same way, by your consecrated service, every one of you can help in the work of building the great Church that Jesus had in mind when he commanded his followers to "Go teach all nations."

The following is a summary of the work as it has been reported to me. The figures in many cases are only approximate, as some spaces in most of the blankswere not filled in:

Total number of auxiliaries sending annual report, 58; number never reporting to me, 12; number of new auxiliaries, 9; number reporting no copy of Missionary Record, 6; number using efficiency chart, 12; No. members Young People's organizations, 476; No. of women in churches having auxiliaries, 3,746; number of women contributing, 1,660; number of honorary member (men), 111; number of life members, 137; number of Memorial members, 68; number of perpetual members, 25; number auxiliary meetings held during the year, 550; number public meetings held by auxiliaries, 60; number of Missionary Record subscribers, 434; increase in Record subscribers, 104; scholarships: Pine Ridge, 1; China, 1; Japan, 1; India, 1; workers: India, 2; number of district meetings I have visited, 2; numbers of letters sent, 235; number of cards sent, 90.

I desire to express my thanks to all who have helped me make this report eighty-five per cent. perfect.

MRS. GEO. R. BROWN, Cor- Sec.

TRIBUTE TO MISS ALICE COATES

From the N. C. Branch of Woman's Missionary Work

For more than thirty years Miss Alice Coates was a missionary to Japan under the auspices of the M. P. Church.

In these years we have had in her a loyal, consecrated worker on the foreign field. In a recent meeting of the Foreign Missions Council of North America the particular emphasis of the gathering was on the importance of the life and character of the missionary. It has always been a conviction of those closest to Miss Coates that she was pre-eminently a Christ-woman—a Christian, as we say.

She realized, as others sometimes do not that they do most for the world who do something for children. Hers was the privilege of working with little children.

We can but wonder how many lives she has touched beneficently in the passing generation. The figures show that she has trained two thousand, but we know that humanity has been blessed by her life in the Japan kindergarten, far beyond the two thousand whose lives she touched intimately.

Miss Coates felt the call of God to service for life and answered, "Here am I, Lord!" May we North Carolina women show our appreciation of her life of service by answering God's calls to us in the same loyal, courageous way.

MRS. R. M. ANDREWS.

HERALD SUBSCRIPTIONS FIELD SERVICE

Directing Committee of the Annual Conference: Rev. N. M. Harrison, Rev. R. I. Farmer, J. F. Coble.

The Herald must rely on pastors and their assistants for the work of extending and maintaining its circulation. It has always been so and is more emphatically so now. In making out goals for the charges the Committee has generally followed the rule of one subscription to every ten church members, which does not seem unreasonable or impossible. Of course the logical goal is a paper to every family in the church. The first colunm of figures gives the goal for new and renewed subscriptions for the conference year. The second column is to give the number received to date.

FROM PASTORS and PEOPLE

Gibsonville.—Those who did not awake early Easter Sunday morning missed a splendid service that was conducted by the Senior C. E. Society from our church and the Epworth League from the M. E. church. We were glad to have Miss Alice Thomas, of High Point College, worship with us at this meeting and also the other services. Miss Thomas spent the week-end with Mrs. K. T. Williams.

Rev. T. I. Whitehead preached a splendid sermon last Sunday night, in the absence of Bro. Bethea. Mr. Whitehead used as a subject "Power for Christian Service." There will be no preaching at our church next Sunday because of the commencement sermon which will be preached in the Gibsonville High School auditorium at 11 o'clock. Dr. D. S. Knight, if Durham, N. C., will preach the sermon. Sunday school will be at the regular hour, nine-forty-five a. m.

The Young Ladies' Bible Class will hold their regular monthly meeting on Wednesday night of this week with Mrs. Carl Allen.

REPORTER.

P. S.: I stated in the last report to the paper that the evangelistic meeting would begin here the first Sunday in May. I should have said the second Sunday in May.

Shiloh.—Easter Sunday was a good day for Shiloh. It was fortunate for us that Easter came on the third Sunday, for that is one of our preaching days and so our pastor was with us. He delivered a stirring message on the parable of "The Loaves and Fishes." The burden of his heart seemed to be that we all witness for God. His believing children are His only witnesses. As Jesus gave the disciples of the loaves and fishes, so gave they to the multitudes and the marvelous part was, it was enough. Our prayer is, "O God, give unto us, that we may give unto the waiting, fainting multitudes the living bread."

The children and young people rendered an Easter service program on Easter Sunday night. It was beautifully done and enjoyed by a large congregation.

Paul, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Wiley Shoaf, is recovering from a tonsil operation performed on last Tuesday. He has been out of school this winter because of bad health, but it is hoped that he will now regain his strength and he his old sunny self again.

We are glad to report that Mrs. R. L. Troxler is feeling much better than a few weeks ago when she was unable to even go to church. We sincerely hope she will continue to improve and be fully restored to health.

We had prayer meeting on the fourth Sunday at 11 a. m., as usual, but the unusual part about it was that it was led by children, and a good job they made of it, too. The Junior C. E. Society, under the supervision of Mrs. Clem Koonts, had charge. It makes our hearts glad to see the little ones making their first steps in the kingdom. It is so much better to sow good seed in youth, even if some folks do think that every one sows wild oats in the spring time of life. The harvest of the good seed makes the heart glad, but the fruit of the tares is grievous indeed. Happy is the church that feeds the lambs.

O, yes! Almost forgot it! One of our new subscribers from away down in Jacksonville sent us word that with his M. P. Herald he expected news from dear old Shiloh. Why, yes! Of course you guessed right. It was Tom Berrier. Here it comes, Tommy, and Shiloh sends you her very best wishes with it. Our boys and girls get far away from us sometimes, but the loving arms of the mother church reach far and wide and keep them within its embrace. So here comes the message to all her sons and daughters, both young and old—May God bless and keep you.

MRS. WILEY SHOAF.

Bethany.—We seem to be moving up a little. Sunday school ponede the first of April with Mr. Clyde Simpson, one of our splendid young men, as superintendent. There were hirty present yesterday. Our men have cleaned off the cemetery, underpinned the church, and made cement steps recently. Our good pastor, Bro. Pegg, has been giving us a fine sermon each fourth Sunday. From now on he will preach for us on the second and fourth Sundays at three o'clock.

REPORTER.

Richland Circuit.—On April 12th the second quarterly conference met at Giles chapel. All the churches were represented and the business was transacted in harmony. Reports from S. S. Supt. were very encouraging. Stewards reports were not so encouraging. Brothers A. E. Williams and Charlie Barrow were nominees for delegate to the annual conference. The conference voted to have a circuit rally, and a committee was appointed to get up the program, and to fix the time and place for holding the rally. The second Sunday in this month there will be a memorial service at Cedar Falls. All day service, Mr. Hamilton, from Greensboro, will be the leader in our singing. There will be a memorial service at Giles the third Sunday in this month all day service. There will be a quartet and speakers, and we are looking forward for a good day. We are hoping to hold a memorial service at Brower the 4th Sunday in this month and at Charlotte the first Sunday in June. Our congregations are increasing and more interest is manifested, so we are hopeful for a good year of ingathering of souls, every body is invited to come and be with us in our service. I ask the prayers of all the readers of our church paper that we may do our Father's will.

JOEL B. TROGDEN.

Elbaville, State Street, Lexington.—Attendance at Sunday school is increasing much during the spring days. We were much delighted to have Mr. Hoy Whitlow fill Bro. Hendry's place in the pulpit yesterday. He sent forth an inspiring message, which was enjoyed much by all.

Our "Home Coming" was much enjoyed and the singers furnished some wonderful music.

At this time we are having our church painted. And also planning for a singers training school right away. We hope much good will be accomplished.

We were glad to have a former pastor, Mr. Mathews of High Point, with us Sunday morning.

The C. E. Society is still progressing nicely and much interest is now being shown.

We desire the prayers of all readers and former pastors.

Best wishes to the Herald.

STELLA BAILEY.

Stallings, Mecklenburg Charge.—We had the largest attendance at Sunday school yesterday that we have had; every one seemed to take great interest in Sunday school. Bro. Joyner preached a soul-stirring sermon. We are practicing for the Children's day and Mother's Day program combined for next Sunday night. The Ladies' Aid auxiliary, Circle No. 1, met with Mrs. R. A. Drye last Thursday at 2:30. We had a good attendance. Several visitors present. We were real sorry our president, Mrs. M. L. Stallings, wasn't able to be present, She is better now, We pray for her to soon be well again. Mrs. P. L. Garmon, vice-pres., presided over the meeting. We opened our meeting with a song, "I wish I Could Hear My Mother Pray Again." Scripture reading was appropriate to mothers, read by Mrs. J. E. Hartis, and Mrs. George Garmon. Mrs. Joyner led in prayer. We had roll call and reading of the minutes. We had several real good pieces read on mothers. Mrs. Drye and Mrs. D. C. Stallings were joint hostesses and served delicious refreshments. Mrs. Drye's and Mrs. Stallings' birthdays were in this month, they received many beautiful gifts. We adjourned to meet with Mrs. Carl Stallings the first Thursday in June.

Circle No. 2 meets Tuesday at 2:30. This is their first meeting as it is composed of our young people and they were busy with their school examinations. We ask for all the Christian people to come and pray for our young people that they may go forward and make a great success.

MRS. PAUL CURLEE, Reporter.

Bess Chapel.—Our Sunday school is moving along nicely. The attendance yesterday was 128; collection $5.75.

On Easter Sunday morning our pastor, Rev. M. C. Henderson, preached a wonderful sermon, the last of a series of sermons, "The Decision." Twenty were converted. The following Sunday, April 27, 16 of these were taken in full membership of the church.

Our Memorial and Mothers' Day service will be held the second Sunday in May. We invite every one.

The Woman's Auxiliary met last Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Lee Houser.

With many good wishes to the Herald and its readers.

Shiloh.—Tonight my mind goes back to old Shiloh Methodist Protestant church, one mile from Julian, Randolph County, N. C.

"Oft in the stilly night,
Ere slumber's chain has bound me,
Fond memory brings the light
Of other days around me."

Grand old Shiloh; her sainted dead are many. "They being dead, yet speak." From 30 years ago to 1930 I think of the godly men and women who have gone to their reward in God's heaven. They were the "light of the world," "the salt of the earth." I wish I could mention all of them, but time and space forbid. Please let me mention a few of them. The Ledbetters, Aunt Peggy, nearly 100 years old, passed a few years ago. Rev. James Ledbetter sleeps there. J. R. Stout, J. E. Deviney, M. Brown, Barney Burrow, Jesse Allred, and his noble wife, Dr. J. T. Rieves, Dr. A. C. Whitaker; these were all excellent people. Just a year or two ago a good woman passed to her reward. She was a noble Christian woman, a splendid worker in the church; though severely afflicted she bore it patiently, she was cheerful, not afraid to die, died in the triumphs of faith. I speak of Sister Pickett.

Shiloh was a spiritual church, and I believe some of the fire is burning there yet. God bless you, Shiloh. G. F. MILLAWAY.

Concord.—On the first Sunday in April Rev. A. D. Shelton, a former pastor, paid us a visit, preached two splendid sermons. His old friends, and they are many, were very glad to see him and hear him preach again.

Our Sunday school is doing fine; there were present the fourth Sunday 295. Bro. Ralph Waddell, superintendent, is a hustler in his work. A good man for the place.

The church is doing very well.

New roll books for each Sunday school class have been purchased and given to each class.

Miss Vangie Willis, our primary teacher, has gone to Western Carolina Teachers' College. We will miss her very much in Sunday school this summer.

The memorial service will be held at Laurel Hill May 11. Let's not forget to remember our deceased ones with beautiful flowers.

Mt. Lebanon, Randleman.—On April 5th we held our second quarterly conference at New Salem, with the largest attendance on record. Conference renewed C. S. Reddick's license to exhort. W. F. Ivey and A. R. Groce were elected nominees to the next Annual Conference.

The Ladies' Aid Society held a very interesting meeting at the home of Mrs. W. F. Talley on April 24. In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. M. Howell presided. It was decided at this meeting to buy a new (——?) for the living room at the personage, and to have the living room suite upholstered and repainted, all of which has been done. We are proud of our parsonage and the way it has been kept.

The Ladies' Aid also paid $40.00 toward the erection of the new community house and gymnasium. The other organizations of the town have given a like amount.

When completed this building will be equipped with an almost modern kitchen, which will be very convenient when we hold our community fairs, dahlia and chrysanthemum shows and other activities of like nature.

Attendance at Sunday school Sunday was 113, with $5.70 collection. Our collection every first Sunday goes to the Children's Home.

Sunday preaching service was well attended. Our pastor brought a helpful and inspiring message.

The Lord's Supper was administered to quite a large number.

Next Sunday at Worshville will be Home-Coming Day. All friends and former members are invited to be present.

On the third Sunday in June our series of revival services will begin with Rev. J. D. Williams, of Liberty, in charge. We trust that this will be a great revival.

Baltimore, West Forsyth Circuit.—The Sunday school was reorganized the first Sunday in April with its old group of officers and teachers, and is progressing very nicely. We are gaining new members rapidly. We were glad to have a large number of visitors last Sunday, and invited them to come again. The Sunday school collection amounted to 95 cents.

The Easter Sunday school offering for the Children's Home was $2.15.

Last Sunday morning the pastor preached a very inspiring sermon. He used as the principal part of his text the words, "And his name shall be called wonderful," stressing the wonderful things that Christ can do. He mentioned several characteristics of God, such as: He is a wonderful God because He is able to save people from their sins; also He has a wonderful eye to see us, a wonderful ear to hear our prayers, a wonderful heart of sympathy to love us, and a wonderful hand to guide us over the rough and uneven journey of life. Christ was also wonderful because he could raise the dead, heal the sick, give sight to the blind and cause the lame to walk. He was also wonderful in mission work.

The offering at the preaching service amounted to $3.16. We sincerely thank all who contributed.

We were very much delighted to have with us last Sunday Mrs. T. L. Speas, of Winston-Salem, district chairman of the Young People's Auxiliary, and Mrs. C. W. Bates, of Greensboro, chairman of the districts of the Woman's Auxiliary. After the preaching service Mrs. Bates gave a very interesting talk on the Woman's Auxiliary. She briefly explained what the Auxiliary is, how it is carried out, and the duties of the chairmen of the different departments. After this the audience was dismissed, while the women of the church remained, and Mrs. Bates and Mrs. Speas assisted them in organizing an Auxiliary at our church. The officers elected were as follows: Mrs. J. S. Phillips, president; Mrs. W. C. Binkley, vice-president; Miss Mamie Phillips, secretary, and Mrs. W. C. Jennings, treasurer. The election of other officers was deferred until next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock when the Auxiliary will hold its first meeting. Mrs. Speas has kindly consented to come and assist us in getting started, an offer which we appreciate very much.

We surely appreciated Mrs. Speas and Mrs. Bates coming and assisting us in organizing an Auxiliary, and I wish to extend to them a very cordial invitation to come and be with us again.
